Man kills sister's fiance in Meerut; arrested

Meerut: A 24-year-old man was shot dead by his fiance's elder brother in Kurmali village on Wednesday, police said. The body of the victim, Rohit Singh, was spotted by local residents. "We lodged the initial report against unidentified assailants after handing over his body to the family members following the post-mortem...We have arrested Sanjeev (26), the elder brother of the girl with whom the deceased was engaged. He confessed and said his family members had been advising the couple to part ways but they did not pay heed," said Mool Chand Singh, in-charge of Babri police station.

EAST Man found hanging in police lockup in Bihar

Sasaram: A 45-year-old man found dead on Wednesday in police custody in Bihar's Rohtas district, a senior official said. Shrikant Singh allegedly hanged himself from the ceiling of the lockup of Indrapuri police station, Additional SP Sanjay Kumar said. Singh was arrested on Tuesday in connection with the theft of a tractor, along with his son Abhishek, who was later let off as he was a minor, the police officer said. Meanwhile, Singh's wife Reena Devi suspected foul play and alleged he was tortured to death. "We will take necessary action if any complaint is registered by the family," the officer said.

22 children, headmistress fall ill after mid-day meal

Pune: A total of 22 children of a school in the city and the headmistress were admitted to the hospital after they fell sick from eating khichdi served as part of the mid-day meal scheme. Dr Sanjay Lalwani, Medical Director of Bharati hospital said that they had immediately treated the children and one teacher. "Four children were admitted in the paediatric ward of our hospital, of which, one is in the ICU as the child suffered from dehydration," said Lalwani. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) team collected samples of the khichdi and issued orders to the vendor to stop business activity. It supplies mid-day meals to 9,600 students across 23 schools. ENS

Duo stabs taxi driver, steals car; one held, other at large

Coimbatore: Two people, hailing from Andaman and Nicobar, allegedly stabbed a taxi driver and took away his car in the early hours of Wednesday, police said. One of them was caught while the other was absconding, they said. The two had booked the car to go to Madurai. As the car reached Sulur, about 20 km from here, one of them stabbed the driver Vasanthkumar, pushed him out of the vehicle, police said. Passersby took the injured driver to the hospital. Police intercepted the car near Tirupur. One of them escaped, while the other was taken into cus-PTI tody, police said.

TWIST IN KOLKATA CAR CRASH CASE

Elder Arsalan scion held, cops say he was driving Jaguar

Both siblings admitted elder brother was at the wheel, say police

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE KOLKATA, AUGUST 21

IN A twist to the fatal accident allegedly involving the scion of Kolkata's renowned Arsalan chain of restaurants, the homicide department of Kolkata Police on Wednesday said that the man driving the Jaguar that triggered the crash that night was not Arsalan Parvez, who was earlier arrested in the case, but his elder brother Raghib.

"Arsalan Parvez's elder brother was driving the car at the time (late in the night of August 16). He has also confessed it during preliminary interrogation. He was arrested today (Wednesday afternoon) along with their maternal uncle (Mohammed Hamza)," Joint CP (Crime) Murlidhar Sharma said.

Parvez, 22, is also learnt to have confessed that he was not at the wheel that night.

Another officer with knowledge of developments said that after the accident, Raghib, 25, allegedly called his uncle, who helped him escape. "He took a flight to Dubai the same day (Sunday) when Arsalan visited the DC(South) office and was arrested.'

Raghib is said to have returned to the city late Monday night. Late Friday night, the SUV. allegedly being driven at 100-120 km per hour, rammed into a Mercedes, which then crashed into a police kiosk on a pavement near Park Street, where three Bangladeshi nationals had taken shelter from the rain. Two of them died on the spot; the third is injured. The occupants of the Mercedes — Amit Kajoria and wife Kanika — who were also injured in the accident, are still in hospital.

A senior officer said the open airbag in the Jaguar SUV after the incident led them to probe the possible involvement of a person other than Parvez.

"In 99 per cent cases, the person on whom the airbag opens receives injuries due to a thin layer of silicon (present in the airbag). We didn't find any such marks on Arsalan Parvez. We continued to probe the car's

"The police procured the car's infotainment data and found that the person who interacted with the vehicle before the accident was Raghib," the officer said.

Raghib, found from his social media accounts, the police scanned footage from 40-45 CCTV cameras around the accident site to trace the accused.

CCTV cameras, according to the officer, had captured a man running towards Kala Mandir, and cameras placed near Bhagirati Neotia crossing captured Raghib's face clearly, he said. Parvez broke down after sustained interrogation and admitted that he wasn't in the car when the accident occurred, the officer said.

The police are finding out why Arsalan didn't reveal the truth in the beginning.

Sources said while Raghib is the prime accused, Parvez and their uncle will face action under IPC Section 201 for causing disappearance of evidence, or giving false information.

"Raghib has confessed that he was at the wheel when the accident took place, and whatever he revealed matches our findings so far," an officer said. Sources also said CCTV footage scanned from the family's Beck Bagan residence showed Raghib leaving the house around 11.30 pm on Friday. The cameras did not capture any movement of Parvez.

Both accused will be produced in court on Thursday.

divinity not lost despite mosque over temple, SC told No one thus can claim title over the site by adverse possession, Ramlalla's counsel tells court

Ram Janmabhoomi

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE NEW DELHI. AUGUST 21

THE DIVINITY of Ram Janmabhoomi was not lost even though Babri Masjid was built over the temple which predated it, and thus no one could claim title over the site by adverse possession, the counsel for Ramlalla told the Supreme Court on Wednesday.

Senior advocate C S Vaidyanathan, appearing for the deity, told a five-Judge Constitution Bench headed by Chief Justice of India Ranjan Gogoi that the legal position has been that the deity is immortal, and that even if an idol is broken or stolen, another image can be consecrated since divinity is not lost.

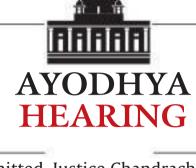

He was replying to Justice S Abdul Nazeer, who had asked, "What happens to a Wakf property which is vested in God? Can it be alienated?"

Vaidyanathan told the Bench, also comprising Justices S A Bobde, DY Chandrachud and Ashok Bhushan that as per Mohammedan law recognised by courts in India, the Wakf property can be alienated. "Mohammedan law in India does not accept the inalienability of a mosque," he said.

case of a Hindu deity, whose property cannot be alienated, he added. The senior counsel said a Privy Council decision to this effect had been upheld by the Supreme Court. On the Ayodhya temple,

But that was not so in the Vaidyanathan said the Sunni Wakf Board was claiming title by adverse possession. "I am saying there was a temple there, and no one else can claim title," he submitted. Justice Chandrachud asked how he was stating that if there was a temple at the site, its title cannot pass. Vaidyanathan replied that "sanctity of a temple will remain even if it was destroyed".

"The temple", he contended,

"is invested with a character, or Res extra commercium (Roman law doctrine that refers to things beyond commerce, which cannot be brought or sold)". Justice Chandrachud then pointed out that the Calcutta High Court had in a decision said that alienation of property of a Hindu deity was all right if it was for the benefit of the deity.

Vaidyanathan said that "property cannot be taken out of an idol if it amounts to extinction of the deity itself". Justice Bobde remarked in a lighter vein that he should be careful that this argument that property of deity cannot be alienated is not raised when courts have to deal with unauthorised places of worship on public roads, etc. Vaidyanathan replied that he was only referring to places "which are deemed to be 'punya sthala', which have divinity, such as a 'tirtha', which cannot be changed".

"This place (Ram Janmabhoomi) is divine because of the birth of Ram. That can't be changed," he argued.

90 pc of lead batteries reach informal sector, triggering pollution

ESHAROY NEW DELHI, AUGUST 21

A STUDY by environmenta think tank Toxic Links has found that 90 per cent of lead acid batteries (LABs) reach the informal recycling sector where they are recycled crudely and without any regulation, releasing toxins into the air, water and soil.

The study – "Loaded Batteries: Mapping the toxic waste trail" - released on Tuesday was conducted across Rajasthan, Delhi, Jharkhand and Andhra Pradesh.

The findings show that the transportation of LABs to the informal recycling sector are in direct contravention of the Batteries Management and Handling Rules (2001) under which, either battery manufacturing companies should take the LABs for recycling, or they should be recycled by registered recycling units.

LABs are usually transported to neighbouring areas such as Ghaziabad and Alwar from Delhi, where strict environmental regulations for hazardous industries are in place. Jharkhand and Rajasthan are badly affected with most LABs reaching small unmonitored 'bhattis'.

and cataloging is complicated by "According to the Battery the low altitude of the event and Rules which were set up in 2001, the target was that by 2003, 90 per cent of LABs were to be sent back to the manufacturer for recycling. But even after 18 years The publication stated that India had 97 functional, and this has not been achieved which shows a failure of the regulatory authorities," said Priti Mahesh, one of the authors of the study. The study has found that of the 36 agencies (State Pollution Control Boards and PCCs), not even half have filed reports on the status of implementation of rules to the Central Pollution considered one of the most hazardous industries and India has, over the years, phased out leaded petrol and lead based paint for this very reason. According to a study conducted by Pure Earth and Green Cross Switzerland, the battery recycling industry puts 1 million people at risk globally. The Indian lead acid battery market was valued at $4.47 billion in 2016 and was expected to grow at a CAGR of 8.36 per cent in terms of value, to reach close to $8 billion by 2022.

"This rate of growth has been predicted on the basis of the expansion of the market of automobiles, telecommunication infrastructure, solar power projects and the ever-growing IT industry... According to Central Pollution Control Board, based on data received from State Pollution Control Boards, the amount of new batteries sold in 2016-17 was 198,250 tonnes

The study points out two broad problems in the disposal of the LABs. The first is the lack of regulation by authorities such as the CPCB and the SPCBs. And the second is the nature of recycling in the informal sector, in which lead is melted on furnaces and the acid in the batteries is often dumped in nearby drains or fields — polluting water as well as soil.

Debris created by India's anti-satellite test still in space

AMITABH SINHA PUNE, AUGUST 21

A MAJORITY of the debris created by India's anti-satellite test of March 27 seem to have disintegrated, though more than 40 pieces are still moving around in space, according to the latest assessment of space debris by NASA.

A report in the Orbital Debris Quarterly News, published by NASA's Orbital Debris Program Office, states that of the 101 pieces of debris that were big enough to be tracked, 49 continued to remain in orbit as on July 15. It was possible that more pieces, smaller ones, created from that test are floating around but these were not being tracked, it stated.

India had shot down its 740kg Microsat-R satellite on March 27 this year in a demonstration of its capability to destroy the space-based infrastructure of an enemy country.

That anti-satellite test made India only the fourth country in the world to have demonstrated this capability. The Microsat-R satellite was launched on January 24 this year by the Defence Research and Development Organisation, the same agency that carried out the test.

The destroyed satellite had disintegrated into several small and big pieces, and added to a large amount of debris in space, which is considered a threat to functional satellites and other space assets. At that time, India

But the numbers now show that India's claim about the debris falling off quickly and disintegrating was not entirely off the mark. Large number of fragments created by a similar test by China in 2007 are still floating in space.

AYODHYA TITLE SUIT Deity at temple immortal, even if idol broken, stolen, another image can be consecrated, says Ram Lalla counsel

HT Correspondent

NEWDELHI: The sanctity of a temple remains even if it is destroyed, the Supreme Court was told by the lawver representing the deity, "Ram Lalla Virajman", on Wednesday. Senior advocate CS Vaidyanathan said the deity at the temple is immortal and even if an idol is broken or stolen, another image can be consecrated. He made this submission before a five-judge bench led by CJI Ranian Gogoi which is holding a day to-day hearing in the Ayodhya title suit case.

The birthplace of Lord Ram at Ayodhya is itself a deity and no one can claim ownership right over the sacred place by merely putting up a structure like a mosque, the senior counsel said Vaidvanathan said divinity for the deity is not lost when Justice SA Nazeer, one of the judges. asked him whether a Waqf property vested in God can be alienated. He said, according to Mohammedan law, recognised by courts in India, the Waqf property is not inalienable. "Mohammedan law in India does not accept the inalienability of a mosque," he said. But the same is not true in the case of a Hindu deity. To assert his argu-

HC CAN SUSPEND JUDICIAL OFFICER, SAYS APEX COURT

NEW DELHI: The high court on the administrative side (also known as the full court) can suspend a subordinate judicial officer facing disciplinary proceedings of allegations of sexual harassment, a Supreme Court bench led by Justice Ashok Bhushan held on Wednesday, clarifying that the HC's power to control judicial officers under Article 253 of the Constitution was not affected by provisions in the law against sexual harassment, which calls for an enquiry by an internal committee before any action is taken against the alleged harasser. The full court of the high court is a panel comprising all sitting judges of the court, which takes administrative decisions such as disciplinary enquiries which includes suspension of trial court judicial officers.

The SC's verdict came on a petition filed by a judicial officer of Delhi Higher Judicial Services who was placed under suspension by the full court in 2016, on account of allegations of sexual harassment filed by a junior judicial assistant against him.

Several of IL&FS' companies defaulted on their debt payments late last year, bringing to light the crisis at the large infrastructure conglomerate that has since roiled the shadow banking sector and the market.

Raj Thackeray is also a co-founder of the company which received investment worth ₹860 crore from IL&FS, although he exited it in 2008. The company was set up to purchase Kohinoor Mill in central Mumbai in 2005 and is accused of defaulting on the loan from IL&FS. ED issued a summons to Rai Thackeray on

ALWAR/JAIPUR: The special investigating team (SIT) formed to probe lapses in the original probe in the Pehlu Khan case began work on Wednesday, gathering records and visiting the spot where the Haryana farmer was lynched by alleged cow vigilantes. DIG Nitin Deep Blaggan, head of the SIT. visited Behror on Wednesday and spent close to five hours in the police station, collecting records related to the case against nine people, including three minors, on charges of kill-

Bhiwadi SP Amandeep Singh Kapoor confirmed that the SIT came to Behror and collected documents related to the case. "It's an independent team and our job is to cooperate with them." he said. Blaggan did not share details of the probe. The team reached Behror around noon and was there until 5 pm. On its way back to Jaipur, it visited the spot on the Jaipur-Delhi national highway where the 55-vear-old dairy farmer from Nuh in Harvana was beaten when he was taking two cows and two calves from an animal market in Jaipur to his home with his two sons, on April 1, 2017. The SIT was formed by the look into lapses in the investiga tion that led to the acquittal of the six men accused in the case on August 14 by a court that gave them "benefit of the doubt" even as it pointed out glaring problems with the way the probe was conducted. The acquittal came despite video clips that clearly showed Khan being beaten up. HT has previously reported that two video clips that captured a mob attacking Khan were cleared as genuine by a government forensics lab but not taken into account by the court because contradictory statements by investigating officers undercut their authenticity and raised doubts about the chain of events and probe.

RANCHI: The Supreme Court (SC) has dismissed a woman's petition challenging an unusual restriction imposed on her by the Jharkhand high court which said she could not have a phone of her own and allowed her to talk to her relatives for only one hour a day -- on her husband's phone. The SC granted liberty to the woman to approach the high court again to get the restrictive clause removed. A division bench of the Supreme Court, last week. found that the high court passed a consent order in which the woman and her estranged husband agreed to follow four conditions for reconciliation of a matrimonial dispute. "On a reading of the conditions, it appears that the intent is to seclude both petitioner and respondent (wife and husband) from interference in the matrimonial affairs by their respective parents. What is material is that it is a consent order which is so recorded." said the SC bench.

But, the woman denied before the SC bench that she consented to the condition restricting her from having a phone of her own.

The SC then allowed her to raise this issue before HC again. In February 2019, the woman's husband, who is a government employee, moved an application before the Jharkhand HC seeking anticipatory bail in connection with a criminal case lodged by his wife in 2016. While dealing with the anticipatory bail application, the HC bench of Justice AK Choudhary found that the couple, who were physically present in the court, agreed to reconcile. The HC granted bail to the husband on several conditions: that he would keep and maintain his wife with full honour and dignity as his lawful wife; that the family $members\,of\,the\,couple\,would\,not$ visit the residence of their stay: that the husband would provide a mobile phone to his wife for talking to her brothers and sisters for a maximum period of one hour daily; that the wife would not keep any individual/separate mobile with her; and that the husband would admit his son to a renowned school.

Kerala: In a first, women can drive govt vehicles

THIRUVANANTHAPURAM: The Kerala government on Wednesday decided to appoint women driv ers in government departments and public sector undertakings, a post so far reserved for men.

"Directions have given to al government departments and PSUs to make the driver post gen der neutral. This has been done in accordance with the state govern ment's policy on gender equality This will benefit many women, said a statement issued by CM Pinarayi Vijayan's office adding the existing recruitment rules will be amended for this.

In Kerala, barring the State Road Corporation, women are not allowed to apply for driver posts in any other department and many women's organisations have asked the government to lift this ban. In contrast, women are driving private buses cars registered with taxi aggregators and autorickshaws in the state. Many organisations like All India Democratic Women's Asso ciation and Mahila Congress have hailed the move. Of 400 autorickshaw drivers here, only 24 are women.

New Tech, Old Worries In Gig Economy

App-based platforms are seen as a big driver of employment in urban India today, but leaving aside the technology, little has changed for those in the informal sector as they still need to rely on piecemeal work with little to fall back on by way of social security, writes Åmulya Gopalakrishnan is not a new idea for 33-year-old Syed Javed Moinuddin. He's hustled and worked at odd jobs all his life. He dropped out of school in class 4, after his father died, and started supporting his mother, from helping at a bakery, to plumbing, to assisting a mason, being a cleaner on a commercial truck and, finally, driving vehicles for a travel and tourism firm in Hyderabad.

Four years ago, he started driving a friend's car for Uber and Ola. Since last year, he has been driving a leased Ola cab, paying a daily Rs 1,035 to the company. Then, Ola began charging Rs 4 per km for anything over the daily limit of 200 km. "Now I work at least 15 hours, and after paying the company, fuel and meals, I take home around Rs 500 a day. How does one eat and educate one's children in this situation?

These are the talked-up new jobs of the platform economy, where technology companies link those who need services with those who need work. In the West, this app economy has been blamed for destroying stable industries, for turning workers into freelancers and labour transactions into one-night stands, ending the era of workplace benefits and unions. It has also been celebrated as the flexible future of work, where workers will increasingly be independent contractors rather than employees.

But if you look away from the technology — which is just a medium — the world of work hasn't changed much. "The gig economy is just another way of saying casual labour. In the West, where they have been used to regular jobs, it means something. In India though, formal work is only for a few and 35% of the workforce has always been in casual labour," says economist Ajit Ghose.

"It's hard enough to get a measure of the informal economy. There are no reliable numbers for platform-based jobs, even in the US," says Vidhya professor Soundararajan, at IIM-Bangalore. The US Bureau of Labour Statistics recently said that only 10% of the workforce was in non-traditional, alternative arrangements, down a little from 11% in 2005.

In India, when confronted with dismal employment data, Niti Aayog officials claimed that Uber and Ola alone created over two million jobs that did not show up in the data (an empty claim, since household surveys capture all such jobs). In March, a platform called another class of people.

Take the company Urban Clap — one of the most visible platforms in Indian cities — it wants to be the Amazon or Alibaba for services. Urban Clap aims to create a million jobs by 2024, and right now they have about 25,000 professionals across India, in areas like beauty and wellness, home repair and maintenance. "I used to earn Rs 15,000 working at a salon, but now I can make up to Rs 60,000-70,000 a month, and take home around Rs 45,000 after paying for the commission, products, etc" says Sana Siddiqui. Mother of a 7-year-old, she also values the flexibility of the work as it lets her choose the rhythm of her own day.

In the beauty industry, the middlemen take the bulk of the money without adding value, says Himanshu Arora, vice-president at Urban Clap. "A beautician may do Rs 1 or Rs 1.5 lakh worth of work, but most of it goes to the salon as maintenance or profits. At Urban Clap, we flip the equation, we take 20% and the rest goes to the professional," he says.

While Urban Clap started out as a pure aggregator, connecting customers and professionals, it has now realised the value of consistency, and is moving towards a more stable relationship with workers. It trains professionals and standard ises operations with its own beauty products in one-use sachets. It also encourages worker loyalty with insurance schemes, says Arora. At a beautician training always been in casual labour

Urban Clap, like other such companies, manages professionals and clients through its call centre and app, rather than specific supervisors. Disconnected from each other and without a formal workplace, there is no avenue for collective bargaining by the partner professionals. The recent fracas of Zomato deliverypersons in West Bengal's Howrah refusing to ferry beef and pork for religious reasons drew much attention, but the main plank of their protest was reportedly about a fall in pay. "I remember some people tried a hartal in Gurgaon after a driver died: nothing happened, the movement fizzled out," says adds Soundararajan.

Many new jobs are in this "modern services" sector, in computer services, telecom, financial intermediation, hotels and restaurants. "But what is the quality of these jobs, what are the wages," he asks. "It is no one's case that jobs are not being created. It is just that not enough jobs are being created to keep up with the number of people looking for them," he says. Meanwhile, Moinuddin also accepts his naseeb, but wistfully remembers his days at the tourism company. "Everything was fixed there. There was a steady salary, a weekend. You could call in sick if you had to. Here, it is all up to you, and you work all the time just to subsist. They say you are khud ka boss, but what does that even mean?"

Once a temple, always a temple: Ram Lalla counsel

New Delhi: Arguing that a huge 10th century Vishnu temple pre-existed the Babri mosque that was built either over its ruins or after its demolition, Counselfor Ram Lalla CS Vaidyanathan on Wednesday laid ownership claim over the entire 2.77 acres of disputed land at Ayodhya.

"Once a temple, always a temple," Vaidyanathan argued before a Constitution bench of CJI Ranjan Gogoi and Justices S A Bobde, D Y Chandrachud, Ashok Bhushan and S Abdul Nazeer. The bench attempted to test the strength of his assertion by interrupting him and asking how was that possible when at the time of demolition of the structure, a mosque was standing at the disputed site.

The senior counsel fell back on archaeological evidence, mentions in Gazettes during British rule and the continuous worship for centuries by Hindus in the faith that Lord Ram was born at that place to argue that Hindus always believed that it was a temple, even after it was demolished for construction of the mosque.

Vaidyanathan said the Allahabad high court, after perusing and scrutinising the entire evidence, had ruled in favour of the deity while dismissing the suits of both Nirmohi Akhara and Sunni Waqf Board. "However, the HC fell in error by giving relief to Akhara and Waqf Board in the suit filed by the Deity through a representative," he said. The HC in its September 30, 2010 judgment had divided the 2.77 acres of disputed land into three equal parts and allotted the central part to Ram Lalla, Sita Rasoi and Chabutra to Nirmohi Akhara and the rest one-third to the Waqf Board.

Hindus always believed that the disputed structure in Ayodhya was a temple, even after it was demolished for construction of the mosque, Ram Lalla's counsel told the Supreme Court was conducting the worshipping of the idols installed since December 22-23, 1949. "Can a worshipper lay claim to the rights and entitlements vested in the Deity? If the Akhara insists on its claim for possession of the entire disputed land, it would lose its role as a devotee," he said.

Akhara was at the best a trustee of the land vested with the Deity, he said and asked, "A trustee cannot seek to encroach into the rights and entitlement of the Deity itself." He said the HC had clearly upheld the rights and entitlements of the Deity and that the SC should not interfere in its findings backed by evidence both archaeological and oral as well as documentary. Unlike Vaidyanathan who appeared for the Deity, counsel for two organisations -Ram Janmasthan Punaruthan Samiti and Hindu Mahasabha — appeared unprepared to advance arguments before the court. The CJI-led bench asked them to get prepared and address arguments. Original plaintiff Gopal Singh Visharad, who had filed the suit in January 16, 1950, through senior advocates Ranjit Kumar and P S Narasimha began addressing the court with a prayer to protect Hindus' right to worship at the disputed site and protecting the idol from removal from its place in the temple at the disputed site in Ayodhya.

Act was introduced by the incumbent government with a view of dismantling the transfer posting industry in the state, where a large part falls in hilly region with the remaining falling in Shivalik foothills and plains. Owing to lower infrastructure development and comparatively less facilities in the hilly region, government employees always prefer to work in plains rather than hills. Mindful of this problem and the corrupt practises resulting from it, the government followed a twin pronged strategy. While more and more resources are being allocated to strengthen infra and provide urban facilities in the hilly region; at the same time government passed a transfer act to ensure that those serving in hilly regions for long also get an opportunity to work in plains and vice versa.

Consequently, 10% employees of total 300,000 government employees are mandatorily transferred ever year between hills and plains. This move and transparency in transfers has led to dismantling of transfer-posting industry prevailing in the state

Trivendra Singh Rawat took oath as the 8th chief minister of Uttarakhand, his primary focus has been to provide a transparent and outcome-based governance to the state services in far flung districts and hilly regions of the state.

Bringing in transparency Mandatory e-auction and e-tender policy was also formulated by the Uttarakhand government which has made it mandatory for every government department to use electronic tender and electronic auction route for selecting successful bidders for every construction or supply contract. This policy has yielded desired results as accurate and timely sharing of information not only aids in good decision making but also helps achieve economic benefit. Often it is noticed that the reduced uncertainty

Proactive policy of 'Zero tolerance' towards corruption is being pursued to the hilt

Transparency in government serves as a deterrent to corruption

Transfer Act was introduced by the incumbent government with a view of dismantling the transfer posting industry in the state

10% employees of total 300,000 government employees are mandatorily transferred every year between hills and plains

Mandatory e-auction and e-tender policy was also formulated by the Rawat government

Government has also expanded the scope of Uttarakhand Right to Services Act 2011

162 new services added under the Act. Currently, 312 services are covered under this tises set in when rules are not clear. This is where the government's clearly defined policy for tenders has helped bring in transparency and clarity in awarding of tenders and contracts.

Building watertight cases

The first decision of Rawat government after assuming power was to act decisively in now initiated action against powerful IAS and PCS officers accused of being involved in corrupt practises. Similar actions were taken in other high profile cases like corruption in distribution of Scholarships case and Terai Beej Development cases etc. It has been noticed that lack of conviction in corruption cases is another major reason for contin-Not giving into pressure uing corruption. Hence government laid emphasis on building watertight cases and several Special Investigation Teams were set up to focus on cases involving 'high and mighty'. A large number of vigilance enquiries were also launched in cases where reports against erring officials was received with alarming frequency. In short, Trivendra Singh Rawat government, acted in corruption cases with the sole objective of building trust in govern-

The government has also expanded the scope of Uttarakhand Right to Services Act 2011 and added 162 new services under it. Around 312 services are covered under this Act. Departmental accountability of officers have been fixed to ensure better compliance. Also, in order to improve work culture, it is the custodian of public funds and its role means that governance must ensure public money is spent for its intended purpose.

Implementation of CM Dashboard to provide realtime performance outcomes of various government departments has also helped in bringing transparency and accountability in the working of the government.
