us to take a different view has been placed nor we are persuaded to find something in favour of the defendants and even otherwise nor any binding precedent is placed before us throwing light on the issue in question in support of the defendants and, therefore also we find no reason to answer the aforesaid issue in positive in any manner. In any case, since no evidence, whatsoever, showing that the Hindus in general had knowledge of the Suit-1885 or that all Hindus were interested in the same, has been placed on record, though both these aspects are factual and ought to be proved by cogent material evidence, we decide the aforesaid issue, i.e., Issue No. 5 (c) (Suit-1) in negative, i.e. against the defendants.

871. Issue No. 7 (a) (Suit-4) is also similar to Issue No. 5 (c) (Suit-1) and reads as under:

> "Whether Mahant Raghubar Dass, plaintiff of Suit No. 61/280 of 1885 had sued on behalf of Janma Sthan and whole body of persons interested in Janma-Sthan?"

www.vadaprativada.com

872. Sri Siddiqui besides his oral submissions has said in his written submissions with respect to issue no. 7(a) (Suit-4) as under:

> "In the plaint of the said suit Raghubar Das has described himself as Mahant Janam Asthan and raised the grievance of the whole the body of persons having faith in the said Chabutara wooden temple visiting the same. No personal or individual interest has been at all averred and plaint averments make it vividly clear as such."

873. We have already said that Mahant Raghubar Das filed the above suit asserting his capacity as Mahant Janam Asthan but there is not even a whisper in the entire plaint of Suit-1885 that he is filing the above suit for and on behalf of the Hindus in general and in representative capacity for their benefit, hence the submission made by Sri Siddiqui, is find difficult to accept. By doing something if some more benefit or convenience would have become available to the visitors or worshippers, it cannot be said that the suit itself was filed in representative capacity or for the whole body of the persons, i.e., those who have faith in Ram Chabutara in respect whereto Suit-1885 was filed.

874. Here also nothing has been placed on record to show that Mahant Raghubar Das filed Suit-1885 representing Janamsthan as a juristic personality or as whole body of persons interested in Janamsthan. For the reasons which we have already discussed above qua Issues No. 5 (c) (Suit-1) which are entirely applicable to this issue also, we answer Issue No. 7 (a) (Suit-4) in negative and hold that there is nothing to show that Mahant Raghubar Das filed Suit-1885 on behalf of Janamsthan and whole body of persons interested in Janamsthan.

875. At this very stage, we also deal with Issue No. 7 (d) (suit-4) which says that in Suit-1885 whether title of Muslims to the property in dispute or any portion thereof was admitted by the plaintiff of the said suit and if so its effect. It reads as under:

> "Whether in the aforesaid suit, title of the Muslims to the property in dispute or any portion thereof was admitted by plaintiff of the that suit? If so, its effect?"

876. Pleading of Suit-1885 have already been discussed above in extentio. We do not find any such admission therein nor such indication is discernible from the three judgments of the three Courts, namely, the Court of Sub Judge, Faizabad; the District Judge, Faizabad and Judicial Commissioner, Lucknow (Oudh). The learned Counsels for the defendants (Suit-1), namely, Sri

Jilani and Sri Siddiqui also could not place anything wherefrom it can be said that Mahant Raghubar Das at any point of time admitted the title of Muslims to the property in dispute or any portion thereof in Suit-1885. In the circumstances, we hold that the aforesaid issue to this extent has to be answered in negative that there is no admission by Mahant Raghubar Das, plaintiff of Suit-1885 about the title of Muslims to the property in dispute or any portion thereof. In absence of any such admission, the question of considering effect thereof does not arise. Issue No. 7 (d) (Suit-4) is answered accordingly.

877. Now we come to Issues No. 5 (d) (Suit-1), 7 (c) (Suit-4), 8 (suit-4) and 23 (Suit-5), which specifically relate to the legal effect of the pleadings pertaining to Suit-1885 as discussed above, i.e. res judicata and estoppel. They read as under:

> "Does the decision in same bar the present suit by principles of res judicata and in any other way?"
> "Whether in view of the judgment in the said suit, the members of the Hindu community, including the contesting defendants, are estopped from denying the title of the Muslim community, including the plaintiffs of the present suit, to the property in dispute? If so, its effect?"
>
> "Does the judgment of case No. 6/281 of 1981, Mahant Raghubar Dass Vs. Secretary of State and others operate as res judicata against the defendants in suit?"
>
> "Whether the judgment in suit no. 61/280 of 1885 filed by Mahant Raghubar Das in the Court of Special Judge, Faizabad is binding upon the plaintiffs by application of the principles of estoppel and res judicata as alleged by the defendants 4 and 5?"

878. Proceeding to consider the rival submissions on merits,

we shall first like to mention in brief what res judicata is, its genesis and evolution.

879. The legislative history involving the principle of res judicata brings us to the first codified civil procedure i.e. Act 8 of 1859, which was applicable to only the Mofussil Courts (i.e. the Courts of Civil Judicature not established by Royal Charter). Prior thereto, the procedure of Mofussil Courts was regulated by Special Acts and Regulations, which after enactment of Act 8 of 1859 were repealed by Act 10 of 1861. Act 23 of 1861 further amended 1859 Act. Section 42 of Act 23 of 1861 gives short title as 'Code of Civil Procedure' to parent Act 8 of 1859. In 1862, the Supreme Court and the Courts of Sadar Diwani Adalat in Presidency Towns were abolished by the High Courts Act, 1861 and powers of those Courts were vested in the Chartered High Courts. The Letters Patent of 1862 establishing the High Courts extended the procedure of Act 8 of 1859 to these Courts. The Charter of 1865 which empowered the High Courts to make Rules and Orders regulating proceedings in civil cases, required them to be guided, as far as possible, by the provisions of Code of 1859 and subsequent amending Acts. Act 8 of 1859 was amended from time to time vide Act 4 of 1860, 43 of 1860, 23 of 1861, 9 of 1863, 20 of 1867, 7 of 1870, 14 of 1870, 9 of 1871, 32 of 1871 and 7 of 1872. The Act 8 of 1859, which we can term as the “first codified civil procedure”, was repealed and substituted by Act 10 of 1877, which may be termed as “second codified civil procedure”. There were only two amendments in this Act, vide Act 18 of 1878 and 12 of 1879. Within five years of the enactment of the second Code, this was also repealed and superseded by Act 14 of 1882, which can be treated as “third Code of Civil Procedure”. It was also amended

by Acts 15 of 1882, 14 of 1885, 4 of 1886, 10 of 1886, 7 of 1887, 8 of 1887, 6 of 1888, 10 of 1888, 13 of 1889, 8 of 1890, 6 of 1892, 5 of 1894, 7 of 1895 and 13 of 1895. It was then superseded and substituted by the present Code, i.e., Act No. 5 of 1908, which came into force on 1st January, 1909.

880. The learned counsel for the plaintiff (Suit-3), while trying to take this Court through the history of legislation, intended to argue though faintly that the question as to whether the suits in question sought to be barred by res judicata would be governed by the provision pertaining to res judicata as it stood in 1885 when the Suit-1885 was filed and decided and not by the subsequent enactments since the language of the provision pertaining to res judicata has gone under crucial amendments from time to time.

881. In our view, the argument at the threshold is thoroughly fallacious and deserves to be mentioned for rejection only. It is not in dispute that all the four Codes were enacted with the preamble mentioning as an Act to consolidate and to amend the laws relating to procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature meaning thereby the legislature all through intended to construe exhaustive enactments dealing with the matters pertaining to procedure of Courts in civil matters. To consolidate means to collect the statutory law relating to a particular subject and to bring it down to take in order that it may form a useful code applicable to the circumstances existing at the time when the consolidation is enacted as observed by the Privy Council in A.G. of Bengal Vs. Prem Lal Mullick (1895) ILR 22 Cal. 788 (PC). Same view was expressed by our full Bench also in Shantha Nand Gir Chela Vs. Basudevanand AIR 1930 Alld. 225. The purport of such codification means that if the language of the statute is plain, simple and unambiguous, there may not be any occasion for the Court to have recourse to the earlier law but if it is capable of more than one meaning, it is permissible to refer to the previous state of law so as to construe the provision correctly. A consolidating Act raises the presumption that it does not intend to alter the earlier law in its entirety unless the changes and alteration are such so as to show that the earlier law has been made redundant in its entirety.

882. However, for the purpose of the present case, it may not be necessary either to take an extreme view in the matter for the reason that principle of res judicata, as it stands today, we find has its origin and existence long back besides any boundation of system of jurisprudence whether Hindu law, Muslim law, English law etc. We do not find any substantial change in the principle and the very basis of the concept which if applicable would have to be followed by a Court of law unless it can be shown that the principle of res judicata, as is known, is not at all attracted in a given case. We find that the availability of the principle of res judicata existing in different systems of law has been very painstakingly traced by the Hon'ble Judges of Lahore High Court in a Full Bench decision in Mussammat Lachhmi Vs. Mussammat Bhulli, 1927 ILR (VIII) 384 and it would be useful to have the benefit of such in depth study by reproducing the same as under :

> "In the mitakshra (Book II, Chap. I, Section V, verse 5) one of the four kinds of effective answers to a suit is "a plea by former judgment" and in verse 10, Katyayana is quoted as laying down that "one against whom a judgment had formerly been given, if he bring forward the matter again, must be answered by a plea of Purva Nyaya or

former judgment" (Macnaughten and Colebrooke's translation page 22). The doctrine, however, seems to have been recognized much earlier in Hindu Jurisprudence, judging from the fact that both the Smriti Chandrika (Mysore Edition, pages 97-98) and the Virmitrodaya (Vidya Sagar Edition, page 77) base the defence of Prang Nyaya (=former decision) on the following text of the ancient law-giver Harita, who is believed by some Orientalists to have flourished in the 9th Century B.C. and whose Smriti is now extant only in fragments :-

"The plaintiff should be non-suited if the defendants avers; 'In this very affair, there was litigation between him and myself previously,' and it is found that the plaintiff had lost his case".

There are texts of Parsara (Bengal Asiatic Society Edition, page 56) and of the Mayukha (Kane's Editiona, page 15) to the same effect.

Among Muhammadan law-givers similar effect was given to the plea of "Niza-I-munfasla" or "Amar Mania Taqrir Mukhalif." Under Roman Law, as administered by the Proetors' Courts, a defendant could repel the plaintiff's claim by means of "exceptio rei judicata" or plea of former judgment. The subject received considerable attention at the hands of Roman jurists and as stated in Roby's Roman Private Law (Vol. II, page 338) the general principle recognized was that "one suit and one decision was enough for any single dispute" and that "a matter once brought to trial should not be tried except, of course, by way of appeal".

The spirit of the doctrine is succinctly expressed in

the well known maxim "Nemo debet bis vexari pro eadem causa" (no one shall be twice vexed for the same cause). At times the rule worked harshly on individuals (E.g., when the former decision was obviously erroneous) but its working was justified on the great principle of public policy "Interest rei publicant sit finis litium" (it is for the public good that there be an end of litigation).

In some of these ancient systems, however, the operation of the rule was confined to cases in which the plaintiff put forward his claim to "the same subject matter with regard to which his request had already been determined by a competent Court and had passed into judgment". In other words, it was what is described as the plea of "estoppel by judgment" or "estoppel by record", which was recognized and given effect to. In several European continental countries even now the rule is still subject to these qualifications, e.g., in the Civil Code of France, it is said "The authority of the thing adjudged (chose judge) has place only in regard to that which has constituted the object of a judgment. It is necessary that the thing demanded be the same; that the demand be founded upon the same cause; that it be between the same parties and found by and against them in the same capacity."

In other countries, and notably in England, the doctrine has developed and expanded, and the bar is applied in a subsequent action not only to cases where claim is laid to the same property but also to the same matter (or issue) as was directly and substantially in dispute in the former litigation. In other words, it is the identity of the issue, which has already been "necessarily

tried" between the parties and on which a finding has been given before, and not the identity of the subject matter which attracts the operation of the rule. Put briefly the plea is not limited to "estoppel by judgment" (or record), but is also extended to what is described as "estoppel by verdict". The earliest authoritative exposition of the law on the subject in England is by Chief Justice DeGrey in the Duchess of Kingston Case (1), which has formed the basis of all subsequent judicial pronouncements in England, America and other countries, the jural systems of which are based on or inspired by British Jurisprudence. In that case a number of propositions on the subject were laid down, the first of them being that "the judgment of a Court of concurrent jurisdiction, directly upon the point, is as a plea a bar, or as evidence conclusive, between the same parties upon the same matter, directly in question in another Court."

In British India the rule of res judicata seems to have been first introduced by section 16 of the Bengal Regulation III of 1793, which prohibited the Zilla and City Courts "from entertaining any cause, which form the production of a former decree of the record of the Court, shall appear to have been heard and determined by any judge or any superintendent of a Court having competent jurisdiction". The earliest legislative attempt at codification of the law on the subject was, however, made in 1859, when the first Civil Procedure Code was passed. Section 2 of the Code barred the cognizance by Courts of suits based on the same cause of action, which had been heard and determined before by Courts of competent jurisdiction. It will be seen that this was only a partial recognition of the English rule in so far as it embodied the principles relating to estoppel by judgment (or record) only and did not extend to estoppel by verdict. In 1877 when the Code was revised, the operation of the rule was extended in section 13 and the bar was no longer confined to the retrial of a dispute relating to the same cause of action but the prohibition equally applied against reagitating an issue, which had been heard and finally decided between the same parties in a former suit by a competent Court. The section has been amended and amplified twice again and has assumed its present form in section 11 of the Code of 1908, the principal amendments which have a bearing on the question before us, being (a) that the expression "former suit" was defined as meaning a suit which has been first decided and not one which was first instituted, and (b) that the competence of a Court is not regulated by the course of appeal of the former suit but by its capacity to try the subsequent suit as an original Court.

But although the Indian Legislature has from 1859 onwards made several attempts to codify the law on the subject and the present section 11 is a largely modified and improved form of the original section 2 of Act VIII of 1859, it must be borne in mind that the section as even now enacted, is not exhaustive of the law on the subject, and the general principles of res judicata apply to matters on which the section is silent and also govern proceedings to which the section does not in terms apply."

883. It is, thus, evident that Res judicata is a principle or doctrine or concept which is well recognized since ancient times. It is a principle of universal application treated to be a fundamental and basic idea in every developed jural society. The very objective of adjudication of a dispute by an adjudicatory forum, whatever name it is called, is to bring to an end dispute or lis between the parties. The seed of justice, thus, aims to have every matter fairly tried once and, thereafter, further litigation should be barred treating to be concluded for all times to come between the parties. So far as the dispute which has already been adjudicated, it is a rule common to all, well defined in a civilized system of jurisprudence that the solemn and deliberate sentence of law upon a disputed fact pronounced, after a proper trial, by its appointed organ should be regarded as final and conclusive determination of the question litigated and should set at rest, forever, the controversy. This rule which treats the final decision of a competent Tribunal as "irrefragable truth" was well known to Hindu and Mohammadan lawyers and jurists since long as the system is recognized in Hindu as well as Muslim laws also.

884. So far as Europe is concerned, it is mainly influenced with the legal system of Roman jurisprudence. This principle is one of the great gains of Roman jurisprudence carried to modern jural system of Europe. In the Anglo saxon jurisprudence, this principle is formerly based on an maxim of Roman jurisprudence "interest reipublicae ut sit finis litium" (it concerns the state that there should be an end to law suits) and partly on the maxim "nemo debut bis vexari pro una at eadem cause (no man should be vexed twice over for the same cause). The Act 8 of 1859 provided the principle of the res judicata in Section 2 which read as under :

"The civil court shall not take cognizance of any suit

brought on or cause of action which shall have been heard and determined by a court of competent jurisdiction in a former suit between the same parties, or between parties under whom they claim."

885. The principle of res judicata vide Section 2 of C.P.C., 1859 came to be considered before the Privy Council in Soorjomonee Dayee Vs. Suddanund Mahapatter (1873) 12 BLR 304, 315 (P.C.). The Judicial Committee said "We are of the opinion that Section 2 of the Code of 1859 would by no means prevent operation of the general law relating to res judicata founded on the principle "nemo debet bis vexari pro eadem causa".

886. In Krishna Behary Ray Vs. Bunwari Lal Ray, (1875) 1 Cal. 144 (146), Privy Council while construing the expression "cause of action" held that it cannot be interpreted in its literal and restricted sense and if a material issue had been tried and determined between the same parties by a competent court, the same cannot be re-agitated again by the parties in a later suit who were also partied in the former suit.

887. When this view was expressed in some other judgment also the legislature introduced the words "matter directly and substantially in issue" in Section 13 in Act No. 10 of 1877 and 14 of 1882. In Act No. 10 of 1877, it was Section 13 of the Code.

888. In Parthasaradi Ayyangar and others Vs. Chinnakrishna Ayyangar and others Vol. V ILR Madras Series (1882) 304 an interesting question with respect to res judicata and estoppel by verdict and/or estoppel by judgment was considered. An original suit no. 12 of 1850 was instituted by certain persons of Tenkalai sect in the Court of Sadar Amin

against the members of Vadakalai sect. A Vadakalai temple was erected in the village of Mathura Mangalam in the honor of a devotee Embar in which the member of Tenkalai sect were interested in maintaining worship and in defending the privileges of the temple. The other sect, namely, Vadakalai, also erected a Vaishnava temple on a private site in the Sanadi (temple) street in honor of a devotee, Vedhanta Desikar, which was later on thrown open for regular public worship. In 1849 the above mentioned suit was filed praying that the Vadakalais be compelled to remove their idols and be prohibited from celebrating festivals and erecting any temple in the village for the worship of their idols. The Vadakalais, defended the suit contending that the general right of owners of land to erect on their own property, places of public worship and to set up therein such idols as they thought fit. Earlier to that suit, it appears that there was some other suit between the same sects wherein the pundit had delivered an opinion that the public worship of idols of devotees such as the spiritual teachers of the respective sects was not recognized by Hindu law, and that law did not permit persons to assemble together to celebrate to such idols. But where it was customary to do so, such idols might be used in private worship. Relying on the said opinion of the pundit, the Sadar Amin granted the order of injunction prayed for. In the appeal preferred before the Judge, he held that supposing the worship of which the Tenkalais complained was prejudicial to the interests of the institution they supported, the question being one of conscience, no cause of action accrued to the Tenkalais, and that it was competent to the Vadakalais to adopt the worship of what idols they pleased in pagodas erected on their own lands. It reversed the decree in so much it ordered

the removal of the idols and prohibited the Vadakalais from erecting pagodas and celebrating public worship therein. But it found that conduct of procession in honor of Vadakalai idols was an innovation, did not form an essential part of the worship, and might be productive of public disturbance, and, accordingly, passed an order restraining it. Noticing that this part of the order was beyond the relief sought in the plaint, an appeal was preferred before the Sadar Court. The Sadar Court sought for opinion of the pundits of the Court with respect to Hindu law on the subject who opined that it would be contrary to custom to allow a pagoda to be erected by the Vadakalai Vaishnavas even on their own ground if such an erection was against the feelings generally of the people of the village. He referred to a passage in the preamble of the Mitakshara which declared that "no cases prejudicial to the feelings of the inhabitants of a town or village shall be entertained by a King". The Sadar Court accordingly decreed that the defendants (the Vadakalais) should be prohibited from erecting temple or instituting public worship on the spot of ground objected to by the plaintiffs and which lay within the range of their temple, that is to say, withing the usual range of the processions conducted in connection with the temple worship. In another appeal no. 141 of 1856, Sadar Court declared that the right to pass in procession through the public streets of a town in such a way as the Magistrate might not object to as dangerous to the public safety, was a right inherent in every subject of the state and the Vadakalais' action which continued was in disobedience as was restrained by the earlier decree and injunction prohibiting decree was again passed in 1862. Thereafter, Vadakalais removed their idols and erected a building for the purpose of worship on another site. No

arrangement of celebration of the public worship was made till 1879 except of occasional processions. However, in 1879 again provision was made for continuous conduct of such worship throughout the year. This led to another suit which ultimately reached to the appellate Court. It was held that the decree in earlier suit cannot preclude the Vadakalais from building a temple or conduct public worship at any other spot and plea of estoppel based on the earlier decisions was held to be inapplicable. The Court held that the matter in issue which was raised and decided in the former suit was not a question of fact but a question of law based on the opinion of pundit which was found opposed to the law declared to be the law of India under British administration. The Court held that the law of India under British administration as declared is that the person of whatever sect are at liberty to erect building and conduct public worship on their own land provided they neither invade the rights of property enjoyed by their neighbours nor cause a public nuisance, and that they are also entitled to conduct religious processions through public streets so that they do not interfere with the ordinary use of such streets by the public and subject to such directions as the Magistrate may lawfully give to prevent obstructions of the thoroughfare or breaches of the public peace. The Court held that the principle of res judicata also would not come in way. The Courts are bound to ascertain and apply the law and not to make law. It observed that what was argued was estoppel by verdict and estoppel by judgment. Explaining the "estoppel by verdict", it was held that it indicates that such estoppels are confined to questions of facts and no authority was cited before the Court to warrant the application of rule to determination of an issue of law. Explaining the principle of res judicata, the Court observed, "Although considerations of convenience have established the rule that the final decree of a competent Court is decisive of the rights it declares or refuses notwithstanding it may have proceeded on an erroneous view of the law, and although the same considerations have established the rule that the determination by a competent Court of questions of fact directly and substantially in issue are binding on the parties, these considerations do not suggest the expediency of compelling the Courts to refuse to give effect to what they have ascertained to be the law." However, the Court also said that all earlier decisions were in respect to a different place and would not bar the subsequent suit which was in respect to another spot.

889. In Ram Kirpal Vs. Rup Kuari (1883) ILR 6 (Alld.) 269 (P.C.) it was held that Section 13 of 1877 Act would not apply to execution proceedings but upon general principles of law the decision of a matter once decided in those proceedings was a bar to the same matter being re-agitated at a subsequent stage thereof.

890. Act 5 of 1908 contains the provision of res judicata under Section 11 which substantially is same as it was in Act 14 of 1882, but includes certain explanations clarifying some aspects of the matter considered to be necessary in the light of some judgments of different High Courts. It has undergone some amendments in 1976, but has withstood the test of the time more than a decade. Section 11 of Act 5 of 1908, as it stands today, reads as under :

> "11. Res judicata.- No Court shall try any suit or issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit

between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title, in a Court competent to try such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised, and has been heard and finally decided by such Court.

Explanation I- The expression "former suit" shall denote a suit which has been decided prior to the suit in question whether or not it was instituted prior thereto.

Explanation II.- For the purposes of this section, the competence of a Court shall be determined irrespective of any provisions as to a right of appeal from the decision of such Court.

Explanation III.- The matter above referred to must in the former suit have been alleged by one party and either denied or admitted, expressly or impliedly, by the other.

Explanation IV.- Any matter which might and ought to have been made ground of defence or attack in such former suit shall be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit.

Explanation V.- Any relief claimed in the plaint, which is not expressly granted by the decree, shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to have been refused.

Explanation VI- Where persons litigate bona fide in respect of public right or of a private right claimed in common for themselves and others, all persons interested in such right shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to claim under the persons so litigating.

Explanation VII.- The provisions of this section shall apply to a proceeding for the execution of a decree and reference in this section to any suit, issue or former suit shall be construed as references, respectively, to proceedings for the execution of the decree, question arising in such proceeding and a former proceeding for the execution of that decree.

Explanation VIII.-An issue heard and finally decided by a Court of limited jurisdiction, competent to decide such issue, shall operate as res judicata in as subsequent suit, notwithstanding that such Court of limited jurisdiction was not competent to try such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised."

891. Explanations VII and VIII have been added by Amendment Act of 1976 and admittedly have no application to the dispute in hand.

892. The plea of res judicata is an inhibition against the Court and a finding in favour of a party on the plea of res judicata would oust the jurisdiction of the Court to try the subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been raised, which has been heard and finally decided in the former suit (see : Pandurang Dhondi Chougule Vs. Maruti Hari Jadhav AIR 1966 SC 153. Since, it restrains the Court to try the subsequent suit or an issue raised subsequently, we have no manner of doubt that for the purpose of present case, it is the provision contained in Section 11 of Act 5 of 1908, which will govern the matter and not the earlier one. The application of principle of res judicata is based on public policy and in the interest of the State as well. However, we would like to clarify here itself that we may not be understood as observing that the principle of res judicata is confined to Section 11 of the Act 5 of 1908. As we have already held, the principle of res judicata was well recognized in the ancient legal systems also and it has consistently been held as not limited to the specific words of the Code for its application.

893. One of the oldest case which considered the doctrine of res judicata vide Section 11, CPC, 1908 is Sheoparsan Singh and others Vs. Ramnandan Prasad 43 IA 91(PC)= 20 C.W.N. 738 (P.C.) wherein their Lordships reminded the dictum in the words of Lord Coke in Priddle Vs. Napper 6 Coke IA 1777 which said "Interest reipublicae ut sit finis litium", otherwise great oppression might be done under colour and pretence of law. (See also Commissioner of Central Excise Vs. Shree Baidyanath Ayurved Bhawan Ltd. JT 2009 (6) SC 29).

894. The statement of law as propounded in Sheoparsan Singh (supra) has been approved by the Apex Court in Iftikhar Ahmed Vs. Syed Meharban Ali 1974 (2) SCC 151.

895. Then comes Hook Vs. Administrator General of Bengal 1921 (ILR) 48 (Cal.) 499 (P.C.) wherein it was said that Section 11 of the Code is not exhaustive of the circumstances in which an issue is res judicata. Even though the Section may not apply, the plea of res judicata still would remain operative apart from the limited provisions of the Code, and would bar a subsequent suit on the same issue unless is shown to be inapplicable by the defendants referring to pleading, parties and cause of action etc. It was reaffirmed by Lord Buckmaster in T.B. Ramachandra Rao and another Vs. A.N.S. Ramchandra Rao and others, AIR 1922 PC 80 wherein the remarks were "that the principle which prevents the same case being twice litigated is of general application, and is not limited by the specific words of the Code in this respect."

896. In Kalipada De Vs. Dwijapada Das, AIR 1930 PC 22 the Privy Council held "the question as to what is considered to be res judicata is dealt with by Section 11 of CPC 1908. In that section many examples and circumstances in which the rule concerning res judicata applies are given; but it has often been explained by this Board that the terms of Section 11 are not to be regarded as exhaustive".

897. In Gulam Abbas Vs. State of U.P., AIR 1981 SC 2199 it was held that Section 11 is not exhaustive of the general doctrine of res judicata. Though the rule of res judicata as enacted in Section 11 has some technical aspects the general doctrine is founded on consideration of high public policy to achieve two objectives namely that there must be a finality to litigation and that individuals should not be harassed twice over the same kind of litigation.

898. It is thus clear that principle of res judicata is based on sound policy and not an arbitrary one. Henry Campell Black in his Treatise "for law of judgments" 2nd Edition Vol. I, para 242 has observed that "Where the court has jurisdiction of the parties and the subject matter in the particular case, its judgment unless reversed or annulled or impeachment by parties or privies, in any collateral action or proceeding whatever the Doctrine of this court, and of all the courts of this country, is formerly established, that if the court in which the proceedings took place had jurisdiction to render the judgment which it did no error in its proceedings which did not affect the jurisdiction will render the proceedings void, nor can such errors be considered when the judgment is brought collaterally into question one. This principle is not merely an arbitrary rule or law but it is a doctrine which is founded upon reason and the soundest principle of public policy."

899. In Jenkins Vs. Robertson, (1867) LRIHL 117 Lord

Romily observed "res judicata by its very words means a matter upon which the court has exercised its judicial mind and has come to the conclusion that one side is right and has pronounced a decision accordingly. In my opinion res judicata signifies that the court has after argument and considerations come to a decision on a contested matter."

900. In Corpus Juris Vol. 34 it is said that it is a rule of universal law providing every regulated system of jurisprudence and is put upon two grounds embodied in various maxims of common law, the one of public policy and necessity which makes it to the interest of the state that there should be an end of litigation, and, the other, hardship on the individual that he should not be vexed twice for the same cause.

901. The Apex Court in Smt. Raj Lakshmi Dasi and others Vs. Banamali Sen and others AIR 1953 SC 33 remarked "When a plea of res judicata is founded on general principles of law, all that is necessary to establish is that the Court that heard and decided the former case was a Court of competent jurisdiction. It does not seem necessary in such cases to further prove that it has jurisdiction to hear the later suit. A plea of res judicata on general principle can be successfully taken in respect of judgments of Courts of exclusive jurisdiction, like revenue Courts, land acquisition Courts, administration Courts, etc. It is obvious that these Courts are not entitled to try a regular suit and they only exercise special jurisdiction conferred on them by the statute.

902. In Lal Chand Vs. Radha Krishan (supra) the Apex Court reiterated "the principle of res judicata is conceived in the larger public interest which requires that all the litigation must sooner than later come to an end. The principle is also founded on equity, justice and good conscious which require that a party which has once succeeded on a issue should not be permitted to be harassed by a multiplicity of proceedings involving the same issue".

903. In K. Ethirajan (sapra) which has also been relied by Sri Siddiqui, learned counsel for plaintiff (Suit-4) the Apex Court refering to para 26 of its earlier judgement in Hope Plantations Ltd. Vs. Taluk Land Board, Peermade, JT 1998 (7) SC 404 held that rule of res judicata prevents the parties to a judicial determination from litigating the same question over again. Where the proceedings have attained finality, parties are bound by the judgement and cannot litigate again on the same cause of action.

904. In Sulochana Amma (supra) the scope of Section 11 CPC was considered and it was said that Section 11 does not create any right or interest in the property but merely operates as a bar to try the same issue once over. It aims to prevent multiplicity of the proceedings and accords finality to an issue which directly and substantially has arisen in the former suit between the same parties or their privies, decided and became final so that parties are not vexed twice over; vexatious litigation would be put to an end and the valuable time of the Court is saved. The above judgement also clarify Explanation VIII that the decree of a Court of limited jurisdiction would also operates as res judicata in the subsequent suit though the subsequent suit was not triable by that Court.

905. Recently the Apex Court has reiterated the above view in Brij Narain Singh Vs. Adya Prasad, JT 2008 (3) SC 1.

906. The doctrine of res judicata has been extended to public interest litigation also in State of Karnataka and another Vs.

www.vadaprativada.com

All India Manufacturers Organization (supra) and the Court has said:

> "As a matter of fact, in a public interest litigation, the petitioner is not agitating his individual rights but represents the public at large. Hence the litigation is bona fide, a judgement in previous public interest litigation would be a judgement in rem. It binds the public at large and bars any member of the public from coming forward before the court and raising any connected issue or an issue, which had been raised should have been raised on an earlier occasion by way of public interest litigation."

907. In Mathura Prasad Sarjoo Jaiswal and others Vs. Dossibai AIR 1971 SC 2355, the Court clarified that the doctrine of res judicata is in the domain of procedure and cannot be exalted to the status of a legislative direction between the parties so as to determine the question relating to interpretation of the enactment affecting the jurisdiction of the Court finally between them even though no question of fact or mixed question of law and fact and relating to the right in issue between the parties once determined thereby. It also said that a decision of a competent Court on a matter in issue may be res judicata in another proceeding between the same parties; the "matter in issue" may be an issue of fact, an issue of law or one of mixed law and fact. However, the Apex Court said that the previous decision on a matter in issue alone is res judicata; the reasons for the decision are not res judicata, and said as under :

> "The previous decision on a matter in issue alone is res judicata; the reasons for the decision are not res judicata."

908. Another aspect as to when the rule of res judicata would not be attracted has been dealt with in detail in para 10 of the judgment in Mathura Prasad Serjoo Jaiswal (supra) which reads as under :

> "A mixed question of law and fact determined in the earlier, proceeding between the same parties may not, for the same reason, be questioned in a subsequent proceeding between the same parties. But where the decision is on a question law, i.e. the interpretation of a statute, it will be res judicata in a subsequent proceeding between the same parties where the cause of action is the same, for the expression "the matter in issue" in S. 11, Code of Civil Procedure, means the right litigated between the parties, i.e. the facts on which the right is claimed or denied and the law applicable to the determination of that issue. Where, however, the question is one purely of law and it relates to the jurisdiction of the Court or a decision of the Court sanctioning something which is illegal, by resort to the rule of res judicata a party affected by the decision will not be precluded from challenging the validity of the order under the rule of res judicata, for a rule of procedure cannot supersede the law of the land."

909. In other words, what we discern from the above authorities, is that the res judicata is a fundamental principle in a legal system to set at rest a dispute once settled so as not to trouble the parties again and again on the same matter. It operates on the principle that a question must be once fairly and finally tried by a competent Court and, thereafter, further litigation about it between the same parties must be deemed to have concluded and should not be allowed to be re-agitated. The maxim to be attracted is "no one shall be vexed twice over the

same matter". [See Shree Baidyanath Ayurved Bhawan Ltd. (supra)].

910. It is not that every matter decided in a former suit can be pleaded as res judicata in a subsequent suit. To attract the plea of res judicata, the conditions precedent, which need to be proved are :

1. The matter directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit must be the same matter, which was directly and substantially in issue, either actually or constructively, in the former suit.

2. The former suit must have the same parties or the parties under whom they or any of them claims.

3. The parties must have litigated under the same title in the former suit.

4. The Court, which decided the former suit must have been a Court competent to try the subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised.

5. The matter directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit must have been heard and finally decided by the Court in the first suit.

911. In Syed Mohd. Salie Labbai Vs. Mohd. Hanifa AIR 1976 SC 1569, the Apex Court said that in attracting the plea of res judicata the following conditions must be proved :

1. that the litigating parties must be the same;

2. that the subject-matter of the suit also must be identical;

3. that the matter must be finally decided between the parties; and

4. that the suit must be decided by a court of competent jurisdiction.

912. In certain cases, the applicability of res judicata qua the

aforementioned conditions precedent came to be considered with certain different angles, which may be useful to be referred hereat.

913. One such aspect came to be considered by the Privy Council in Midnapur Zamindary Co. Ltd. (supra) which is also a decision cited by Sri Siddiqui. The plaintiff excluded certain question by the statement of his pleader and, therefore, the trial court did not decide the issue. In the first appeal the defendant urged that the Trial Judge was wrong in not deciding this question even though his action was based on the plaintiff's advisor's statement and the defendant asked the first appellate court expressly to decide the question. The court did so. The question was whether it can be argued that the point decided was not raised and, therefore, the court did not consider it to be a necessary issue. On the contrary when the first appellate court decided the issue and the same became final, it would operate as res judicata to the subsequent suit involving the same issue.

914. Another angle of the above aspect came to be considered by the Privy Council in Prem Narain Vs. Ram Charan and others, AIR 1932 P.C. 51 where though the point was not properly raised in the plaint but both parties without protest chose to join issue upon that point and it was held that the decision on the point would operate as res judicata between the parties.

915. In Jagdeo Misir Vs. Mahabir Tewari, AIR 1927 All. 803 a Division Bench of this Court held:

> "We think that those two cases are authorities for the proposition that if a party raised an issue, however improperly, in a case which is accepted by the other side and if the Court itself accepts the issue to be one relevant to the enquiry and necessary for the determination of the case, and that issue is argued out by both parties and a judicial decision come to, it is not open subsequently for either of the parties or their successors-in-interest or the person claiming through them, to say that the issue does not constitute res judicata."

916. This has been followed in Lalji Sahib Vs. Munshi Lal, AIR 1943 All 340 and Dhan Singh (supra).

917. In Dhan Singh (supra) this Court also held that res judicata may apply even though the parties against whom it is sought to enforce did not enter appearance and contest question in the previous suit. But in such a case it has to be shown that such a party had notice that the relevant question was in issue and would have to be decided for which the burden lie on the person who pleaded bar of res judicata. For these propositions this Court followed and relied on Chandu Lal Vs. Khalilur Rahman, AIR 1950 P.C. 17.

918. The proposition advanced by Sri Siddiqui that even if a judgement in a previous case is erroneous it would be binding on the parties thereto and would operate as res judicata in subsequent case as held in Gorie Gouri Naidu (supra) is well settled.

919. In short, we can say that though in order to have the defence of res judicata accepted, it is necessary to show not only that the cause of action was same, but also that the plaintiff had an opportunity of getting the relief in the former proceedings, which he is now seeking. In Jaswant Singh Vs. Custodian of Evacuee Property 1985 (3) SCC 648 it was pointed out that the test is whether the claim in the subsequent suit or proceeding is in fact founded upon the same cause of action, which was the foundation of the former suit or the proceeding. The cause of action for a proceeding has no relation, whatsoever, to the defence, which may be set up, nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff or the applicant. It refers entirely to the grounds set forth in the plaint or the application, as the case may be, as the cause of action or in other words, to the media upon which the plaintiff or the applicant ask the Court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour.

920. Coming to the decision cited by Sri Siddiqui in Talluri Venkata Seshayya (supra) we find that there was a case where five temples, subject matter of suit, were built in 19th Century by one Thadikonda Seshayya a native of Vellatur and the grandfather of Kotiswara Rao adoptive father who is said to have earn wealth in Hyderabad and return to his native place. The temples were built for the deities of Siddhi Ganapati Swami, Rajeswara Swami, Bhimeswara Swami, Adi Seshachala Swami and Kameswara Maharani. Sri Thadikonda Seshayya conducted the festivals and other affairs of the deities during his life time. He left a will dated 26.08.1826 shortly before his death directing his widow, Adilakshmamma to make a permanent endowment for the temples to the extent of Rs. 70,000/- out of his self acquired properties. The widow purchased two sets of properties in the villages of Kowtharam and Peddapulivarru for the temples, conducted the affairs of temples out of the land so purchased, and afterwards made a formal gift of the lands to the idols. Another set of properties in the village of Vellatur was endowed to the same temples by the Zamindar of Narasaraopet. Seshayya's two sons, Siddi Ganapati Doss and Nagabhushana Gajanana Doss conducted festivals and other affairs until the death of Ganapati in 1857. The latter's widow claimed the Dharmakartaship but the Collector decided in favour of Gajanana. In 1859 the Inam Commissioner granted an Inam title deed in respect of the Devadayam Inam situated in the village of Kowtharam. In 1867 Gajanana started borrowing money on the security of Devadayam lands, which culminated in a usufructuary mortgage for Rs. 8000/- dated 15.01.1887 under which the lands of Kowtharam were handed over to the mortgagee. To discharge this mortgage Gajanana and his adopted sons Seshayya granted permanent lease of Kowtharam lands dated 06.12.1888 and on the same date the mortgagee, Gopalkrishnamma executed the counterpart of the lease. Two persons interested in the temples and in the performance of the service and worship thereof who had obtained the leave of the Court under Section 18, Religious Endowments Act, 20 of 1863, on 18.01.1891 filed suit O.S. No. 4 of 1891 in the District Court, Kistna against Gajanana, his adopted son Seshayya and Gopalakrishna claiming that the five suit temples at Vellatur were public temples, therefore, the first two defendants be removed from the office of the Dharmakarta. The main defence taken by the defendants in the said suit was that the temples and lands were private property hence Act, 20 of 1863 did not apply. Gajanana died during the pendency of suit. Vide judgment dated 05.02.1892 the District Judge Kistna dismissed suit holding that the temples were private, lands were a private foundation and Act, 20 of 1863 did not apply. The judgment was confirmed by Madras High Court in appeal vide judgment dated 03.08.1893. One suit was filed by Venkata Seshayya and others on 21.08.1923 as representing the interested public under Order 1 Rule 8 CPC with the requisite permission of the Subordinate Judge of Masaulipatam seeking a declaration that five temples

of the village of Vellatur, Guntur District are public temples and that certain Ina lands situated in Kowthavaram village form the endowment of these temples and, therefore, the plaintiff seeking setting aside of a permanent lease in respect of these lands executed on 06.12.1888 by the then Managers of the temples, the mortgage deed on the security of these lands dated 03.11.1900 and the Court sale effected in execution of the decree obtained on the basis of the said mortgage in O.S. No. 29 of 1911. They further seek restoration of possession of these lands to Kotiswara Rao, defendant no. 1 who is the person hereditary Dharmakartha of the temples. Before the Privy Council it was contended on behalf of the appellants conceding that the appellants must be deemed to be claiming under plaintiffs in 1891 suit within the meaning of Explanation VI, Section 11 CPC as they were both claiming as representing the public interest in the temples of Kowthavaram lands and the issue in the two suits was substantially same but it was submitted that 1891 suit was not a bona fide litigation, there was gross negligence in the conduct of the suit by the plaintiff in 1891 suit, and, therefore, the principle of res judicata would not bar the present suit. Rejecting the submission, it was held that the provision of Section 11 CPC is mandatory and the ordinary litigant who claims under one of the parties to the former suit can only avoid its provisions by taking advantage of Section 44, Evidence Act which defines with precision the grounds of such avoidance as fraud or collusion. The exposition of law stated therein need not be discussed further since it is consistent with what was held subsequently also as has been discussed by us above.

921. During the course of argument, the learned counsel for

the plaintiff (Suit-4) has pleaded and pressed the plea of maintainability of suit on the ground of res judicata and estoppel using both the term it appears to us interchangeably. However, we do not subscribe to the view since it is now well settled that the two are essentially different. It is true that sometimes res judicata has been treated as part of the doctrine of the estoppel, but both have been held to be different in connotation, in application and with reference to the essential indicias thereof.

922. Both these principles are based on public policy and justice. Often they are treated as a branch of law having same traits but both differ in several aspects. Doctrine of res judicata some times is construed as a branch of doctrine of estoppel but as we said earlier both have different connotation. In Hope Plantations Ltd. (supra) in para 26 of the judgement the Apex Court said:

> "It is settled law that the principles of estoppel and res judicata are based on public policy and justice. Doctrine of res judicata is often treated as a branch of the law of estoppel through these two doctrines differ in some essential particulars....."

923. The estoppel is part of the law of evidence and prevents a person from saying one thing at one time and opposite thing at another time while res judicata precludes a man from avowing the same thing in successive litigations. (Cassomally Vs. Carrimbhoy (1911) 36 Bom. 214; Radharani Vs. Binodamoyee AIR 1942 Cal. 92; Rajah of Venkatgiri Vs. Provinces of Madras AIR (34) 1947 Madras 5. We find it useful to refer the distinction elucidated by Hon'ble Mahmood J. in Sitaram Vs. Amir Begum (1886) ILR 8 Alld. 324 "Perhaps shortest way to describe difference between the plea of res

judicata and estoppel is to say that while the former prohibits the Court from entering into an inquiry at all as to a matter already adjudicated upon, the later prohibits a party after the inquiry has already been entered upon from proving any thing which would contradict his own previous declaration or acts to the prejudice of another party who, relying upon those declaration or acts to the prejudice of another party, has altered his position. In other words, res judicata prohibits an inquiry in limine, whilst an estoppel is only a piece of evidence".

924. Res judicata has been held to be a branch or specie of the rule of estoppel called "estoppel by record". In Guda Vijayalakshmi Vs. Guda Ramchandra Sekhara Sastry, AIR 1981 SC 1143 in para 3 the Apex Court observed:

> "Res judicata, after all, is a branch or specie of rule of estoppel called estoppel by record and though estoppel is often described as a rule of evidence, whole concept is more correctly viewed as a substantive rule of law."

925. A judgement operates as estoppel on all points considered and decided therein. It is the decision and not decree that creates bar of res judicata. Res judicata, therefore, is estoppel by judgement or record and not by decree. The judgement operates as estoppel in respect to all the findings which are essential to sustain the judgements. What has taken place, recorded and declared final, cannot be questioned subsequently by anyone which has already an opportunity to adjudicate and this is what we call as estoppel on record. The distinction between the doctrine of res judicata and estoppel would lie with the estoppel results from the acts and conduct of the parties while the res judicata prohibits the Court from entering into an inquiry as to a matter already adjudicated upon.

While in the case of estoppel it prohibits a party after the inquiry has already been entered upon from proving anything which would contradict his own previous declaration or acts to the prejudice of another party who relying upon those declaration or acts has altered his position. Rule of res judicata prevents the parties to a judicial determination from litigating the same question over and again even though the determination may even be demonstratedly wrong. When the proceedings have attained finality, parties are bound by the judgement and are estopped from questioning it. They cannot litigate again on the same cause of action nor can they litigate any issue which was necessary for decision in the earlier litigation. These two aspects are "cause of action estoppel" and "issue estoppel". It is held that these two terms are of common law origin.

926. The learned counsel for the parties have also addressed this Court as to what does it mean by the words "suit"; "issue"; "directly and substantially in issue" in order to show whether the principle of res judicata would be attracted in the cases in hand or not.

927. To apply the doctrine of res judicata we need to understand the meaning of the word "suit" or "issue", when a matter can be said to be "directly and substantially in issue", can it be said that the parties are same or parties in the earlier suit were the parties under whom the present one are claiming their rights i.e. litigating under the same title.

928. Sri R.L. Verma, learned counsel for the plaintiff in Suit-3 refers to Order 4 Rule 1 and submitted that a suit is instituted by presenting a plaint. He also referred to Order 6 to show that "pleadings" means "plaint" and "written statement" and Order 7 to show what constitute a "plaint".

929. It is not disputed by the parties that the term “suit” has not been defined in CPC. Section 26 says that every suit shall be instituted by presentation of a plaint or in such other manner as may be prescribed. The term "suit" was considered by the Privy Council in Hansraj Gupta and others Vs. Dehradun Mussorie Electric Tramway Company Ltd., AIR 1933 PC 63 and it was held that word “suit” ordinarily, apart from some context, must be taken to mean a civil proceeding instituted by presentation of a plaint. To the same effect is the view expressed by the Madras High Court in Venkata Chandrayya Vs. Venkata Rama Reddy, (1899) 22 Madras 256, Raja Gopa Chettiar Vs. Hindu Religion Endowment Board, Madras, AIR 1934 Madras 103 and by Punjab and Haryana High Court in Union Territory of Chandigarh Vs. Sardara Singh and others, AIR 1981 (Punjab and Haryana) 354.

930. However, if a suit is filed by a pauper under Order XXXIII CPC the same would commence from the moment the application to sue in forma pauperis is presented. (see Matuka Mistry Vs. Kamakhaya Prasad, AIR 1958 (Patna) 264 (FB), Narayana Dutt and another Vs. Smt. Molini Devi, AIR 1964 (Rajasthan) 269, Shripati Quer Vs. Malti Devi, AIR 1967 (Patna) 320). This illustration is only for the purpose to show "any other manner as may be prescribed", contained in Section 26 CPC.

931. Similarly, the "issue" has also not been defined in CPC. Whartons “Law Lexicon” says that “issue” means "the point in question at the conclusion of the pleading between the contending parties in an action, when one side affirms and the other side denies". Order XIV of the Code of Civil Procedure deals with the settlement of “issues” and determination of suit

on issues of law or on issues agreed upon. Rule 1 deals with the framing of issues as follows:

1. Issues arise when a material proposition of fact or law is affirmed by the one party and deemed by the other.
2. Material propositions are those propositions of law or fact which a plaintiff must allege in order to show a right to sue or a defendant must allege in order to constitute his defence.
3. Every material proposition affirmed by one party and denied by the other, shall form the subject of a distinct issue.
4. Issues are of two kinds.
   (a)Issues of fact
   (b)Issues of law

Meaning of "a matter directly and substantially in issue"

www.vadaprativada.com

932. Then comes as to what constitute "a matter directly and substantially in issue". One of the test recognized is, if the issue was necessary to be decided for adjudicating on the principle issue, and, was decided.

933. A collateral or incidental issue is one i.e. ancillary to a direct and substantive issue; the former is an auxiliary issue and the later the principal issue. The expression collateral or incidental in issue implies that there is another matter which is directly and substantially in issue. (Mulla's C.P.C. 16th Edition, Vol. I, page 179).

934. Difficulty, however, in distinguishing whether a matter was directly in issue or collaterally in issue confronted various Courts in different Countries and certain test were laid down therein. Halsbury's Laws of England (Vol. 16, para 1538, 4th Edn.) says "difficulty arises in the application of the rule, in determining in each case what was the point decided and what was the matter incidentally cognizable, and the opinion of Judges seems to have undergone some fluctuations."

935. In "The Doctrine of Res Judicata" (2nd Edn., 1969, p. 181), "Spencer Bower and Turner", quoted Dixon, J. of the Australian High Court in Blair Vs. Churran (1939) 62 CLR 464 at page 553; "The difficulty in the actual application of these conceptions is to distinguish the matters fundamental or cardinal to the prior decision on judgment, or necessarily involved in it as its legal justification or foundation, from matters which, even though actually raised and decided as being in the circumstances of the case the determining considerations, yet are not in point of law the essential foundation of a groundwork of the judgment."

936. The aforesaid authorities opined in order to understand this essential distinction, one has always to inquire with unrelenting severity- is the determination upon which it is sought to find an estoppel so fundamental to the substantive decision that the latter cannot stand without the former. Nothing less than this will do. It is suggested by Dixon, J. that even where this inquiry is answered satisfactorily, there is still another test to pass: viz. whether the determination is the "immediate foundation" of the decision as opposed to merely "a proposition collateral or subsidiary only, i.e. not more than part of the reasoning supporting the conclusion." It is well settled, say the above authors, "that a mere step in reasoning is insufficient. What is required is no less than the determination of law, or fact or both, fundamental to the substantive decision."

937. Corpus Juris Secundum (Vol. 50, para 725) noticed the above aspects and conceded it is sometimes difficult to determine when particular issue determined is of sufficient

dignity to be covered by the rule of estoppel. It is said that estoppel by judgment does not extend to any matter which was only incidentally cognizable or which came collaterally in question, although it may have arisen in the case and have been judicially passed on.

938. However, this rule did not prevent a judgment from constituting an estoppel with reference to incidental matters necessarily adjudicated in determining ultimate vital point.

939. American Jurispudence (Vol. 46, Judgments, para 422) says; "Under this rule, if the record of the former trial shows that the judgment could not have been rendered without deciding the particular matter, it will be considered as having settled that matter as to all future actions between the parties."

940. The words "substantially" means "of importance and value". When a matter is substantially in issue, when it is of importance and value for the decision of main proceeding. When parties go to a trial on a particular issue treating it as material and invites the Court to give a decision thereon, that will be an issue substantially and directly involved and would operate as res judicata. However, a mere expression of opinion on a question not in issue cannot operate as res judicata as held in Ragho Prasad Gupta Vs. Krishna Poddar AIR 1969 SC 316.

941. In Sajjadanashin Sayed Md. B.E. Edr. (D) By LRS. Vs. Musa Dadabhai Ummer and others 2000 (3) SCC 350, the term "directly and substantially in issue" qua the words "incidental and collateral" came up for consideration. The Edroos family in Gujarat claimed to be descendants of Hazarat Imam Ali, the son-in-law and cousin of Prophet Muhamed. One of the descendants of the said Hazrat came down to India in

1542 A.D. and founded his Gadi at Ahmedabad, Broach and Surat. The members of the Edroos family were Sajjadanashins or Mutavallis of the wakf throughout. The three Rozas at the three places as well as the villages which were granted - not only for the maintenance of these Rozas but also for the benefit of the Waquif's family, - constituted the wakf. The holder was buried in the house and his Dargah is situated in this place. There is also a place for reciting prayers. In an earlier litigation in Sayed Abdula Edrus Vs. Sayad Zain Sayad Hasan Edrus ILR (1889) 13 Bom. 555, a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court, traced the history of the wakf and held that the custom of primogeniture did not apply to the office of Sajjadanishin or Mutavalli of this wakf. In a later dispute in Saiyad Jaffar El Edroos Vs. Saiyad Mahomed El Edroos AIR 1937 Bom. 217 another Division Bench held after construing the royal grants relating to the villages Umrao and Orma that the grants were primarily for the Rozas and Dargas and they clearly constituted "wakf" but that the Sajjadanashin or Mutavalli had, however, a right to the surplus income left over after discharge of the legal obligations regarding the wakf. It was thus held that the Sajjadanishin could provide for the needs of the indigent members of the family and this was a pious obligation which was only a moral obligation and not a legal obligation and hence the indigent members of the Edroos family, as a right, could not claim maintenance out of the surplus income. Thereafter, Regular Suit No. 201 of 1928 was filed by three plaintiffs under Section 92 C.P.C. impleading father of Sayed Mohamed Baquir-El-Edroos in 1928 after obtaining permission on 22.2.1928 from the Collector under Section 92 C.P.C. for filing the suit. The suit was dismissed on 6.10.1931, the first appeal

was dismissed but cross objections were allowed on 21.11.1938 and the second appeal to the High Court was withdrawn. In the aforesaid suit, there were eight points whereof points no. 1 to 7 related to the validity of appointment of the defendant and the nature of the office and the right to the surplus etc. It was held that the appointment of defendant as Sajjadanashin was valid and that the grant of the property was both for the Rozas and for the maintenance, presumably of the Sajjadanashin and his family members. It was also held that the Sajjadanashin had complete power of disposal over the surplus as he was not in the position of an ordinary trustee. It was held that the Sajjadanashin had complete power of disposal over the surplus, hence the plea of plaintiff's complaint about mis-utilization of the income by Sajjadanashin was rejected. Another issue was framed whether the waqf was a private or a public and it was held that it was a private waqf. The District Court held that from 1746 A.D. onwards, the Sajjadanashin were using the revenue of these villages for their own maintenance and that of the members of their family and other dependents. This finding was consistent with the judgment of the Bombay High Court in Saiyad Jaffar El Edroos (supra) wherein this was held permissible. The District Court in view of the fact that Sajjadanashin was from the family and not a stranger or outside held it a private waqf. Thereafter another matter came before the Gujrat High Court in relation to Ahmedabad Rozas wherein also a Single Judge of Bombay High Court in Alimiya Vs. Sayed Mohd. AIR 1968 Guj. 257 rejected a similar plea. This judgment was confirmed by the Division Bench in Sayed Mohd. Vs. Alimiya (1972) 13 Guj.LR 285. In the case before the Apex Court in respect to Rozas at all the three places, the

Assistant Commissioner in enquiry no. 142 of 1967 passed an order dated 26.7.1968 accepting the preliminary objection of res judicata but the Joint Charity Commissioner, Gujrat in its order dated 17.12.1973, in appeal, did not accept the said plea which was pressed before him only in respect to the Rozas at Broach and Surat. He set aside the order of Assistant Commissioner and remanded the matter for enquiry. The Assistant Judge in Misc. Civil Application No. 32 of 1974 affirmed the order of Joint Commissioner on 3.9.1976 and it was further affirmed by a Division Bench of Gujrat High Court in First Appeal No. 985 of 1976 on 27.7.1985. Aggrieved by the aforesaid order, the appellant, Sajjadanashin Sayed took the matter to the Apex Court and raised the plea of res judicata in respect to Rozas at Broach and Surat. It is in the light of the above facts, the Apex Court considered the matter. In order to see whether the principle of res judicata is attracted, the Apex Court framed an issue as to what is the meaning of "collaterally and incidentally in issue" as distinguished from "directly and substantially in issue". In para 11, the Apex Court found that the matter collaterally and incidentally in issue are not ordinarily res judicata and this principle has been well accepted but certain exceptions to this principle have also been accepted. The Court also traced out the law on the subject in England, America, Australia and India. Referring to Halsbury's Laws of England (Vol. 16, para 1538, 4th Edn.), the Court observed that the fundamental rule is that a judgment is not conclusive if any matter came collaterally in question or if any matter is incidentally cognizable. The said judgment attained finality since the second appeal filed in the High Court was withdrawn.

942. In the light of the above facts and in this context the

Apex Court in Sajjadanashin (supra) in respect to India, affirmed the view of the learned Author Mulla in "C.P.C." as under:

> "..a matter in respect of which relief is claimed in an earlier suit can be said to be generally a matter "directly and substantially" in issue but it does not mean that if the matter is one in respect of which no relief is sought it is not directly or substantially in issue. It may or may not be. It is possible that it was "directly and substantially" in issue and it may also be possible that it was only collaterally or incidentally in issue, depending upon the facts of the case. The question arises as to what is the test for deciding into which category a case falls? One test is that if the issue was "necessary" to be decided for adjudicating on the principle issue and was decided, it would have to be treated as "directly and substantially" in issue and if it is clear that the judgment was in fact based upon that decision, then it would be res judicata in a later case. One has to examine the plaint, the written statement, the issues and the judgment to find out if the matter was directly and substantially in issue (Ishwer Singh Vs. Sarwan Singh AIR 1965 SC 948 and Syed Mohd. Salie Labbai Vs. Mohd. Hanifa AIR 1976 SC 1569).

943. It also referred to two judgments of the Privy Council in Run Bahadur Singh Vs. Lucho Koer ILR (1885) 11 Cal 301 and Asrar Ahmed Vs. Durgah Committee AIR 1947 PC 1 as well as its earlier decision in Pragdasji Guru Bhagwandasji Vs. Ishwarlalbhai Narsibhai 1952 SCR 513 and found that inspite of a specific issue and adverse finding in the earlier suit, the finding was not treated as res judicata as it was purely

incidental or auxiliary or collateral to the main issue in each of the three cases and was not necessary for the earlier case nor formed foundation. It also considered Sulochana Amma (supra) and a Madras High Court decision in Vanagiri Sri Selliamman Ayyanar Uthirasomasundar-eswarar Temple Vs. Rajanga Asari Air 1965 Mad. 355 in respect whereto it was pointed out that there was a direct conflict. The Court however found that the said decisions are not contrary to each other but should be understood in the context of the tests referred to above. It held that in Sulochana Amma (supra) it is to be assumed that the tests above referred to were satisfied for holding that the finding as to position was substantially rested on title upon which a finding was felt necessary but in the case before the Madras High Court, it must be assumed that the tests were not satisfied. The Apex Court confirmed the observations of the learned author Mulla in "C.P.C. (Supra)" and said that it all depend on the facts of each case and whether the finding as to title was treated as necessary for grant of an injunction in an earlier suit and was also substantive basis for grant of injunction or not.

944. Further, the Court in Sajjadanashin (supra) quoted the following from the "Corpus Juris Secundum" (Vol. 50, para 735, p. 229) where a similar aspect in regard to findings on possession and incidental findings on title were dealt with and held, "Where title to property is the basis of the right of possession, a decision on the question of possession is res judicata on the question of title to the extent that adjudication of title was essential to the judgment; but where the question of the right to possession was the only issue actually or necessary involved, the judgment is not conclusive on the question of ownership or title." The Court observed that in the case before it there were certain changes in the statutory law with respect to definition of "public waqf" and in view thereof since now the "private waqf" was also included within the definition of "public waqf" in the Act, due to change in subject it held that the earlier decision would not operate as res judicata.

945. We propose not to deal with this aspect of the matter further at this stage but if necessary would discuss the same with more depth if the occasion needs so.

946. In Sharadchandra Ganesh Muley Vs. State of Maharashtra and others AIR 1996 SC 61, Explanation IV Section 11A containing doctrine of 'might and ought' and application of doctrine of constructive res judicata came to be considered. The Court held that where in respect to land acquisition proceedings an earlier writ petition was filed without raising a plea which was available at that time, in the second writ petition such plea could not have been taken as the doctrine of 'might and ought' engrafted in Explanation IV to Section 11 of the C.P.C. would come into play and the incumbent would be precluded from raising the controversy once over. The Court held that the doctrine of constructive res judicata shall put an embargo on his right to raise a plea as barred by limitation under Section 11A.

"Explanation IV"

947. However, the concept of "constructive res judicata" is necessary to be dealt with in view of Explanation-IV Section 11 C.P.C. A Matter, which might and ought to have been made a ground of attack or defence is a, matter which is constructively in issue. The principle underlying Explanation-IV is res judicata not confined to issues which the Courts are actually asked to decide but cover issues or facts which are so clearly part of the subject matter of the litigation and so clearly could have been raised that it would be an abuse of the process of the Court to allow a new proceeding to be started in respect of them. (State of U.P. Vs. Nawab Hussain AIR 1977 SC 1680). The proposition of law expounded in the authorities cited by Sri Siddiqui, as referred to above, in para 20 is also unexceptional. However,it would apply only where a plea was available at the time of the suit but not availed of. But there is no question of constructive res judicata where there is no adjudication in the earlier proceedings (Kewal Singh Vs. Smt. Lajwanti 1980 (1) SCC 290). The effect of Explanation-IV is where a matter has been constructively in issue, it could not from the very nature of the case be heard and decided but will be deemed to have been heard and decided against the parties omitting to allege it except when an admission by the defendant obviates a decision (Sri Gopal Vs. Pirthi Singh (1902) ILR 24 Alld. 429 (PC); Government of Province of Bombay Vs. Peston Ji Ardeshir Wadia AIR 1949 PC 143).

948. There is an exception to this plea, i.e., where the evidence in support of one ground is such as might be destructive for the other ground, the two grounds need not be set up in the same suit. In Kanhiya Lal Vs. Ashraf Khan AIR 1924 Alld. 355, it was observed that a person claiming property on the allegation that it is wakf property and that he is the Manager thereof is not bound to claim the same property in the same suit alternatively in his own rights in the event of its being held that the property was not wakf property. In Madhavan Vs. Chathu AIR (38) 1951 Madras 285, a suit to recover possession of properties on a claim that they belong personally to the plaintiff was held not barred by reason of a decision in a previous suit, in which they were claimed as belonging to a Tarwad of which he was a member. Similarly, where the right claimed in the subsequent suit is different from that in the former suit; it is claimed under a different form that in the former suit; it is claimed under a different title, the subsequent suit would not be barred by res judicata/constructive res judicata.

949. Next is the question about the "same parties" or "between parties under whom they or any of them claim". In order to find a person by res judicata it must be shown that he was in some way party to the earlier suit as the judgment binds only parties and privies. A person claiming under a party is known as privy. The ground of privity is property and not personal relations. If the plaintiff in subsequent suit claims independent right over the suit property the principle of res judicata would not apply. If the predecessor in interest was party to the suit/proceeding involving the same property then the decision binds his successor in interest. From the record it must be evident that the party sought to be bound was in some way a party to the suit. A person merely interested in the litigation cannot be said to be a party to the suit. Such a person is neither to make himself a party nor can be bound by the result of the litigation as held in Jujjuvarapu Vs. Pappala, AIR 1969 A.P. 76.

950. Where a person in the subsequent suit claims independent right over the suit property the principle of res judicata would not apply. (Byathaiah (Kum) and others Vs. Pentaiah (Kum) and others, 2000 (9) SCC 191).

951. Similarly the party must be litigating under the same title. The test is the identity of title in two litigations and not the identity of the actual property involved in two cases as held in

Rajalaxmi Dasi Vs. Banamali Sen (supra); Ram Gobinda Daw Vs. Smt. H. Bhakta Bala Dassi, AIR 1971 SC 664.

952. Same title means same capacity; the test being whether the party litigating is in law the same or a different person. If the same person is a party in different character, the decision in the former suit does not operate as res judicata. Similarly, if the rights claimed are different, the subsequent suit will not be res judicata simply because the property is identical. Title refers not to cause of action but to the interest or capacity of the party suing or being sued.

953. In Sri Ramjee and others Vs. Bishwanath Pd. Sah and others AIR 1978 Patna 129, former suit was filed by plaintiff alone and in his own rights while the subsequent suit was filed in the name of the deity and it was held not barred as res judicata.

"Explanation VI"

954. Lastly, but not the least, is the concern with respect to Explanation-VI, i.e., representative suit. It provides that where persons litigate bona fide in respect of a public right or a private right claimed in common for themselves and other persons interested in such right, shall, for the purpose of the Section, be deemed to have claimed under the persons so litigating. The counsels for the plaintiffs (Suit-4) have heavily relied upon this provision. Explanation-VI apparently is not confined to the cases covered by Order 1 Rule 8 C.P.C., but would include any litigation in which, apart from the rule altogether, parties are entitled to represent interested persons other then themselves. It is a kind of exception to the ordinary rule of res judicata which provide for the former litigation between the same parties or their privies. Even persons, who are not parties in the earlier

proceeding, in certain contingencies, may be debarred from bringing a suit subsequently if the conditions contemplated under Explanation-VI Section 11 are satisfied. The conditions to attract Explanation-VI so as to constitute res judicata, which must exist, are :

1. There must be a right claimed by one or more persons in common for themselves and others not expressly named in the suit,
2. The parties not expressly named in the suit must be interested in such right.
3. The litigation must have been conducted bona fide on behalf of all the parties interested.
4. If the suit is one under Order 1 Rule 8, all the conditions of that Section must have been strictly complied with.

955. The essentials of representative suit vis a vis the principle of res judicata with reference to Explanation VI Section 11was considered by Privy Council in Kumaravelu Chettiar and others Vs. T.P. Ramaswami Ayyar and others, AIR 1933 PC 183. Prior to the enactment of CPC of 1877 there was no express legislation on the subject of representative suit. In these circumstances, the Courts assumed the task and followed the practice virtually obtained in the Court of Chancery in England. Existence of this practice was demonstrated by referring to a judgment of Madras High Court in Srikanti Vs. Indupuram (1866) 3 M.H.C.R. 226. The Court emphasized that convenience, where community of interest existed, required that a few out of a large number of persons should, under proper conditions, be allowed to represent the whole body, so that in the result all might be bound by the decree, although only some of the persons concerned were parties named in the record. It observed that absence of any statutory provision on the subject, the Courts in India, it would seem, prior to 1877 assumed the task and duty to determine in the particular case whether, without any real injustice to the plaintiffs in the later suit, the decree in the first could properly be regarded as an estoppel against further prosecution by them of the same claim. The first legislation was made vide Section 30 in CPC 1877 which is now found in Order I Rule 8 CPC of 1908. The Privy Council held at page 186:

> "It is an enabling rule of convenience prescribing the conditions upon which such persons when not made parties to a suit may still be bound by the proceedings therein. For the section to apply the absent persons must be numerous; they must have the same interest in the suit which, so far as it is representative, must be brought or prosecuted with the permission of the Court. On such permission being given it becomes the imperative duty of the Court to direct notice to be given to the absent parties in such of the ways prescribed as the Court in each case may require; while liberty is reserved to any represented person to apply to be made a party to the suit."

956. The Privy Council also approved a Calcutta High Court decision in Baiju Lal Vs. Bulak Lal, (1897) 24 Cal 385, where Ameer Ali, J. explaining the position under Section 30 said:

> "The effect of S. 30 is that unless such permission is obtained by the person suing or defending the suit, his action has no binding effect on the persons he chooses to represent. If the course prescribed by S. 30 is not followed in the first case, the judgment does not bind those whose

957. In Waqf Khudawand Taala Banam Masjid Mauza Chaul Shahabudinpur vs. Seth Mohan Lal 1956 ALJ 225 a suit for declaration of the property in dispute as a public mosque was filed. It appears that earlier a suit was filed against some Muslims claiming to be the proprietor and notice under Order 1 Rule 8 C.P.C. was also issued to other residents of that locality. Defence taken by Muslims was that property in dispute was a public mosque. The suit was decreed and the defence was not found proved. Thereafter second suit was filed by Muslim parties of neighbouring village wherein the plea of res judicata was taken. Defending the said objection on behalf of plaintiffs it was contended that in earlier case notice under Order 1 Rule 8 was issued to the residents of Chaul Shahabuddinpur and not of the village to which the plaintiffs belonged which is a neighbouring village. However, the Court upholding the plea of res judicata observed that Explanation VI to Section 11 C.P.C. is attracted in the matter and once in respect of a public right the matter has been adjudicated, the decision is binding on all persons interested in that right and they will be deemed to claim under the persons who litigated in the earlier suit in respect of that public right.

958. The question of issue estoppel and constructive res judicata in regard to a judgment in a representative suit came to be considered by the Apex Court in Shiromani Gurdwara Parbandhak Committee Vs. Mahant Harnam Singh and others, AIR 2003 SC 3349. The facts, in brief, are necessary to understand the exposition of law laid down therein. Gurdial Singh and Ishwar Singh of Village Jhandawala obtain permission from the Advocate General under Section 92 CPC to

institute a suit against one Harnam Singh for his removal from Mahantship. It was stated in the plaint that there was one Guru Granth Sahib at Village Jhandawala, Tehsil and District Bhatinda which was managed by Mahant Harnam Singh as a Mahatmim and he was in possession of the Dera, and agricultural land belonging to Guru Granth Sahib which was a public religious place and was established by the residents of village; it was a public trust created by the residents of the village for the service of the public to provide food from lunger, to allow the people to fulfill religious beliefs and for worship etc. The two plaintiffs in their capacity as representatives of owners of land situated in the village and the residents thereof claim that they were entitled to file a suit under Section 92 CPC. Harnam Singh, Mahant in his written statement took the defence that there was no such interest in the public as to entitle the aforesaid plaintiffs to institute the suit. The trial court and the High Court recorded a concurrent finding that all Mahants of the institution from Bhai Saida Ram to Mahant Harnam Singh have been Nirmalas. However, the trial court held that such Nirmala Sadhus are not Sikhs and that the institution was not a Sikh institution. High Court disagreed with this conclusion and held that Sadhus Nirmalas are a sect of the Sikhs and consequently the Sikhs had interest in the institution as it was a Sikh Gurdwara and upheld the plaintiffs claim to file a representative suit under Section 92 CPC. In appeal the Apex Court, however, held (i) Nirmala Sadhus are not Sikhs; (ii) the mere fact that at some stage there was a Guru Granth Sahib in the Dera in dispute cannot lead to any conclusion that the institution was meant for or belonged to the followers of the Sikh religion. The Dera was maintained for entirely a distinct sect known as Nirmals Sadhus

who cannot be regarded as Sikhs; (iii) the institution was held to be not belonging to the followers of the Sikh religion; (iv) the plaintiffs in their mere capacity of followers of Sikh religion could not be held to have such interest as to entitle them to institute a suit under Section 92 CPC. This judgement dated 24.02.1967 of the Apex Court is reported as Mahant Harnam Singh Vs. Gurdial Singh and another, AIR 1967 SC 1415. In the meantime it appears that under Section 7(1) of Sikh Gurdwaras Act, 1925, 60 persons claiming to be worshippers made a petition for declaring the institution in question, i.e., Guru Granth Sahib situated in Village Jhandawala, District Bhatinda to be a Sikh Gurdwara. The Punjab Government by notification dated 23.01.1961 made such a declaration under Section 7(3) of the aforesaid Act. It may be pointed out that these 60 persons also included the two plaintiffs of earlier litigation, i.e., Gurdial Singh and Ishwar Singh. Mahant Harnam Singh with others filed counter petition under Section 8 of Sikh Gurdwaras Act, 1925 stating that the institution was not a Sikh Gurdwara but was a Dera Bhai Saida Ram. A similar petition under Section 8 was also moved by 58 persons of the Dera making a similar claim. Both these petitions were forwarded by the State Government to the Tribunal for disposal. The Tribunal formulated the following two questions: (1) what is the effect of the judgment of the Apex Court in Mahant Harnam Singh (supra); and (2) whether the institution in dispute was a Sikh Gurdwara. The Tribunal decided issue no. 1 as a preliminary issue vide order dated 08.03.1977 and held that the decision in Mahant Harnam Singh (supra) would not bar the jurisdiction of the Tribunal to decide claim petition under Section 7 of the Act. The order of the Tribunal attained finality since challenge

before the High Court and Apex Court was unsuccessful. Thereafter, issue no. 2 was taken up and the Tribunal held that the institution was a Sikh Gurdwara, originally established by Sikhs and the object of worship was Guru Granth Sahib because the majority of villagers were Sikhs and Nirmalas are Sikhs. This order of the Tribunal in respect to issue no. 2 was challenged before the High Court. It held that the Tribunal has lost sight of the decision in Mahant Harnam Singh (supra). It is this order of the High Court which was taken in appeal before the Apex Court, which held that once in a suit instituted under Section 92 CPC a categorical finding was recorded that (i) Nirmala Sadhus are not Sikhs; (ii) the Dera was maintained for entirely a distinct sect known as Nirmals Sadhus who cannot be regarded as Sikhs; (iii) the mere fact that at some stage there was a Guru Granth Sahib in the Dera cannot lead to any conclusion that the institution was meant for or belonged to the followers of Sikh religion, these findings were rendered in suit filed under Section 92 CPC, therefore, cannot be reagitated and any challenge thereto is precluded on the principle of issue estoppel. The nature of suit under Section 92 CPC was explained by the Apex Court in para 19 of the judgement referring to its earlier decision in R. Venugopala Naidu and others Vs. Venkatarayulu Naidu Charities and others, AIR 1990 SC 444 holding that a suit under Section 92 CPC is a suit of special nature for the protection of public rights in the public trust and charities. The suit is fundamentally on behalf of the entire body of persons who are interested in the trust. It is for vindication of public rights. The beneficiaries of the trust, which may consist of public at large, may choose two or more persons amongst themselves, for the purpose of filing a suit under

Section 92 CPC and the suit-title in that event would show only their names as plaintiffs. In the circumstances, it cannot be said that the parties to the suit are only those persons whose names are mentioned in the suit-title. The named plaintiffs being the representatives of public at large, which is interested in the trust, of such interested persons, would be considered in the eyes of law to be parties to the suit. A suit under Section 92 CPC is thus a representative suit and as such binds not only the parties named in the suit-title but all those who share common interest and are interested in the trust. It is for that reason that Explanation 6 to Section 11 CPC constructively bars by res judicata the entire body of interested persons from reagitating the matter directly and substantially in issue in an earlier suit under Section 92 CPC.

959. It is well settled law that explanation to a section is not a substantive provision by itself. It is entitled to explain the meaning of the words contained in the Section or to clarify certain ambiguities or clear them up. It becomes a part and parcel of the enactment. Its meaning must depend upon its terms. Sometimes, it is for exclusion of some thing and sometimes exclude something from the ambit of the main provision or condition of some words existing therein. Therefore, an explanation should be read harmoniously so as to clear any ambiguity in the main section. A clash of interest in the parties would oust the applicability of Explanation-VI.

960. In Commissioner of Endowments and others Vs. Vittal Rao and others (2005) 4 SCC 120, it was held that even though an issue was not formerly framed but if it was material and essential for the decision of the case in the earlier proceeding and the issue has been decided, it shall operate as res judicata in

961. In Vithal Yeshwant Jathar Vs. Shikandarkhan Makhtumkhan Sardesai AIR 1963 SC 385, it was held :

> "It is well settled that if the final decision in any matter at issue between the parties is based by a court on its decisions on more than one point- each of which by itself would be sufficient for the ultimate decision- the decision on each of these points operates as res judicata between the parties."

962. These are the few general principles, which we have considered and elaborated to find answer to the issues relating to res judicata and estoppal raised by learned counsels for the parties.

963. The submission of the counsel for plaintiffs in leading suit i.e. of Sri Jilani and also Sri Siddiqui are that the Suit 1885 was filed by "Mahant Raghubar Das" who was at that time "Mahant" of the "Math Nirmohi Akhara". It is the admitted case of Nirmohi Akhara, plaintiff (Suit-3), that they are in possession of the entire property in dispute including the Chabutara, (measuring 17x21 ft.). Sri Raghubar Das, therefore, when sought permission to construct a temple on the said Chabutara was seeking a relief for the benefit of the Math, Nirmohi Akhara which is claimed by them now to be the property of the Math. Therefore, Raghubar Das in his capacity as Mahant was representative of Nirmohi Akhara and having failed to establish his claim on Chabutara by failing to prove his ownership, the said decision binds Nirmohi Akhara also and they cannot claim any right beyond that. It is further said that in the plaint i.e. the Map appended in the plaint of Suit 1885 the disputed construction in the inner courtyard was shown and marked as

Masjid. It was open to the plaintiff of Suit 1885 to show his ownership on the entire premises which was actually disputed by Sri Mohd. Asghar, defendant no. 2 in Suit 1885 but it chose not to press the said point and, therefore, Nirmohi Akhara is now debarred from raising the same point again over which their Mahant has already failed. It is further contended that the prayer for construction of temple was for the larger benefit of the public at large who used to visit and worship Janam Asthan at Chabutara but having failed to show and prove its proprietorship or any right to construct temple on the disputed site, the same issue cannot be raised again.

964. What we have already noticed, it has not been disputed by Nirmohi Akhara that in 1885 Raghubar Das was Mahant of Nirmohi Akhara. Let us examine the law relating to the rights of Mahant of suing and being sued. The Math i.e. Nirmohi Akhara, as we have said, is a juridical person. The ownership of a property would rest in the Math. However, this juridical entity acquires whole and indicates its legal rights through Mahant of superior as a human agent. The Mahant is the spiritual head of Math as well as administrator of its temporal affairs. He represents the Math in its dealings with the external world. Of necessity the Mahant has the power to do everything that is required in the interest or for the benefit of the endowment i.e. Math. It means that he is the proper person to institute or defend suit on behalf of Math. In Babaji Rao Vs. Laxman Das (supra) it was said that when the property is vested in the Math then litigation in respect of it has ordinarily to be conducted by and in the name of Manager not because the property vest in the manager but because it is the established practice that suit would be brought in that form. There must be an exception where it can be said that uses or customs or express directions of the founders provide vesting of right to possession of Math property elsewhere. In such cases where the suit is filed by a Mahant there are two distinct classes of suit, (1) where he seeks to influence his private and personal rights and (2) where he seeks to vindicate the rights of the endowment i.e. Math. These two classes have been further illustrated in Gnanasambanda Pandara Vs. Velu Pandaram (1899) LR 27 IA 69 and Dattagiri Vs. Dattatrya (1904) ILR 27 Bom 236. The right of the Math cannot ordinarily be prejudiced by the result of a suit of a former class, i.e., to say the one in which the private and personal rights of the Manager (Mahant) alone are in question. Therefore, in such status it would be an important question to be seen whether litigation was a right of the Math or that of Mahant and when it can be said that a suit has been filed by Mahant for the benefit of Math. We can take the help of an earlier precedent of this Court in Biram Prakash Vs. Narendra Das AIR 1961 All. 266 where the suit was instituted by a person claiming to be the Mahant of a Math and sought to recover possession of the property belong to that Math. The Court held that the suit was not to establish the personal rights of the plaintiff and it was binding on the Math.

965. From a perusal of the plaint of suit 1885, the first thing which is gravely attracted is the description of the plaintiff as following :

"Raghubar Das, Mahant Janamsthan, Ayodhya"

966. Besides, in the entire plaint, the plaintiff has not mentioned even a word about the endowment or Math, i.e., Nirmohi Akhara. From a bare perusal of the plaint, it cannot be discerned at all that the plaintiff thereof has anything to do with

Nirmohi Akhara or that the said plaint has any connection with Nirmohi Akhara. What is evident and appears to be logical to us is that Mahant Raghubar Das sought to treat Janamsthan Ayodhya as an independent endowment and claiming himself to be the Mahant thereof filed the aforesaid suit. The aforesaid suit was not filed in the representative capacity inasmuch though Mahant Raghubar Das gave justification for construction of temple that would be useful for the visitors and worshipers in general but the construction of temple was for his benefit and not for the benefit of endowment of which he claims to be the Mahant, i.e., Janamsthan, Ayodhya. It has not been brought on record by any material that Mahant Raghubar Das was allowed to contest the aforesaid suit of 1885 representing the entire Hindu community. Admittedly, the plaintiff (Suit-1), thus, was neither party in the said suit of 1885 nor it can be said that he was represented by Mahant Raghubar Das nor that the plaintiff in Suit-1 is claiming any interest deriving title from the earlier plaintiff of Suit-1885. So far as the Nirmohi Akhara is concerned though Mahant Raghubar Das was a Mahant of the Math at the relevant time but there is nothing apparent from the plaint or other material to suggest that he filed the aforesaid suit on behalf of Math Nirmohi Akhara or for its benefit. Moreover the plea of res judicata has not been raised to bar Suit-3. So far as Suit-5 is concerned, Ram Janamsthan, which is one of the plaintiffs, is not an endowment in suit 1885. It is claiming itself to be the deity, a juridical personality in its own rights. So far as Suit-4 is concerned, the plea of res judicata, a plea of defence clearly inapplicable to bar that suit.

967. From the pleadings of Suit 1885, it is also difficult to hold that Ramjanamsthan was itself the plaintiff represented by

Mahant Raghubar Das and the said suit was filed for the benefit of said deity. In fact, the words "Janamsthan" in the title of the Suit 1885 has been mentioned as referring to a pious place and like an address but not treating as a deity or a juridical person of its own. Whether Mahant Raghubar Das filed the aforesaid suit on behalf of or for the benefit of Nirmohi Akhara does not appear from the pleadings of the said Suit. It would be entering in to realm of conjectures, if we presume to hold that the prayer for construction of temple at Chabutara ultimately would have benefited Nirmohi Akhara and, therefore, it must be deemed that the said suit was filed by Mahant Raghubar Das for the benefit of Nirmohi Akhara. When he claims himself to be Mahant of Janamsthan in filing the said suit without any reference to Nirmohi Akhara whether he intended to claim his own ownership or his own rights only or whether it was on behalf of Nirmohi Akhara is not to be guessed. In the absence of any indication or express words in the pleadings, it must be held that whatever he claimed in Suit-1885 was confined to himself and not to Nirmohi Akhara. Apparently, it is therefore difficult to hold that the parties in the suits in question are same as that of Suit 1885 or that the plaintiff of Suit 1885 was the person under whom the plaintiffs in Suits- 1, 3 and 5 are claiming their rights and, therefore, one of the essential conditions to attract res judicata does not exist.

968. After having said so we proceed further to find out as to whether the issue in the subsequent suit is the same which was directly and substantially an issue either actually or constructively in the former suit.

969. What has been pleaded in para 6(D) and 6(E) of the plaint (Suit-4) is that the two questions namely the existence of

Babri Masjid and the right of Hindus to construct a temple on land adjoining the Masjid were the matter directly and substantially in issue in Suit 1885 and therefore, in respect to the said issues, the judgment in Suit 1885 shall operate res judicata.

970. Sri Jilani and Sri Siddiqui, learned counsels for Muslim parties vehemently argued that it is not open to the Hindu parties to plead that there is no mosque at the disputed site or there existed a temple throughout. The pleadings and the facts in detail of suit 1885 have already been narrated and it does not appear therefrom that there was any issue with respect to the existence of mosque at the disputed site or that of the right of Hindus to construct a temple on land adjoining the Masjid. Existence of Chabutara in the outer courtyard of the disputed site was not disputed by Muslim parties either in Suit 1885 or in the present set of suits.

971. Mahant Raghubar Das, as an individual, was interested in making some construction over Chabutara which was already having a small temple. In order to provide better facilities to Hindu worshipers he wanted to make further construction on the said Chabutara so as to make it a bigger temple. Whether the building inside the courtyard was a mosque; whether it was validly constructed or whether there was any valid wakf etc. were not the questions involved in the said matter at any stage. From the plaint of Suit 1885 it is evident that Mahant Raghuvar Das had no concern with the area inside the courtyard and his concentration was only to raise some construction on Chabutara measuring 21 ft. x 17 ft. situated in the outer courtyard in the site plan. He mentioned the building of the inner courtyard as mosque but there was no issue on this aspect at all. The question therefore that it was a question directly and substantially in issue

that the building in dispute was a mosque would amount to stretching and reading too much in the suit of 1885 which actually do not exist. The submission, in our view, is thoroughly misconceived.

972. So far as the second aspect is concerned that the right to construct a temple on the land adjoining the mosque was denied, this submission has been made in much wider terms and it travels beyond what was actually the pleadings, issues and the decisions in Suit 1885. The ultimate Court declined to decree the suit of Mahant Raghubar Das in Suit 1885 on the ground of lack of cause of action, law and order situation considering the topography of the area at that time but no issue whatsoever was actually decided by the Court of second appeal in which the judgments of the Courts below ultimately merged.

973. In our view the plaintiffs (Suit 4) have misconstrued the purport of the words "matters directly and substantially in issue" as used in Explanation IV Section 11 of C.P.C.

974. Even otherwise, we fail to understand as to how this pleading in plaint could have been taken by the plaintiff in Suit-4 since, in our view, this could have been, if permissible, to be taken as a plea in defence when such issues are raised by some parties. In any case, we are clearly of the view that the judgments in Suit 1885 by no means can be said to operate as res judicata in respect to the matters as are pleaded in para 6(D) and (E) of the plaint in Suit-4.

975. As we have referred to the pleadings of Suit-1885, we find that the plaintiff claim was right to make construction over Chabutara being its owner as well as in possession. Ownership with respect to Chabutara was disputed by defendant no. 2 (Suit 1885). It is for this reason a specific question i.e. Issue No. 6

was framed as to who own and possess the said Chabutara. The trial court held that since the plaintiff was in possession of the said Chabutara since long, therefore, he can be said to be owner and thus decided Issue No. 6 in his favour. However, it decline to grant any relief to the plaintiff for a different reason namely that ti would not be in the interest of the public at large and to maintain law and order and peace between two communities to make some construction at a place in the vicinity whereof a mosque existed. The first appellate court did not decide Issue No. 6 though it directed to struck off the observations and findings with respect to the ownership of the plaintiff qua Issue No. 6 (Suit-1885) but by itself did not record any finding as to whether the plaintiff was owner of the said Chabutara or not and this question left open by the first appellate court. It however dismissed the suit on the ground that it is not in public interest to allow such construction at a place where in the vicinity mosque existed. In the second appeal the Judicial Commissioner while confirming the lower courts judgments of dismissal of suit also observed that the plaintiff failed to prove his ownership over Chabutara. However, it did not decide the issue as to who own and possess the said Chabutara. The observation that the one party fail to place any evidence in support of an issue like the issue of ownership in the present case would not mean that the ownership of the other party had been accepted by the Court. It is thus clear that though in Suit-1885 the plaintiff sought relief on the ground of his ownership but could not succeed, besides other reasons, also for failure in placing any evidence to show his ownership but simultaneously it is clear that the courts did not decide at all as to who own the said Chabutara and no finding in this regard has been recorded by the Courts. Rather

Judicial Commissioner's judgment also shows that he has given his additional reason for dismissing the suit that there being no injuria hence the very cause of action to the plaintiff did not exist. The issue of ownership of the inner courtyard premises or the entire outer courtyard premises was not at all involved in the aforesaid suit. Hence it cannot be said that the issues engaged in the present suits were directly and substantially involved in the earlier suit of 1885. The another test to attract the doctrine of res judicata, therefore, also fails as lacking in the present cases.

976. There is another angle to this aspect. It was clarified in P.M.A. Metropolitan (supra) that when a decision is taken in appeal the rule is that it is the appellate decision and not the decision of the trial court that operates as res judicata. Consequently, where a suit is decided both on merits and on technical grounds by the trial court but the appellate court maintains it on technical ground like beyond limitation or suit being not properly constituted then the decision rendered on merits by the trial court seizes to have finality. The Apex Court refer to and relied on the Privy Council's decision in Abdullah Ashgar Ali Khan Vs. Ganesh Dass, AIR 1917 PC 201 where construing the expression "heard and finally decided" in Section 10 of the British Baluchistan Regulations 9 of 1886 the Privy Council held where suit was dismissed by two courts on merits but the decree was maintained in second appeal because the suit was not properly constituted then the finality on merits stood destroyed. The Apex court clarified this position in para 47 of the judgement as under:

> "47. The rationale of these decisions is founded on the principle that if the suit was disposed of in appeal not on merits but for want of jurisdiction or for being barred by

time or for being defectively constituted then the finality of the findings recorded by the Trial Court on merits stands destroyed as the suit having been found to be bad for technical reasons it becomes operative from the date the decision was given by the trial court thus rendering any adjudication on merits impliedly unnecessary. On the same rationale, once the Royal Court of Appeal allowed the Review Petition and dismissed the appeal as the ex-communication of Dionysius was contrary to principles of natural justice and he had not become heretic then the finding on authenticity of the canon etc. rendered in the original order was rendered unnecessary. Therefore, the finding recorded on the authenticity of the canon and power of the Patriarch etc. recorded in the earlier order could not operate as res judicate in subsequent proceedings."

977. The above aspect was also considered by the Apex Court from another angle in para 48 of the judgement in P.M.A. Metropolitan (supra) as under:

"48. Last but not the least reason to hold that the finding in the Vattipanam Suit recorded by the High Court in its original judgment on canon etc. could not operate as res judicata is where a decree is one of dismissal in favour of the defendants, but there is an adverse finding against him, a plea of res judicata cannot be founded upon that decision because the defendant having succeeded on the other plea had no occasion to go further in appeal against the adverse finding recorded against him [see Midnapur Zamindari Company Ltd. vs. Naresh Narayan Roy, AIR 1922 PC 241]. Mr. Parasaran, the learned senior counsel

for the appellant, urged that this is not an absolute rule as there is mutuality in res judicata and even the succeeding party is bound by the question decided against him. Reliance was placed on Mt. Munni Bibi and Anr. vs. Tirloki Nath and Ors., AIR 1931 PC 114, V.P.R.V.Chockelingam Chetty vs. Seethai Ache and Ors., AIR 1927 PC 252, Sham Nath Madan vs. Mohammad Abdullah, AIR 1967 J&K 85 and Arjun Singh vs. Tara Das Ghosh, AIR 1974 Patna 1 (FB). The two Privy Council decisions do not appear to be of any assistance as the first one, Mt. Munni Bibi (supra), is the leading decision on the principle of res judicata amongst co-defendants. True the Patriarch and Catholico were co-defendants and there was lis too but in view of the finding on natural justice and apostacy the finding on other issues was rendered unnecessary. The rule of res judicata amongst co-defendants is also governed by those rules which apply to normal rule of res judicata. The decision in Chockalingam Chetty (supra) is an authority for the principle that where an appeal is filed without impleading a defendant through whom other defendants derived title then the decision in his favour operates as res judicata between plaintiff and other defendants as well. Similarly, in the decision of the Patna High Court in Arjun Singh (supra) the primary question was whether a party against whom a finding is recorded has got a right of appeal even though the ultimate decision was in his favour and it was held that there was no bar, but what was necessary was that the finding so recorded should operate as res judicata. On facts it was found that the Appellate Court while maintaining the order of dismissal of the suit

on preliminary issue recorded findings on other issues which were against the plaintiff, yet the plaintiff was not entitled to file an appeal as the findings on merits which were adverse to him could not operate as res judicata. In Sham Nath's case (supra) the learned Single Judge rejected the plea of res judicata raised on behalf of the plaintiff, but while considering the alternative argument, observed that an adverse finding recorded against a defendant in a suit dismissed could not operate as res judicata unless the adverse finding formed a fundamental part of the decree itself. None of the decisions, therefore, are of any help to the appellant."

978. Similarly, as we have already said, the issue which was involved in 1885 Suit, having not been decided by the courts, all the ingredient which are condition precedent to attract to plea of res judicata, therefore are wanted in the cases in hand.

979. It was further contended that the observations of the courts below that in the map appended to the plaint the building in the inner courtyard was shown as mosque, the statement of defendant no. 2 that the mosque was constructed by Babur and the similar observations made by the appellate courts having not been disputed or challenged by the plaintiff in the said case, the findings recorded in the decision are final and binding on the parties before us. We are afraid that neither the same can be said to be a finding recorded by the courts nor for the said purpose the judgment of Suit-1885 constitute evidence by virtue of Section 40 to 43 of the Evidence Act which read as under:

"Section 40. Previous judgments relevant to bar a second suit or trial.--The existence of any judgment, order or decree which by law prevents any court from taking

cognisance of a suit or holding a trial, is a relevant fact when the question is whether such court ought to take cognisance of such suit or to hold such trial."

"Section 41. Relevancy of certain judgments in probate, etc, jurisdiction.--A final judgment, order or decree of a competent court, in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction, which confers upon or takes away from any person any legal character, or which declares any person to be entitled to any such character, or to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified person but absolutely, is relevant when the existence of any such legal character, or the title or any such person to any such thing, is relevant.

Such judgment, order or decree is conclusive proof;

that any legal character which it confers accrued at the time when such judgment, order or decree came into operation;

that any legal character, to which it declares any such person to be entitled, accrued to that person at the time when such judgment, order or decree declares it to have accrued to that person;

that any legal character which it takes away from any such person ceased at the time from which such judgment, order or decree declared that it had ceased or should cease;

and that anything to which it declares any person to be so entitled was the property of that person at the time from which such judgment, order or decree declares that it had been or should be his property."

*"Section 42. Relevancy and effect of judgments, orders

or decrees, other than those mentioned in s. 41.-- Judgments, orders or decrees other than those mentioned in s. 41, are relevant if they relate to matters of a public nature relevant to the inquiry; but such judgments, orders or decrees are not conclusive proof of that which they state."

"Section 43. Judgments, etc, other than those mentioned in ss 40-42, when relevant—Judgments, orders or decrees, other than those mentioned in ss 40, 41, and 42, are irrelevant unless the existence of such judgment, order or decree, is a fact in issue, or is relevant under some other provision of this Act."

980. Evidently Sections 40, 41 and 42 are not attracted in this case and that being so the judgment is irrelevant and cannot be an evidence in respect to the facts in issue in these cases. We are not shown any other provision of the Evidence Act, 1872 whereunder the judgments of Suit-1885 can be said to be relevant except Section 13 which reads as under:

"Section 13. Facts relevant when right or custom is in question.--Where the question is as to existence of any right or custom, the following facts are relevant:

(a) any transaction by which the right or custom in question was created, claimed, modified, recognized, asserted, or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence;

(b) particular instances in which the right or custom was claimed, recognized, or exercised, or in which its exercise was disputed, asserted or departed from."

981. Learned counsels for the Muslim parties contended that it was asserted in Suit-1885 that a mosque was constructed by

Emperor Babur in the inner courtyard of the disputed site and also he created a waqf resulting in the vesting of land in the Almighty. The plaintiff was not granted any permission etc. by the Emperor or his successor and, therefore, he cannot be the owner of the land over which the Chabutara is existed. They also contended that the fact of construction of mosque by Babur was noticed by the first appellate court in its judgment and he found that after 358 years it is too late in the day to reverse the process and the parties, therefore, should maintain status quo. These facts relating to the rights and custom are relevant and for the said purpose the judgments of 1885 Suit can be seen as a valid piece of evidence. It is said that this aspect of the matter in the judgment relates to a matter of public nature. We however find it difficult to subscribe to the said submission. It is though true that the judgments wherein do not operate as res judicata can be admitted in evidence to show the existence of a judgment in favour of a party. It may also be admitted as proof of the facts of litigation, its results and effect upon the parties which makes a certain course of conduct probable or improbable on the part of the one of the parties. (See Shiv Charan Vs. State of U.P., AIR 1965 (All.) 511)

982. It is also true that a judgment in another suit which is not inter partes may be evidence under this Section for certain purposes, i.e., to prove the fact of the judgment; to show who the parties to the suit were; to show what was the subject matter of the suit; to show what was decided or declared by the judgment; to show what documents had been filed by the parties in the proceedings; to establish the transaction referred to in the judgment; to show the conduct of the parties, or particular instances of the other side or a right or assertion or title. (See

Harihar Prasad Singh Vs. Deo Narain, AIR 1956 SC 305)

983. However, the reasons upon which a judgment is founded, cannot be regarded as, nor can any finding of fact there come to other than the transaction itself, relevant in another case. (See Gobinda Narain Singh Vs. Sham Lal, AIR 1931 P.C. 98=LR 58 IA 125)

984. Similarly, recitals in a judgment are no evidence whatever to prove the exact admissions made by a party or witness. (See Indra Singh Vs. Income Tax Commissioner, AIR 1943 Pat. 169 and Abdulla Vs. Kunbammad, AIR 1960 Ker. 123)

985. This Court in Hira Lal Vs. Hari Narain, AIR 1964 All 302 held that a right in dispute cannot be proved on the basis of the finding in respect of that right in a previous suit not inter partes. A judgment, recording a finding, recognizing certain right cannot be used as evidence to prove the right in another suit not between the same parties.

986. Dealing with the issue of res judicata as to when, how and in what manner it would operate, the Apex Court in P.M.A. Metropolitan (supra) observed that the pleadings of the parties give rise to various issues whereupon the questions framed and answered, if any, by the court, and, in these circumstances the crucial issue arises whether the direction issued by the Court and not the judgement, i.e., any finding recorded would operate as res judicata. The Court referred to and followed its Constitution Bench decision in Mysore State Electricity Board vs. Bangalore Woollen, Cotton and Silk Mills Ltd. and Ors., AIR 1963 SC 1128 (para 12) where it was observed:

> "It is well settled that in order to decide whether a decision in an earlier litigation operates as res judicata,

the court must look at the nature of the litigation, what were the issues raised therein and what was actually decided in it.....it is indeed true that what becomes res judicata is the "matter" which is actually decided and not the reason which leads the court to decide the 'matter'".

987. The judgement in P.M.A. Metropolitan (supra) which followed the above Constitution Bench decision also is a three judges decision and it virtually set at rest the question as to what would constitute res judicata and this is what is reiterated in para 55 of the judgement:

"These observations are well settled and reiterate established principle laid down by the Courts for the same, sound and general purpose for which the rule of res judicata has been accepted, acted, adhered and applied, dictated by wisdom of giving finality even at the cost of absolute justice."

"Such is the principle of finality. True that the questions must have been adjudicated stricto sensu as observed by this Court.. . . ."

988. If an issue has been decided by the Court or a dispute has actually been decided by the Court, it should not be allowed to be re-adjudicated as that would be contrary to the principle of finality but no more and no less. If the dispute has actually not been decided on the issues framed or that the matter has been decided by the appellate court on some technical reason, in that case as already observed since it is the final judgement of appellate courts that would hold the field, it cannot be said that since the trial court has decided the issue, it must operate as res judicata. We have no hesitation in applying the principle of finality in a case where the issues raised have actually been decided even if wrongly but where the judgement of the ultimate court shows that a particular issue has not been decided or left open or nothing is said about that, we find it difficult to hold that even in such a case the parties can be non suited in a subsequent matter on the ground of an earlier decision where the issue which has arisen in the subsequent suit has not been decided actually. The principle of finality has been noticed in detail in an English case, i.e., Ampthill Peerage Case, (1976) 2 All ER 411 where at pages 423 and 424 it was held:

> "Our forensic system, with its machinery of cross-examination of witnesses and forced disclosure of documents, is characterised by a ruthless investigation of truth. Nevertheless, the law recognises that the process cannot go on indefinitely. There is a fundamental principle of English law (going back to Coke's Commentary on Littleton) generally expressed by a Latin maxim which can be translated: 'It is in the interest of society that there should be some end to litigation'. This fundamental principle finds expression in many forms. Parliament has passed Acts (the latest only last year) limiting the same within which actions at law must be brought. Truth may be thus shut out, but society considers that truth may be bought at too high a price, that truth bought at such expense is the negation of justice. The great American Judge, Story, J. delivering the judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States in Ball v. Morrison (1828 (1) Peters 351) called the first of these Acts of limitation 'a statute of repose'; and in England Best CJ called it 'an act of peace' (A'Court v. Cross). The courts of equity, originally set up to make good deficiencies in the common

law, worked out for themselves a parallel doctrine. It went by the technical name of laches. Courts of equity would only give relief to those who pursued their remedies with promptitude. Then, people who have long enjoyed possession, even if they cannot demonstrate a legal title, can rarely be dispossessed. Scottish law goes even further than English: delay in vindicating a claim will not only bar the remedy but actually extinguish the right. But the fundamental principle that it is in society's interest that there should be some end to litigation is seen most characteristically in the recognition by our law--by every system of law--of the finality of a judgment. If the judgment has been obtained by fraud or collusion it is considered a nullity and the law provides machinery whereby its nullity can be so established. If the judgment has been obtained in consequence of some procedural irregularity, it may sometimes be set aside. But such exceptional cases conclude the matter. That, indeed, is one of society's purposes in substituting the law suit for the vendetta....And once the final appellate court has pronounced its judgment, the parties and those who claim through them are concluded, and if the judgment is as to the status of a person, it is called a judgment in rem and everyone must accept it. A line can thus be drawn closing the account between the contestants. Important though the issues may be, how extensive so ever the evidence, whatever the eagerness for further fray, society says; 'We have provided courts in which your rival contentions have been heard. We have provided a code of law by which they have been adjudged. Since judges and juries are fallible human beings, we have provided appellate courts which do their own fallible best, to correct error. But in the end you must accept what has been decided. Enough is enough.' And the law echoes : res judicata, the matter is adjudged'. The judgment creates an estopel-which merely means that what has been decided must be taken to be established as a fact, that the decided issue cannot be reopened by those who are bound by the judgment, that the clamouring voices must be stilled, that the bitter waters of civil contention (even though channeled into litigation must be allowed to subside".

989. In our view, except of the fact that Raghubar Das, Mahat Janam Asthan, Ram Kot, Ayodhya failed to prove his claim of ownership over Chabutara in the outer courtyard may a relevant fact for which the judgments of Suit 1885 may be seen but beyond that the observations and reasons etc. of the Court in the judgment are not such facts relevant which are covered by Section 13 or any other of the Evidence Act so as to make the said judgments admissible in evidence and in the absence thereof, as said in Section 43, the judgment as evidence is irrelevant.

990. There is also nothing on record to show that Suit 1885 was filed on behalf of the entire Hindu community as a whole or the persons interested in Janam Asthan namely, in representative capacity nor there is anything to show that the suit was in the knowledge of Hindus in general and all Hindus were interested in the same. No material or evidence has come on record in proof thereof.

991. Though Mahat Raghubar Das was a Mahant at the relevant time of Nirmohi Akhara but no plea of res judicata or

estoppal has been raised in respect to Suit-3 which has been filed by Nirmohi Akhara. In the absence of any such plea Suit-3 cannot be said to be barred by any such principle. So far as Suit-1 and 5 are concerned, as we have already discussed, the necessary indicias to attract plea of res judicata wanting, the issues pertaining to res judicata and estoppal would not be attracted in those cases.

992. Coming to the various authorities cited by Sri Siddiqui on behalf of the plaintiff (Suit-4), we do not find that the view which we have recorded hereinabove comes in conflict or in contradiction to the exposition of law laid down thereon.

993. In Talluri Venkata Seshayya (supra) it was held that the provisions of Section 11 are mandatory. We agree. On facts, however, Section 11 in that case was found attracted but has no application to the present case inasmuch therein the earlier suit was brought by two persons which was dismissed on the ground that the temples were private temples and the property endowed to the temple. Being a private endowment, the alienation thereof was valid. The second suit filed as representative suit by some persons in public interest for declaring certain temples as public temples and for setting aside alienation of endowed property by the Manager. The plaintiff of the second suit conceded before the Court that they could be deemed to be persons claiming under the plaintiff in the prior suit and the issue in both the suits are same as is apparent from the following :

> "Mr. Dunne, on behalf of the appellants, conceded that subject to the question of bona fides, the present appellants must be deemed to be claiming under the plaintiffs in the 1861 suit within the meaning of Expl. 6, S. 11 Civil P.C., as they were both claiming as representing the public interest in the temples and the Kowtharam lands. He further conceded that the matter in issue in the two suits was substantially the same."

994. Section 11 was sought to be wriggle out by contending that the earlier suit was not a bona fide litigation, brought in collusion with the defendants and there was gross negligence, which facts, however, could not be proved. The said judgment, therefore, in our view, does not render any help to the parties in holding Suits-1 and 5 barred by res judicata on account of decision of Suit-1885.

995. In K. Ethirajan (supra), the property in dispute owned by widow Gangammal's sister's son and was allowed to occupy a portion of the suit properties since before commencement of (Tamil Nadu) Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1948 (hereinafter referred to as "T.N. Ryotwari Act, 1948. The widow Gangammal died in the year 1939. One M. Gurunathan (subsequently died and his legal representatives were impleaded as respondents before the Apex Court) claimed right to the property by inheritance showing his relationship with Gangammal's son and her husband's brother. Claiming title to the suit property by inheritance, Gurunathan filed Suit No. 530 of 1948 which was decided on 27.6.1949 against the step brother of Gangammal describing the latter as in unlawful possession of the suit property. Gurunathan obtained a decree of eviction against the step brother of Gangammal in the aforesaid suit. K. Ethirajan was not a party to the said suit, which was decreed on 27.6.1949 though he was in occupation of the portion of the suit property. The Director of Settlement in the proceedings initiated in accordance with Section 18 (4) of T.N. Ryotwari Act, 1948 recognized joint ownership and possession of K. Ethirajan and M. Gurunathan on the suit property and granted a joint patta in their favour on 28.8.1970. The said joint patta was upheld by higher authorities under T.N. Ryotwari Act, 1948. The claim of M. Gurunathan for recognition of his exclusive right to the suit properties being nearest heir of Gangammal was rejected by all the authorities concerned under the aforesaid Act. It is on the basis of this joint patta, K. Ethirajan filed a suit for the portion in his possession which was decreed by Trial Court as well as first appellate Court. The Courts below while granting decree of partition in favour of plaintiff K. Ethirajan, apart from relying on the joint patta, also relied on the judgement passed in previous litigation with regard to the the suit properties between K. Ethirajan and M. Gurunathan. It appears that M. Gurunathan had filed Original Suit No. 9003 of 1973 against K. Ethirajan seeking his eviction and delivery of possession of the portion of suit property of the dimensions 37'X20' with a superstructure thereon used for residence. The suit was defended by K. Ethirajan on the ground, inter alia, that he is in possession of the disputed land and the superstructure being the adopted son of Gangammal and had been granted a joint patta in the proceedings which concluded in his favour under the Act of 1948. The earlier Suit of 1973 was dismissed by the Trial Court vide judgment dated 6.10.1976 holding that K. Ethirajan was in possession of the suit property as a mere licensee of M. Gurunathan (deceased) but was in possession of the suit property as owner since 1940. The Trial Court also held that K. Ethirajan having remained in continuous possession of the suit property as owner had perfected his title by remaining in adverse possession for more than the statutory period of 12 years. The appeal no. 389 of 1977 preferred by M.

Gurunathan against the judgement dated 6.10.1976 was dismissed on 24.4.1979 holding that K. Ethirajan was in possession since much prior to the grant of the alleged licence/permission to him and, therefore, the contention of M. Gurunathan that he was licensee of Gurunathan was incorrect. The Court also relied on the proceedings pertaining to grant of joint patta. However, the plea of adverse possession of K. Ethirajan was negatived on the ground that if he was basing his claim of ownership and possession on the basis of joint patta, the question of adverse possession inter se between co-owners would not arise. The matter did not carry further and attained finality. Based on this judgment, the Trial Court and first Appellate Court in latter suit granted a preliminary decree of partition of suit property in favour of K. Ethirajan, the plaintiff this time. In the second appeal, the High Court upset the findings of both the Courts below and dismissed the suit of K. Ethirajan observing that in the earlier litigation between the parties, the defence set up by K. Ethirajan was on the basis of adverse possession and he never set up a case of co-ownership and, therefore, it barred the second suit by K. Ethirajan on the basis of joint ownership of the suit property. The Apex Court held the High Court in error and reversed the judgment and restored the judgment of Trial Court and the first appellate Court. After going through the judgment of the earlier litigation as well as the present one, the Apex Court found that the earlier suit filed by M. Gurunathan was dismissed by the Trial Court on the ground that the case of grant of leave and patta set up by him was not approved and the defendant, i.e., K. Ethirajan being in possession since 1940 onwards had perfected his title by adverse possession. The appellant Court though negatived the plea of

adverse possession, but relying on the joint patta came to the conclusion that the parties were co-owners and it was held that between co-owner, plea of adverse possession cannot be accepted. The decree of dismissal of suit was upheld by the appellate Court on the ground that plea of grant of licence by M. Gurunathan was not proved and the parties were co-owners under the joint patta in their favour. The judgment of the appellate Court dismissing the suit on the finding of co-ownership was not challenged any further and attained finality. In these circumstances, the Court held that the dispute of title to the suit properties between the parties was an issue directly and substantially involved in the earlier suit which was decided by the first appellate Court and thus the principle of res judicata would attract. It was observed that M. Gurunathan or his legal representatives are estopped from questioning the claim of co-ownership of K. Ethirajan and his legal representatives and for that purpose, the Apex Court also relied on the law laid down in Hope Plantations Ltd. (supra).

996. Thus, it is evident from what has been observed by the Apex Court that the issue was directly and substantially involved in the earlier litigation between the same parties and was decided also, hence, would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit. This obviously is not the case before us. Firstly, we have not been able to find out that the parties in the earlier suit are same as in the present one or that the parties or any of them in the cases in hand are litigating through the plaintiff (Suit-1885). Secondly, the issue of ownership of Mahant Rathubar Das though was directly raised but the first appellate Court while striking off the finding of Trial Court on the aforesaid issue did not consider further to decide the same either way and left it undecided. It, however, upheld the decree of dismissal on the ground of public order, propriety etc. This judgment of the first appellate Court as such was affirmed in second appeal Therefore, the necessary ingredients for attracting plea of res judicata lack in the present cases.

997. Reliance was also placed on para 17 and 18 of the judgment in K. Ethirajan (supra) which may also be discussed herein. It was contended on behalf of the respondents in K. Ethirajan that the earlier suit was for a limited property, i.e, a portion of the suit property measuring 37'X20' with superstructure thereon and, therefore, even if res judicata and estoppel would apply, it would be confined only in respect to that portion of land and not beyond that. The Apex Court, however, negatived the petitioners' submissions observing that in the earlier litigation, M. Gurunathan sought eviction of K. Ethirajan from portion of suit property by claiming exclusive title to the whole property involved in the subsequent suit. K. Ethirajan took the defence of adverse possession and co-ownership on the basis of joint patta. The Apex Court from the pleadings came to the conclusion that it is not correct to hold that earlier litigation was restricted only to a portion of the whole property involved in the present suit and held as under :

> "Looking to the pleadings of the parties in that suit (copies of which are placed before us in additional paper-book), the ground urged by the respondent that in the earlier litigation, claim of exclusive ownership set up by deceased-M. Gurunathan was restricted only to a portion of the whole property involved in this suit, does not appear acceptable. On the basis of pleadings of the earlier suit, we find that the issue directly involved was claim of exclusive

ownership of deceased-M. Gurunathan to the whole property left behind by deceased-Gangammal although eviction was sought of the defendant from a particular portion of the land on which he had built a hut for residence. The suit was resisted by deceased-K. Ethirajan claiming adverse possession and alternatively as co-owner on the basis of joint patta (Ex. A-7).”

998. Further, the Apex Court in para 20 of the judgment held as under :

“20. The argument that principle of res judicata cannot apply because in the previous suit only a part of the property was involved when in the subsequent suit the whole property is the subject-matter can not be accepted. The principle of res judicata under Section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure is attracted where issues directly and substantially involved between the same parties in the previous and subsequent suit are the same-may be- in previous suit only a part of the property was involved when in the subsequent suit, the whole property is the subject-matter.”

999. There cannot be any dispute on the principle, but as we have already observed that the issue of title having not been decided by the first appellate Court and on the contrary the findings of the Trial Court with respect to ownership of the plaintiff, Raghubar Das, in Suit-1885 having been directed to be expunged, there remained virtually no decision or finding on the issue pertaining to ownership of suit property in Suit 1885 and, therefore, in our considered view, the plea of res judicata or estoppel would have no application hereat.

1000. In Krishna Chendra Gajapati Narayan Deo (supra),

the only question of law considered and decided by Privy Council is, if an issue was not property raised in the plaint, but both the parties without protest chose to join the issue and obtained a decision thereon in an earlier litigation, that would also operate as res judicata in the latter litigation. The exposition of law aforesaid also has no application whatsoever in these cases for the reason we have already discussed. The result of the judgment of the first appellate Court in Suit 1885 is that the issue pertaining to ownership remained undecided and in the second appeal, the Judicial Commissioner's judgment shows that the plaintiff Mahant Raghubar Das therein was found to have shown no material to prove his ownership but who owned the property in dispute in Suit 1885 as such was not decided. Therefore, it cannot be said that the judgment of Suit 1885 may operate res judicata to the suits in question.

1001. The Privy Council in Midnapur Zamindary Co. Ltd. (supra) on page 149 of the judgment observed "Can it be said under these circumstances that the point was not raised, that the Court did not consider it to be necessary issue did not impliedly decide that it was necessary and did not decide the issue on the merits? We think the answer is clearly in the negative. Then what of the decree? It is true that it does not expressly refer to the tenancy right, but it gave a decree for possession. What, then, did it intend to give? For the appellant it is said that all that was given was possession as co-proprietor and that the question whether such possession was free of the alleged tenancy right was left untouched. But if so, what was the necessity of discussing the question in the judgment? We ought not, we think, to assume that the Judges discussed a question which was irrelevant to the case, and then granted no relief in respect of it;

but rather that as they had discussed and negatived the alleged tenancy right in the judgment they intended to, and did give a decree which should give effect to these findings. If so, the learned Judges' decree in effect gave to the respondent before us a right to the lands in that suit free of that alleged tenancy right claimed. We are of opinion therefore that the issue as to the appellants' right is res judicata."

1002. The above exposition is also unexceptional, but, in our view again has no application in these suits since the facts are different.

1003. Sri Siddiqui has placed reliance on para 32, 34, 35, 36, 38, 39, 48 and 50 of the judgment in State of Karnataka and another Vs. All India Manufacturers Organization and others (supra). Para 32, 34 and 36 refer to Section 11 and general principles of res judicata. The principle laid down by the Apex Court is :

> "The main purpose of the doctrine is that once a matter has been determined in a former proceeding, it should not be opened to the parties to re-agitate the matter again and again."

1004. We have also expressed our view which are strictly in conformity with what has been observed by the Apex Court.

1005. The basic question raised therein was the applicability of plea of res judicata in public interest litigation. The Apex Court held that it would apply. It followed its earlier judgment in Forward Construction Company Vs. Prabhat Mandal (Regd.) 1986 (1) SCC 100 and Explanation IV of Section 11 C.PC. In para 38 the Court reminded the spirit behind Explanation IV Section 11 C.P.C. by referring to the observations of Wigram, V.C. In Henderson Vs. Henderson

(1843-60) All ER Rep 378 and said:

> "The plea of res judicata applies, except in special case (sic), not only to parties upon which the court was actually required by the parties to form an opinion and pronounce a judgment, but to every point which property belonged to the subject of litigation and which the parties, exercising reasonable diligence, might have brought forward at the time."

1006. In para 39 also, similar observation of Somervell, L.J. In Greenhalgh Vs. Mallard (1942) 2 All ER 225 (CA) have been quoted which says "I think that on the authorities to which I will refer it would be accurate to say that res judicata for this purpose is not confined to the issues which the court is actually asked to decide, but that it covers issues or facts which are so clearly part of the subject-matter of the litigation and so clearly could have been raised that it would be an abuse of the process of the court to allow a new proceeding to be started in respect to them."

1007. Para 48, 49 and 50 refer the above principle and philosophy behind Explanation IV and say that it is to prevent abuse of the process of Court through re-agitation of settled issues. The observation in Greenhalgh (supra) was found to have been referred approvingly by the Apex Court in State of U.P. Vs. Nawab Hussain (supra) (para-4). The aforesaid observations being exposition of law with respect to Explanation IV Section 11 are also unexceptionable. The principles of law and the cases where Explanation IV would be attracted cannot be doubted but whether the same are attracted in the cases in hand is the moot question, which we find in negative. In our view, the above judgment also lends no support to the objection that the suits in question are barred by principle of res judicata in the light of the decision in Suit-1885.

1008. In Lal Chand (supra), one Radha Kishan owned a house no. 142, Katra Mashru, Delhi. He let out a portion consisting of five rooms on the ground floor and two rooms on the second floor to one Lal Chand. Radha Kishan filed suit no. 42 of 1958 in the Court of Sub-Judge, Delhi seeking eviction of Lal Chand and against four others. He alleged that Lal Chand had sublet the premises. The eviction was sought on three grounds including that he required the premises for his own use and occupation. It was decreed on the ground of need for own use and occupation. Rest of the grounds were rejected. The decree was upheld in appeal but with respect to premises, the appellate Court thought that the requirement of landlord would be met if possession of two rooms at the second floor is given to him. However, since there was no provision for giving possession of a part of the disputed premises in Delhi Rent Control Act, 1952, the entire decree was confirmed and the same stood continued in the second appeal also. The suit property being situated in a slum area, the landlord filed an application under Section 19 (2) of the Slum Areas (Improvement and Clearance) Act, 1956 (in short "Slum Act, 1956") for permission of the competent authority to execute decree for possession. The competent authority after taking note of Section 19 (4) of Slum Act, 1956 permitted the landlord to execute the decree in respect to two rooms situated on the second floor only and refused permission to execute decree in regard to the premises situated on the ground floor. The order was upheld in appeal and consequently the tenants handed over possession of two rooms on second floor to the landlord.

Thereafter, the landlord filed a fresh regular suit no. 435 of 1936 against Lal Chand and others for possession of the remaining rooms on the ground floor. In the above circumstances, the Apex Court held the subsequent suit barred by res judicata observing as under :

> "19. Only one more aspect of the matter needs to be adverted to. The respondent after obtaining a decree for eviction against Lal Chand and his alleged sub-tenants applied for permission of the competent authority to execute that decree. Permission was granted to him to execute the decree in respect only of the two rooms on the second floor and in pursuance of that permission he obtained possession of those two rooms. We are unable to understand how after working out his remedy under the Delhi Rent Control Act as modified by the Slum Clearance Act, it is competent to the respondent to bring a fresh suit for evicting the appellants from the premises on the ground floor. The authorities under the Slum Clearance Act who are exclusively invested with the power to determine whether a decree for eviction should be permitted to be executed and, if so, to what extent, had finally decided that question, refusing to allow the respondent to execute the decree in respect of the ground floor premises. By the present suit, the respondent is once again asking for the relief which was included in the larger relief sought by him in the application filed under the Slum Clearance Act and which was expressly denied to him. In the circumstances, the present suit is also barred by the principle of resjudicata. The fact that Section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure cannot apply on its terms, the earlier

proceeding before the competent authority not being a suit, is no answer to the extension of the principle underlying that section to the instant case. Section 11, it is long since settled, is not exhaustive and the principle which motivates that section can be extended to cases which do not fall strictly within the letter of the law. The issues involved in the two proceedings are identical, those issues arise as between the same parties and thirdly, the issue not sought to be raised was decided finally by a competent quasi-judicial tribunal. The principle of res judicata is conceived in the larger public interest which requires that all litigation must, sooner than later, come to an end. The principle is also founded on equity, justice and good conscience which required that a party which has once succeeded on an issue should not be permitted to be harassed by a multiplicity of proceedings involving determination of the same issue. Were it permissible to bring suits of the present nature, the beneficial jurisdiction conferred on the competent authority by the Slum Clearance Act would become illusory and meaningless for, whether the competent authority grants or refuses permission to execute a decree for eviction, it would always be open to the landlord to enforce the ejectment decree by filing a substantive suit for possession. Verily, the respondent is executing the eviction decree by instalments, now under the garb of a suit. Apart from the fact that the suit is barred on account of principles analogous to res judicata, it is plainly in violation of the injunction contained in Section 19 (1) (b) of the Slum Clearance Act, if regard is to be had to the substance and not for the form

1009. From the facts noticed above, we have no manner of doubt that the application of res judicata in the above case was rightly applied but in the facts of the cases in hand, the aforesaid judgement has no application.

1010. In Sulochana Amma (supra), Explanation- VIII of Section 11 came to be considered before the Apex Court and it was held that an order or an issue which had arisen directly and substantially between the parties or their privies and decided finally by a competent Court or Tribunal, though of limited or special jurisdiction which includes pecuniary jurisdiction, will operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit or proceeding, notwithstanding the fact that such Court of limited or Special jurisdiction was not a competent Court to try the subsequent suit. The only requirement is that the issue must directly and substantially has arises in a latter suit between the same parties or the privies. The question decided therein does not apply to the present suits.

1011. In State of Punjab and others Vs. M/s. Surinder Kumar (supra), the question was about the meaning of the words "might and ought" used in Section 11 C.P.C. M/s Surinder Kumar and Co. had the leasehold right to vend the Indian made Foreign liquor at Ludhiana for financial year April 1, 1995 to March 31, 1996 at their shops located at 44 places, licensed to sell under L-2 and L-14. The Excise Department initiated certain proceedings against them and cancelled licence. Against the order of cancellation, writ petitions were filed impleading the then Minister for Excise and Taxation as one of the respondents alleging mala fide in cancellation of licence. The Division Bench allowed the writ petition vide judgement

dated 15.9.1995 and remitted the matter to the appellate authority to decide the appeal within 15 days. The High Court observed that it was conceded that the Minister against whom the allegation of mala fide are alleged is no more a Minister, therefore, on the finding that there was an alternative remedy available to the petitioner, it relegated the petitioner to avail the said remedy of appeal. The appellate authority, though, upheld the allegations of illegality and irregularity in conducting business by the licensee but took a lenient view and instead of cancellation of licence, treated the period from the date of cancellation of licence till filing of writ petition and grant of stay order by the High Court as the period of substantive suspension as a measure of penalty. It is against this appellate order, the writ petition was again filed before the High Court, which was allowed and the matter was remitted to the appellate authority to decide the matter on the ground of mala fide alleged against the Minister. In the second batch of the petitions, the Minister was not made a party. That being so, the High Court was not in a position to go into the question of mala fide. The Apex Court held that it could not have directed the appellate authority to go into the question of mala fide. The Apex Court held that the words "might and ought" used in Section 11 would stand in the way operating as res judicata. In our considered view, the above judgement also lends no support.

1012. In P. K. Vijayan (supra) the words "might and ought" again came to be considered. One Kamalakshi Amma, landlord, filed R.C.P. No. 19 of 1974 under Section 11 of Kerala Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1965 for eviction of the P.K. Vijayan-tenant. Under the proviso thereto, if the the tenant denies title of the landlord or claims right of permanent tenancy,

the Rent Controller was required to decide whether denial or claim is bona fide and if a finding is recorded positively in favour of the tenant on the aforesaid issue, it will require the landlord to sue for eviction of the tenant in a Civil Court. The Rent Controller accepted the plea of P. K. Vijayan in regard to 'bona fide' and relegated the landlord to seek eviction by a civil Suit. Before the civil proceedings could be initiated, the tenant filed D.A. No. 11730 of 1986 before the Land Tribunal under Kerala Land Reforms Act claiming that the lease was of agriculture land and as a cultivating tenant, he is entitled to get assignment of title of the land under Section 72B of the Land Reforms Act which postulates that the cultivating tenant of any holding or part of the holding, the right, title and interest in respect of which has vested in the Government under Section 72 shall be entitled to assignment of such right, title and interest. The term "cultivating tenant" was defined to mean a tenant who is in actual possession of, and is entitled to cultivate the land comprised in his holding. The Land Tribunal vide order dated 26.11.1976 held that the lease was of commercial building and not agricultural land and dismissed the petition of the tenant. The tenant before the Civil Court, relied on Section 106 of the Land Reforms Act and claimed that the land was demised for a commercial or industrial purpose and he had constructed a building thereon for commercial purpose before 20.5.1967, therefore, by operation of Section 106 of the Land Reforms Act, he cannot be ejected. He also questioned the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to decide the question and contended that the matter has to be referred to the Land Reforms Tribunal under Section 125 (3) of the Land Reforms Act. The Trial Court decided the matter vide order dated 3.8.1887 in favour of tenant upholding

his contention for reference under Section 125 (3) of the Land Reforms Act to the Tribunal. The revision of the landlord was allowed by the High Court holding that the Land Reform Tribunal cannot decide the dispute in view of its earlier order under Section 72B and also on the ground of res judicata. The appeal taken to the Apex Court where it upheld the plea of res judicata of landlord observing hat the plea of entitlement under Section 106 of Land Reforms Act was available to the tenant in the eviction proceedings and if he would have raised at that time before the Rent Controller, lacking jurisdiction, the Rent Controller would have referred the matter to the Land Tribunal for decision under Section 125(3) of the Land Reforms Act. Having said so, the Apex Court held that the rule of "might and ought" envisaged in Explanation IV to Section 11 C.P.C. squarely applies and in para 11 of the judgement said :

"11. However, the appellant merely chose to deny the title of the landlords and did not raise the plea of S. 106 of the Land Reforms Act. The rule of "might and ought" envisaged in Explanation IV to S.11, C.P.C. squarely applies to the facts of the case and, therefore, it is no longer open to the appellant to plead that, Civil Court has no jurisdiction to decide the matter and it shall be required to be referred to the Land Tribunal.

That apart, in the proceedings under S. 72B the appellant pleaded that it is a land governed by the provisions of the Land Reforms Act and that, therefore, he is entitled to the assignment of the right, title and interest therein. The Tribunal found that the lease being a commercial lease, the appellant is not entitled to the assignment of the right, title and interest in the demised

land which was not vested in the State under S. 72 since the lease was not of agricultural land demised to the appellant. In that view of the matter and the appellant having decided only to avail the remedy of S. 72B and omitted to plead the remedy of S. 106, it is no longer open to him to contend that he is entitled to the benefit of S. 106 of the Land Reforms Act."

1013. The Apex Court further held in para 13 of the Judgement that "The tenant is expected to raise all the pleas available under the statute at the relevant time. It is a sheer abuse of the process of the Court to raise at each successive stages different pleas to protract the proceedings or to drive the party to multiplicity of proceedings. It would be fair and just that the parties to raise all available relevant pleas in the suits or the proceedings when the action is initiated and the omission thereof does constitute constructive res-judicata to prevent raising of the same at a later point of time. Thereby it must be deemed that they are waived."

1014. The law declared above by the Apex Court in P.K. Vijayan (supra) is binding upon us. However, we fail to understand as to how this would apply to the facts of the cases in hand in the light of the facts of the suits in question which we have already discussed in detail.

1015. In Gorie Gouri Naidu (supra), the Apex Court held that inter party judgement is binding upon the parties even if it is erroneous. The Court said :

"In our view, such decision of the Division Bench is justified since the said earlier decision in declaring the deeds of gift as invalid, is binding between the parties. There is no occasion to consider the principle of estoppel

since considered by the learned single Judge in the facts and circumstances of the case for holding the said transfers as valid, in view of the earlier adjudication on the validity of the said deeds in the previous suit between the parties. The law is well settled that even if erroneous, an inter party judgment binds the party if the Court of competent jurisdiction has decided the lis."

1016. In Premier Cable Co. Ltd. (supra), an assessment order was challenged in appeal which was dismissed on the ground of delay. Revision was also dismissed. The writ petition against the revisional order was also dismissed and the said order attained finality not being taken to the higher Court. In these circumstances, the Apex Court held that the levy under the aforesaid assessment order, which has attained finality, cannot be challenged by means of a civil suit since it is barred by principle of res judicata.

1017. In Abdul Rahman (supra), the issue of principle of res judicata as such was not up for consideration but in the facts and circumstances of the case, the Court refused the plaintiff to peruse the remedy in a Court of law. The peculiar facts of the case are noticed in para 30 of the judgement, which reads as under :

"30. .....The issue as regards the status of the 1st respondent has never been raised before the revenue authorities. As the appellant herein claimed himself to be a tenant of Mangal Singh, there was no reason as to why he could not be said to be aware of the relationship between the 1st respondent and the said Mangal Singh. He allowed the proceedings of the Board of Revenue to be determined against him. The decision of the Board of Revenue attained

finality. His writ petition was also dismissed. Be it also noted that the civil suit was filed three years after the adjudication of the rights of the parties in the mutation proceedings."

1018. After noticing the aforesaid facts, the Apex Court in para 31 said:

"31. In the aforementioned situation, in our opinion, the appellant must be held to have taken recourse to abuse of process of Court underlying the principle that the litigation should be allowed to attain finality in public interest. Although the concept of issues estoppel or estoppel by records are distinct and separate from the concept of abuse of process in public interest, the Court may refuse the plaintiff from pursuing his remedy in a Court of law. See Johnson v. Gore Wood and Co., ((2002) 2 AC 1)."

1019. Thus, the above judgement also lends no support to attract plea of res judicata in the present case.

1020. In M.T.W. Tenzing Namgyal (supra) the facts were that Plots No. 1013, 1014 and 1040 (part) situated at Gangtok belonged to one Chogyal Sir Tashi Namgyal. It was his personal property forming part of his private estate. One pucca building was constructed on Plot no. 1014 situated at New Market Road, Gangtok and it was let out to tenants. On the adjacent land to the said building there existed a private passage of 12 feet width made of steps and further on the adjacent south thereto, there was another building known as Yuthok building situated on Plot No. 1012. Another passage existed behind the aforesaid two buildings said to be a private gully being Plot No. 1013. There were two wooden buildings used as kitchen, latrines and

godown for the use of tenants occupying the aforesaid two buildings at New Market Road and Yuthok. It is said that there was a retaining wall on the west of Plot No. 1040 (part) which was the boundary between the land of the Plaintiffs' private estate and the land of defendant No. 2. The plaintiffs filed a suit alleging that the defendants had started construction of a big pucca building for running a hotel on the land situated on the south of his land being Plot no.1040 and it was alleged that the defendants illegally had encroached upon about 6,600 sq. ft. therein. The defendants denied, and disputing the allegations in their written statement, though admitted the existence of the pucca building and the flight of steps, contended that the latter belonged to Gangtok Municipality and meant to serve as the exclusive passage to the plot on which defendant no. 2 started constructing a multi-storeyed building. It was claimed that beyond the structures of the plaintiffs a precipitated hill edge exists on the eastern boundary of the defendants' land and the same was all through in the possession of the defendants. The defendants also claimed settlement of their land by virtue of three documents of the years 1961, 1975 and 1977. The suit was dismissed by the District Judge, Gangtok on 29.03.1985 but in appeal the High Court allowed the same and remanded the matter to the trial court directing to appoint another Commissioner to make local investigation with reference to the cloth survey map and actual measurement on the spot so as to ascertain the actual area of Plot No. 1040 etc. An opportunity was also given to the parties to re-examine their witnesses etc. The trial court appointed another Commissioner who, inter alia, found that Plot No. 1040 measures 0.69 acres out of which the land allotted to the defendants was 13, 879 sq. ft. and the total

area of constructions made by defendants no. 1 and 2 being the Denzong Cinema, two shop houses and hotel comes to 13, 616.46 sq. ft., which was accepted by the defendants but according to the plaintiffs the same was 13, 503.60 sq. ft. The trial court decreed the suit on 26.02.1988 but the judgment was reversed by High Court in appeal on 30.06.1994. The Apex Court noticed that the plaintiffs' predecessor in interest was late Chogyal Sir Tashi Namgyal of Sikkim. There is, therefore, no question of plaintiffs' having any document of title. The only document of title which was produced by the plaintiffs in support of their claim was a 'Khasra' showing entry in the name of 'Sarkar' as also in the name of 'Shri Panch Maharaja Sir Tashi Namgyal of Sikkim'. Some plots were recorded as Private Estate. Plots No. 1013, 1014 and 1040 were recorded in the name of Shri Panch Maharaj Sir Tashi Namgyal but the area of the plots was not mentioned. In the plaint, besides Plot No. 1013 and 1014, the plaintiffs claimed ownership in respect of Plot no. 1040 (part) and not the entire plot. The manner in which ownership for part of Plot No. 1040 claimed was not disclosed. It appears that a suggestion was made long back to pay a lump sum amount in lieu of the bazar area including the income so that the private estate may vest in Sikkim Darbar. The said proposal was accepted on 22.06.1959 after being approved and sanctioned by the Chogyal and the payment aforesaid was made. It is in these circumstances the High Court recorded a finding that all land entered in 'Khasra' in the name of “Sir Tashi Namgyal” did not belong to his private estate. The Apex Court, however, considered the matter on the assumption that the said finding of the High Court was not correct in view of the fact that the plaintiffs' land in suit were the subject matter of acquisition,

it was noticed that Sikkim Darbar granted settlement of a piece of land in favour of one of the defendants for construction of Cinema Hall on 10.04.1961. The original plaintiff held shares in Denzong Cinema Limited. The Cinema Hall started in the year 1969. The State of Sikkim merged with the Union of India in terms of an agreement on 26.04.1975. In view of Article 371 F of the Constitution the property and assets vested in the Government of State of Sikkim. The High Court recorded a finding that before and after merger of Sikkim with the Government of India, Plot No. 1040 was always treated as that belong to the Government and not private estate. The Apex Court found that the plaintiffs failed to prove their ownership/title on the plot in question. Having accepted compensation, the successor in interest is estopped and precluded from contending that the property did not vest in Sikkim Darbar and ultimately with the Government of India. In the circumferences, the Court dismissed the appeal and upheld the judgment of High Court. With respect to the evidentiary value of the 'Khasra' and 'Khatian' the Apex Court in paras 32 and 33 said:

> "32. The khasra and khatian have not been prepared under a statute. The question as to whether the same would be historical material or instrument of title or otherwise, would depend upon either the statute governing the same or the practice prevailing in the State. In the event, however, the records of right were not prepared under a statute, a presumption of correctness may be raised only in terms of Section 35 of the Indian Evidence Act.
> 33. However, ordinarily records of right cannot be treated to have any evidentiary value on the question of

1021. The case was decided on the facts of its own and we fail to find any support from the said judgment in respect to the plea of res judicata in the present cases. This judgment was relied by Sri Siddiqui in support of his plea of estoppel and abandonment based on the acquisition notification dated 07.10.1991. He submitted that the said notification was not challenged by the plaintiffs (Suit-5) and, therefore, it amounts to acquiescence on their part in respect to their rights, if any, to the land which was acquired by the State pursuant to the aforesaid notification and its quashing thereafter by the Court in various writ petitions would not change the situation.

1022. We do not find any substance in the submission. It is not in dispute that the notification dated 07.10.1991 and 10.10.1991 whereby the land in question alongwith the others was sought to be acquired by the State of U.P., were challenged in a number of writ petitions led by Writ Petition No. 3540 of 1991. The said notifications were quashed by this Court vide judgment dated 11.12.1992 holding the same to be illegal and unconstitutional. The effect of the judgment would be as if the aforesaid two notifications never existed. It cannot be pleaded that though the two documents quashed by the Court would be non-est for the persons who were party in those cases but would have some consequences for others. Once the very document as a result of its quashing become non-est, it would not result in any consequence whatsoever in law and even otherwise. Therefore, it cannot be said that Suit-5 cannot proceed further as if the plaintiffs have squeezed their rights in land in question.

1023. A similar argument has been made as a result of

acquisition of certain land vide Act No. 33 of 1993. Sri Siddiqui submitted that not only the plaintiffs (Suit-5) did not challenge the said enactment but also submitted to its provisions by filing an Application No. 4(o) of 1993 on 04.02.1993 praying for abatement of the suit in view of Section 4(3) of the Act No. 33 of 1993. Admittedly, sub-section of Section 4(3) of the aforesaid Act has been declared ultra vires and unconstitutional. Any provision which is unconstitutional is non-est i.e. still born and would not result in any consequences. It means as if the said provision never existed or operated. Even if it was not challenged by the plaintiff (Suit-5) and they sought to surrender to the legal consequences of the said Act but if subsequently in any other proceeding the statutory provision is found to be unconstitutional i.e. still born, the consequences would be as if the said provision has no adverse effect. Though reliance has been placed by Sri Siddiqui on certain judgments of the Apex Court as well as of this Court but in our view the aforesaid judgments do not lay down any such law and the reliance is misplaced.

1024. Jai Narain Parasrampuria (supra) was a case where the suit for specific performance was filed. The Court held that the relief being discretionary can be refused on the conduct of the parties. Representing the company, other parties were led to believe that the company was owner of the property as a result whereof third parties alter their position. It was thus held by the Apex Court that the principle of estoppel would apply. However, the Court did not forgot to add a caution as under:

> "We may, however, hasten to add that where there exists a statutory embargo, vesting of title in a person shall be subject thereto."

1025. Relying on various other authorities on the subject the Court also held:

> "The doctrine of estoppel by acquiescence was not restricted to cases where the representor was aware both of what his strict rights were and that the representee was acting on the belief that those rights would not be enforced against him. Instead, the court was required to ascertain whether in the particular circumstances, it would be unconscionable for a party to be permitted to deny that which, knowingly or unknowingly, he had allowed or encouraged another to assume to his detriment. Accordingly, the principle would apply if at the time the expectation was encouraged (sic)."

1026. It was also held by the Apex Court that the principle of res judicata may not have any application in the aforesaid facts.

1027. In B.L. Sridhar Vs. K.M. Munireddy (supra), the Court considered the principle of estoppel and said that it is not a cause of action but a rule of evidence which precludes a person from denying the truth of some statement previously made by him but would be attracted when "one person has by his declaration, act or omission caused or permitted another person to believe in it to be true and to act upon that belief, neither he nor his representative shall be allowed in any suit or proceeding between himself and such person or his representative to deny the truth of that thick." Sri Siddiqui could not show as to how the party represented by him has acted believing on the statement of the plaintiff (suit-5) so as to attract the principle of estoppel in the case in hand. The judgment, in our view, has no application to the facts involved in the present case.

"Order XXIII Rule 1-Whether applicable and attracted to Application No. 4(o) of 1993 and its consequences, if any"

1028. M/s Hulas Rai Baij Nath (supra) was a case with respect to the application of Order XXIII Rule 1 CPC. It was held that Order XXIII Rule 1(1) gives an unqualified right to a plaintiff to withdraw a suit. It also held that there is no provision in CPC which required the Court to refuse permission to withdraw the suit and to compel the plaintiff to proceed with it. However, if a set off has been claimed under Order 8, CPC or a counter claim has been filed the position may be different. We do not find any occasion to have application of the said authority to the facts of this case. Obviously no application under Order XXIII Rule 1 has been filed by the plaintiff (Suit-5) for withdrawal of the suit. The alleged application only drew attention of the Court to Section 4(3) of Act No. 33 of 1993 and its consequences and requested the Court to act accordingly. As soon as the said statute i.e. Section 4(3) seizes to have any legal consequences having been declared unconstitutional, the position as it stood before enactment of the said provision would stand restored.

1029. We now come to the Division Bench decision of this Court in Smt. Raisa Sultana Begam (supra). This Court has held that there is no provision laying down procedure for withdrawing the suit, manner in which it can be withdrawn and the essential physical acts required to be done to constitute withdrawal, which can be in any form. The Court further held that withdrawing of suit needs no permission from the Court and since there is no provision allowing revocation of the withdrawal application, therefore, an application for withdrawal of suit becomes effective as soon as it is done i.e. by giving information to the Court. The Court's order thereon is no part of the act of withdrawal. On page 322, para 9 of the judgement, the Court observed:

> "The right to withdraw has been expressly conferred by rule 1(1); there is no provision conferring the right to revoke the withdrawal and there is no justification for saying that the right to withdraw includes in itself a right to revoke the withdrawal. As we said earlier, certain consequences arise from the withdrawal which prevent his revoking the withdrawal, the withdrawal is complete or effective as soon as it takes place, and, in any case, as soon as information of it is conveyed to the Court, and no order of the Court is required to effectuate it or even to recognize it."

1030. In Smt. Raisa Sultana Begam (supra), Order 23, Rule 1, as was in the statute book prior to 1976, was under consideration, which read as under :

> "1. (1) At any time after the institution of a suit the plaintiff may, as against all or any of the defendants, withdraw his suit or abandon part of his claim.
> (a) that a suit must fail by reason of some formal defect, or
>
> (b) that there are other sufficient grounds for allowing the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit for the subject-matter of a suit or part of a claim,
> it may, on such terms as it thinks fit, grant the plaintiff permission to withdraw from such suit or abandon such part of a claim with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the subject-matter of suit or such part of a claim.

(3) Where the plaintiff withdraws from a suit, or abandons part of a claim, without the permission referred to sub-rule (2), he shall be liable for such costs as the Court may award and shall be precluded from instituting any fresh suit in respect of such subject-matter or such part of the claim.

(4)Nothing in this rule shall be deemed to authorize the Court to permit one of several plaintiffs to withdraw without the consent of the others."

1031. The Division Bench, while taking the view as noted above, disagreed with otherwise view taken by the Hon'ble Madras, Bombay and Calcutta High Court, and in an earlier Division Bench of this Court; in Mukkammal Vs. Kalimuthu Pillay 15 Ind Cas 852 (Mad); Lakshmana Pillai Vs. Appalwar Alwar Ayyangar (supra); Yeshwant Govardhan Vs. Totaram Avasu AIR 1958 Bom. 28; Raj Kumari Devi Vs. Nirtya Kali Debi (1910) 7 Ind Cas 892 (Cal); and Ram Bharos Lall Vs. Gopee Beebee (1874) 6 NWP 66 respectively. We find, with great respect, difficult to subscribe the view taken in Smt. Raisa Sultana Begam (supra). In our view, if the Court was unable to agree with the earlier Division Bench judgement in Ram Bharos Lall (supra), the matter ought to have been referred to the Larger Bench. It is true that the right of the plaintiff to withdraw suit is absolute as observed by the Apex Court in M/s Hulas Rai Baij Nath (supra) and once an application is made by the plaintiff and pressed before the Court, the Court cannot refuse such withdrawal unless there is a case of counter claim, set off etc. It would not mean that as soon as an application informing the Court is moved by the plaintiff that he intends to withdraw the suit or that an oral information is given, the effect

1032. So long as a suit is not instituted by presenting a plaint to the Court, the plaint remains the property of the litigant and would not result in any legal consequence, if he does not present it to the Court, but when the plaint is presented before a competent Court of jurisdiction and a suit is ordered to be registered in accordance with rules, the plaint would become the property of the Court and it would result in certain legal consequences, i.e., pendency of a suit or a case before a Court of law. The said legal consequences cannot be nullified without any order of the Court by the litigant simply by orally or in writing informing the Court that he intends to withdraw the suit. It is true that under Order 23 Rule 1, as it stood before 1976 amendment, there was no provision requiring any specific order to be passed by the Court allowing the plaintiff to withdraw his suit but considering the entire procedure of institution of a suit, it cannot be doubted that a suit, duly instituted, and registered in a Court of law cannot stand withdrawn without any order of the Court. In this regard, it would be appropriate to have the procedure of filing of suit in C.P.C., as it was prior to its amendment in 1976.

1033. Order IV Rule 1 (Allahabad amendment) provides for institution of suit and reads as under :

> "1. (1) Every suit shall be instituted by presenting to the Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, a plaint, together with a true copy for service with the summons upon each defendant, unless the Court for goods cause shown allows time to filing such copies.
> (2) The court-fee chargeable for such service shall be paid in the case of suits when the plaint is filed and in the case of all other proceeding when the processes applied for."

www.vadaprativada.com

1034. The manner of registration of suit was provided in Rule 2 Order IV and reads as under :

> "2. [S. 58] The Court shall cause the particulars of every suit to be entered in a book to be kept for the purpose and called the register of civil suits. Such entries shall be numbered in every year according to the order in which the plaints are admitted."

1035. Once a suit is duly instituted, the Court would pass order issuing summons to the defendants to appear and answer the plaint. Such summons, vide Order V Rule 3, are required to be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appointed, and also the seal of the Court. A suit once duly instituted and registered in the Court would not struck off from the record of the Court on the mere communication by the plaintiff orally or in writing that he intends to withdraw unless an order is passed by the Court to the said effect, which would have the legal consequence of bringing the proceedings set in motion by instituting the suit, to a halt. Mere absence of any provision permitting withdrawal of the application filed by a plaintiff for withdrawing the suit does not mean that no such power is vested in the plaintiff. So long as an order is not passed by the Court, if the plaintiff informs the Court by moving an application that he intends to withdraw the application for withdrawal of suit, he can always request or inform the Court that he does not want to press the application and the same may be dismissed as not pressed or withdrawn. It is only where the plaintiff press his application before the Court requiring it to pass the order for withdrawal of the Suit, the Court would pass the said order in accordance with law since it cannot compel a plaintiff to pursue a suit though he want to withdraw the same. It would thus be wholly unjust to hold that once an application to withdraw the suit is filed by a plaintiff, he cannot withdraw the same and the suit would stand dismissed as withdrawn. This would have serious and drastic consequences in as much as he cannot file a fresh suit on the same cause of action.

1036. Moreover, the existence of a provision i.e. Rule 1(3), empowering the Court to consider as to whether the plaintiff should be saddled with the liability of payment of cost or not also contemplates that an application for withdrawal of suit by itself would not result in any consequences whatsoever unless the Court has applied its mind regarding the cost. If what has been held in Smt. Raisa Sultana Begam (supra) is taken to be correct, it would mean that there would be no occasion for the Court to apply its mind on the question of cost under Rule 1(3) since the suit would stand dismissed as withdrawn as soon as the plaintiff informs the Court about his decision for withdrawal of the suit either orally or in writing. This is nothing but making Rule 3 (1) redundant. The earlier judgement of this Court in Raja Shumsher Bahadoor Vs. Mirja Mahomed Ali (1867) Agra H.C.R. 158 wherein this view was taken that the withdrawal must be regarded as terminating automatically the proceedings in the suit involving the suit's immediate dismissal was not found to be correct subsequently by the Division Bench in Ram Bharos Lall. We, therefore, find it appropriate in the entire facts and circumstances to take a different view and have no hesitation in holding though with great respect to the Bench, that the law laid down in Smt. Raisa Sultana Begam (supra) is not correct. In our view, the law laid down in Ram Bharos Lall

(supra), Mukkammal Vs. Kalimuthu Pillay (supra), Raj Kumari Devi Vs. Nirtya Kali Debi (supra) and Yeshwant Govardhan Vs. Totaram (supra) lay down the correct law. We also find that a Division Bench of Orissa High Court in Prema Chanda Barik Vs. Prafulla Kumar Mohanty AIR 1988 Orissa 33 has also taken the same view and did not find itself agreeable with the Division Bench decision in Smt. Raisa Sultana Begam (supra). In fact, a Division Bench of Calcutta High Court in Rameswar Sarkar Vs. State of West Bengal and others AIR 1986 Cal. 19 has gone slightly further by observing that where there is no provision under the Code providing for withdrawal of application for withdrawal of suit, Section 151 C.P.C. would apply.

1037. It would be useful to remind ourselves the observations of the Apex Court in respect to the provisions of the Code in Manohar Lal Chopra Vs. Rai Bahadur Rao Raja Seth Hiralal AIR 1962 SC 527 "It is well settled that the provisions of the Code are not exhaustive, for the simple reason that the Legislature is incapable of contemplating all the possible circumstances which may arise in future litigation and consequently for providing the procedure for them." Referring to Section 151, the Apex Court in the same judgement also held "The section itself says that nothing in the Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the inherent power of the Court to make orders necessary for the ends of justice."

1038. Order XXIII Rule 1 has now been substituted by C.P.C. (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976 vide Section 74 with effect from 1.1.1977 and the newly substituted provision reads as under :

> Order XXIII R. 1. Withdrawal of suit or abandonment of part of claim*.--(1) At any time after the institution of a suit,*

the plaintiff may, as against all or any of the defendants, abandon his suit or abandon a part of his claim:*

Provided that where the plaintiff is a minor or such other person to whom the provisions contained in rules 1 to 14 of Order XXXII extend, neither the suit nor any part of the claim shall be abandoned without the leave of the Court.

(2) An application for leave under the proviso to sub-rule (1) shall be accompanied by an affidavit of the next friend and also, if the minor or such other person is represented by a pleader, by a certificate of the pleader to the effect that the abandonment proposed is, in his opinion, for the benefit of the minor or such other person.

(a) that a suit must fail by reason of some formal defect, or

(b) that there are sufficient grounds for allowing the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit for the subject-matter of a suit or part of a claim,

it may, on such terms as it thinks fit, grant the plaintiff permission to withdraw from such suit or such part of the claim with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the subject-matter of such suit or such part of the claim.

(4) Where the plaintiff--

(a) abandons any suit or part of claim under sub-rule (1), or

(b) withdraws from a suit or part of a claim without the permission referred to in sub-rule (3), he shall be liable for such costs as the Court may award and shall be precluded from instituting any fresh suit in respect of such subject-matter or such part of the claim.

1039. Proviso inserted in Rule 1 (1) Order XXIII makes it very clear where the plaintiff is a minor or such other person to whom the provisions contained in rules 1 to 14 of order XXXII extend, neither the suit nor any part of the claim shall be abandoned without the leave of the Court. The proviso is mandatory and does not permit withdrawal of a suit filed on behalf of a minor etc. unless the leave of the Court is obtained. In the case in hand, plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 are deities who have been allowed to sue through their next friend.

1040. Plaintiffs no. 1 and 2, being deity, are juristic persons and plaintiff no. 3 is the person taking care of plaintiffs no. 1 and 2. At this stage, we are proceeding by assuming that plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 are deities and, therefore, a juristic person individually though the question whether they are 'juristic person' has also been raised separately which we shall deal later on but for the purpose of objection raised hereat with reference to Order XXIII Rule 1 we proceed to treat plaintiffs 1 and 2 as deity.

1041. A deity has been held to be a 'minor' and cannot sue on its own but through a Shebait or Manager or any other person who can file suit on its behalf. In Shiromani Gurudwara Prabandhak Committee, Amritsar v. Shri Som Nath Das and others, AIR 2000 SC 1421 the Apex Court held that the deity is a minor and its welfare can be looked into by the

Shebait/Sarvakar/Manager or the next friend. In such a case the leave of the Court is necessary for withdrawal of suit as required by proviso to Rule 1(1) and, therefore, also the question of withdrawal of the suit as soon as the application is made cannot arise at all.

1042. In State Bank of India Vs. Firm Jamuna Prasad Jaiswal (supra) the Hon'ble Single Judge followed the Division Bench judgment in Smt. Raisa Sultana Begam (supra) in order to hold that withdrawal application cannot be allowed to be withdrawn except where it was a case of fraud. Since we have held the judgement in Smt. Raisa Sultana Begam (supra) as not laying down a correct law, the Single Judge judgement in State Bank of India Vs. Firm Jamuna Prasad Jaiswal (supra) also cannot be said to be a good law. Same is the fate of other Single Judges judgements in Ram Chandra Mission (supra) and Upendra Kumar (supra) which also rely on Smt. Raisa Sultana Begam (supra). Therefore, all the aforesaid judgements would not help Sri Siddiqui in any manner.

1043. We may also observe hereat that so far as the present case is concerned, no application under Order XXIII Rule 1 has been filed by the plaintiff (Suit-5) seeking withdrawal of the suit and instead the alleged application is with reference to Section 4 (3) of Act 33 of 1993. Therefore, Order XXIII Rule 1 even otherwise would not be attracted in the present case.

1044. Since we have taken a view that the suit did not stand abandoned or withdrawn as soon as the application was made, the question of estoppel as argued by Sri Siddiqui is not attracted and, therefore, the Apex Court's decision in Deewan Singh (supra), Jai Narain (supra), Anuj Garg (supra) and Barkat Ali (supra) would have no application and lend no

support to the plaintiffs (Suit-4) and defendants (Suit-5).

1045. Now coming to the authority cited by Sri Verma, we find that in State of Maharashtra Vs. M/s. National Construction Company (supra), the Apex Court laid down the law that bar under Section 11 CPC applies in a matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit and has been heard and finally decided by a Court competent to try such suit. Meaning thereby that on the matter in issue, in question, there has been an application of judicial mind and a final adjudication has been made. If the former suit is dismissed without any adjudication on the matter in issue i.e. merely on a technical grounds like non-joinder, that cannot operate as res judicata. The Apex Court relied on its earlier decision in Sheodhan Singh Vs. Daryo Kunwar, AIR 1966 SC 1332 where the suit dismissed for want of jurisdiction was held not to operate as res judicata. The Court also followed its decision in Inacio Martins Vs. Narayan Hari Naik, 1993(3) SCC 123. The legal proposition thus is well settled.

1046. Munesh Kumar Agnihotri (supra) was a case where the parties in two suits were different hence the plea of res judicata was negatived by the Hon'ble Single Judge. Where cause of action is different, res judicata has no application in the subsequent suit as held in Ram Naresh (supra) and in our view there cannot be any dispute to the said proposition. The same was the position in Abdul Quadir (supra) where also the Court found that the cause of action involved in the subsequent suit was different and the parties were also found to be different.

1047. There are some more authorities cited at the bar.

1048. In Union of India Vs. Pramod Gupta (2005) 12 SCC 1, the application of res judicata in respect to determination of

market value and title of respondents was under consideration. Certain exemplars in the form of judgment and awards in respect to the acquisition of land and award of compensation were relied on and it was argued that since Union of India was party to those proceedings in the matter of determination of market value, the principle and decision already taken earlier cannot be disputed by it and is estopped besides that the challenge is barred by res judicata. The Apex Court negatived it by giving three exceptions, (1) If the Union of India had not preferred any appeal against earlier judgments and award, it would not be estopped and precluded from raising the said question in a different proceeding since in a given case it is permissible in law to do the same keeping in view the larger public interest. (2) Referring to Government of West Bengal Vs. Tarun K.Roy 2004 (1) SCC 347 it observed that non filing of an appeal in any event would not be a ground of refusing to consider the matter on its own merits. (3) Referring to State of Bihar and others Vs. Ramdeo Yadav and others, 1996(2) SCC 493 and State of West Bengal and others Vs. Debdas Kumar and others 1991 (1) Suppl. SCC 138, it observed that when public interest is involved in interpretation of law, the Court is entitled to go into the question. It was held that principle of res judicata would apply only when the lis was inter-parties and had attained finality in respect to the issue involved. The said principle will, however, have no application inter alia in a case where the judgment and/or order had been passed by a Court having no jurisdiction therefor and/or in a case involving a pure question of law. It will also have no application in a case where the judgment is not a speaking one. The Apex Court also referred to Ramnik Vallabhdas

Madhvani and others Vs. Taraben Pravinlal Madhvani (2004) 1 SCC 497 and reiterated that the principle of res judicata is a procedural provision and has no application where there is inherent lack of jurisdiction. Thus this judgement inroads an exception in the principle of res judicata where the matter carry for larger public interest.

1049. In Anathula Sudhakar Vs. P. Buchi Reddy and others (2008) 4 SCC 594 no question of estoppel or res judicata as such was involved as is evident from para 12 of the judgment wherein the issues considered by the Apex Court are quoted:

> (ii) Whether on the facts, the plaintiff ought to have filed a suit for declaration of title and injunction?
>
> (iii) Whether the High Court, in a second appeal under Section 100 CPC, could examine the factual question of title which was not the subject-matter of any issue based on a finding thereon, reverse the decision of the first appellate court?
> (iv) What is the appropriate decision?

1050. The Apex Court considered the first question as to when a mere suit for permanent injunction would lie and when it is necessary to file a suit for declaration and/or possession with injunction as a consequential relief and briefly summarized the principle as under :

(A) (a)Where a plaintiff is in lawful or peaceful possession of a property and such possession is interfered or threatened by the defendant, a suit for an injunction simplicitor will lie.

(b) A person has a right to protect his possession against

any person who does not prove a better title by seeking a prohibitory injunction. But a person in wrongful possession is not entitled to an injunction against the rightful owner.

(c) Where the title of plaintiff is not disputed but he is not in possession, his remedy is to file a suit for possession and seek in addition, if necessary, an injunction. A person out of possession cannot seek the relief of injunction simplicitor, without claiming the relief of possession.

(d) Where the plaintiff is in possession but his title to the property is in dispute or under a cloud or where the defendants assert title thereto and there is also a threat of dispossession from the defendant, the plaintiff has to sue for declaration of title and the consequential relief of injunction.

(e) Where the title of plaintiff is under a cloud or in dispute and he is not in possession or not able to establish possession, necessarily the plaintiff will have to file a suit for declaration, possession and injunction.

(f) A prayer for declaration will be necessary only if the denial of right and challenge to the plaintiff's title raises a cloud on the title of the plaintiff to the property.

(B) A cloud is said to have raised over a person's title when some apparent defect in his title to the property or when some prima facie right of a third party over it is made out or shown. An action for declaration is remedy to remove the cloud on the title to the property. On the other hand where the plaintiff has clear title supported by documents, if a trespasser without any claim to title or an interloper without any apparent title, merely deny plaintiff's title, it does not amount to raining a cloud over the title of the plaintiff and it will not be necessary for the plaintiff to sue for declaration and a suit for injunction may be sufficient.

(C) Where the plaintiff, believing that the defendant is only trespasser or a wrongful claimant without title, files a mere suit for injunction, and in such a suit, the defendant discloses in his defence the details of the right or title claimed by him, which raises a serious dispute or cloud over the plaintiff's title then there is a need for the plaintiff to amend the plaint and convert the suit into one for declaration. Alternatively, he may withdraw the suit for bare injunction with permission of the Court to file a comprehensive suit for declaration and injunction. He may file the suit for declaration with consequential relief, even after the suit for inunction is dismissed, where the suit raised only the issue of possession and not any issue of title. (emphasis supplied)

(D) If the property is a vacant site, which is not physically possessed, used or enjoyed, in such cases the principle is that possession follows title. If two persons claim to be in possession of a vacant site, one who is able to establish title thereto will be considered to be in possession as against the person who is not able to establish title.

(E) In a suit relating to a vacant site filed for a mere injunction and the issue is one of the possession, it will be necessary to examine and determine the title as a prelude for deciding the de jure possession. In such a situation, where the title is clear and simple, the court may venture a decision on the issue of title, so as to decide the question of de jure possession even though the suit is for a mere injunction. But where the issue of title involves complicated or complex questions of fact and law, or where court feels that parties had not proceeded on the basis that title was at issue, the Court should not decide the issue of title in a suit for injunction. The proper course is to relegate the plaintiff to the remedy of a full-fledged suit for declaration and consequential reliefs. Referring to the Madras High Courts' decision in Vanagiri (supra), the Apex Court in Pramod Gupta (supra) observed that the second suit would be barred only when the facts relating to title are pleaded, when an issue is raised in regard to title and parties lead evidence on the issue of title and the Court instead of relegating the parties to an action for declaration of title decides upon the issue of title and that decision attains finality. However, the Apex Court made it clear in para 20 of the judgment that the question relating to res judicata was not before it but the question whether a finding regarding title could be recorded in a suit for injunction simpliciter, in the absence of pleadings and issue relating to title is up for consideration. The said judgment, in our view as such lends no credence to the plaintiff's (Suit-4).

1051. To the same effect is the judgment in Williams Vs. Lourdusamy & another (2008) 5 SCC 647 wherein the Apex Court relied its decision in Sajjadanashin Sayed (supra).

1052. In State of Uttar Pradesh and another Vs. Jagdish Sharan Agrawal and others (2009) 1 SCC 689 where a suit was dismissed for non prosecution and there was no decision on merits and also where the Court found that order IX Rule 9 was not applicable, it was held that the principle of res judicata will

1053. In Mahila Bajrangi Vs. Badribai (2003) 2 SCC 464 in order to attract doctrine of res judicata, it was held that a decision on an issue that has been and substantially in issue in the former suit between the same parties which has been heard and finally decided would be considered as res judicata and not merely finding on every incident or collateral question to arrive at such a decision that would constitute res judicata.

1054. In Bishwanath Prasad Singh Vs. Rajendra Prasad and another (2006) 4 SCC 432 a deposit made under Section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 was held to be procedural in nature and not to constitute a decision on an issue directly and substantially arises in an earlier suit so as to operate res judicata even if before allowing the deposit to be made under Section 83, the Court has passed a detailed order dealing the rival submissions.

1055. In Srikant Vs. District Magistrate, Bijapur and others (2007) 1 SCC 486 referring to its earlier judgments, the Court held that the doctrine of constructive res judicata is confined to civil action and civil proceedings and inapplicable to illegal detention and the action brought for a writ of habeas corpus. However, where an earlier application for habeas corpus has been rejected, a second application on the same ground may not be permissible but if there are some fresh grounds even such a bar would not apply. This judgment, therefore, has nothing to do with the issue of res judicata engaging attention in the present suits.

1056. In Saroja Vs. Chinnusamy (2007) 8 SCC 329, the Court summarized conditions to attract the doctrine of res judicata under Section 11 C.P.C. as under :

(i) There must be two suits-one former suit and the other subsequent suit;

(ii) The Court which decided the former suit must be competent to try the subsequent suit;

(iii) The matter directly and substantially in issue must be in the same either actually or constructively in both the suits.

(iv) The matter directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit must have been heard and finally decided by the Court in the former suit;

(v) The parties to the suits or the parties under whom they or any of them claim must be the same in both the suits;

(vi) The parties in both the suits must have litigated under the same title.

1057. In Saroja's case (supra) the interesting thing is that a suit no. 233 of 1989 was filed on 19.4.1989 by one Saroja, her minor children Suganthamani and Ramesh against her husband Kuppusamy and his tenant for declaration of title and permanent injunction in respect of a property "A". During the pendency of the suit, Kuppusamy, husband of Saroja, sold the suit property by a registered sale deed dated 13.6.1990 for a consideration of rupees one lac to the appellant Saroja. She (appellant) filed another suit being O.S. No. 493 of 1990 for declaration of title and permanent injunction claiming absolute ownership and possession of the suit property purchased by her from Kuppusamy claiming that she had been in continuous possession of the suit property from the date of purchase and the Patta, Chittha and adangal also stood in her name. The suit was contested. When the later suit was pending, the earlier suit was decreed ex-parte in favour of respondent no. 3 and her minor children. The subsequent suit was also decreed but in appeal the decree was reversed and the judgment of the first Appellate Court was confirmed by the High Court in second appeal. The Apex Court also confirmed the above judgment holding that a decree which is passed ex parte is as good as a decree passed after contest.

1058. In Bharat Sanchar Nigam Ltd. and another Vs. Union of India & others JT 2006 (3) SC 114, the application of principle of res judicata in tax matters was considered and it was held that every assessment year gives a new cause of action since different assessment orders are to be passed and, therefore, the order in respect to one assessment proceedings shall not operate as res judicata for the subsequent assessment years. The Court further held as under :

> "20. The decisions cited have uniformly held that res judicata does not apply in matters pertaining to tax for different assessment years because res judicata applies to debar courts from entertaining issues on the same cause of action whereas the cause of action for each assessment year is distinct. The courts will generally adopt an earlier pronouncement of the law or a conclusion of fact unless there is a new ground urged or a material change in the factual position. The reason why courts have held parties to the opinion expressed in a decision in one assessment year to the same opinion in a subsequent year is not because of any principle of res judicata but because of the theory of precedent of the precedential value of the earlier pronouncement. Where facts and law in a subsequent assessment year are the same, no authority whether quasi judicial or judicial can generally be permitted to take a

different view. This mandate is subject only to the usual gateway of distinguishing the earlier decision or where the earlier decision is per incuriam. However, these are fetters only on a coordinate bench which, failing the possibility of availing of either of these gateways, may yet differ with the view expressed and refer the matter to a bench of superior strength or in some cases to a bench of superior jurisdiction.

1059. The discussion made above as also in the light of the principles of law laid down in the various precedents, some of which are discussed above, the conclusion is inevitable that in no manner, it can be said that anything in Suit-1885 may be construed or taken as to operate as res judicata in the suits up for consideration before us. In fact, neither the principles of res judicata nor estoppel is attracted in any manner as the conditions precedent for attracting the said principles are completely lacking. It cannot be said that either the suits are barred by principle of res judicata or that Suit-1885 was filed on behalf of the whole body of persons interested in Janam Asthan and, therefore, all the Hindus are barred by the same. It also cannot be said that the defendants are estopped from denying the title of Muslim community including the plaintiff of Suit-4 to the property in dispute in view of the judgments of Suit-1885.

1060. In Smt. Dhana Kuer Vs. Kashi Nath Chaubey, 1967 AWR 290 a Single Judge upheld the decision of the courts below holding that the suit was barred by Section 11 Explanation VI. An earlier suit was filed by Kashi Nath, Vindhayachal and Bindeshwari seeking a declaration that Lt. Jadunandan, husband of Smt. Asharfa has no interest of the property in suit except a right of maintenance. The trial court dismissed the suit but in appeal the suit was decreed and the judgment was confirmed in second appeal also. Thereafter Smt. Dhana Kuer, daughter of Jadunandan and Smt. Asharfa filed another suit seeking a declaration that Jadunandan died as separate member of the family. The Court held that the earlier suit was contested in respect of a private right claimed in common for oneself and others and, therefore, the judgment was binding upon the successors who can be validly said to be represented in the earlier case through the superior member. In our view, this judgment has no application in the case in hand as is evident from the facts noted above.

1061. Mst. Sudehaiya Kumar and another Vs. Ram Dass Pandey and others, AIR 1957 All. 270 sought to be relied by referring para 6 to contend that Explanation VI Section 11 C.P.C. is not confined only to the representative suits governed by Order 1 Rule 2 but is applicable to other suits as well. This principle has been explained by the Apex Court in Narayana Prabhu Venkateswara Prabhu Vs. Narayana Prabhu Krishna Prabhu, AIR 1977 SC 1268 giving an illustration where each party in a partition suit claiming that the property, the subject matter of the suit, is joint, asserts a right or title common to others to make identical claims. If that very issue is litigated in another suit and decided, the others making the same claim cannot be held to be claiming a right in common for themselves and others. Each of them in such a case must be deemed to represent all those, the nature of whose claims and interests are common and identical. The crux of the matter to attract Explanation VI is that interest of a person concerned has really been represented by the other; in other words his interest has been protected after in a bonafide capacity. If there be any clash

of interest between the persons concerned and is assumed representative, or if the later deem to collusion, or, for any other reason mala fide involves to defend the claims, it cannot be considered to be a representative interest as held in Surayya Begum (Mst) Vs. Mohd. Usman and others, 1991(3) SCC 114. Sri Siddiqui is also relied upon Bidhumukhi Dasi Vs. Jitendra Nath Roy and others, 1909 Indian Cases (Calcutta) 442; Singhai Lal Chand Jain Vs. Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh, Panna and others, AIR 1996 SC 1211 (para 13); and Shiromani Gurdwara Parbandhak Committee Vs. Mahant Harnam Singh C. (Dead), M.N. Singh and others, AIR 2003 SC 3349 (paras 17 and 19) but we find nothing therein to help him on this aspect of the matter.

1062. What we notice from the contentions of Sri Siddiqui is that his plea of res judicata is not limited to the suit or issue in suit having been raised, heard and decided but it is in respect to certain facts which are contained in the record of Suit-1885 with respect to the nomenclature of site or building or object and its location etc. He claims that mention of the above amounts to an admission by the plaintiff of Suit-1885 about the title, nature etc. of the said building or site or locality even if it was not in issue or nothing was decided on this aspect. Ignoring the issues raised in Suit-1885 and the decision of the Court, certain observations of the learned District Judge made during his personal visit of the site are also being claimed as a finding of fact binding on the parties not only to Suit-1885 but also to all those who go and intend to visit the aforesaid entire site either as worshipper or otherwise. The submissions is extremely far fetched and too remote to be accepted and applied in the case in hand.

1063. We answer the Issues No. 5 (d) (Suit-1), 7(c) and 8 (Suit-4), and 23 (Suit-5) in negative.

1064. The Issue No. 29 (Suit-5) is:

> "Whether the plaintiffs are precluded from bringing the present suit on account of dismissal of suit no. 57 of 1978 (Bhagwan Sri Ram Lala Vs. State) of the Court of Munsif Sadar, Faizabad?"

1065. It is not disputed that Suit No. 57 of 1978 was dismissed for non compliance of Court's order with respect to payment of Court fees. Neither any issue was raised nor argued nor decided by the said Court. Therefore, bar of res judicata is not at all attracted by the order dismissing Suit 57 of 1978 inasmuch as the said order dismissing the suit on technical ground does not come within the purview of judgment or a decision or issue as defined in Section 2 (9) CPC. The issue no. 29 (Suit-5) is therefore answered in negative and in favour of plaintiffs.

1066. Issue no. 7(b) (Suit-4) only pertains to the capacity of Mohammad Asghar in which he contested Suit-1885. It is not disputed by the parties that initially when the suit was filed by Mahant Raghubar Das there was only one defendant, i.e., the Secretary, Council of India. Mohammad Asghar later on filed an impleadment application claiming himself to be the Mutwalli of Babari Masjid and the said application was allowed whereupon he was impleaded as defendant no. 2. He pursued the case accordingly before the trial court and the appellate court. It is thus matter of record that in Suit-1885 Mohammad Asghar was allowed to pursue the matter as Mutawalli of Babari Masjid. No party has disputed this factum which is purely a matter of record. What has been in fact suggested by the counsel for

Hindu parties is that mere factum that Mohammad Asghar's application was allowed in Suit-1885 permitting him to pursue the matter as defendant no. 2 in his alleged capacity of Mutawalli as Babari Masjid, whether it would bind the Hindu parties in the present cases. This, however, is not the issue. The only issue before us whether he was impleaded and pursued Suit-1885 as Mutawalli of Babari Masjid which is a fact derived from the record of Suit-1885 and, therefore, has to be decided in affirmance particularly in view of the fact that nothing has been said by the defendants (Suit-4) to disprove or contradict it. Issue No. 7(b) (Suit-4) is decided accordingly in affirmance and in favour of plaintiffs (Suit-4).

5(c) (Suit-4) in detail vide his order dated 21.04.1966 and in view of his findings recorded thereon, issue no. 5(d) (Suit-4) was not pressed by the defendants.

1070. The order dated 21.4.1966 is as under :

"All the above four suits were consolidated together on 6.1.1964 on the basis of the joint statement of the parties to all the above suits, which is available at paper No. 184A, of the leading case Original Suit No.12 of 1961. Issues covering the subject matter of all the above mentioned four suits were commonly framed in the leading case, Original Suit No. 12 of 1961 on 5.3.64, which are 16 in number. An additional issue No. 17 was framed on 17.4.65, which is available in the English Notes of the said date in the leading case.

Issue No. 5 (d) was initially taken-up for disposal as a preliminary issue for determination whether the question involved in issue No. 5 (d) should be referred to the Hon'ble the High Court, under Section 113 (Proviso) C.P.C.; or not. Before an answer to issue No. 5 (d) could be given by this court, the defendants of the leading case presented an application paper No. 239/C; whereby they prayed that the plaintiff be called upon to produce the notification contemplated in Section 5 of the U.P. Moslim Waqf Act. In response to the said application, the plaintiffs through their application 242/G filed two papers 243/C and 243/1A as the alleged Government Gazette Identification made under Section 5 of the U.P. Moslims Waqf Act. Paper No. 243/C is the attested copy of the supplement to the Government Gazette of the United Provinces, dated February 26, 1944-Part VIII; and paper

No. 243/1A is the annexure to the said gazette notification printed in Urdu title: "Fehrist Sunni avaqaf wakai suo me Muthadda Agra wa Oudh, jinpar bamoojib report Commissioner Avaqaf, U.P. Moslims Waqf Act No.XIII of 1936 ki Dafat Aayad hoti hai".

Its title page further contains the following words :-

"Fehrist hasl Dafa 5 Act XIII/1936....."

In the said list of waqf property paper No.243/1A, the property in dispute in the above four suits as alleged by the plaintiffs of the leading case is mentioned at serial No. 26, of page 11. The entire list of Sunni Waqf property of Faizabad is mentioned at pages 10 and 11 of paper No. 243/1A. The proforma of the list as well as the entries against item No. 26 of the said list are reproduced below :-

No. Sumar	Name waquif ya Waqf.	Name Mutwalli Maujooda	Nauip (sic. Nawyyet) Jaidad Mauqoofa
26	Badshah Babar	Syed Mohammad Zaki Mutwalli Masjid Babari Qasba Shahnawa, Dak-Khana Darshan Nagar	This column stands blank against entry No. 26 of the list paper No. 243/1A

Subsequently, the defendants 1, 3 and 4 of the leading case filed their objections 247/C and 248/C against the plaintiffs' aforesaid papers 243/C, 243/1A and 244/C.

In reply to the said objections of the defendants, the plaintiffs filed their reply 250/C and 251/C against the defendants' aforesaid objections 248/C and 247/C respectively.

In connection with the subject matter of applications 239/C, 240/C, 251/C and the alleged Gazette Notification 243/C and the list of waqf property 243/1A, leaned counsel for the parties jointly stated that the following additional issue may be framed and issue No. 17 which should be decided first, because issue No. 5, with all its part recedes to a secondary position in face of the following additional issue No. 17. Their aforesaid joint request appears to be sound, and, therefore, the following additional issue No. 17 was framed :-

ADDITIONAL ISSIUE NO. 17 :

"Whether a valid notification under Section 5 (1) of U.P. Moslims Waqf act No. XIII of 1936, relating to the property in suits was ever done? Its effect?"

www.vadaprativada.com

Naturally issue No. 17, thus, become primarily the preliminary issue.

Learned counsel for the parties were heard at length in respect of issue No. 17. My findings under issue No. 17, are given here-under :-

FINDINGS ON ISSUE NO.17

The words "Waqf" and "Waqif" have been defined in Section 3(1) of Act XIII of 1936 Muslims Waqfs Act, U.P. as below :-

"Waqf" means the permanent dedication or grant of any property for any purposes recognized by the Mosalman law or usage as religious, pious or charitable and where no deed of waqf is traceable includes waqf by user; and a waqif means any person, who makes such dedication or

It will be evident from the above definition that the word "waqf is inseparably connected with the word "any property", because the 'Waqf' can come into existence only in relation to any property. In this way, whenever the word 'Waqf" is conveyed to any person, it must necessarily convey simultaneously the idea or description or a tangible connotation about the existence of "any property" covered or included in the 'Waqf'. What I mean to say, is that if some one wants another to know that a particular property is waqf, it will be necessary for him to mention simultaneously the description of at least tangible connotation about the identity of the property of the waqf.

In the instant case, at hand, item No.26 (page 2 of the list paper No.243/1A) is totally blank in its last column, which was prescribed for mentioning the particulars of the property to be known as 'waqf" created by Badshah Babar. The absence of any mention of the tangible identity of the alleged waqf property of item No. 26, is a fatal-flaw in the alleged Government Notification paper No.243/C read with paper No. 243/1A; because no body living in the extensive district of Faizabad or for that matter living in any part of India, could or can reasonably make-out as to what is that specific property, which was proposed to be enlisted as Sunni Waqf" property in item No. 26, page 11, of paper No. 243/1A. Consequently, a person interested in the property in suits-living in a distant tract of Faizabad District or in any other State of India could never understand that the existing entries of item No. 26 of paper No. 243/1A, unequivocally relate to the present property in suits. That being so, proviso No. 1, to clause 2 of Section 5 of U.P. Moslims Waqf Act, 1936 and clause 3 of Section 5 of the said Enactment cannot come into play, in respect of the present property in suits; because the alleged Government Gazette Notification paper No. 243/C read with paper No. 243/1A, at item No. 26, page 11, of paper No. 243/1A, was meaningless; and because of the blankness of its last column, the same did not and could not convey to the public at-large or to for that matter to any one that the said item No. 26 of 243/1A, related to the present property in suits. The principle laid down in the ruling 'Harla. Vs. The State of Rajasthan, A.I.R. 1951, Supreme Court, p. 467 clearly goes to show that such a notification is no effective notification in the eyes of law or equity.

Learned counsel for the plaintiffs of the leading case cited before me the ruling AIR 1959, Supreme Court, P. 198, 'Sirajul Haq Khan and Others Vs. The Sunni Central Board of Waqf, U.P. and Others" to show that it was incumbent upon any Hindu also interested in the property of item No. 26 or 243/1A, to bring a regular suit for declaration within one year from 26.2.1944 when 243/1A was published in the U.P. Government Gazette, according to the provisions of clause 2, of Section 5 of Act XIII of 1936, and since none of the Hindus of India or Faizabad District or the defendants of the leading case or the plaintiffs of the connected three cases had brought any suit for declaration within one year of 25.2.1944, challenging the validity of item No. 26, page 11, of notification No. 243/1A; hence the defense of the defendants of the leading case and the suits of the plaintiffs of the connected three cases are barred by clause 3, of Section 5 of Act XIII/1936; whereby the aforesaid declaration of waqf by the waqf Commissioner, U.P. at item No. 26 of paper No. 243/1A, had become final and conclusive.

Bowing down to the principle laid down in the aforesaid ruling of Hon'ble the Supreme Court, I respectfully wish to point-out that the said ruling is distinguishable from the facts of the present cases at-hand; because in the aforesaid ruling, it was taken for granted that a valid notification of the proposed waqf property was duly made in the U.P. Government Gazette under Section 5(1) of Act XIII of 1936; whereas in the present cases, at-hand, the alleged notification as contemplated in Section 5, clause (1) of Act XIII of 1936, i.e. item No. 26 of the list paper No. 243/1A, does not amount to a valid notification; because the same does not convey the idea or the identity or necessary particulars about the property proposed by the waqf Commissioner to be listed as Sunni Waqf Property dedicated by Badshah Babar. I have already pointed out above that the definition of the word "Waqf" in Section 3(1) of Act XIII of 1936, necessarily relates to some specific property. This means that a clear mention of the property included in a waqf must necessarily be made when making a mention of a particular waqf. This has not been done in item No. 26 of paper No. 243/1A, inspite of the fact that column No. 4, of the above noted proforma was specifically prescribed for that end. In this connection, I may profitably refer to the aforesaid ruling itself, which has been cited on behalf of the plaintiffs of the leading case, in which their Lordships of Hon'ble The Supreme

Court have themselves held as under :-

> "That expression 'any person interested in a waqf", must mean 'any person interested in what is held to be a waqf'. It is only persons, who are interested in a transaction, which is held to be a waqf, who could sue for declaration that the decision of the Commissioner of Waqfs in that behalf is wrong and that the transaction in fact is not a waqf under the Act."

The above under-lined words, as used by their Lordships of Hon'ble The Supreme Court, clearly point-out that persons interested in a property held as waqf by the Waqf Commissioner, will be duty bound to bring a suit for declaration within one year from the date of notification against the decision of the Waqf Commissioner if the notification had conveyed to them, the identity or the particulars of the proposed waqf property; and not otherwise. As pointed out above, item No. 26, of the notification list paper No.243/1A is utterly blank in its column No. 4 due to which no body could understand as to what property was intended to be included in the said item No. 26. That being so, the said notification is meaningless; and does not carry the sanctions provided in clause 3 of Section 5 of Act XIII of 1936 with it.

The entry of the name of Badshah Babar as Waqif, of a property in Faizabad District, as given in column No. 2, of item No. 26 of paper No. 243/1A, is not enough to convey the idea of the identify of the present property in suits, because Badshah Babar was the Emperor of the Moghal empire in India, who never resided in Faizabad

District according to the pages of history of which a judicial notice can be taken by this Court, Secondly, there is no knowing as to how many waqfs were created by Badshah Babar in various parts of Faizabad District.

In column No. 3 of item No. 26 of paper No. 243/1A is given the name of the Mutwalli as Syed Mohammed Zaki Mutwalli Masjid Babari, Qasba Shah Nawa, Dak-Khana Darshan Nagar. A judicial notice of this fact can be taken by this Court, that qasba Shah Nawa lying within the jurisdiction of Post Office Darshan Nagar is at a distance of about 8 to 10 miles from Ayodhya. As the said entry of the particulars of the Mutwali stands in column 3 of item No. 26 of paper No. 243/1A, it shows on the face of it that Syed Mohammed Zaki might have been a Mutawalli of a mosque built by emperor Babar in Qasba Shah Nawa, Post Office Darshan Nagar. In this way, the entries of columns 2 and 3 also of item No. 26 of paper No. 243/1A are so vague and mis-leading that a number of the public at-large, residing in any part of our vast country India, who might be interested in the present property in suits, could never understands from the same that by the notification of item No. 26, of paper No. 243/1A, which was the present property in suits, which was proposed to be listed and declared as Sunni Waqf property by the Commissioner of Waqf U.P.

No explanation, whatsoever, has been offered on behalf of the plaintiffs of the leading case at the time of arguments on issue No. 17 or in the plaintiffs' reply, paper No. 250/C as to why column No. 4, of item No. 26 of paper No. 243/1A was left blank. In para 5 of the plaintiffs' reply

paper No. 250/C, all that has been contended in that connection is that there is no vagueness in the entry relating to the mosque in suit at item No. 26, of paper No. 243/1A; because in its column No. 2, the name of Badshah Babar is clearly mentioned and in its column No. 3, the name of present Mutwalli Syed Mohammed Zaki Mutwalli Masjid Babari, is mentioned with his residential address as Qasba Shah Nawa, Post Office Darshan Nagar. It is noteworthy that in column No.3, of entry No. 26, of paper No. 243/1A, it is nowhere mentioned that Qasba Shah Nawa, Post Office Darshan Nagar was the residential address of Syed Mohammed Zaki. Consequently, it has been simply twisted at the end of para 1 of paragraph 5, of the plaintiffs' reply paper No. 250/2C, contains the 'Sakoonat' of residence of Syed Mohammed Zaki. As a matter of fact, a perusal of column No. 3 of item No. 26 of the notification list paper No. 243/1A, will clearly convey to the reader that Syed Mohammed Zaki was a Mutwalli of some mosque built by Babar in Qasba Shah Nawa Post Office Darshan Nagar. As such, the aforesaid explanation of the plaintiffs has no force.

At the end of para 5, in paper No. 250/3C, another explanation of the above was offered on behalf of the plaintiffs of the leading case as under :

"The plaintiffs' allegation being that the building in suit is mosque built by King Babar whose dynasty and accounts of his conquest are matters of history well known to all educated persons in India."

The aforesaid explanation in the first place, conveys the impression that the plaintiffs of the leading case are

themselves conscious of the fact that it was a fatal lacuna in the aforesaid notification paper No. 243/C read with paper No. 243/1A whereby the description or particulars or identity of the waqf property mentioned in item No. 26, of paper No. 243/1A was omitted in column No. 4 or for that matter in any of the columns of item No. 26, of paper No. 243/1A. Secondly, the aforesaid explanation is confined to the alleged presumed knowledge of the educated persons only-totally ignoring that even uneducated persons whose number surpasses the number of education persons in this country, had also a right vested in them to assail the entries of item No. 26 of paper No. 243/1A.

Thirdly, it will be too remote to presume that the factum of the conquest of Emperor Babar over certain parts of India, which one can derive from the pages of popular books of history taught in schools and colleges must necessarily convey the details of those properties or buildings also, which were built by Emperor Babar in various parts of this vast country at different times.

Lastly, it is to be remembers that it is not the case of the plaintiffs of the leading case that property in suit was originally a temple, which was ever conquered by Emperor Babar, who got it remodeled in the shape of a mosque. The case of the aforesaid plaintiffs is contained in their plaint in leading case, as well as in the statement of the plaintiffs' learned counsel made under order X, rule 2 C.P.C. on 20.1.64, at paper No. 187A, is that the property in suits is the originally mosque, which was built for the first time at its place, by Emperor Babar in 1528 AD in the shape of a

mosque which he had dedicated to the followers of Islam thereafter. That being so, the knowledge of the educated persons regarding the conquest of Emperor Babar derived from the pages of popular history books cannot profitably utilized by the plaintiffs of the leading case because according to the plaintiffs' own case, the property in suits was not conquered property but a property which was originally and for the first time built at its place by Emperor Babar for use of the Moslim public.

In view of the facts and reasons discussed above, I hold under issue No.17 that no valid notification under Section 5(1) of U.P. Moslim Waqf Act No. XIII of 1936 was ever made so far relating to the specific disputed property of the present suits at-hand. The alleged Government Gazette Notification paper No. 243/C read with the list paper No. 243/1A do not comply with the requirements of a valid notification in the eyes of law and equity as I have already discussed above. The aforesaid two papers, therefore, serve no useful purpose to the plaintiffs of the leading cases.

In view of my above findings I hold that the bar provided in Section 5(3) of U.P. Act No. XIII of 1936 does not hit the defence of the defendants of the leading case and their suits which are connected with the aforesaid leading case. Issue No. 17 is answered accordingly.

In view of my findings given above, the subject matter of issue No. 5 (a) also stands automatically decided against the plaintiffs of the leading case; and in favour of the defendants of the leading case and the plaintiffs of the connected cases. Issue No. 5(a) also, therefore, stands

answered accordingly.

My findings under issue No. 17, given above, automatically answer issue No. 5(c) also, accordingly. Consequently, issue No. 5(c) is answered in the negative.

In this way, only two parts (b and D) of issue No. 5 stand for decision now. Issue No. 5 (b) will be taken up for disposal along with the remaining issues.

As regard issue No. 5 (d) counsel for the defendants of the leading case to report today whether issue No. 5 (d) is still prepared in face of my above findings under issues Nos. 17, 5 (a) and 5(c)?"

1071. After delivery of the aforesaid order, the learned counsels for defendants in Suit-4 made the following noting :

"In view of the finding of Court it is not necessary to press Issue no. 5 (d) at present. As such Issue No. 5 (d) is not pressed."

www.vadaprativada.com

1072. After referring to the above statement of the learned counsels for defendants (Suit-4), learned Civil Judge passed following order in respect to Issue No. 5(d) (Suit-4).

"Learned counsel for the defendants of the leading case has endorsed above that he does not press issue no. 5 (d) in view of the findings on issue nos : 17, 5(a) and 5(c), hence issue no. : 5(d) need not be answered by this Court.

Consequently put up on 25.5.66 for final heading of the above mentioned cases."

1073. Issue No. 9 (Suit-1) is similar to Issue No. 5(a) (Suit-4). It reads as under:

"Is the suit barred by provision of Section 5(3) of the Muslim Waqfs Act (U.P. Act 13 of 1936)?"

1074. With respect to Issue No. 5(a) (Suit-4) the learned Civil

Judge in his order dated 21.04.1966 has recorded the following findings:

> "In view of my findings given above, the subject matter of issue No. 5 (a) also stands automatically decided against the plaintiffs of the leading case; and in favour of the defendants of the leading case and the plaintiffs of the connected cases. Issue No. 5(a) also, therefore, stands answered accordingly."

1075. Issue No. 9 (Suit-1) being similar, also stands decided accordingly in terms of the judgement dated 21.04.1966 of the learned Civil Judge, i.e., in favour of the plaintiff (Suit-1).

1076. Issues No. 7(a) and 7(b) (Suit-3) pertain to the notification under 1936 Act and read as under:

> "Has there been a notification under Muslim Waqf Act Act No. 13 of 1936) declaring this property in suit as a Sunni Waqf?"
> "Is the said notification final and binding? Its effect?"

www.vadaprativada.com

1077. Issue No. 17 (Suit-4) which has been decided by the detailed order dated 21.04.1966 of the learned Civil Judge is similar to both the above issues. Since it has already been held that no valid notification under Section 5(1) of 1936 Act in respect to the property in dispute has been issued, both the issues no. 7(a) and 7(b) (Suit-3) are answered in negative, i.e., in favour of the plaintiffs (Suit-3) and against the defendants therein.

1078. Issues No. 5(b) (Suit-4) and 9(a) (Suit-1) are similar which read as under:

> "Has the said Act no application to the right of Hindus in general and defendants in particular, to the right of their worship?"

www.vadaprativada.com

"Has the said Act no application to the right of Hindus in general and plaintiff of the present suit , in particular to his right of worship?"

1079. In the plaint (Suit-4) referring to 1936 Act, the plaintiffs have averred in paras 9 and 10 as under:

"9. That in 1936 the U.P. Muslim Wakfs Act XIII of 1936 was passed and under the provisions of the said Act, the Commissioner of Wakfs made a complete enquiry and held that Babari Masjid was built by Emperor Babar who was a Sunni Mohammedan and that the Babari Mosque was a public wakf. A copy of the Commissioner's report was forwarded by the State Government to the Sunni Central Board of Wakfs and the Sunni Central Board of Wakfs published the said report of the Commissioner of Wakfs in the Official Gazette dated 26.2.1944.

10. That, no suit, challenging the report of the Commissioner of Wakfs was filed by the Hindus or by any person interested in denying the correctness of the report of the Commissioner of Wakfs, on the ground that it was not a Muslim Wakf or that it was Hindu temple."

1080. In the Additional Written Statement of defendants No.1 and 2 (Suit-4) para (g), (h) and (i) read as under.

"(g) That the Commissioner of Wakf only has to make an enquiry about number of Shia and Sunni Waqfs in the district the nature of each waqf, the gross income of property transferred in the Waqf, the Govt. revenue, the expenses and whether it is one expected u/s 2. exempted by sec.2 of the Act. All these things he has to do in accordance with the definition of Waqf in Section 3(1) of the Act XIII of 1936, an Act which is exclusively meant for certain clauses of Muslim Waqfs. The finality and conclusiveness in intended to give effect to the scheme of administration under the Muslim Waqfs Act and does not and cannot confer jurisdiction to decide question of title as against non-Muslims. The legislature u/s 5(3) does not say that the court shall take judicial notice of the reports of the Commissioner of Waqfs and shall regard them as conclusive evidence that the Waqf mentioned in such reports are Muslim Waqfs, as was done in Section 10 of the O.E. Act.

(h) That there has been no legal publication of alleged report and hence no question of any finality arises.

(i) That the purpose of publication is only to show to which sect. the waqf belongs. It does not call upon objections or suit by persons not interested in what is held to be a Waqf or not viz. by non muslims."

1081. The written statement dated 25th January, 1963 of defendant no.2, para 32 (g), (h) and (i) read as under :

"(g) That the Commissioner of Wakf only has to make an enquiry about number of Shia and Sunni Waqfs in the District the nature of each waqf, the gross income of property comprosed in the Waqf, the Government Revenue, the expenses and whether it is one expected U/s 2. 1082. Defendant No.13 and 14 Baba Abhiram Dass and Pundarik Misra also in para 32(g) have said :

"(g) That the Commissioner of Wakf only has to make an enquiry about number of Shia and Sunni Waqfs in the District, the nature of each waqf, the Government Revenue, the expenses and whether it is one excepted U/s 2. (h) There has been no legal publication of alleged report and hence no question of any finality arises.

1083. Defendant No.13 again in his written statement in paras 33 and 36 has pleaded as under :

33. THAT in 1936 the U.P. Muslim Waqfs Act, was passed. It established two Central Boards of Waqfs in U.P., namely the Sunni Central Board of Waqfs and the Shia Central Board of Waqfs, to supervise and control the Muslim Waqfs of the two sects respectively. All the existing Waqfs were required to be surveyed and classified into Sunni and Shia Waqfs by a Commissioner of Waqfs, who was required to submit his report to the local Government, and the Government in its turn was required to send that report to the Central Board concerned, according to the sect to which the waqf belonged, whereafter the Central Board concerned was required to notify in the Gazette the

Waqfs of its respective sect. There was no such notification in respect of the 'waqf' of the 'mosque' in dispute. Allegation to he contrary is wrong. The Plaintiff Waqf Board, has had no jurisdiction in respect of the premises even if it were a 'mosque'. Further, it took no action or positive steps for the custody or the care of the building or its establishment as a 'mosque'. No one acted as its Mutwalli, or Mauzin, or Imam, or Khatib, or Khadim. The descendant of Mir Baqi who was sought to be planted as the Mutwalli by the British was an opium addict. He denied that the grant of revenue free land was waqf for the purposes of the 'mosque', and instead claimed that it was his Nankar for services rendered to the British, and did not look after or manage the 'mosque' at all.

36. THAT the Sunni Central Board of Waqfs, U.P. has no jurisdiction or competence to meddle with the alleged 'waqf ; or the alleged 'mosque', or to sue in respect thereof for want of a proper and valid notification in its favour, in respect thereof, under Section 5 of the U.P. Muslim Waqfs Act, 1936, the notification published in the Official Gazette dated 26.2.1944, having already been held to be invalid by the Court's finding dated 21.4.1966 on issue No.17, in this Suit, which has become final and irreversible between the parties. Further, the suit when filed in 1961, was barred by the provisions of the U.P. Muslim Waqfs Act, 1960 ; only the Tribunal constituted under that Act had the jurisdiction to entertain a suit of this nature, if filed within the limitation prescribed by it, and the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain it.

1084. Defendant No.17 in his (Additional) written statement dated 14th September, 1995 in para 11 has pleaded as under :

"11. That Sunni Central Board of Waqfs has no legal authority to file the suit and as such the suit is liable to be dismissed."

1085. With respect to Issue No. 9(a) (Suit-1) we find pleadings in paras 25 and 26 of the written statement of defendant no. 10 which read as under:

"25. That the ownership of the mosque in question vests in the God Almighty and the said mosque is a waqf property and the waqf character of the said mosque cannot be challenged by the plaintiff in this suit specially so when the plaintiff had never challenged the entry of the said waqf which was made in pursuance of the gazette notification issued by the State Government of Uttar Pradesh under provisions of the U.P. Muslim Waqf Act, 1936.

26. That the plaintiff's suit is barred even by the provisions of the U.P. Muslim Waqf Act, 1936."

1086. With respect to applicability of Wakfs Act, Sri M.M. Pandey, counsel for plaintiffs (Suit-5) has submitted:

(A) The Act needs a close examination. The Preamble aims at providing better governance and administration of certain classes of Wakfs and supervision of Mutawalli's management. S. 3(1) does not create any 'new' class of Wakf and recognises only those known to the Mahommedan Law; the Statement of Objects and Reasons also says so and adds that the Act "is not intended to deprive the Mutawallis of any authority lawfully vested in them, nor it aims at defining all the powers, duties and liabilities of the Mutawallis…" S. 4(1) provides for appointment of a District Commissioner of Wakf "for the purpose of making survey of all wakfs". Procedural powers of Civil Court are conferred on the Commissiioner for summoning witnesses, production of documents, local inspection/ investigation u/s 4(4) while making inquiries, but there are no guidelines how to 'initiate' an inquiry, what notices are required to be issued and to whom. S. 4(3) confers power on him to make 'such inquiries as he consider necessary'; there is no guideline for the manner in which he should proceed. This seems to be 'arbitrary' and violates the Constitutional requirement of fairness. The word 'necessary' will make Wakf Commissioner's discretion to be objective and open to judicial review.The Act does not provide for framing Rules of procedure for the Wakf Commisioner to observe before initiating an inquiry. If on particular facts or situation, Notice to a particular person is essential in the interests of justice and fairness, the Wakf Commissioner cannot plead that he had unrestricted discretion whether or not to issue Notice; in law, every fair procedure is permissible unless specifically probited. The Act does not prohibit the Wakf Commissioner to issue notices for giving opportunity to persons interested while conducting the inquiry. The proceeding before the Wakf Commissioner is quasi judicial as held in the case of Board of Muslim Wakfs, Rajasthan Vs. Radha Kishen (1979)2 SCC 468 (para 25). Further the SC has held in paras 37 to 39 that where a stranger who is a non-muslim is in possession of a certain property, his right, title and interest therein cannot be put to jeopardy merely because the property is included in the list prepared by the Wakf

Commissioner under the U.P. Wakf Act. Although this decision concerns Section 6(1) of the Wakf Act of 1960, the SC has observed in para 35 that that Section "is based on Sub-section (2) of Section 5 of U.P. Muslim Wakf Act of 1936". This distinguishes the decision from that in 1959 SC 198, Sirajul Haq Khan Vs Sunni Central Board of Wakf where both Plaintiff and Defendants were Muslims. Thus Hindus, Nirmohi Akhara and any of the Defdts in OOS 4 of 1989, cannot be treated to be a 'person interested in a wakf' u/s 5(2) of the Wakf Act of 1936. It will also be appreciated that if Nirmohi Akhar and others were to be treated to be 'person interested in a wakf', it was incumbent upon the Wakf Commissioner to issue notices at that very time before deciding the issue. Even if it be treated to be administrative, an opportunity of hearing ought to have been given to Nirmohi Akhara and Hindu Community as held, after considering several decisions of Supreme Court, in the case of Muzaffar Hussain Vs. State of U.P, 1982 Allahabad Law Journal 909 (DB).

(B) Wakf Commissioner submits his report of inquiry to State Government u/s 4(5). The State Govt. has to 'forward a copy' of the report to Shia as well as Sunni Boards of Wakf u/s 5(1) and commands the Boards, as soon as possible, to 'notify in the Gazette the Wakfs relating to the particular sect to which, according to such report, the provisions of this Act apply'. This signfies that Shia and Sunni Boards are required to publish notices, in the Gazette, of only those Wakfs which relate respectively to Shia and Sunni Wakfs; further, only the particulars of the Wakf, without the report, are required to be published.

Mere publication of the particulars of Wakf without the report cannot constitute notice of Wakf Commissioner's finding/report to Public, much less to any particular individual.

(C) Over and above the procedure contained in Ss 4 and 5 for the Wakf Commisioner in making survey and preparing lists of Wakfs and their publication by concerned Wakf Boards, S. 38 authorises the Wakf Board concerned also to register a Wakf at its Office. This registration may be made on an application by Mutwalli under sub-section (2), or by wakif, his descendants, beneficiary or any Muslim of the sect under sub-section (3) or by 'any person other than the person holding possession' of wakf property under sub-section (6). In an application under sub-section (6), the Wakf Board is required to give notice of the application to the person in possession and hear him. The Board will make an inquiry and pass final orders. The question is that since the Act specifically provides for issue of notice by Wakf Board to a person in possession of wakf property (whoever he may be – even a stranger), why no provision is made for Wakf Commissioner to issue similar notice to person in possession for the purpose of inquiry u/ss 4 and 5? An essential distinction is that while Wakf Commissioner is an officer of the State, the Wakf Board is not; hence while Wakf Commissioner may be presumed to act in a fair and just manner, the Wakf Board may not be presumed so to act, hence specific procedural methodology is prescribed for it in the matter of deciding a matter. As mentioned above, the proceedings before the Wakf Commissioner are quasi-judicial. 'Natural justice' would require such notice to be given to person in possession; failure to do so would render Wakf Commissioner's findings and list of Wakfs to be ineffective against strangers. In this case, Wakf Commissioner did not issue notice to Nirmohi Akhara who were admittedly in possession of Eastern half of the platform of DS itself as settled by the British Administration in 1885, in addition to Ram Chabutra, Sita Rasoi Chabutra and other portions of DA within the campus of DS. Admittedly, in 1934 during Hindu-Muslim riots, Hindus had demolished certain portions of DS, thereby exerting their rights over the property to the knowledge of everyone concerned with DS. The Govt. of U.P. even imposed punitive fine on Hindus for demolishing portions of DS which was repaired by the Govt. Thus the Hindu public in general (in addition to Nirmohi Akhara) was interested in DS, and a general public notice for Hindu worshippers too was called for. None was given, hence the entire proceeding of the Wakf Commissioner, declaring DS to be Sunni Wakf, was illegal.

(D) Then follows the provision which is most important for the purposes of these cases: S. 5(2) and 5(3). According to S. 5(2), the Mutawalli of a Wakf, or any person interested in a Wakf may bring a suit in a Civil Court for a declaration that any transaction held by the Commissioner of Wakfs to be Wakf is not Wakf, but no such suit by a person interested in the Wakf shall be instituted "after more than one year of the notification referred to in subclause (1)". Sub-section (3) provides that subject to the final result of such suit "the report of the Commissioner of Wakfs shall be final and conclusive". Subsection (4) commands that the

Commissioner shall not be made a Defendant to the suit and no suit shall be instituted against him for anything done by him in good faith under colour of this Act. This bar cannot be made applicable to Plaintiffs of OOS 5 of 1989. Firstly, there is no valid Wakf of DS. Secondly, the Plaintiffs were neither Parties to the proceedings before, nor were given an opportunity by Wakf Commissioner to contest the claim of declaration of DS to be Wakf. Thirdly, neither Nirmohi Akhara, who were admittedly in possession of almost half portion of Platform (Chabutra) of DS lying towards East of a grilled partition wall erected by British administration in 1855 in addition to considerable portions of campus of DS, including Ram Chabutra, was given notice of the proceedings, nor Hindu devotees/community were given general notice although since 1934 riots they were admittedly asserting rights over it. If the requirements of Section 5 of the Wakf Act of 1936 applied to Nirmohi Akhara/Hindu devotees on the ground that they were 'persons interested in the wakf', then that was all the more reason for the Wakf Commissioner to have given notice to these persons. The action and decision of Wakf Commissioner, or by Sunni Central Board of Wakf on its basis, therefore, could not be binding on Plaintiffs, Nirmohi Akhara or Hindu devotes/community.

(E) When Wakf Act of 1960 came into force, the Sunni Board made 'Registration' of some of the disputed properties as Sunni Wakf u/s 29 of 1960-Act. Supreme Court held that any Survey report made and Registration of Wakf thereon was "futile and of no avail" because Registration of Wakf under 1936-Act had been kept alive by 1960-Act and the latter Act permitted Registration of only those Wakfs which were 'other than' those already Registered under 1936-Act. The claim of Shia community was upheld and Sunni Community were restrained permanently from interfering with exercise of rights by Shias. Now, there is absolutely nothing in common between Ghulam Abbas' case and the present cases.

1087. The creation of waqf was held valid and lawful by the Prophet Mohammad. It is said that this rule was laid down by Prophet himself and handed down in succession by Ibn Abu Nafe and Ibn Omar. Omar got piece of land in Khaiber whereupon he came to the Prophet and sought his counsel to make the most pious use of it. The Prophet said "if you like you may make a waqf of it, as it is, and bestow it in benification". Omar thereupon bestowed it in charity on his relatives, the poor and slaves and in the path of God, and travellers in a way that the land itself might not be sold, nor conveyed by gift, nor inherited. It is said that waqf continued in existence for several century until the land became waste. The prophet of Islam not only declared such works to be valid and lawful but also encourage their creation by dedicating his own property, the little that he had, in favour of posterity. It would be useful to refer as to what constitute a lawful waqf under Muslim Law. A Division Bench decision of Calcutta High Court in Meer Mahomed Israil Khan Vs. Sashti Churn Ghose and others, 19 ILR (Calcutta) (1892) 412 where Justice Ameer Ali answering the question as to what constitute a lawful waqf under Mussulman law observed that there must be a substantial dedication for charitable or pious purpose. His Lordship further observed:

"In the Mussulman system law and religion are almost synonymous expressions, and are so intermixed with each other that it is wholly impossible to dissociate the one from the other: in other words, what is religious is lawful; what is lawful is religious. The notions derived from other systems of law or religion form no index to the understanding or administration of the Mussalman law. The words "piety" and "charity" have a much wider signification in Mussalman law and religion than perhaps in any other. Every "good purpose," wujuh-ul-khair (to use the language of the Kiafaya), which God approves, or by which approach (kurbat) is attained to the Deity, is a fitting purpose for a valid and lawful wakf. A provision for one's children, for one's relations, and under the Hanafi Sunni law for one's self, is as good and pious an act as a dedication for the support of the general body of the poor. The principle is founded on the religion of Islam, and derived from the teachings of Prophet."

1088. Thereafter Justice Ameer Ali proceeded to quote from "Hedaya" a commentary by "Fath-ul-kadir" said to be frequently quoted in "Fatawa-i- Alamgiri" in great detail and it would be useful to reproduce the same as under:

"I will give here a few passages from some of the best known authorities to show how utterly opposed the view taken in this case is to the Muhammadan law. The Fath-ul-kadir says--" Literally, it (the word wakf) signifies detention, ... in law . . . according to the Disciples, the tying up of property in such a manner that the substance (asl=corpus) does not belong to anybody else excepting God, whilst the produce is devoted to human beings, or is spent on whomsoever he [the wakif] likes; and the reason of it is that, though a desire to approach the Deity (kurbat) should form the ultimate motive of all wakfs, yet if, without such an (immediate) desire, a person were to dedicate a property in favour of the affluent (aghnia), the wakf would be valid in the same way as a wakf in favour of the indigent or for the purposes of a mosque: for, in giving to the affluent there is as much kurbat as in giving to the poor or to a mosque, and though the profit may not have been given to the poor on the extinction of the affluent [still] it is wakf and will be treated as wakf even before their extinction. This principle is founded on the reason that the motive in all wakfs is to make one's self beloved by doing good to the living in this world and to approach the Almighty in the next . . . . .

"In wakf Islam is not a condition; consequently if a Zimmi makes a wakf on his children and his posterity and gives it at the end to the indigent, it is lawful [equally with that made by a Moslem]. And it is lawful in such a case to give the usufruct conditioned for the indigent to the poor of both Moselms and Zimmis. The wakif may lawfully condition to give the usufruct solely to the poor of the Zimmis, and in that will be included Jews and Christians and Magians; or he may condition that a special body of them may get the produce . . . . whatever condition the wakif makes if it is not contrary to the Sharaa, will be lawful. And so long as the object is not sinful, the wakif may give to whomsoever he likes . . . According to Abu Yusuf the mention of perpetuity [or dedication to an object of a permanent nature] is not necessary to constitute a

valid wakf, for the words wakf and sadakah conjunctively or separately imply perpetuity . . . In the Baramika it is stated that, according to Abu Yusuf, when a wakf is made in favour of specific individuals, on their extinction the profits of the wakf will be applied to the poor . . . Among the wakfs created by the Sahaba [Companions of the Prophet], . . the first is the wakf of Omar (may God be pleased with him) of his land called Samagh [at Khaibar] . . that created by Zobair bin Awwam of his house for the support of his daughter who had been divorced (by her husband); . . that of Arkam Mukhzumi, on his children of his house called Dar-ul-Islam at Safar (near Mecca), where the Prophet used to preach Islam, and where many of the disciples, among them Omar, accepted the Faith . . . Baihaki in his Khilafiat has stated upon the authority of Abu Bakr Obaidulla bin Zubair that [the Caliph] Abu Bakr (may God be pleased with him) had a house in Mecca which he bestowed in charity upon his children, and that it is still in existence . . . And Saad ibn Abi Wakkas bestowed in charity his houses in Medina and Egypt upon his children, and that wakf is still in existence, and [the Caliph] Osman (may God be pleased with him) made a wakf of Ruma, which exists until to-day, and Amr Ibn al-Aas [the Amru of European history], of his lands called Wahat in Tayef and of his houses in Mecca and Medina upon his children, and that [wakf] also is still continuing . . . According to Abu Yusuf the wakif may lawfully retain the governance of the trust, or reserve the profits for himself during his lifetime. This has been fully dealt with by Kuduri in two parts . . The jurists, Ahmed ibn-i-Abi Laila, Ibn

Shabarma, Zahri, and others, agree with Abu Yusuf. Mohammed alone holds a contrary opinion . . . Abu Yusuf bases his rule upon the practice and sayings of the Prophet himself who used to eat out of the produce of the lands dedicated by him .... Another proof in support of Abu Yusuf's rule is that the meaning of wakf is to extinguish the right of property in one's self and consign it to the custody of God. Therefore, when a person reserves the whole or a portion of the profits for himself, it does not interfere with the dedication, for that also implies the approval of the Almighty and is lawful . . . For example, if a man were to dedicate a caravanserai and make a condition that he may rest in it, or a cistern and condition that he should take water from it, or a cemetery, and say that he may be buried there, all this would be lawful. [Further] our Prophet (may the blessings of God be with him) has declared that a man's providing for his subsistence is a sadakah [an act of piety or charity]. This Hadis has been substantially handed down by a large number [of people] and is authentic, and Ibn Maja states from Mikdam bin Maadi Karib that the Prophet declared that no gain of a man is so meritorious as that which he earns by the labour of his hands; and that which he provides for the maintenance and support of himself, the people of his household, his children, and his servants, is a sadakah. And Imam Nisai from Balia and he from Buhair has given the same tradition in these words:-'Whatever thou providest for thyself is a sadakah.' Ibn Haban in his Sahih states that Abu Said reports from the Prophet that any one who acquires property in a lawful manner, and provides therewith for his maintenance and for that of the other creatures of God, gives alms in the way of the Lord. . . . And Dar Kutni reports from Jabir that the Prophet (may God's blessing be with him) . . . declared that all good acts are sadakah and that a man providing subsistence for himself and his children and his belongings, and for the maintenance of his position, is giving charity in the way of God. . Tibrani has reported from Abi Imama that the Prophet of God declared that a man making a provision for his own maintenance, or of his wife, or of his kindred, or of his children, is giving sadakah. And in the Sahih of Muslim it is stated from Jabir that the Prophet told a man to make a beginning with himself and give the remainder to his kinsfolk."

1089. Justice Ameer Ali further on page 434 of the report observed that the words "charitable" and "religious" must be understood from a Mussulman and not from an English point of view. His view was concurred by Justice O'Kinealy and His Lordship also observed on page 437 of the report that "it must be an endowment for religious or charitable purposes; and if we want to interpret a document of that kind, what we must naturally look to is what is really meant by the words "religious" or "charitable" among Muhammadans. As an example, we know that the words "charitable purpose" in Scotland have quite a different meaning from that in which they are used in England. And so in India, in judging of what is really meant by the words "religious" and "charitable" by a Muhammadan, we must take the view which their law takes, and not what is to be found in the English Dictionary."

1090. The term "waqf" literally means detention. The legal meaning of waqf according to Abu Hanifa, is the detention of a specific thing in the ownership of the wakif or appropriator, and the devoting or appropriating of its profits or usufruct "in charity on the poor or other good objects." According to the two disciples, Abu Yusuf and Muhammad, waqf signifies the extinction of the appropriator's ownership in the thing dedicated and the detention of the thing in the implied ownership of God, in such a manner that its profits may revert to or be applied "for the benefit of mankind". A waqf extinguishes the right of the wakif or dedicator and transfers ownership to God. By dedication and declaration the property in the wakif is divested and vests in the Almighty.

1091. For the present purpose an idea of what constitute waqf in Islam is sufficient and we need not to go into further details. With respect to 'waqf' as recognised in Islamic Law, since hereat we are concerned with the relevant legislative aspect of the matter as it operated in India, we shall deal with Islamic Law in this respect in detail while dealing with the issue of validity of creation of waqf with respect to the property in dispute.

Administration of Waqfs

1092. The concept of waqf in India got introduced with the establishment of Muslim rule. It appear that earlier 'Sultan' was the supreme authority over the administration of waqf properties and ultimate power vested in him. There was some decentralisation of the actual administration, control and supervision of waqf institutions. At the Centre, the Sadar-us-Sadar was entrusted with the overall control of waqfs administration in the empire. His main work was to supervise waqfs' administration and its properties. At the provincial level, it was Sadr-e-Subha and in District, Sadre-e-Sarkar used to look into the administration of waqfs. At the local level, the waqfs used to be looked after by Qazis who also looked after waqf cases. The administration of individual waqf was the responsibility of Mutawalli, which is still continuing. This kind of arrangement finds mention in detail in Fatwai Alamgiri said to be prepared under the command of Mughal Emperor Aurangzeb.

1093. During the reign of Indian sub-continent by East India Company, in the territory under their command so far as it had charitable and religious institutions of Hindus and Mohammedans, they were regulated by British Government exercising visitatorial powers. In exercise of this power, the British Government enacted several laws to prevent fraud and waste, and to secure honest administration of such institutions. The British Government did not interfere with the personal laws of Hindus and Muslim like inheritance, succession, marriage and religious institutions.

1094. In 1810, the general superintendence of religious and charitable endowments vested in Board of Revenue and the Board of Commissioners. Vide Bengal Regulations XIX of 1810 (The Bengal Charitable Endowment Public Building and Escheats Regulations, 1810), the Board of Revenue was put in possession of landed and other properties of charitable and religious endowments, of both Muslims and Hindus. The Regulations were obviously applicable to the area under the authority of East India Company. The said Regulations, however it appears, had no application to the area or to properties situated in Oudh for the reason that under the agreement of the East India Company with Nawab of Awadh (Lucknow), the said area of Oudh continued to be ruled by the

"Nawabs" till its annexation in 1856.

1095. After the transfer of power from East India Company to British Government in 1857, a series of legislation came including those which were enacted with an object of proper administration of religious and charitable endowment. The Religious Endowments Act, 1863 (Act 20 of 1863) was passed and the properties relating to religious, charitable and public endowments were placed under the control of trustees, managers or superintendents. Local Committees were appointed which exercise the powers of the Board of Revenue or local agents.

1096. In respect to the Muslim in Oudh area, Oudh Laws Act XVIII of 1876 was enacted. Vide Section 3 thereof, the laws to be administered in the case of Mohammadans would be the same as in East Panjub. The East Punjab was governed by Punjab Laws Act IV of 1872 and Sections 5 and 6 thereof provide as under:

> "5. In questions regarding succession, special property of females, betrothal, marriage, divorce, dower, adoption, guardianship, minority, bastardy, family relations, wills, legacies, gifts, partitions or any religious usage or institution, the rule of decision shall be--
> (1) any custom applicable to the parties concerned which is not contrary to justice, equity or good conscience and has not been, by this or any other enactment, altered or abolished, and has not been declared to be void by any competent authority;
> (2) the Mahomedan law, in cases where the parties are Mahomedans,.... except in so far as such

www.vadaprativada.com

law has been altered or abolished by legislative enactment, or is opposed to the provisions of the Act, or has been modified by any such custom as is above referred to."

"6. In cases not otherwise specially provided for, the Judges shall decide according to justice, equity and good conscience."

1097. In respect to certain specified waqfs in Husainabad area in Lucknow (Oudh), Husainabad Endowment Act, 1878 (Act 15 of 1878) was enacted.

1098. In 1908, by enacting new Code of Civil Procedure, Sections 92 and 93 were incorporated for the proper administration of trusts. Under these sections two or more persons having any interest in a trust could file a suit with the prior permission of the Advocate General in relation to a matter regarding the appointment and removal of trustees, matters relating to the sale, exchange or mortgage of trust property, etc.

1099. Upto 1913 a waqf was valid if the effect of the deed of wqkf was to keep the property in substance to charitable uses. In Abul Fata Mohammad Vs. Rasamaya, 22 IA 76 it was held by Privy Council that if the primary object of the waqf was the aggrandizement of the family and the gift to charity was illusory whether from its small amount or from its uncertainty and remoteness, the waqf, for the benefit of the family was invalid and no effect could be given to it. This decision caused lot of protest and dissatisfaction amongst the Muslim communities in India since the said decision in particular paralyzed the power of Muslims to make a settlement in favour of family, children and descendants or what is known as waqf-alal-aulad. Consequently, the matter was represented by the Indian Muslims before Lord

Curzon, the then Viceroy and Governor General of India canvassing that for family settlement by way of waqf from the time of Prophet Mohammad down to the present time an unbroken chain of evidence existed to show that the law of waqf-alal-aulad existed in all countries having Muslim population like Arabia, Central Asia, Persia, Afghanistan and India. It was represented that the precepts of the Prophet support the family settlement amongst Muslim by way of waqf. It is said that the following precepts of the Prophet were cited:

"The apostle of God said:

"When a Mussalman bestows on his family and kindered, for the intention of rewards, it becomes alms, although he has not given to the poor, but to his family and children."

The apostle of God said:

"There is one Dinar which you have bestowed in the Road of God, and another in freeing a slave, and another in alms to the poor, and another given to your family and children; that is the greatest Dinar in point of reward which you gave to your family."

The apostle of God said:

"The most excellent Dinar which a man bestows is that which he bestows upon his own family. Omme Salma says, "I said to the Prophet, is there any good thing for me of rewards, for my bestowing on the Sons of Abu Salmas. His sons are no otherwise than mine." The Prophet said: "Then give to them, and for you are rewards of that you bestow upon them"

The apostle of God said:

> "Giving alms to the poor has the reward of one alms, but that given to kindered has two rewards; one the reward of alms, the other the reward of relationship. "The Prophet of God declared that a pious offering to ones family (to provide against their getting into want) is more pious than giving alms to beggars."

1100. Accepting the claims of Muslims in India, Mussalman Waqf Validating Act, 1913 (Act No. 6 of 1913) (hereinafter referred to as the "1913 Act") was enacted to validate the waqf created for the benefit of the members of family i.e. waqf-alal-aulad. This Act came into force on 07.03.1913. The preamble of 1913 Act shows that it was enacted to declare the rights of Muslims to make settlements of property by way of waqf in favour of their family, children and decedents. The term "waqf" was defined in Section 2 (1) as under :

> "2. .....
> (1) "Waqf" means the permanent dedication by a person professing the Mussalman faith of any property for any purpose, recognized by the Mussalman law as religious, pious or charitable."

1101. Section 5 of 1913 Act states that nothing therein shall affect any custom or usage whether local or prevalent among Musalman or any particular class or sect. The definition of 'Waqf' under 1913 Act recognises the concept of waqf as known in Shariyat Law.

1102. As already stated, a waqf therefore is an unconditional and permanent dedication of property with implied detention in the ownership of God in such a manner that the property of the owner may be extinguished and its profit may revert to or be applied for the benefit of mankind except for purposes prohibited by Islam.

1103. It may, however, be clarified at this stage that a waqf is distinct from Sadaqah, Hiba and trust. In Islamic Law- Personal by B.R.Verma first published in 1940 (6th Edition published in 1986) (reprinted in 1991 by M.H.Beg and S.K.Verma) identify the above distinction on page 630-631 of the book as under :

Sadaqah	Wakf
(1)The corpus itself may be consummed. (2)It is only a donation. (3)The legal estate and not merely beneficial interest passes to charity to be held by trustees appointed by the donor. The trustee can dispose of the corpus itself.	(1)The income only can be sent. (2)It is an endowment. (3)The legal estate is transferred to God. It does not vest in the trustee or mutawalli who cannot deal with the corpus.

1104. The distinction between waqf and sadaqah is that in the case of former the income only can be spent while in the case of latter the corpus of the property may be consumed.

Hiba	Wakf
(1)It relates to absolute interest in the subject of the gift, the donee having a right not only to spend the usufruct but also the property itself.	(1)It is only the usufruct which can be spent and the corpus cannot be disposed of except under very limited conditions.
(2)The donee is a human being.	(2)The ownership is transferred to God.
(3)There are no limitations as to the object for which it can be made.	(3)It is made for the benefit of mankind.
(4)A hiba to an unborn person is invalid.	(4)A wakf may be made in favour of a succession of unborn persons.

Trust	Wakf
(1)No particular motive is	(1)It is generally made with a

(2)The founder may himself be a beneficiary.	(2)The wakf cannot reserve any benefit for himself (except to some extent under Hanafi law).
(3)It may be for any lawful object.	(3)The ultimate object must be some benefit of mankind.
(4)the property vests in the trustee.	(4)The property vests in God.
(5)A trustee has got larger power than a mutawalli.	(5)A mutawalli is only a manager or superintendent.
(6)It is not necessary that a trust maybe perpetual, irrevocable or inalienable.	(6)A wakf is perpetual, irrevocable and inalienable.
(7)It results for the benefit of the founder when it is incapable of execution and the property has not been exhausted.	(7)The cypres doctrine is applied and the property may be applied to some other object.

1105. Apparently, Islam is not a necessary condition for constitution of a waqf. It may be made by a Muslim or a non Muslim but the necessary condition for creation of a waqf is the object thereof. Ameer Ali in his book on Mohammedan Law (Fourth Edition) Volume I at page 200 has said "Any person of whatever creed may create wakf, but the law requires that the object for which the dedication is made should be lawful according to the creed of the dedicator as well as the Islamic doctrines. Divine approbation being the essential in the constitution of a wakf if the object for which a dedication is made is sinful, either according to the laws of Islam or to the creed of the dedicator it would not be valid." Thus a non Muslim may also create a waqf for any purpose which is religious under the Mohammedan Law. But the object of the waqf must be lawful according to the religious creed of the maker as well.

1106. Section 3 of 1913 Act empowers any person professing muslim faith to create a waqf in all other respects in accordance with the provisions of Muslim Law for the following among other purposes, i.e., for the maintenance and support, wholly or partially of his family, children and descendants etc. It would be useful to reproduce Section 3 as under :

> "3. It shall be lawful for any person professing the Mussalman faith to create a waqf which in all other respects is in accordance with the provisions of Mussalman law, for the following among other purposes :-
> (1) for the maintenance and support wholly or partially of his family, children or descendants, and
>
> (2) where the person creating a waqf is a Hanafi Mussalman, also for his own maintenance and support during his lifetime or for the payment of his debts out of the rents and profits of the property dedicated :
> Provided that the ultimate benefit is in such cases expressly or implicitly reserved for the poor or for any other purpose recognised by the Mussalman law as a religious, pious or charitable purpose of a permanent character."

1107. 1913 Act, however, having not been given retrospective effect did not remove the hardship in its entirety created by the decision of Privy Council in Abul Fata Mohammad (supra) and in some later cases it was held that 1913 Act could not be construed as validating deeds executed before 07.03.1913.

1108. On 05.08.1923 the Mussalman Waqf Act, 1923 (Act No. XLII of 1923 (hereinafter referred to as "1923 Act") was enacted with the object of better management of waqf property and ensuring maintenance of proper accounts and its publication in respect of such properties. The aforesaid Act was applicable to the whole of British India at the relevant time and in 1948 the said words were substituted by the words "all the Provinces of India". The term "benefit", "mutwalli" and "waqf" were defined in Section 2 (a) (c) and (e) of 1923 Act, as under :

"2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,-

(a)"benefit" does not include any benefit which a mutwalli is entitled to claim solely by reason of his being such mutwalli;

(c)"mutwalli" means any person appointed either verbally or under any deed or instrument by which a wakf has been created or by a Court of competent jurisdiction to be the mutwalli of a wakf, and includes a naib-mutwalli or other person appointed by a mutwalli to perform the duties of the mutwalli, and, save as otherwise provided in this Act, any person who is for the time being administering any wakf property;

(e)"wakf" means the permanent dedication by a person professing the Mussalman faith of any property for any purpose recognised by the Mussalman law as religious, pious or charitable, but does not include any wakf, such as is described in section, 3 of the Mussalman Wakf Validating Act, 1913, under which any benefit is for the time being claimable for himself by the person by whom the

1109. Section 3 of 1923 Act placed an obligation on a Mutwalli to furnish certain particulars in respect to waqf property, income and expenses etc. within a period of six months from the date of commencement of the 1923 Act to the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property of the waqf, for which the said person is mutwalli, is situated. Non compliance of Section 3 was made penal vide Section 10 of the said Act.

1110. Section 10 of 1923 Act provides consequences on failure to comply with the provisions of Sections, 3, 4 and 5 and reads as under:

"10. Penalties.--Any person who is required by or under Sec. 3 or Sec. 4 to furnish statement of particulars or any document relating to a wakf, or who is required by Sec. 5 to furnish a statement of accounts, shall, if he, without reasonable cause the burden of proving which shall lie upon him, fails to furnish such statement or document, as the case may be, in due time, or furnishes a statement which he knows or has reason to believe to be false, misleading or untrue in any material particular, or, in the case of a statement of accounts, furnishes a statement which has not been audited in the manner required by Sec. 6, be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or, in the case of a second or subsequent offence, with fine which may extend to two thousand rupees."

1111. A question arose as to whether the Court while exercising power under Section 10 can proceed to look into the question as to whether any property which is denied to be a waqf property can be investigated and looked into so as to find out whether it is a waqf property within the meaning of Section 2(e) of the Act or not. This question came to be considered before a Hon'ble Single Judge of Patna High Court in (Syed) Ali Mohammad Vs. Collector of Bhagalpur, AIR 1927 Patna 189. The question was that of application of 1923 Act in respect to property where there was a dispute whether it was a waqf property or not. The petitioner before the High Court return a notice issued by the Collector including petitioner's property in the list of waqf properties stating that he was not incharge of any waqf property as defined in Section 2(e) of 1923 Act whereupon the Collector referred the matter to the District Judge who held the property as a waqf property and the question was whether the order of District Judge was within jurisdiction or not. It was held by the Hon'ble Patna High Court that there is no provision in the Act authorizing the Court, as defined in the Act, to determine as to whether any property which if denied to be a waqf property, is waqf property, within the meaning of the Act. The Act neither authorizes the Court to summon witnesses or to take evidence nor any procedure is prescribed for determining the question as to whether any property is a waqf property and no provision of appeal or revision is made if any such decision is made. It held that the Act applies to admitted waqfs and not to the properties which are denied to be the waqf properties.

1112. However, this view did not find favour with a Full Bench decision of Oudh Chief Court in Mohammad Baqar and another Vs. S. Mohammad Casim and others, AIR 1932 Oudh 210 where it was held that mere denial of a property as constituting a waqf property by a person would not deprive

jurisdiction to the Court to consider whether the property is a waqf property under 1923 Act or not, otherwise, it would defeat the very objective of the Act. In the majority decision, the Court said that it is a recalcitrant Mutawalli to whom the Act intends to reach and if the jurisdiction of the Court is ousted as soon as a Mutawalli who has failed to observe the provisions of the Act denies the alleged waqf that would defeat the very objective of the legislature. It was held that the application of 1923 Act does not depend upon the attitude which a Mutawalli may take with regard to origin of an alleged waqf. The Court said:

> "From the definition of the word "wakf" in Cl. (e), S. 2 of the Act it is clear that a wakf of the nature described in S. 3, Mussalman Wakf Validating Act, 1913, is excluded from the operation of the Act of 1923. With a view to determine whether an alleged waqf is inside or outside the scope of the Act the Court must make some inquiry. The inquiry may be limited merely to an interpretation of the instrument creating the wakf if there is any or to the scrutinizing of the terms of an oral wakf." (page211)

1113. The Court further held:

> "It is true that the Act does not lay down any obligation on the Court as to the limits to which it should carry any inquiry which it may wish to make and no party is entitled to compel the Court to carry inquiry up to any particular stage. Indeed the Court may refuse to enter into any inquiry on the ground that the allegations of the parties disclose a controversy fit to be determined in a regular suit, and this, in my judgment, explains the absence of any special rule of procedure. The Court is invested with a discretion but it cannot, in my opinion, refuse to look into

1114. It is not the case of any of the parties that any such statement was furnished in respect to the property in dispute in the Court as defined under Section 2 (b) of the said Act and the provisions of the said Act were complied with at all. It is not the case of the parties, i.e., the plaintiff, Suit-4, or in general, Muslim parties, that the aforesaid Act was applicable to the property in dispute or that the compliance of the said Act was made by the concerned Mutawalli. In the absence of any pleadings in respect to 1923 Act, we have no hesitation in not considering the matter in the light of 1923 Act inasmuch as if that be so first of all it would be necessary to consider whether the property in question was a waqf made in 1528 and continued to be so thereafter and secondly whether any person as Mutawalli was in possession of the property in question in 1923 and thereafter. We have not been shown any material to show the existence of the above facts and even if so then why and in what circumstances the provisions under 1923 Act were not complied with is also not explained. We also find that it is case of none that Section 12 or 13 of 1923 Act at the relevant time were attracted to the property in dispute and/or that the said property was exempted by the competent government from the operation of 1923 Act.

1115. The next legislation is Mussalman Waqf Validating Act (XXIII) of 1930 which made 1913 Act applicable to waqfs created before the commencement of 1913 Act with the rider that the transactions already completed in respect to right, title, obligations, liability etc. shall not be affected in any manner.

1116. Then came the 1936 Act (Act No. 13 of 1936) published in U.P. Gazette dated 20.03.1937. The above enactment was made for the better governance, administration and supervision of certain classes of Muslim waqf in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh. Section 1 of 1936 Act provides for the commencement, and extent; and reads as under:

> "(1) Short title, commencement and extent.--(1) This Act shall be called "the United Provinces Muslim Waqfs Act, 1936."
> (2) This section and sections 2 to 4 shall come into force at once. The rest of the Act shall not come into force until such date as the local Government may, by notification in the Gazette, appoint in this behalf.
> (3)It shall extend to the whole of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh."

www.vadaprativada.com

1117. We may mention at this stage that Section 1(2) enforces only Sections 2 to 4 at once and the rest of the Act was to come into force on such date as the local Government by notification in the gazette may appoint in this behalf. Sections 5 to 71 of the said Act came into force on 01.07.1941vide notification dated 20.06.1941 published in Government Gazette of the United Provinces Vol. LXIII, No. XXVI, Part-1, page 311 dated 20.06.1941 which reads as under:

> "In exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (2) of section 1 of the United Provinces Muslim Waqfs Act, 1936 (U.P. XIII of 1936), the Governor of the United Provinces is pleased to declare that sections 5 to 71 of the said Act shall come into force on the 1st day of July, 1941."

1118. The reason for delay in notification giving effect to Sections 5 to 71 of 1936 Act came to be noticed in Badrul

www.vadaprativada.com

Islam Vs. The Sunni Central Board of Waqf, U.P. Lucknow, AIR 1954 Allahabad 459 in para 8 of the judgement as under:

> "It is true that the provisions of Ss. 5 to 71 of the Act did not come in force till some time in 1941. This fact has no bearing because it appears that the late enforcement of these provisions was due to the fact that what was provided by these provisions could not have been given effect to till the Central Board had found on investigation through proper agency the waqfs which were subject to the Act. It was no use enforcing these provisions which could not have been given effect to. It was for this reason that these sections were later enforced."

1119. It is said that the Commissioner of Waqf made survey under Section 4 and submitted his report. The Boards proceeded further by issuing notifications in respect to Sunni Waqfs on 26.02.1944 and in respect of Shia Waqfs on 15.01.1954 published in the gazette dated 23.01.1954, we are proceeding further presuming as if the rest of the provisions of the Act were made operative and will try to find out the answer to the above issues accordingly.

1120. Section 2 of 1936 Act provides for applicability of the Act to certain category of waqfs and inapplicability to some other category of waqfs and reads as under:

> "2. Applicability of the Act.-(1) Save as herein otherwise specifically stated, this Act shall apply to all waqfs, whether created before or after this Act comes into force, any part of the property of which is situated in the United Provinces.

terms of which not less than 75 per cent, of the total income after deduction of land revenue and cesses payable to Government of the property covered by the deed of waqf, if any, is for the time being payable for the benefit of the waqif or his descendants or any member of his family.

(ii) a waqf created solely for either of the following purposes :

(a) the maintenance and support of any person other than the waqif or his descendants or any member of his family,

(b) the celebration of religious ceremonies connected with the death anniversaries of the waqif or of any member of his family or any of his ancestors,

(c) the maintenance of private immabaras, tombs and grave yards, or

(d) the maintenance and support of the waqif or for payment of his debts, when the waqif is a Hanafi Musalman; and

(iii) the waqfs mentioned in the schedule : Provided that if the Mutawalli of a waqf to which this Act does not apply wrongfully sells or mortgages, or suffers to be sold in execution of a decree against himself, or otherwise destroys the whole or any part of the waqf property, the Central Board may apply all or any of the provisions of this Act to such waqf for such time as it may think necessary.

Explanation. A waqf which is originally exempt from the operation of this act may, for any reason

subsequently, become subject to such operation, for example, by reason of a higher percentage of its income becoming available under the terms of the deed for public charities."

1121. The Schedule referred to in Section 2(2)(iii) of 1936 Act is as under :

1. Waqfs governed by Act XV of 1878.

2. Wazir Begam Trust, Lucknow.

3. Agha Abbu Sahib Trust, Lucknow.

4. Shah Najaf Trust, King's side, Lucknow, and Queen's side, Lucknow.

5. Kazmain Trust, Lucknow.

1122. Section 3 contains certain definitions as under:

"3. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context--

(1) Interpretation clauses.--"Waqf" means the permanent dedication or grant of any property for any purpose recognized by the Musalman law or usage as religious, pious or charitable and, where no deed of waqf is traceable, includes waqf by user, and a waqif means any person who makes such dedication or grant."

(2) "Beneficiary" means the person or object for whose benefit a waqf is created and includes religious, pious or charitable objects, and any other object of public utility established for the benefit of the Muslim community or any particular sect of the Muslim community."

(3) "Mutawalli" means a manager of a waqf or endowment and includes an amin, a sajjadanashin, a khadim, naib mutawalli and a committee of management, and, save as otherwise provided in this Act, any person who is for the time being in charge of or administering, any endowment as such.

(4) "Family" includes--

(a) Parents and grand-parents.

(b) Wife or husband.

(c) Persons related through any ancestor, male or female.

(d) Persons who reside with, and are maintained by, the waqif, whether related to him or not.

(5) Property includes Government securities and bonds, shares in firms and companies, stocks, debentures and other securities and instruments.

(6) "Prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act.

(7) "Court" means, unless otherwise stated either expressly or by implication, the court of the District Judge or any other court empowered by the local Government to exercise jurisdiction under this Act.

(8) "Net income" means the total income minus the land revenue and other cesses payable to Government and to local bodies:

Provided that in the case of land paying land revenue the recorded income shall be deemed to be the total income."

1123. Chapter I which has Sections 4 to 24 deals with Survey of Waqfs and Central Board of Waqfs. Section 4 deals with the Survey of Waqfs; Section 5 deals with the Commissioner's report and its publication in the Gazette; and, read as under:

www.vadaprativada.com

"4. (1) Survey of waqfs.--Within three-months of the commencement of this Act the local Government shall by notification in the Gazette appoint for each district a gazetted officer, either by name or by official designation for the purpose of making a survey of all waqfs in such district, whether subject of this Act or not. Such officer shall be called the Commissioner of waqfs."

(2) The Local Government may, from time to time when necessary cancel any appointment under sub-section (1) or make a new appointment.

(3) The "Commissioner of waqfs" shall, after making such inquiries as he may consider necessary, ascertain and determine--

(a) the number of all Shia and Sunni waqfs in the district;

(b) the nature of each waqf;

(c) the gross income of property comprised in the waqf;

(d) the amount of Government revenue, cesses and taxes payable in respect of waqf property;

(e) expenses incurred in the realization of the income and the pay of the mutawalli of each waqf if the waqf is not exempted under section 2; and

(f) whether the waqf is one of those exempted from the provisions of this Act under section 2:

Provided that where there is a dispute whether a particular waqf is Shia waqf or Sunni waqf and there are clear indications as to the sect of which it pertains in the recitals of the deed of waqf, such dispute shall be decided on the basis of such recitals.

(4) In making such inquiries as aforesaid the Commissioner of waqfs shall exercise all the powers of a civil court for summoning and examining witnesses and documents, making local inspections, appointing commissioners for examination of witnesses, examining of accounts and making local investigations.

(5) The Commissioner of waqfs shall submit his report of inquiry to the local Government.

(6) The total cost of carrying out the provisions of this section shall be borne by the mutawallis of all waqfs to which the Mussalmans Waqfs Act, 1923, applies in proportion to the income of the property of such waqfs situated in the United Provinces.

(7) Notwithstanding anything in the deed or instrument creating any waqf, any mutawalli may pay from the income of the waqf property any sum due from him under sub-section (6).

(8) Any sum due from a mutawalli under sub-section (6) may, on a certificate issued by the local Government, be recovered by the Collector in the manner provided by law for recovery of an arrear of land revenue.

5. Commissioner's report.--*

(1) The local Government shall forward a copy of the Commissioner's report to each of the Central Boards constituted under this Act. Each Central Board shall as soon as possible notify in the Gazette the waqfs relating to the particular sect to which, according to such report, the provisions of this Act apply.

(2) The mutawalli of a waqf or any person interested in a waqf or a Central Board may bring a suit in a civil

court of competent jurisdiction for a declaration that any transaction held by the Commissioner of waqfs to be a waqf is not a waqf, or any transaction held or assumed by him not to be a waqf is a waqf, or that a waqf held by him to pertain to a particular sect does not belong to that sect, or that any waqf reported by such Commissioner as being subject to the provisions of this Act is exempted under section 2, or that any waqf held by him to be so exempted is subject to this Act:

Provided that no such suit shall be instituted by a Central Board after more than two years of the receipt of the report of Commissioner of waqfs, and by a mutawalli or person interested in a waqf after more than one year of the notification referred to in sub-clause (1):

Provided also that no proceedings under this Act in respect of any waqf shall be stayed or suspended merely by reason of the pendency of any such suit or of any appeal arising out of any such suit.

(3) Subject to the final result of any suit instituted under sub-section (2) the report of the Commissioner of waqfs shall be final and conclusive.

(4) The Commissioner of waqfs shall not be made a defendant to any suit under sub-section (2) and no suit shall be instituted against him for anything done by him in good faith under colour of this Act."

1124. Sections 6, 7 and 8 of 1936 Act show that there shall be two Waqf Board namely, Shia Central Board and Sunni Central Board of Waqf. The constitution etc. thereof is provided from Section 6 to 17. Section 18 deals with the functions of the Central Board and reads as under:

"18. Function of the Central Board.- (1) The general superintendence of all waqfs to which this Act applies shall vest in the Central Board. The Central Board shall do all things reasonable and necessary to ensure that waqfs or endowments under its superintendence are properly maintained, controlled and administered and duly appropriated to the purposes for which they were founded or for which they exist.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1) the powers and duties of the Central Board shall be-

(a) to complete and maintain and authentic record of rights containing information relating to the origin, income, object, and beneficiaries of every waqf in each district;

(b) to prepare and settle its own budget;

(c) to settle and pass budgets submitted by the mutawallis direct to the Board and any budget submitted to, but not approved by, a District Waqf Committee, provided that it is in accordance with the wishes of the waqif and the terms of the deed of waqf;

(d) to settle and pass the annual budgets of the District Waqf Committees;

(e) to institute and and defend suits and proceedings in a court of law relating to-

(i) administration of waqfs,

(ii) taking of accounts,

(iii) appointment and removal of mutawallis in accordance with the deed

www.vadaprativada.com

of waqf if it is traceable,

(iv) putting the mutawallis in possession or removing them from possession,

(v) settlement or modification of any scheme of management;

(f) to sanction the institution of suits under section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, relating to waqfs to which this Act applies;

(g) to take measure for the recovery of lost properties;

(h) to settle scheme of management and application of waqf funds in accordance with the doctrine of cypres in case of those waqfs, the objects of which are not evident from any written instrument or in cases in which the objects for which they were created have ceased to exist;

(i) to enter upon and inspect waqf properties;

(j) to investigate into the nature and extent of waqfs and waqf properties and call from time to time for accounts and other returns and information from the mutawallis and give directions for the proper administration of waqfs;

(k) to arrange for the auditing of accounts submitted by the mutawallis;

(l) to direct the deposit of surplus money in the hands of the mutawalli in any approved bank and to utilize it on the objects of waqf;

www.vadaprativada.com

(m) to supervise and control the District Waqf Committees;

(n) to administer the waqf fund;

(o) to keep regular accounts of receipts and disbursement and submit the same in the matter prescribed;

(p) to institute when necessary an inquiry relating to the administration of a waqf:

Provided that in the appointment of mutawallis or in making any other arrangement for the management of waqf property the Central Board shall be guided as far as possible by the directions of the waqif, if any."

1125. A careful reading of 1936 Act as also all the earlier enactments make it very clear that neither they create a waqf nor diminish or terminate a waqf nor affect a waqf in any other manner. On the contrary, the provisions have been made only to provide a statutory body for the better governance, administration and supervision of the waqfs to which the said Act apply. Further vide Section 2(1) of 1936 Act though it applies to all waqfs, whether created before the commencement of the Act or thereafter, if any part of the property of which waqf is situate in the United provinces but by virtue of Sub-section (2) of Section 2 certain classes of waqfs have been excluded. The exclusion under Sub-section (2) of Section 2 of 1936 Act is specific and has been categorized with precision. It would mean that only to the extent the waqfs are excluded by virtue of sub-section (2) of Section 2 all other waqfs, if a waqf validly created, would be governed by 1936 Act.

1126. The term 'Waqf' under 1936 Act has also been

defined as a permanent dedication or grant of any property for any purposes recognized by the Musalman law or usage as religious, pious or charitable including waqf by user where no deed of waqf is traceable.

1127. However a cumulative reading of the entire 1936 Act shows that it does not govern the right of worship of Hindus or Muslims. as the case may be. The object of enactment is to provide better governance and administration in supervision of certain classes of Muslim Waqfs. The Waqfs to which the aforesaid Act applies are to be supervised and maintained by the Central Boards, namely, Shia Central or Sunni Central Board, as the case may be, constituted under Section 6 of the said Act.

1128. At this stage it may be pointed out that there was some ambiguity between Section 8(1)(i) and Section 12. Noticing the same, vide U.P. Muslim Waqfs (Amendment) Act 9 of 1953 which received the assent of the President on 26.02.1953, Section 12 was deleted and Section 8-A was inserted which was held valid by this Court in All India Shia Conference Vs. Taqi Hadi and others, AIR 1954 All. 124.

1129. In 1954, the Parliament enacted Waqf Act, 1954 (Act XXIX of 1954) (hereinafter referred to as '1954 Act'). The aforesaid Act though extended to whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir but proviso to Section 1(3) thereof provides for the State of U.P., Bihar and West Bengal as under :

> "Provided that in respect of any of the States of Bihar, Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal, no such notification shall be issued except on the recommendation of the State Government concerned."

1130. Consequently, 1954 Act did not apply to the State of U.P. since the State of U.P. had its own Act of 1936.

1131. Though not necessary for the category of the issues, with which we are concerned at this stage, but just to complete the legislative history, we find that the State legislature enacted U.P. Muslim Waqfs Act 1960 (U.P. Act No.XVI of 1960) (hereinafter referred to '1960 Act'). This U.P. Act, 1960 received assent of the President of India on 27th August, 1960 and was published in U.P. Gazette Extraordinary on 3rd September, 1960. Vide Section 1(3) of 1960 Act, it came into force at once. Section 2 of 1960 Act provides for the application of the Act and sub-section (1) thereof reads as under :

> "2. Application of the Act.-(1) Save as herein otherwise specifically stated, this Act shall apply to all waqfs, whether created before or after the commencement of this Act, any part of the property comprised in which it situate in Uttar Pradesh, and to all the waqfs which at the time of the coming into force of this act were the superintendence of the Sunni Central Board or the Shia Central Board constituted under the U.P. Muslim Waqfs Act, 1936 (U.P. Act XIII of 1936).

1132. Vide Section 85 (2) of 1960 Act, 1936 Act as well as Husainabad Endowment Act, 1878 were repealed. Some more enactments were repealed by insertion of Section 11 of U.P. Act No.28 of 1971 whereby the following was inserted in Section 85(2) of 1960 Act :

> "The following enactments are also hereby repealed in their application to any waqf to which this Act applies :
> (1) the Bengal Charitable Endoments, Public Buildings and Escheats Regulation, 1810 (Act XIX of 1810) ;
> (2) the Religious Endoments Act, 1863 (Act XX of 1863) ;

(4) the Charitable and Religious Trusts Act, 190 (Act XIV of 1920):"

1133. There was saving provisions in Section 85 by way of proviso which read as under :

"Provided that this repeal shall not affect the operation of those Acts in regard to any suit or proceeding pending in any Court or to an appeal or an application in revision against any order that may be passed in such suit or proceeding and subject thereto, anything done or any action taken in exercise of powers conferred by or under those Acts shall unless otherwise expressly required by any provision of this Act, be deemed to have been done or taken in exercise of the powers conferred by or under this Act as if this Act were in force on the day on which such thing was done or action was taken."

1134. Besides, Section 28 of 1960 Act provides saving of waqfs already registered and provides as under :

"Savings U.P. Act XIII of 1986.- A waqf registered before the commencement of this Act under the U.P. Muslim Waqf Act 1936, shall be deemed to have been registered under the provisions of this Act."

1135. 1960 Act now stands repealed by the Waqf Act, 1995 (Central Act) which has come into effect w.e.f. 1st January, 1996.

1136. Now reverting to 1936 Act, the general power of superintendence vested in the Central Board is to ensure that the waqfs or endowments under its superintendence are maintained, controlled, administered and duly appropriated to the purposes for which they were founded or for which they exist. The very

functions of the Central Board, as such, do not relate directly to the right of worship of either the Hindus or Muslims in any manner. To some extent, however, it may be said that if a religious Waqfs is not properly maintained and administered, and, it causes hindrance or obstruction in observance of such religious activities for which the Waqf was created, the right of people in general who are entitled to use Waqf property for the purposes it is created, to that extent may be obstructed, but directly it cannot be said that 1936 Act in any manner deals with the right of worship of any of the member of the community for whose benefit the Waqf is created. It is moreso when the question of a member(s) of a community other than Muslim arises since neither his right of worship in any manner is sought to be affected by 1936 Act nor otherwise it does appear to do so.

1137. In respect to 1936 Act this question came to be considered by the Apex Court in Siraj-ul-Haq Khan and others Vs. The Sunni Central Board of Waqf U.P. and others, AIR 1959 SC 198 in an appeal taken against the judgment of this Court in Sunni Central Board of Waqf Vs. Siraj-ul-Haq Khan and others, AIR 1954 All. 88. The matter pertains to Darga Hazarat Syed Salar Mahsood Ghazi situated in the Village Singha Parasi, District Bahraich. The appellants were members of the Waqf Committee, Darga Sharif, Bahraich and filed a suit seeking a declaration that the properties of suit were not covered by the provisions of 1936 Act. The Court considered the words "the Mutawalli of a waqf or any person interested in a waqf" under Section 5(2) of 1936 Act, and, construing the same, it held that it would mean "any person interested" in what is held to be a waqf and in order to find out so it is open to the Commissioner of the Waqf to find out whether a property is a

waqf or not and if he includes such a property in the list of waqf, the person challenging such decision would be included by the words "any person interested in a waqf" under Section 5(2). It would be appropriate to reproduce the relevant observations in para 16 of the judgment:

> "The word 'waqf' as used in this sub-section must be given the meaning attached to it by the definition in S. 3 (1) of the Act and since the appellants totally deny the existence of such a waqf they cannot be said to be interested in the 'waqf'. The argument thus presented appears prima facie to be attractive and plausible; but on a close examination of S. 5(2) it would appear clear that the words "any person interested in a waqf" cannot be construed in their strict literal meaning. If the said words are given their strict literal meaning, suits for a declaration that any transaction held by the Commissioner to be a waqf is not a waqf can never be filed by a mutawalli of a waqf or a person interested in a waqf. The scheme of this sub-section is clear. When the Central Board assumes jurisdiction over any waqf under the Act it proceeds to do so on the decision of three points by the Commissioner of Waqfs. It assumes that the property is a waqf, that it is either a Sunni or a Shia waqf, and that it is not a waqf which falls within the exceptions mentioned in S. 2. It is in respect of each one of these decisions that a suit is contemplated by S. 5, sub-s. (2). If the decision is that the property is not a waqf or that it is a waqf falling within the exceptions mentioned by S. 2, the Central Board may have occasion to bring a suit. Similarly if the decision is that the waqf is Shia and not Sunni, a Sunni Central Board may have occasion to bring a suit and vice versa. Likewise the decision that the property is a waqf may be challenged by a person who disputes the correctness of the said decision. The decision that a property does not fall within the exceptions mentioned by S. 2 may also be challenged by a person who claims that the waqf attracts the provisions of S. 2. If that be the nature of the scheme of suits contemplated by S. 5(2) it would be difficult to imagine how the mutawalli of a waqf or any person interested in a waqf can ever sue for a declaration that the transaction held by the Commissioner of the waqfs to be a waqf is not a waqf. That is why we think that the literal construction of the expression "any person interested in a waqf" would render a part of the sub-section wholly meaningless and ineffective. The legislature has definitely contemplated that the decision of the Commissioner of the Waqfs that a particular transaction is a waqf can be challenged by persons who do not accept the correctness of the said decision, and it is, this class of persons who are obviously intended to be covered by the words "any person interested in a waqf ". It is well-settled that in construing the provisions of a statute courts should be slow to adopt a construction which tends to make any part of the statute meaningless or ineffective; an attempt must always be made so to reconcile the relevant provisions as to advance the remedy intended by the statute. In our opinion, on a reading of the provisions of the relevant sub-section as a whole there can be no doubt that the expression "any person interested in a waqf" must mean "any person interested in what is held to be a waqf ". It is only persons who are interested in a transaction which is held to be a waqf who would sue for a declaration that the decision of the Commissioner of the Waqfs in that behalf is wrong, and that the transaction in fact is not a waqf under the Act. We must accordingly hold that the relevant clause on which Mr. Dar has placed his argument in repelling the application of S. 5(2) to the present suit must not be strictly or literally construed, and that it should be taken to mean any person interested in a transaction which is held to be a waqf. On this construction the appellants are obviously interested in the suit properties which are notified to be waqf by the notification issued by respondent 1, and so the suit instituted by them would be governed by S. 5, sub-s. (2) and as such it would be barred by time unless it is saved under S. 15 of the Limitation Act."

1138. The above decision, however related to a matter where all the parties before the Court were Muslim and there was no question about the rights of non Muslim being affected by a decision of the Commissioner of Waqf or Central Board constituted under Section 6 of 1936 Act. In other words the decision noted above covered the persons following the same religious namely, Mohammadan Law but where such a dispute is raised by another party namely a person of different religion like, Hindu, Christian etc. whether 1936 Act at all will apply in that case or not, is not touched by the above judgment.

1139. In our view, since 1936 Act does not provide or control the right of worship of Hindu or Muslims, the rival dispute between the persons who are not Muslims, in the matter of an immovable property, whether it is waqf or not would not be governed by the provisions of 1936 Act but it would be open to non-muslim party to stake his claim without being affected in any manner by the provisions of 1936 Act.

1140. Our view find support from a Division Bench decision of Rajasthan High Court in Radhakishan and another Vs. State of Rajasthan and others, AIR 1967 Rajasthan 1. This case had arisen from the Waqfs Act, 1954 (in short "1954 Act") and interpretation of the words "any person interested therein" appearing in Section 6(1) came to be considered. The Court held that it would not empower the Board of Waqfs to decide the question whether a particular property is a waqf property or not if such a dispute is raised by a person who is stranger to waqf. The Division Bench therein referred to our Full Bench decision in Mohammad Baqar (supra) and observed that in reference to 1923 Act Patna, Lahore, Bombay and Madras High Court took a view that the District Judge has no jurisdiction to hold an inquiry into the nature of property where the alleged Mutawalli deny existence of waqf though the Allahabad Chief Court of Oudh took a different view.

1141. We may notice hereat that in the Full Bench judgment of Chief Court of Oudh in Mohammad Baqar (supra) there was no question with respect to jurisdiction of the District Judge where the existence of alleged waqf is denied by a stranger and not the Mutawalli, therefore, we do not find that the decision in Radhakishan (supra) in any way can be construed as a dissenting view to the decision of Oudh Chief Court in Mohammad Baqar (supra). This is evident from what has been held by the Rajasthan High Court in paras 24 and 25 reproduced as under:

> "24. The present Act No. 29 of 1954 is, no doubt, an improvement on the Mussalman Wakf Act, 1923, but, in our

view, this also does not empower the Board of Wakfs to decide the question whether a particular property is a wakf property or not, if such a dispute is raised by a person who is a stranger to wakf. This view is further confirmed by the provisions of section 59 of the Act which lays down that in any suit or proceeding in respect of a wakf or any wakf property by or against a stranger to the wakf or any other person, the Board may appear and plead as a party to the suit or proceeding.

25. To sum up the position, the Wakf Commissioner, though he is invested with the powers of a civil court in respect of certain matters, is not a civil court empowered to decide a disputed question whether a particular property is a wakf property or not. He has only to make a survey of wakf property existing in the State at the date of commencement of the Act and to make a report of survey to the State Government. When the State Government forwards the report to the Board of Wakfs, it becomes the duty of the Board to examine it. Thereafter the Board should publish, in the official gazette, a list of wakfs existing in the State. The law does not require the Commissioner to make a survey of wakf properties which have already become extinct as such. If he mentions in his report that certain properties were once wakf properties and can still be recovered as such, then the proper course, in our opinion for the Board is to file a suit, get them declared as wakf properties and to recover their possession. If a dispute about existence of a wakf is raised by a person who is stranger to the wakf, then it is neither fair nor proper for the Board to include such properties in the list published in the official gazette. Section 6, in our opinion, refers only to those triangular disputes which exists between the Board of Wakf, the mutawalli and a person interested in the wakf. If there is a dispute between these three on a question whether a particular property is a wakf property or whether a wakf is a Shia wakf or a Sunni wakf, it is open to any one of them to institute a suit in a civil court of competent jurisdiction. If a suit is instituted, the decision of the Civil Court will be final. If no such suit is filed by any one of them within a year from the date of publication of the list of wakfs the Court would not entertain the suit thereafter and the list of the wakf shall be final and conclusive between them. The object of Section 6 is to narrow down the dispute between the Board of Wakf, the Mutawalli and the person interested in the wakf as defined in section 3. In our view, it does not concern a dispute if it is raised by a person who is an utter stranger to the wakf. The list cannot be final and conclusive as against a non muslim who is not covered by Section 6(1) of the Act. Again, if a dispute whether a particular property is a wakf property or not, is raised by a non-muslim and a stranger to the wakf, the Board of Wakfs has no jurisdiction to decide the matter in its own favour under Section 27 and enter it in the register. The Board's decision under section 27 would not be binding against such persons. For the same reason, the Board would not be able to recover possession of the property from such persons under Section 36B of the Act."

1142. The judgment of Rajasthan High Court was taken in appeal before the Apex Court in The Board of Muslim Wakfs,

Rajasthan Vs. Radha Kishan and others, AIR 1979 SC 289. Two questions raised in appeal. Firstly, the meaning of the words "any person interested therein" in Section 6(1) and (4) of Waqf Act, 1954 and secondly, the power of Waqf Commissioner to make survey of waqf properties whether it includes an inquiry about certain property as a waqf property or not. The Apex Court referring to the various judgments considered by the Rajasthan High Court held that they would be of no assistance in interpreting the provisions of Waqf Act, 1954. However, it was held in para 23 of the judgment that the High Court was right in determining the scope of Section 6(1) of 1954 Act but fell in error in curtailing the ambit and scope of an inquiry by the Commissioner of Waqf under Section 4(3) and by the Board of Waqfs under Section 27 of the Act.

1143. For our purpose, the meaning assigned by the Apex Court in Section 6(1) to the words "any person interested therein" would be relevant to answer the issues noticed above and in this regard it would be appropriate to notice hereunder paras 31, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36 of the judgment as under:

> "31. That leaves us with the question as to the scope of sub-s. (1) of S. 6. All that we have to consider in this appeal is, whether if the Commissioner of Wakfs had jurisdiction to adjudicate and decide against the respondents Nos. l and 2 that the property in dispute was wakf property, the list of wakfs published by the Board of Wakfs under sub-s. (2) of S. 5 would be final and conclusive against them under S. 6(4) in case they had not filed a suit within a year from the publication of the lists. The question as to whether the respondents Nos.1 and 2 can be dispossessed, or their possession can be threatened by the Board of Wakfs by proceeding under S. 36B without filing a suit in a civil court of competent jurisdiction does not arise for our consideration."

"32. In the present case, the respondents Nos. 1 and 2 who are non Muslims, contended that they are outside the scope of sub-s. (1) of S. 6, and consequently, they have no right to file the suit contemplated by that sub-section and, therefore, the list of wakfs published by the Board of Wakfs under sub-s. (2) of S.5 cannot be final and conclusive against them under sub-s. (4) of S. 6, It was urged that respondents Nos. 1 and 2 were wholly outside the purview of sub-s. (1) of S. 6 and they must, therefore, necessarily fall outside the scope of the enquiry envisaged by sub-s. (1) of S. 4, as the provisions contained in Sections 4, 5 and 6 form part of an integrated scheme. The question that arises for consideration, therefore, is as to who are the parties that could be taken to be concerned in a proceeding under sub-s. (1) of S. 6 of the Act, and whether the list published under sub-s. (2) of S. 5 declaring certain property to be wakf property, would bind a person who is neither a mutawalli nor a person interested in the wakf."

"33. The answer to these questions must turn on the true meaning and construction of the word 'therein' in the, expression 'any person interested therein' appearing in sub-s. (1) of S. 6. In order to understand the meaning of the word 'therein' in our view, it is necessary to refer to the preceding words 'the Board or the mutawalli of the wakf'. The word 'therein' must necessarily refer to the 'wakf' which immediately precedes it. It cannot refer to the 'wakf property'. Sub-section (1) of S. 6 enumerates the persons who can file suits and also the questions in respect of which such suits can be filed. In enumerating the persons who are empowered to file suits under this provision, only the Board, the mutawalli of the wakf, and 'any person interested therein', thereby necessarily meaning any person interested in the wakf, are listed. It should be borne in mind that the Act deals with wakfs, its institutions and its properties. It would, therefore., be logical and reasonable to infer that its provisions empower only those who are interested in the wakfs to institute suits."

"34. In dealing with the question, the High Court observes:

> "In our opinion, the words "any person interested therein" appearing in sub-section (1) of S. 6 mean no more than a person interested in a wakf as defined in clause (h) of S. 3 of the Act.....
> It is urged by learned counsel for the petitioners that the legislature has not used in Section 6(1) the words "any person interested in a wakf" and, therefore, this meaning should not be given to the words "any person interested therein". This argument is not tenable because the words "any person interested therein" appear soon after "the mutawalli of the wakf" A and therefore the word 'therein' has been used to avoid re petition of the words "in the wakf" and not to extend the scope of the section to persons who fall outside the scope of the words "person interested in the wakf". The purpose of section 6 is to confine the dispute between the wakf Board, the mutawalli and a person

www.vadaprativada.com

interested in the wakf."

That, in our opinion, is the right construction.

35. We are fortified in that view by the decision of this Court in Sirajul Haq Khan v. The Sunni Central Board of Wakf, U.P. 1959 SCR 1287:(AIR 1959 SC 198). While construing S. 5(2) of the United Provinces Muslins Wakf Act, 1936, this Court interpreted the expression "any person interested in a wakf" as meaning 'any person interested in what is held to be a wakf', that is, in the dedication of a property for a pious, religious or charitable purpose. It will be noticed that sub-s. (1) of S.6 of the Act is based in sub-s. (2) of S. 5 of the United Provinces Muslims Wakf Act, 1936, which runs thus:

"The mutawalli of a wakf or any person interested in a wakf or a Central Board may bring a suit in a civil court of competent jurisdiction for a declaration that any transaction held by the Commissioner of Wakfs to be a wakf is not a wakf, or any transaction held or assumed by him not to be a wakf, or that a wakf held by him to pertain to a particular sect does not be- long to that sect, or that any wakf reported by such Commissioner as being subject to the provisions of this Act is exempted under section 2, or that any wakf held by him to be so exempted is subject to this Act."

The proviso to that section prescribed the period of one year's limitation, as here, to a suit by a mutawalli or a person interested in the wakf.

36. The two provisions are practically similar in content except that the language of the main enacting part has been altered in sub-s. (1) of S. 6 of the present Act and put in a proper form. In redrafting the section, the sequence, of the different clauses has been changed, therefore, for the expression "any person interested in a wakf" the legislature had to use the expression "any person interested therein". The word 'therein' appearing in sub-s. (1) of S. 6 must, therefore, mean 'any person interested in a waker' as defined in S. 3(h). The object of sub-s. (1) of S. 6 is to narrow down the dispute between the Board of Wakfs, the mutawalli and the person interested in the wakf, as defined in S. 3 (h).”

1144. The Apex Court having said so as noticed above quoted the findings of the Rajasthan High Court with reference to Section 6 in para 37 of the judgment and in para 38 it says that it is in agreement with the reasoning of the High Court. The answer has further been crystallized by the Apex Court in paras 39 and 43 of the judgment as under:

“39. It follows that where a stranger who is a non-Muslim and is in possession of a certain property his right, title and interest therein cannot be put in jeopardy merely because the property is included in the List. Such a person is not required to file a suit for a declaration of his title within a period of one year. The special rule of limitation laid down in proviso to sub s. (1) of S. 6 is not applicable to him. In other words, the list published by the Board of Wakfs under sub-s. (2) of S. 5 scan be challenged by him by filing a suit for declaration of title even after the expiry of the period of one year, if the necessity of filing such suit arises.”

“43. In view of the foregoing, the right of the respondents Nos. 1 and 2 in respect of the disputed property, if at all

they have any, will remain unaffected by the impugned notification. They are at liberty to bring a suit for the establishment of their right and title, if any, to the property."

1145. As noticed above the Apex Court also referred to Section 5(2) of 1936 Act and observed that it is pare materia to Section 6(1) and (4) of Waqf Act, 1954.

1146. The above decision of the Apex Court in Radhakishan (supra) was followed in Board of Mulim Wakfs Vs. Smt. Hadi Begum and others, AIR 1992 SC 1083 where in para 10 of the judgment the Court briefly reproduced what was held in Radhakishan (supra) regarding the right, title and interest of a non-muslim with reference to the Waqf Act, 1954 which also contain the provisions, pari materia with 1936 Act, and held:

"The right, title and interest of a person who is non-muslim and is in possession of certain property is not put in jeopardy simply because that property is included in the list published under sub-sec. (2) of S. 5 and he is not required to file a suit in a Civil Court for declaration of his title within the period of one year and the list would not be final and conclusive against him. Sub-sec. (4) of S. 6 makes the list final and conclusive only between the Board, the mutawalli and the person interested in the wakf." (para 10)

1147. To the same effect is a decision of an Hon'ble Single Judge in Marawthwada Wakf Board Vs. Rajaram Ramjivan Manthri and others, AIR 2002 Bom. 144. With reference to Waqf Act 1954, in para 19 of the judgement, it observed:

"Therefore, from the above, it is extremely clear that the respondent No. 1, who is a non-Muslim, being a Hindu,

could not file a suit u/S. 6 of the Wakf Act, 1954, but he cannot be barred from filing a suit especially in view of the fact that his right, title and interest have been jeopardised in view of the notification issued by the Government of Maharashtra aforesaid."

1148. Another Hon'ble Single Judge of this Court in U.P. Sunni Central Waqf Board, Lucknow Vs. State of U.P. and others, 2006(6) ADJ 331 considering Act No.XVI of 1960 which contain similar provisions as that of 1936 Act, in para 9 of the judgment, observed:

"There is no dispute that the respondent No. 3 by virtue of sale deed became the owner of the property is dispute. The respondent No. 3 being non Muslim, the provisions of U.P. Muslim Waqf Act, 1960 was not applicable as held by this Court in the case of Chedda Singh and others Vs. Additional Civil Judge, Moradabad and others."

1149. A similar view was taken in an earlier decision of this Court in Chedha Singh and others Vs. Additional Civil Judge, Moradabad and others, 1996 Supp. AWC 189 which has been followed in U.P. Sunni Central Waqf Board, Lucknow (supra).

1150. Now, therefore, it is well settled that Section 5 of 1936 Act would have no application qua the rights of Hindus in general and plaintiff (Suit-1) in particular in respect to his right of worship. He would not be bound mere by inclusion of the property in a notification issued under Section 5(1) of 1936 Act. Moreover, in this particular case since the notification itself has been held invalid so far as the property in question is concerned, meaning thereby, in the eyes of law, there was no notification under Section 5(1) of 1936 Act and, therefore, also the restriction or benefit if any under the Act would not be applicable to either of the parties. No further provision has been shown to us from 1936 Act to affect the rights of Hindus in general and plaintiff (Suit-1) in particular affecting their/his right of worship etc..

1151. Therefore, both the issues are answered in favour of plaintiff (Suit-1) and defendants (Suit-4) in particular and in favour of Hindu parties in General. Issues No. 5(b) (Suit-4) and 9(a) (Suit-1) are answered accordingly.

1152. Issue No. 5(e) (Suit-4) reads as under:

> "Whether in view of the findings recorded by the learned Civil Judge on 21.4.1966 on issue no.17 to the effect that "No valid notification under section 5(1) of the Muslim Waqf Act (No. XIII of 1936) was ever made in respect of the property in dispute", the plaintiff Sunni Central Board of Waqf has no right to maintain the present suit?"

www.vadaprativada.com

1153. Issue 5(e) (Suit-4) raises a very basic question about the maintainability of Suit-4 pursuant to the finding recorded by the leaned Civil Judge where no valid notification has been issued under Section 5(1) of the Act in respect to the property in dispute. The question is whether in such circumstances, plaintiff, Sunni Central Board of Waqf (Suit 4) has any right to maintain the present suit or not. This leads us to examine about the Waqfs covered by 1936Act as also when the Sunni Central Board of Waqf can file a suit.

1154. Sri P.N. Mishra, learned counsel for the defendant No.20 in suit 4 submitted that once it is held that there is no valid notification issued under Section 5 of 1936 Act and in view of the further fact that no attempt was made by any person including the alleged Mutawalli to get the alleged waqf registered under Section 38 with the plaintiff No.1 in Suit-4 and the Sunni Central Waqf Board has failed to take any steps to get the alleged waqf registered by issuing necessary directions, as the case may be, under Section 39/40 of 1936 Act, it is evident that the disputed building in suit is never treated to be waqf by them and therefore, since it was not a waqf, the Act itself is not applicable. Hence suit-4 by plaintiff No.1 is not maintainable. He also submitted that even otherwise there was no waqf at all, hence 1936 Act is inapplicable. Sunni Central Waqf Board has no right to file the above suit.

1155. We find that though under the various provisions of 1936 Act, the legislature has attempted and made various provisions so that any waqf in the State of U.P., if existed, may be known to the Sunni Central Waqf Board so that it may be properly supervised and administered. However, the Act does not contain any provision that even though a waqf has been created in accordance with Islamic Law yet it would not be governed by the Act and shall be beyond the power of supervision, administration of Sunni Central Waqf Board or Shia Central Waqf Board, as the case may be for the mere reason that it was not notified under Section 5 of the 1936 Act, not registered due to fault of the Mutawalli, if any or due to inaction of the Board itself. It is, however, admitted by learned counsel for the defendant No.20 that the Act neither creates a waqf nor extinguish the same if the same is already in existence. In these circumstances, particularly in the absence of any provision in the Act, we have to consider whether there is any intrinsic indication in the Act to necessarily exclude such a waqf from the purview of 1936 Act merely for its non notification or registration etc. with the Board. If we find that there is no such intrinsic hint in the Act also then to accept the submission, wide enough, as advanced by Sri Mishra that even though there is a valid waqf, if it is not notified or registered with the Board or if no person has filed a suit for declaration that there is no waqf within the prescribed limitation, such waqf even if validly created would not be covered by 1936 Act, would mean that we have read certain words in the statute which do not actually exist. It travels in the realm of casus omissus which normally this Court shall not presume unless there is a necessary compulsion to do so. Considering the basic purpose for which the 1936 Act was enacted we find it difficult to read any such words in the statutes.

1156. The Waqf Act, 1954 though not applicable to the State of U.P. but therein the provisions are mostly pari materia with 1936 Act. To start with there also was no provision which restrain the Central Board or anyone to initiate proceedings for enforcing rights on behalf of a waqf not registered with the Board but later on Section 55-E was inserted therein by Act No. 69 of 1984 which bar enforcement of right on behalf of unregistered waqf by anyone which included the Waqf Board also. It reads as under:

> "55-E. Bar to the enforcement of right on behalf of unregistered waqfs.-(1) Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, no suit, appeal or other legal proceeding or the enforcement of any right on behalf of any waqf which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall be instituted or commenced or heard, tried or decided by any Court after the commencement of the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 1984, or where any such suit, appeal or

other legal proceeding had been instituted or commenced before such commencement, no such suit, appeal or other legal proceeding shall be continued, heard, tried or decided by any Court after such commencement unless such waqf has been registered, after such commencement unless such waqf has been registered, after such commencement, in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

(2) The provisions of sub-section (1) shall apply, as far as may be, to the claim for set-off or any other claim made on behalf of any waqf which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of this Act."

1157. We may notice that neither any similar provision was made in 1936 Act nor in Act No. XVI of 1960, therefore, it would not be appropriate to read something in U.P. Waqf Act, 1936 which actually did not find mention therein.

1158. We may clarify at this stage that a provision pari materia with Section 55-E of 1954 Act has been included in Waqf Act, 1995 in Section 87 but we are not concerned thereto in this case.

1159. A collective reading of various provisions of 1936 Act shows that any 'waqf' defined under Section 3(1), whether existed at the time when 1936 Act came into force, or, came into existence subsequently, unless excluded under Section 2(2), would be covered by Section 2(1). In the present suits, there is an issue no. 6 (Suit-3) questioning the very existence of a 'Waqf' and, therefore, unless that issue is answered in favour of the plaintiffs (Suit-4), it can obviously be not said that the property in dispute constituted 'a Waqf' under Section 3(1) of 1936 Act and, therefore, will be covered by Section 2(1) of 1936Act since it is not excluded by Section 2(2). Apparently the purpose of survey and notification under Section 5(1) is to identify the Waqfs as also the concerned Central Board which would exercise the power of superintendence over the Waqf concerned i.e. whether it is Sunni or Shia. Absence of a notification under Section 5(1) in respect to a property which is a 'Waqf' otherwise would not result in exclusion of other provisions of 1936 Act. The function of Central Board and its power of superintendence is not circumscribed to the 'Waqfs' as notified under Section 5(1) of the Act.

1160. A perusal of Section 18 on the contrary shows that general power of superintendence of all Waqfs to which "the Act applies" is vested in the Central Board. Similarly, Section 38 of the Act also says that there is an obligation regarding registration of 'Waqf' whether it is subject to 1936 Act or not and whether created before or after the commencement of the Act, at the office of Central Board of the sect to which the Waqf belongs, namely, if the Waqf is a sunni Waqf, with Sunni Central Board of Waqf, otherwise, with the Shia Central Board of Waqf. The obligation for making application for registration is upon the Mutwalli. Non compliance of Section 38 is an offence punishable under Section 60. In case of failure of a Mutwalli to get the Waqf registered, the power is also conferred upon the Central Board itself to issue such a direction vide Section 40 of 1936 Act. Section 39 provides for maintaining a register of Waqfs by the Central Board containing particulars in respect to each Waqf. The said provision is not confined to only such Waqfs as are notified under Section 5(1) of 1936 Act. Section 47 confers power upon the Central Board to apply the Court seeking direction in cases of undisposed Waqf funds or where the directions in the deed of waqf are no longer sufficient to carry out the intention of the waqif or where is a case for the application of doctrine of cypres. Here also the entitlement of the Central Board to approach the Civil Court is not confined to the waqfs notified under Section 5(1). Section 48 and 49 also are applicable to "any waqf" to which 1936 Act applies and not confined to the waqfs notified under Section 5(1) of the Act. Similarly, Section 52 also provides for notice of suits to the Central Board where any suit relating to title to any waqf property or to the rights of a Mutwalli is instituted in any civil Court. It is also not confined to the waqfs notified under Section 5(1) of the Act. Same is the position under Section 53 and 54 of the Act. We are, therefore, of the view that subject to Issue No. 6 (Suit-3), if answered in positive, i.e. in favour of plaintiffs (Suit-4) or against the plaintiffs (Suit-3),i.e. if it is held that mosque was dedicated by emperor Babar for worship by Muslims in general and results in creation of a public waqf property, in that condition, Issue No. 5 (e) has to be answered in favour of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) and it is to be held that the plaintiff, Sunni Central Board of Waqf, has a right to maintain the suit even though a valid notification under Section 5(1) of 1936 Act was never issued in respect to the property in question. Otherwise, this suit at the instance of Sunni Central Board of Waqf would not be maintainable.

1161. It is true that in Tamil Nadu Wakf Board Vs. Hathija Ammal, AIR 2002 SC 402 which was a case arising out of the provisions of Waqf Act, 1954 and in particular Sections 4, 5, 6 and 27 thereof, the Court held that since the Board itself possess power to decide whether a particular property is waqf property or not and its decision is final unless it is revoked or modified by a civil court by virtue of Section 27 of 1954 Act and, therefore, the Board cannot file a suit for declaration that any property is a waqf property and for its possession. However, in our view, the above judgment does not apply to a case governed by 1936 Act which contain no provision pari materia to Section 27 of 1954 Act.

1162. At this stage we may also refer an earlier decision of this Court in Afzal Hussain Vs. 1st Additional District Judge, AIR 1985 All. 79 where it was held that before taking an action under Section 57A, for recovery of possession of waqf property from unauthorised occupants, the first inquiry which the Board has to make is whether the immovable property in respect of which action is to be taken is entered as property of waqf in the register of waqfs maintained under S. 30 of 1960 Act being a jurisdictional issue. The above judgment also is not applicable for the reason that Section 57A provides for summery eviction of unauthorised occupants and is applicable only in such cases where the property is entered in the register of waqfs maintained under Section 30. Therefore, the dictum laid down therein cannot be extended to a case where a suit is to be filed by the Waqf Board for declaration of possession of a waqf even though it is neither notified under Section 5(1) nor registered with it under 1936 Act.

1163. Sri Siddiqui, however, tried to overcome the difficulty as a result of invalidation of the notification by the Civil Judge by contending that neither it afects the power of Sunni Board to maintain the suit nor shall bring into the question of limitation. Placing reliance on the Apex Court's decision in U.P. Shia Central Board of Waqf Vs. U.P. Sunnir Central Board of Waqf, AIR 2001 SC 2086, he contended that

mere non-availability of the notification shall not deprive the Board from registering a property as a waqf property on its own inquiry. He further submits that the Hindu parties have also filed certain documents after obtaining certified copies thereof from the Sunni Board and that being so, it is not open to them to challenge that the waqf in question is not registered.

1164. The submissions of Sri Siddiqui, however, are not sustainable. It is though not disputed that U.P. Act 1936 contemplated enlistment of waqfs in the register of concerned Waqf Board in three ways, i.e., based on the list prepared by the Commissioner of Waqfs and consequential notification; on the application of the Mutwalli of the concerned waqf and registration by the concerned waqf after issuing notice by the Waqf Board itself but we have to look all these aspects in the light of the U.P. Act 1936 which continued to hold the field till 1960. Sections 1 to 4 came into force on 20.3.1937 but rest of the provisions, i.e., Sections 5 to 71 were enforced with effect from 1.7.1947. The only way in which the disputed waqf claimed to have been registered by the Waqf Board was the notification dated 26.2.1944 based on the report of the Commissioner. That notification was found invalid by the Civil Judge in its judgment dated 21.4.1966. It is nobody's case and even the counsel for the Waqf Board do not claim that till issue no. 17 was decided by the Civil Judge except of the notification dated 26.2.1944, there was any other procedure or method followed by the Sunni Board to enlist or register the concerned waqf in the register of the Waqf Board. Neither it is pleaded nor there is any material on record to substantiate the same. U.P. Act 1936 was substituted by U.P. Act 1960. This continued to hold the field till the Waqf Act 1995 was enacted by the Parliament. It is only in the pleadings which the Waqf Board filed after 1989, wherein for the first time it has pleaded that the waqf in question was registered by the Board under Section 30 of U.P. Act 1960. Till then there was no pleading, no material to show that the waqf in question was registered with the Board in any other manner except the notification dated 26.2.1944. That was declared invalid on 21.04.1966 by the Civil Judge. In the case of Shia Waqf Board (Supra) there was reference made under section 8 of U.P. Act 1960 since there was a dispute whether the concern waqf was a Sunni waqf or Shia waqf. The Apex Court held that where a dispute arose about the nature of the waqf whether it is a Shia waqf or a Sunni waqf, the only requirement under section 8 is the existence of dispute and not the existence of notification. Referring to section 6 (4) it further observed that if a notification has already been issued, then the restriction is that such dispute can be referred only within a period of one year and not after expiry thereof but so long the notification is not there, outer limit will not be attracted. We do not find this judgment to lend any help to the plaintiff (Suit-4) or Sunni Board in any manner.

1165. Similarly the pleading with respect to section 29 (8) also has no relevance in the case in hand since it is not the case of the Sunni Waqf Board that except the notification dated 26.02.1944 there was any other order of the waqf board which existed declaring the waqf in question as a waqf registered with the Board and the same having not been challenged under section 29(8) within time prescribed and thereafter could not have been raised in this regard. This pleas wholly baseless and is not attracted in these matters.

1166. Even otherwise, Suit-4 has been filed not only by

the Sunni Central Waqf Board but there are nine more individual muslim parties being plaintiffs no. 2 to 10. It is obvious that they are muslims and, therefore, would be interested in the property in dispute to which they claim to be a waqf property. The right to file a suit by a muslim in respect to a property claimed to be a "waqf property" came to be considered before a Division Bench in Anjuman Islamia Vs. Najim Ali and others, AIR 1982 MP 17 and in para 7 of the judgement it held:

> "7. We shall first consider the question whether the suit was not tenable at the instance of the plaintiff. In brief S. 195 of the Principles of Mohammedan Law by Mulla (18th Edition), is the complete answer to this question, which contemplates that a suit for a declaration that property belongs to a wakf can be brought by Mohammedans interested in the wakf. Anjuman is a society of Mohammedans registered under the Societies Act (Act No. 21 of 1860), as per registration certificate No. 104 of 1960-61 (Exhibit P-5). Admittedly the members of plaintiff Anjuman and its president Shri Mohd. Abdul Qadir (PW 1) are residents of Chhatarpur and belong to Muslim community. They are, therefore, persons very much interested in the property in suit which they claim to be wakf property. The suit, therefore, instituted at their instance would be perfectly competent and tenable and the learned District Judge was wrong in holding otherwise."

1167. In the absence of any other precedent persuading us to take a different view, we find ourselves in respectful agreement thereto. We therefore hold that Suit-4 cannot be said to be not maintainable provided the issue regarding the very nature of the disputed property whether it is a waqf or not is decided in favour of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) i.e. subject to the issue as to whether the disputed property is a waqf or not, i.e., issue no. 6 (Suit-3) if decided in favour of plaintiffs (Suit-4), i.e., defendants (Suit-3).

1168. Issue No. 18 (Suit-4) is as under:

> "What is the effect of the judgment of their Lordships of the Supreme Court in Gulam Abbas and others vs. State of U.P. and others AIR 1981 Supreme Court 2198 on the finding of the learned Civil Judge recorded on 21st April, 1966 on issue no. 17?"

1169. Issue No. 18 (Suit-4) relates to the effect of the judgement of the Apex Court in Gulam Abbas (supra) on the Issue No. 17 (Suit-4) decided by the learned Civil Judge vide his judgement dated 21.4.1966. Sri Jilani argued that the notification dated 26.02.1944 under Section 5 (1) of 1936 Act was relied by the Apex Court in the above judgment meaning thereby the notification cannot be said to be void ab initio and it would be deemed as if the decision of the leaned Civil Judge is no more a good law in view of the fact that the law laid down by the Apex court is the law of the land vide Article 145 of the Constitution of India.

1170. Sri M.M. Pandey, counsel for plaintiffs (Suit-5), however, submitted that the decision in Ghulam Abbas's case may be considered. In respect of Doshipura Mosque and other properties, the Wakf Commissoner, after survey and inquiry, made a report dt 28/31.10.1938 u/s 4(5) of Wakf Act 1936 with Appendix VIII of Sunni Wakfs, excluding the Mosque, and Appendix X of Shia Wakfs including the Mosque; copies of the report were sent to both Shia and Sunni Boards of Wakf. On receipt of the report, Shia Board published Notification dt. 15.1.1954 of Appendix X in Gazette dt. 23.1.1954 u/s 5(1). Neither Sunni Board nor any person interested in the Wakf filed suit u/s 5(2), within the period prescribed, to challenge the omission of disputed properties from Appendix VIII. However, Sunni Board published Notification dt. 26.2.1944, u/s 5(1), including disputed properties, obviously not based on Appendix VIII (which had excluded the properties). Supreme Court held Sunni Board's Notification dt. 26.2.1944 to be invalid on the ground that it was not based on Appendix VIII while S.5(1) required the Notification to be 'in accordance with' Commissioner's report and that Wakf Commisioner's report with Appendix X became 'final and conclusive' in favour of Shia Wakf.

1171. We have perused the above judgment very carefully. The dispute before the Apex Court in Gulam Abbas (supra) was between the members of Shia and Sunni communities of muslims. In Mohalla Doshipura of Varanasi City, both sects of muslims, namely, Shias and Sunnis reside. Both revere the martyrdom of Hazrat Imam Hussain and Hazrat Imam Hasan, grandsons of Prophet Mohammad during Moharram but in different manner. The members of Shia sect in Mohalla Doshipura numbering about 4000 constitute a religious denomination having a common faith and observe Moharram for two months and eight days in a year in memory of Hazrat Imam Hussain who along with his 72 followers attained martyrdom at Karbala. The said religious belief is practised by the men-folk and the women-folk of the Shia community by holding Majlises (religious discourses), Recitations, Nowhas, Marsia, doing Matam (wailing) and taking out processions with

Tabut Tazia, Alams, Zuljinha etc. For performing these religious rites, practices and observances, the Shia community has been customarily using from time immemorial nine plots in Mohalla Doshipura and the structures on some of them, particulars whereof are as under :

"Plot No. 246; on which stands a Mosque which, it is common ground, belongs to both the sects as it was constructed out of general subscription from members of both the sects and every Mohammadan is entitled to go in and perform his devotions according to the ritual of his own sect or school.

Plot No. 247/1130: on which stands the Baradari (Mardana Imambara- A structure of white stone having 12 pillars) constructed by Shias in 1893 used for holding Majlises, Recitations, Marsia and doing other performance.

Plot No. 245: on which there is a Zanana Imambara used by Shia ladies for mourning purposes and holding Majlises etc.

Plot No. 247: on which there is Imam Chowk used for placing the Tazia thereon (said to have been demolished by the Sunnis during the pendency of the instant proceeding).

Plot No. 248/23/72: a plot belonging to one Asadullah, a Shia Muslim, with his house standing thereon.

Plot No. 246/1134: on which stands a Sabil Chabutra (platform for distributing drinking water) belong to one Nazir Hussain, a Shia Muslim.

Plots Nos. 602/1133, 602 and 603 : being vacant plots appurtenant to the Baradari in plot No. 247/1130

used for accommodating the congregation assembled for Majlises etc. when it over-lows the Baradari."

1172. The manner in which the religious rights, practices and functions used to be performed by the members of Shia community is mentioned in the judgment. The claim of Shia community to perform their religious rights on the said nine plots and structures thereon based on two foundations' (1) decisions of competent Civil Court adjudicating rights in their favour in earlier litigations and (2) registration of Shia Waqfs concerning the plots and structure for performance of theses practices and functions under Section 5 and 38 of 1936 Act, which had become final as no suit challenging the Commissioner's report and registration was filed within two years by any member of Sunni community or the Sunni Central Board of Waqf.

1173. For the purpose of issue no. 18 (Suit-4), we need not to go into the details of the first aspect of the matter, i.e., the various suits and proceedings which became final between the two sects and instead straight way come to that part of the judgment which deals with the notification dated 26.02.1944 issued under 1936 Act. The Shia sect claim that the Commissioner of Waqf submitted his report dated 28/31.10.1938 to the State government under Section 4(5) showing the plots and structures referred to above as Shia Waqfs. This was followed by notification dated 15.1.1954 issued under Section 5(1) of 1936 Act by the Shia Central Board of Waqf and published in the U.P. Gazette dated 23.1.1954. No suit challenging to the said notification was filed either by Sunni Central Board of Waqf or any Sunni Muslim within the period prescribed under Section 5(2) of 1936 Act. The Sunni sect,

however, relied on the notification dated 26.2.1944 issued by the Sunni Central Baord of Waqf under Section 5(1) of 1936 Act following the report of Commissioner of Waqf in respect to the waqfs which he identified a Sunni Waqf.

1174. After analysing the provisions of 1936 Act as well as Muslim Waqf Act 1960 (Act No.14 of 1960) (hereinafter referred to as "1960 Act"), the Apex Court discusses the facts pertaining to preparation of report by Commissioner and notifications issued under 1936 Act, in para 16 of judgment as under :

> "It appears that the Government of Uttar Pradesh appointed Shri Munshi Azimuddin Khan, A deputy Collector, as a Chief or Provincial Commissioner of Wakfs under Section 4A of the 1936 Act for the purpose of making a survey of all the Wakfs in all the districts of the State. ... After making the necessary inquiries Shri Munshi Azimuddin Khan submitted to the State Government his Report dated 28th/31st October, 1938 and annexed several appendices to his Report; Appendix VIII referred to Waqfs pertaining to Sunnis and declared as subject to the 1936 Act and Appendix IX mentioned Waqfs pertaining to Sunni sect which were exempted from the Act; Appendices X and XI contained corresponding information about the Shia Waqfs which were respectively declared as subject to the Act or exempt from the Act. The original Report bearing the signature of Shri Munshi Azimuddin Khan, Chief Waqfs Commissioner was produced before us marked Exh. A) for our inspection by Mr. Rana, Counsel for the State of U.P. and the same was made available for inspection to the parties. There is a slip attached to the Report placed in

between Annexure VII and Annexure XIII containing an endorsement to the effect : "Appendices VIII and IX sent to the Sunni Board" and "Appendices X and XI sent to the Shia Board" with the signature of the Chief Commissioner of Waqfs below it.....Presumably the aforesaid action of sending the relevant appendices along with a copy of the Commissioner's report to the respective Sunni Central Waqf Board and the Shia Central Waqf Board was taken as required by Section 5(1) of the Act. ..... after receiving the aforesaid documents (Report together with the appendices X and XI), the Shia Central Waqf Board, as required by Sec. 5(1) of the Act, took steps to notify in the Official Gazette all the waqfs relating to their sect on the basis of the Appendices annexed to the Report; the relevant Notification under Section 5 (1) was issued on 15th January, 1954 and published in the Government Gazette on 23rd January, 1954. .....Admittedly, no suit was filed either by the Sunni Central Board or any other person interested in those Wakfs challenging the decision recorded in his Report by the Chief or Provincial Commissioner for Wakfs within the time prescribed under Section 5 (2) of the Act, and, therefore, the Chief Commissioner's Report together with the appendices X and XI thereto dated 28th/31st October 1938, on the basis of which the Notification dated 15th January, 1954 was issued and published in Official Gazette on 23rd January, 1954, must be held to have become final and conclusive as between the members of the two communities."

1175. Thereafter, in para 17 of the judgement, the Apex Court dealt with the notification dated 26th February, 1944 relied

by the members of Sunni community and said:

> "As against the aforesaid material respondents 5 and 6 and through them the Sunni community have relied upon a Notification dated 26th February, 1944 issued by the Sunni Central Wakfs Board under Section 5(1) of the U.P. Muslim Wakfs Act, 1936 following upon the receipt of the Report of the Chief or Provincial Commissioner of Wakfs in respect of mosque in Doshipura showing the same as Sunni Wakf, copy whereof has been annexed as Annexure S-2 to the affidavit dated 6th February, 1980 of Mohd. Basir Khan filed on behalf of the Sunni Central Waqfs Board as its "Pairokar'. This Notification on which reliance has been placed by the Sunnis appears to us of doubtful validity and probative value for the reasons which we shall presently indicate. Though issued and published earlier in point of time than the Notification of Shia Central Waqfs Board, it is admittedly not based on Appendices VIII and IX annexed to the Chief Commissioner's Report dated 28th/31st October, 1938 but on the basis of some Registers of Waqfs (meaning lists of Waqfs) said to have been received by the Sunni Board from the Commissioner of Wakfs. Curiously enough the Sunni Central Waqfs Board had stated through two affidavits dated 6th January, 1980 and 9th January, 1980 of their Pairokar Shri Mohd. Basir Khan that along with the copy of the Commissioner's report Registers of Waqfs were received but no appendices like Appendices VIII and IX were received from the Commissioner, that according to the Registers of Waqfs there were 245 charitable Sunni Waqfs in the District of Banaras which were covered by the 1936 Act and all such

Waqfs were accordingly notified by the Sunni Board in the government Gazette by issuing the Notification dated 26th February, 1944 under Section 5(1) of the Act. The original Report of the Commissioner does not refer to anything like Registers of Waqfs but, as stated earlier, it refers to Appendices Nos. VIII, IX, X and XI and the endorsement on the slip under the signature of the Chief Commissioner shows that the former two appendices were sent to the Sunni Board and the latter two to the Shia Board. In face of this endorsement and having regard to the fact that the Shia Board had received Appendices X and XI along with the Commissioner's Report which that Board offered to produce, it is difficult to accept the Statement of the Pairokar of the Sunni Board that no appendices were received by the Board along with a copy of the Commissioner's Report. It seems that relevant appendices, though received, are being withheld as their production would be adverse to the Sunnis. Apart from that aspect it is clear on their own admission that the Notification under Sec. 5 (1) of the 1936 Act was issued by the Sunni Central Waqfs Board not on the basis of Appendices VIII and IX which formed part of the Commissioner's Report but on the basis of some Registers of Waqfs said to have been received by it. The notification regarding the Sunni Waqfs issued on the basis of material which did not form part of the Chief Commissioner's Report would be in violation of Section 5(1) of the Act which required issuance of a Notification thereunder 'according to' the Commissioner's Report and as such the Notification dated February 26, 1944 relied upon by respondents 5 and 6 and members of

the Sunni community would be of doubtful validity. ... .We are, therefore, clearly of the view that the Notification dated 26th February, 1944 issued under Section 5(1) of the 1936 Act by the Sunni Board is of no avail to the Sunnis for the purpose of defeating the customary rights of the Shias to perform their religious ceremonies and functions on the other plots and structures thereon."

1176. From the above judgment, thus, it is evident that the Apex Court, in fact, did not rely on the notification dated 26.2.1944 but instead held it to be of doubtful validity and probative value having not been issued in accordance with the procedure prescribed under Section 5 of 1936 Act. In our view, instead of upsetting the judgment of the learned Civil Judge, it, in fact, strengthened the said decision which has held that the notification dated 26th February 1944 was not a valid notification in respect to property in dispute. In view of the above discussion, we have no manner of doubt that the Apex Court's decision in Gulam Abbas (supra) does not affect the finding of the learned Civil Judge on Issue No. 17 (Suit-4) as contained in his judgement dated 21.4.1966, but on the contrary, support and strengthen his said finding. Issue No. 18 (Suit-4) is answered accordingly.

1177. Issue No. 9(b) (Suit-1) reads as under:

"Were the proceedings under the said Act referred to in written statement para 15 collusive? If so its effect?"

1178. Issue No. 9(b) (Suit-1) is based on the pleadings of the plaintiffs in para 15 of his replication which reads as under:

"15. ऐक्ट नं0 13 सन् 1936 बिल्कुल ultra vires है और उसके सम्बन्ध यदि कोई कार्यवाई की गई तो वह सब void है वादी किसी नोटिस के बन्धन में नहीं है और न किसी कार्यवाही जिसका वर्णन धारा 15

www.vadaprativada.com

में किया गया है इस अभियोग पर कोई प्रभाव है वादी का अनुमान है कि वह अभियोग मुसत्मा परस्पर षडयन्त्री भावना (साजिशी) से योजित किया था।''

"15. Act no.13 of 1936 is ultra vires and the proceeding, if any, in its pursuance is void. The plaintiff is not bound by any notice nor does any proceeding, mentioned in para-15, have any bearing on this case. According to the plaintiff, this case has been filed collusively." (E.T.C.)

1179. In this paragraph reply contain with respect to para 15 of the written statement filed on behalf of defendants 1 to 5 which reads as under:

''15. यह कि बमौजिब मुसलिम वक्फ ऐक्ट 13 सन 1936 चीफ कमिश्नर औकाफ मुकरर हुए और चीफ कमिश्नर मज़कूर ने बाद तहकीकात व मुआयना मौका मसजिद बाबरी यह तय किया कि मसजिद बाबरी का तामीर कुनिन्दा शहन्शाह बाबर सुन्नीउल मजहब था और वक्फ मुताल्लिक मसजिद मजकूर सुन्नी वक्फ है और इसी सिलसिले में कानूनी नोटीफिकेशन भी जारी कर दिया।''

"15. That a Chief Commissioner of 'Aukaf' (plural of Waqf) was appointed under the Muslim Waqf Act 13 of 1936, and after investigation and inspection of the disputed site Babri mosque the Chief Commissioner decided that emperor Babar, the builder of Babri mosque, was of Sunni sect and the Waqf in respect of the disputed mosque is a Sunni Waqf, and (he) also issued a legal notification in this behalf." (E.T.C.)

1180. To the same effect the defendant No.10 has also pleaded in paras 14 and 16 which reads as under:

"14. That after the promulgation of U.P. Muslim Waqf Act, 1936, the Chief Commissioner of Waqfs had got a survey made in respect of the waqf properties and in that connection survey of the mosque in question was also conducted and the same was registered as a waqf and a gazette notification had also been issued in respect thereto under the provisions of the U.P. Muslim Waqf Act, 1936."

"16. That the said mosque stands registered as a mosque in the office of the U.P. Sunni Central Board of Waqf, hereinafter referred to as the Board, as Waqf No. 26 Faizabad even in the Register of Waqfs maintained under section 30 of the U.P. Muslim Waqf Act, 1960."

1181. In para 15 of the written statement of defendants no. 1 to 5 the statement of fact with respect to the inquiry made by the Chief Commissioner of Waqf and the notification dated 26.02.1944 has been made. This notification has already held to be invalid, so far as the disputed property is concerned. No material has been placed before this Court to show that the alleged proceedings under 1936 Act in any manner were the result of any conspiracy, mala fide etc. of the muslim parties. In fact the plaintiff (Suit-1) could not substantiate the plea of conspiracy taken in para 15 of his replication and during the course of arguments the learned counsel for the plaintiff (Suit-1), in fact, gave up the said plea and neither advanced any submission nor could substantiate the same. In the circumstances, issue no. 9(b) (Suit-1) is answered against the plaintiff (Suit-1) and it is held that the proceedings referred to in para 15 of the written statement (Suit-1) cannot be said to be collusive in the absence of placing anything before this court to substantiate the same. In these circumstances, the question of considering its effect does not arise.

1182. Issue No. 9(c) (Suit-1) is as under:

"Are the said provisions of the U.P. Act 13 of 1936 ultra vires for reasons given in the statement of plaintiff's

www.vadaprativada.com

1183. Sri P.D. Goswami, counsel for the plaintiff (Suit-1) on 08/09.03.1962 made the following statement:

"Sri P.D. Goswami advocate for the plffs state that the report of the commissioner spoken of in para 15 of the W.S. has no effect on the rights of the plff nor do the provisions of Sec 5(3) of U.P. Act 13 of 1936 apply to the present suits as they are based on a right of worship of plff who is a Hindu. According to him the provisions of this Act are applicable to the property and the rights of the Muslims only.

He does not give up the plea taken by him in the replication in that connection.

According to him the said Act has been repealed by U.P. Act 16 of 1960. He further adds that in case the said Act be considered applicable to the present suits it is ultra vires the provisions of the Govt of India Act 1935 and is in conflict with the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act (Act No. VII of 1904)."

www.vadaprativada.com

1184. As we have already held that firstly, there was no valid notification under Section 5(1) of 1936 Act regarding the property in dispute, and secondly, that the said Act does not apply to non muslims, we do not find any occasion to go into this issue further since the statement of the learned counsel itself was conditional, i.e., if 1936 Act is held applicable to Suit-1 and 2 then it is ultra vires of the provisions of the Government of India Act, 1935 and is in conflict with the Ancient Monument Preservation Act (Act No. 7 of 1904).

1185. Even otherwise, we do not find as to how Act No. 7 of 1904 would come into picture in the case in hand. The aforesaid Act of 1904 was promulgated on 18.03.1904 with the preamble as under:

> "Whereas it is expedient to provide for the preservation of ancient monuments, for the exercise of control over traffic in antiquities and over excavation in certain places, and for the protection and acquisition in certain cases of ancient monuments and of objects of archaeological, historical or artistic interest."

1186. The statement of objects and reasons of 1904 Act reads as under:

> "The object of this measure is to preserve to India its ancient monuments in antiquities and to prevent the excavation by unauthorised persons of sites of historic interest and value.
> 2. In 1898 the question of antiquarian exploration and research attracted attention and the necessity of taking steps for the protection of monuments and relics of antiquity was impressed upon the Government of India. It was then apparent that legislation was required to enable the Government to discharge their responsibilities in the matter and a Bill was drafted on the lines of the existing Acts of Parliament modified so as to embody certain provisions which have found a place in recent legislation regarding the antiquities of Greece and Italy. This draft was circulated for the opinions of local Governments and their replies submitted showed that the proposals incorporated in it met with almost unanimous approval, the criticism received being directed, for the most part, against matters of detail. The draft has since been revised, the provisions of the Draft Bill prepared by the Government of

www.vadaprativada.com

Bengal have been embodied so far as they were found suitable and the present Bill is the result.

3.The first portion of the Bill deals with protection of "Ancient monuments" an expression which has been defined in clause 2 (now section 2). The measure will apply only to such of these as are from time to time expressly brought within its contents though being declared to be "protected monuments". A greater number of more famous buildings in India are already in possession or under the control of the Government; but there are others worthy of preservation which are in the hands of private owners. Some of these have already been insured or are fast falling into decay. The preservation of these is the chief object of the clause of the Bill now referred to and the provisions of the Bill are in general accordance with the policy enunciated in section 23 of the Religious Endowments Act, 1863 (20 of 1863), which recognises and saves the right of the Government "to prevent injury to and preserve buildings remarkable in their antiquity and for their-historical or architectural value or required for the convenience of the public". The power to intervene is at present limited to cases to which section 3 of the Bengal Regulation 19 of 1810 or section 3 of the Madras Regulation VII of 1817 applies. In framing the present Bill the Government has aimed at having the necessity of good will and securing the co-operation of the owners concerned and it hopes that the action which it is proposed to take may tend rather to the encouragement than to the suppression of private effort. The Bill provides that the owner or the manager of the building which merits greater

care than it has been receiving may be invited to enter into an agreement for its protection and that in the event of his refusing to come to terms the collector may proceed to acquire it compulsorily or take proper course to secure its application. It has been made clear that there is to be no resort to compulsory acquisition in the case the monument is used in connection with religious observances or in other case until the owner has had an opportunity of entering into an agreement of the kind indicated above; and it is expressly provided that the monument maintained by the Government under the proposed Act, shall not be used for any purpose inconsistent with its character or with purpose of its foundation, and that, so far as is compatible with the object in view the public shall have access to it free of charge. By the 4th proviso of clause 11 (now section 10) it is laid down that in assessing the value of the monument for the purpose of compulsory acquisition under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 (1 of 1894) its archaeological, artistic or historical merits shall not be taken into account. The object of the Government as purchaser being to preserve at the public expense and for the public benefits an ancient monument with all its associations, it is considered that the value of those associations should not be paid for.

4. The second portion of the Bill deals with movable objects of historical or artistic interest and these may be divided into two classes; the first consists of ornaments, enamels, silver and copper vessels, Persian and Arabian Manuscripts, and curios general. These are for the most part portable and consequently difficult to trade; they are

as a rule artistic; are of historic interest and it would be impracticable even were it desirable to prevent a dealer from selling and a traveller from buying them. The sculptural carvings, images, bas-reliefs, inscriptions and the like form a distinct class by themselves, in that their value depends upon their local connection. Such antiquities may, as in the case of those of Swat, be found outside India or in Native States and this the Legislature cannot reach directly; while as regards the British territory and under the existing law, it is impossible to go beyond the provisions of the Indian Treasure Trove Act, 1878 (6 of 1878). (In these circumstances, it is proposed, by clause 18 of the Bill to take power to prevent the removal from British India of any antiquities which it may be deemed desirable to retain in the country, and at the same time to present importation. By thus putting a stop on draft in such articles it is believed that it will be possible to protect against spoilation a number of interesting places situated without and beyond British territory. Clause 19 aims at providing for antiquities such as sculptures and inscriptions which belong to another place and ought therefore to be kept in situ or deposited in local museums. The removal of these, it is proposed to enable the local Government to prohibit by notification and the clause also provides that, if the object is movable, the owner may require the Government to purchase it outright and that, if it is immovable the Government shall compensate the owner for any loss caused to him by the prohibition. Clause 20 (now section 19) deals with the compulsory purchase of such antiquities if that is found to be necessary for their preservation and the owner is not willing on personal or religious grounds to part with them. In such cases it is proposed that the price to be paid should be assessed by the Collector, subject to a right of appeal to the local government but it is for consideration whether the Land Acquisition Act of 1894 should be followed and reference to the Courts allowed.

5. The third portion of the Bill deals with excavations and gives power to make rules to prohibit or regulate such operations."

1187. The term "ancient monument" and "antiquities" are defined in Section 2(1) and (2) of 1904 Act which read as under:

"2(1) "Ancient monument" means any structure, erection or monument or any tumulus or place of interment, or any cave, rock-sculpture, inscription or monolith, which is of historical, archaeological or artistic interest, or any remains thereof, and includes--

(a) the site of an ancient monument;

(b) such portion of land adjoining the site of an ancient monument as my be required for fencing or covering in or otherwise preserving such monument; and

(c) the means of access to and convenient inspection of an ancient monument;

(2) "antiquities" include any movable objects which the Central Government, by reason of their historical or archaeological associations, may think it necessary to protect against injury, removal or dispersion;"

1188. The term "owner" is also defined in Section 2(6) as under:

"2(6) "owner" includes a joint owner, invested with power of management on behalf of himself and other joint owners, and any manager or trustee exercising powers of management over an ancient monument, and the successor in title of any such owner and the successor in office of any such manager or trustee:

Provided that nothing in this Act shall be deemed to extend the powers which may lawfully be exercised by such manager or trustee."

1189. Section 3 provides for "protected monuments". It is not the case of any of the parties that the disputed building was ever notified by the Government as a "protected monument" under Section 3 of 1903 Act.

1190. Sections 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15 are applicable to a "protected monument", i.e., an "ancient monument" which is declared to be "protected monument" by notification in the official gazette under Section 3 and, therefore, ex facie would have no application to the property in dispute.

1191. Section 10A which was inserted in 1932 is only in respect to control of the Central Government where it finds that mining, quarrying, excavation, blasting and other operations of a like nature needs to be restricted and regulated for the purpose of protecting or preserving any "ancient monument". This also has nothing to do with the disputed property as there is no such case of either party. We, therefore, find nothing in 1904 Act in any manner to affect the provisions of 1936 Act.

1192. So far as the Government of India Act, 1935 is concerned, learned counsel for the plaintiff (Suit-1) could not show anything therein to substantiate his plea of ultra vires of 1936 Act. It is no doubt true that 1936 Act was repealed by U.P.

Act No. XVI of 1960 but that by itself would not make anything already done under 1936 Act redundant or illegal or non est. In fact the transactions already taken place are duly protected therein i.e. in 1960 Act. The counsel for the plaintiffs in fact could not substantiate the plea so as to persuade this Court to answer issue no. 9(c) (Suit-1) in his favour and it is accordingly decided in negative.

1193. Now comes Issue No. 16 (Suit-3) which reads as under:

> "Is the suit bad for want of notice u/s 83 of U.P. Act 13 of 1936?"

1194. We find that there is no pleading to this effect i.e. requirement of such notice, in the written statements of defendants in Suit-3. In fact in para 27 of written statement of defendant no. 10 (Suit-1) a plea of want of notice under Section 56 of 1936 Act has been taken which reads as under:

www.vadaprativada.com

> "27. That the suit is not maintainable even on account of the reason that no notice was served upon the Board as required by section 56 of the U.P. Muslim Waqf Act, 1936 and the suit is liable to be dismissed even on this account."

1195. Learned counsel for the defendant (Suit-3) neither could substantiate their case to support the above issue nor in fact could place anything before this Court to assist us to consider the above issue in an effective manner.

1196. In fact there is no Section 83 in 1936 Act. In the written statement filed in Suit-3 by the defendants No.6 to 8 there is no such pleading with reference to any provision of 1936 Act alleging that the same bars the suit. The defendant No.9, however, has stated before the Court that the plaint of Suit-4 be treated as his written statement and there also we do not find any such pleading referring to any provision of 1936 Act on the basis whereof it is said that the suit is barred for want of any notice. The only objection with reference to 1936 Act taken is in para 9 and 10 of the plaint (Suit-4) which states that the Commissioner of Waqfs made an enquiry with reference to the disputed building as a public waqf and based thereon the State Government issued a notification on 26th February, 1944 which having not been challenged by the Hindus or any person interested denying the report of the Commissioner of the Waqfs on the ground that it was a Muslim waqf or it was a Hindu temple hence now it cannot be challenged. It is only in Suit-1, the defendant No.10 in para 27 of its written statement has said that due to absence of notice, as required by Section 56 of 1936 Act, the suit is not maintainable and is liable to be dismissed. Even if we read issue 16 (Suit-3) that instead of Section 83 of 1936 Act, it ought to be Section 56 of 1936 Act, we do not find that it requires any notice before filing a suit and in fact reference to Section 56 is not correct, as is evident from a bare perusal thereof, which is reproduced as under:

> "56. Appointment of mutawalli.- When there is vacancy in the office of mutawalli of a waqf and there is no one competent to be appointed under the terms of the deed of waqf, or where the right of any person to act as mutawalli is disputed, the Central Board may appoint any person to act as a mutawalli for such period and on such conditions as it may think fit."

1197. However, there is another Section 53 in 1936 Act which contain some provision with reference to notice and reads as under :

> "53. No suit shall be instituted against a Central Board in respect of any act purporting to be done by such Central Board under colour of this Act or for any relief in respect of any waqf, until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been delivered to the Secretary, or left at the office of such Central Board, stating the cause of action, the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff and the relief which he claims ; and the plaint shall contain a statement that such notice has been so delivered or left."

1198. From a bare perusal of Section 53 of 1936 Act, it is evident that its scope and purpose is wholly different. Even otherwise, the requirement of notice under Section 53 in 1936 Act is akin to Section 80 CPC. The Apex Court in para 25 of the judgment in Siraj-ul-Haq Khan (supra) has considered Section 53 and its effect and has observed that this Section is similar to Section 80 of the Civil Procedure Code and thereafter having said so further says that it was incumbent upon the appellants to have given the requisite notice under Section 53 before instituting the suit and failure to do so would bar the suit being not maintainable. The parties before us were required to show as to how Section 53 in the case in hand would be attracted to which none has assisted the Court. However, as observed by the Apex Court in Siraj-ul-Haq Khan (supra), the compliance is mandatory where Section 53 is applicable. Without considering the question as to whether the relief sought in Suit-3 would attract Section 53 or not; and, proceeding by assuming that Section 53 would apply, we are of the view that this provision has been made for the benefit of Central Board concerned in particular and Muslim communities in general. It is always open to a party for whose benefit the provisions has been made to waive such benefit. This aspect we have already considered in respect to the issues relating to Section 80 CPC above and following the reasons as are applicable to Section 80 CPC, we are of the view that the benefit under Section 53 can also be waived. If non-issuance of notice and defect under Section 53 is not pressed by the concerned Board before the Court, non-compliance of Section 53 would not vitiate the suit. The issue is answered accordingly.

1199. Issue 5(f) (Suit-4) relates to U.P. Act XVI of 1960 and reads as under:

> "Whether in view of the aforesaid finding, the suit is barred on account of lack of jurisdiction and limitation as it was filed after the commencement of the U.P. Muslim Waqf Act, 1960?"

1200. In the written statement dated 20th July, 1968, filed by defendants No.13 and 14 (Suit-4), it has been pleaded that after the enforcement of U.P. Act XVI of 1960, the suit in question having been filed in 1961, is not saved under Section 85(2) thereof. They further say that Section 9(2) of 1960 Act also would not save the finality of the decision of the Commissioner of Waqfs since 1936 Act itself having vanished after repeal and therefore, the suit on behalf of Sunni Central Waqf Board is wholly without jurisdiction.

1201. During the course of arguments, however, learned counsel for the defendants could not substantiate the above objection and could not show as to how Section 85(2) and Section 9(2) of 1960 Act would be attracted in the case in hand to make the suit without jurisdiction and beyond limitation. It is true that notification issued under Section 5(1) of 1936 Act has been held to be invalid so far as the property in dispute is concerned but in case the property in dispute is found to be waqf, no provision in U.P. Act XVI of 1960 has been shown which may deprive the Sunni Central Waqf Board or other plaintiffs of Suit-4 to maintain the suit in respect to a property which they claim to be a 'waqf property' and to claim its possession in case it is not otherwise impermissible in law. At least we are not able to find any provision under U.P. Act XVI of 1960 which may prohibit either plaintiff No.1 (Suit-4) or other plaintiffs from maintaining Suit-4 in question provided the property in dispute is a "waqf" within the meaning of Shariyat Law.

1202. In view of above, we do not find any substance and decide issue 5 (f) (Suit-4) against the defendants and in favour of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) holding that the suit in question is not barred having been filed after the commencement of U.P. Act No.XVI of 1960.

1203. Now we come to Issues 23 and 24 (Suit-4) which can be considered together, and read as under:

> "Whether the Waqf board is an instrumentality of State? If so, whether the said Board can file a suit against the State itself?"
> "If the Waqf Board is State under Article 12 of the Constitution? If so, the said Board being the State can file any suit in representative capacity sponsoring the case of particular community and against the interest of another community?"

1204. The learned counsels for the defendants could not point out any pleadings raising such objection therein. However, they contended that since the Sunni Central Waqf Board has been constituted under 1936 Act and therefore, being a statutory body, its constitution, function etc. can be looked into from the various provisions of the statutory enactment and that itself would be sufficient to give necessary information. Though prima facie we find it difficult to accept the above proposition, but, however, we proceed to consider the above issues analyzing the relevant provisions of 1936 Act as well as 1960 Act to find out whether there is any substance in these issues.

1205. It is not in dispute that Sunni Central Waqf Board has been established under Section 6(1) of 1936 Act. Its constitution is provided in Section 7 thereof. The two provisions read as under:

> "6. Establishment of Central Boards.-(1) there shall be established in the United Provinces two separate Boards to be called the "Shia Central Board" and the "Sunni Central Board" of waqfs. Each such Board shall be a body corporate and shall have perpetual succession and a common seal and shall by its said name sue or be sued."
> "7. Constitution of Sunni Central Board.- The Sunni Central Board shall consist of-
> (i) five members to be elected in the manner prescribed by Sunni members of the local legislature,
>
> (ii) four members to be elected in the manner prescribed by the District Waqf Committees.
>
> (iii) three members to be co-opted by the above nine members from persons whom they regard as ulamas, and two members from among mutawallis, and
>
> Provided that the first Sunni Central Board shall be established by the local Government within three months of the date on which this section comes into force and shall consist of-

www.vadaprativada.com

(i) five members to be elected, in such manner as the local Government may direct, by the Sunni members of the local legislature;

(ii) two members to be elected, in such manner as the local Government may direct, by the Sunni members of Executive Committee of the Provincial Muslim Educational Conference ;

(iii) three members to be co-opted by the above seven members from persons whom they regard as ulamas ; and

(iv) three members to be co-opted by the above ten members."

1206. Section 10 of 1936 Act provides that the members of Central Board shall hold office for five years. Section 13 of 1936 Act provides for the place where the office of the Central Board shall be located and Sections 14 to 17 of 1936 Act are in respect to manner of function and requisite staff of such Board. Section 18 of 1936 Act provides for the functions of the Central Board which we have already referred to.

1207. Chapters 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 of 1936 Act contain provisions with regard to registration of waqfs, audit of accounts, enquiry and supervision, legal proceedings and administration charges. Chapter 8 of 1936 Act provides for Mutawalli and Section 58 of 1936 Act confers powers upon the Board to remove Mutawalli from his office in certain circumstances. Section 68 of 1936 Act provides that the Government shall not be liable for any expenditure incurred in the administration of 1936 Act.

1208. From a perusal of 1936 Act, it is evident that the

www.vadaprativada.com

Central Sunni Waqf Board is a statutory body constituted in accordance with the provisions of the said Act. By no stretch of imagination it can be said to be either a Department of the State Government or an instrumentality of the State Government.

1209. A similar question came up for consideration in respect to the employees of certain statutory bodies like Jal Nigam, Banks, Local Bodies etc. where the employees claim themselves to be the Government employees as the bodies are controlled by the Government but negativing the said contention it was held by the Apex Court that the statutory bodies are neither a Department or part and parcel of the State Government nor the employees of the statutory bodies can be said to be the Government employees.

1210. Being a statutory body constituted under statute having powers, functions and duties, which the Waqf Board is liable to perform, it may be covered by the term 'Other Authority' under Article 12 of the Constitution of India but that by itself would neither make it an instrumentality of the State Government of U.P. nor would deprive it to file a suit where it is aggrieved against some action of the State Government or its authorities. The Waqf Board having been constituted with a particular objective i.e. for the better governance, administration and supervision of certain classes of Muslim Waqfs, from its very nature, its duty is confined for the welfare of certain special kind of properties of the persons of a particular community and in particular religion i.e. Muslims. It will wholly be misconceived to suggest that by representing or sponsoring the cause of members of a particular community against another community i.e. Muslims against Hindus, the Waqf Board is causing discrimination though it is a “State” under Article 12 of the Constitution. No authority could be placed before this Court binding upon us to take a view different than what we have discussed above.

1211. On the contrary, we find support from a decision of the Apex Court in Syed Yousuf Yar Khan and others Vs. Syed Mohammed Yar Khan and others, AIR 1967 SC 1318 where a somewhat similar contention was raised that the "Waqf Board" is an agent of Central Government but rejecting the same the Apex Court in para 4 of the judgment held as under:

> "(4) Counsel submitted that the present suit was a suit by or on behalf of the State Government and was therefore governed by art. 149 of the Indian Limitation Act 1908. He submitted that the Board of Muslim Endowments, Hyderabad, which according to him was the Board of Wakfs constituted under the Muslim Wakfs Act 1954, was an agent of the Central Government. By s. 9(2) of the Muslim Wakfs Act, 1954, the Board of Wakfs is a body corporate and by s. 15 of this Act, the Board is vested with the right of general superintendence of wakfs and is empowered to take measures for the recovery of the lost properties of any wakf and to initiate and defend suits and proceedings relating to wakfs. Counsel submitted that a corporation may be an agent of the State Government, and in support of this contention relied upon Halsbury's Laws of England, 3rd Ed., Vol. 9, p. 10-Tamlin v. Hannaford (1949) 2 All E. R. 327, and the observations of Shah, J. in State Trading Corporation of India Limited v. The Commercial Tax Officer, A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 811, 849, 850, paras. 115-117. He submitted that the State Government has delegated its functions of superintendence over wakfs

to the Board of Wakfs and the Board should therefore be regarded as an agent of the State Government. We are unable to accept this contention. By the Religious Endowments Act 1863, the Government divested itself of the management and superintendence of religious endowments which was vested in it under Regn. 19 of 1810 and Regulation 7 of 1817. The Board of Wakfs though subject to the control of the State Government, is a statutory corporation and is vested with statutory powers, functions and duties. The Board has power to hold property and is in control of the wakf fund (ss. 9 and 48). The State Government has no concern with the property vested in the Board save during the period of supersession of the Board under s. 64. Nor is the State Government liable for any expenditure incurred by the Board in connection with the administration under the Act (S. 54). The Board of Wakfs is not discharging a governmental function. The Act nowhere says that the Board would act as the agent of the State Government. It rather indicates that the Board is not the agent of the Government and the Government is not responsible for its acts. We must, therefore, hold that the Board of Wakfs is not an agent of the State Government and a suit instituted by it for the recovery of a wakf property is not a suit by or on behalf of the State Government."

1212. In Syed Yousuf Yar Khan (supra) the issue of identifying mutawalli with the State Government was also raised by contending that the mutawalli is an agent of the "Government" in order to take the benefit of Article 149 of the Limitation Act but that was also rejected by the Apex Court by

> "5. Counsel next submitted that the mutawalli is the agent of the State Government and that in any event the limitation for a suit by the mutawalli starts on the date of his appointment. In support of this contention counsel relied upon the decision in Jewun Doss Sahoo v. Shah Kubeer-ood-Deen, (1837-41) 2 Moo Ind. App. 390 at p. 422 (PC) where the Privy Council held that under the law then in force it was the duty of the Government to protect endowments and the mutawalli in that case was the procurator of the Government and his right to sue arose on his being appointed mutawalli. This ruling of the Privy Council was given under Regulation 19 of 1810. Since the passing of the Religious Endowments Act 1863, the mutawalli cannot be regarded as a procurator of the Government. He is not appointed by the Government, nor does he manage the endowment on its behalf and a suit by him for the recovery of the wakf property cannot now be regarded as a suit on its behalf, see Shaikh Laul Mahomed v. Lalla Brij Kishore, (1872) 17 Suth WR 430 and Behari Lal and Ors. v. Muhammad Muttaki, (1898) ILR 20 All. 482 at p. 488 (FB)."

1213. In view of the above, we find it difficult to hold that the Waqf Board is an instrumentality of the State. However, even if it is an instrumentality of State, we do not find any disability for the Board to file a suit against the State if there is any wrong done by the State or its authorities. In our view, the issue which has been raised to suggest as if the Sunni Central Waqf Board if held as an instrumentality of the State, would be incompetent to maintain a suit against the State is thoroughly

1214. The concept of instrumentality of the "State" came to be noticed in the light of considering the applicability of Part III of the Constitution of India dealing with fundamental rights vis a vis the meaning of the words "other authority" under Article 12 of the Constitution. To find out the bodies to whom Part III of the Constitution would apply, and if there is any infringement etc., the complaint may be raised before the High Court or the Supreme Court directly under writ jurisdiction also this concept was developed. To understand the concept, it would be prudent to have a perusal of Article 12 of the Constitution :

> "Article 12. In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires, "the State" includes the Government and Parliament of India and the Government and the Legislature of each of the States and all local or other authorities within the territory of India or under the control of the Government of India."

www.vadaprativada.com

1215. The Central and State Governments, the legislatures, Central and Provincial, and, Local authorities are obviously covered by the term "the State" under Article 12. The question arose as to what are the bodies which would answer the description of "other authorities" so as to qualify to be within the ambit of the word 'the State' to attract Part-III of the Constitution. In Ramana Dayaram Shetty Vs. International Airport Authority of India and others, 1979 (3) SCC 489 the question arose as to whether "International Airport Authority of India" is "the State" within the meaning of Article 12 so as to attract the provisions under Part-III of the Constitution. Admittedly, "International Airport Authority of India" was neither the Government, Central or State, nor Legislature nor a

Local authority. The question arose as to whether the words "other authorities" within the territory of India or under the control of the Government of India would include "International Airport Authority of India" so as to attract the provisions under Part-III of the Constitution. In this context the matter was examined. The Apex Court held that "International Airport Authority of India" is 'the State' within the meaning of Article 12 of the Constitution of India and, therefore, the provisions of Article 14 are attracted. If the act or omission on the part of International Authority of India is found to be arbitrary or discriminatory.

1216. There are catena of decision on this aspect but it may not be necessary for us to consider in detail all such authorities laying down various tests to determine when a body or authority can be said to be an "instrumentality" of the State so as to be within the ambit of the words "other authorities" for the purposes of Article 12 of the Constitution of India for the reason that in case a body qualify such tests and becomes an "instrumentality of the State" and, therefore, becomes "an authority" within the words "other authorities" under Article 12 of the Constitution, the result would be that provisions of Part-III of the Constitution would be applicable to it and any infringement thereof would be subject to judicial review directly before the superior courts in writ jurisdiction, i.e., under Article 226 of the Constitution of India as also under Article 32 of the Constitution. For our purposes suffice it to mention that an "instrumentality of the State" does not mean a "department of the State Government".

1217. The learned counsels for the defendants, despite of repeated query, could not tell us as to how an instrumentality of the State cannot invoke the jurisdiction of a Civil Court for enforcing its common law rights by filing a civil suit. It appears that misconception on the part of the defendants in Suit-4 is that an instrumentality of the State, if comes within the words 'the State' under Article 12 of the Constitution, the distinction of personality between the State Government as well as such instrumentality disappear and, therefore, one may not file suit against another. This is apparently fallacious and lacks substance. A body incorporated in accordance with the procedure prescribed by statute or a statutory body, i.e., constituted under a statute or by a statute, on its own is a juristic personality, i.e., legal person, who can possess property, enter into transactions by executing contract with the other persons (including natural, legal or juristic persons) and also to sue or be sued. An authority or statutory body which can be said to be an instrumentality of the State does not become necessarily a part and parcel of the Government.

1218. The term 'Government' in its wider sense includes all the wings of Government, viz., executive, legislative or judicial but in narrower sense, it is normally the executive wing of the State.

1219. Bombay High Court in Emperor Vs. Bhaskar Balwant Bhopatkar, (1906) ILR 30 Bom 421 observed:

> "What is contemplated under this section is the collective body of the Government . . . . . It means that the person or persons collectively, in succession, who are authorized to administer the Government for the time being. One particular set of persons may be open to objection and to assail them, and to attack them and excite hatred against them, is not necessarily exciting hatred

against the Government, because they are only individuals and not representatives of that abstract conception which is called Government . . . . . The individual is transitory and may be separately criticized but that which is essentially and inseparably connected with the idea of Government established by law cannot be attacked without coming within this section."

1220. In Annie Besant Vs. Government of Madras, AIR 1918 Mad 1210, Madras High Court said:

"Government denotes an established authority entitled and able to administer the public affairs of the country. On the other hand, 'Government' is not identical with any particular individuals who may be administering the Government."

1221. Dixon J. in Burns Vs. Ransley, (1944) 79 CLR 101 explaining the word "Government" as under:

"I take the word "Government" to signify the established system of political rules, the governing powers of the country consisting of the executive and the Legislature considered as an organized entity and independently of the persons of whom it consists from time to time. Any interpretation which would make the word cover the persons who happen to fill political or public offices for the time being, whether considered collectively or individually, would give the provision an application inconsistent with the parliamentary and democratic institutions and with the principles of the common law as understood in times, Governing the freedom of criticism and of expression."

1222. A Full Bench of this court in Ram Nandan Vs. State, AIR 1959 All 101 observed that the term "Government" has not been defined anywhere. Considering various provisions of the Constitution this Court observed that the "Government" means the executive machinery of the Union and of the States. It means the President acting with the advice of the Council of Ministers and the Governors acting with the advice of their Councils of Ministers. It is the system of Government or institution consisting of the President and the Governors acting with the advice of their Councils of Ministers and not the actual persons holding the offices of Presidents or Governors and the Ministers advising them. This Court quoted the approval and followed the observations of Bombay and Madras as noted above in Bhaskar Balwant Bhopatkar (supra) and Annie Besant (supra) respectively.

1223. In State of U.P. Vs. Nemchandra Jain, 1984 (2) SCC 405 the term "Government" was analyzed by the Apex Court observing that from the legal point of view, Government may be described as the exercise of certain powers and the performance of certain duties by public authorities or officers, together with certain private persons or corporations exercising public functions. The structure of the machinery of Government, and the regulation of the powers and duties which belong to different parts of this structure, are defined by the law, which also prescribes, to some extent, the mode in which these powers are to be exercised or those duties are to be performed. Government generally connotes three estates, namely, the Legislature, the Executive and the Judiciary. In a narrow sense it connotes executive only.

1224. The word "Government" has been defined in

Section 3(23) of the General Clauses Act, 1897 as under:

> "3(23). "Government".--This sub-section says that the terms "Government" or "the Government", shall include both the Central Government and any State Government."

1225. The term "State Government" has also been defined in the General Clauses Act, 1897 in Section 3(60). The above definition of General Clauses Act in fact does not give any exact meaning except of referring the words, in general and in broader sense.

1226. The Constitution declares the "Government" being entitled to file a suit or to be sued by virtue of Article 300 of the Constitution which reads as under :

> "Article 300. (1) The Government of India may sue or be sued by the name of the Union of India and the Government of a State may sue or be sued by the name of the State and may, subject to any provisions which may be made by Act of Parliament or of the Legislature of such State enacted by virtue of powers conferred by this Constitution, sue or be sued in relation to their respective affairs in the like cases as the Dominion of India and the corresponding Provinces or the corresponding Indian States might have sued or been sued if this Constitution had not been enacted.*
> (2) If at the commencement of this Constitution--
>
> (a) any legal proceedings are pending to which the Dominion of India is a party, the Union of India shall be deemed to be substituted for the Dominion in those proceedings; and
> (b) any legal proceedings are pending to which a

www.vadaprativada.com

Province or an Indian State is a party, the corresponding State shall be deemed to be substituted for the Province or the Indian State in those proceedings."

1227. Similarly, Section 79 C.P.C. provides for suits to be filed by or against the Government, as under :

"Section 79. Suits by or against the Government— In a suit by or against the Government, the authority to be named as plaintiff or defendant, as the case may be, shall be—

(a) in the case of a suit by or against the Central Government, the Union of India, and

(b) in the case of a suit by or against a State Government, the State."

www.vadaprativada.com

1228. Interpreting Article 300 of the Constitution of India the Apex Court in State of Punjab Vs. Okara Grain Buyers Syndicate Ltd. and others, AIR 1964 SC 669 observed that this Article does not give rise to any cause of action but merely says that the State can sue or be sued as a juristic personality. The juristic personality of the State is conferred as a whole which consists of the executive government headed by the Governor and it is not divided into various branches or department of the Government so as to result constituting such number of juristic personality as are the departments in a State Government.

1229. Nothing has been brought to us and neither any authority has been cited nor anything else has been placed before us to persuade us to take a view that the Sunni Central Waqf Board can be held to be a department of the State Government so as to bar a suit against the State Government. Had it been a department of the "Government" obviously a civil

suit under Section 9 CPC would not be maintainable for the reason that the State Government is a juristic personality as a whole which consists of all its limbs, i.e., various departments etc. Each and every department of the State Government cannot be said to be an "independent juristic personality" which can sue or be sued.

1230. The term "department of a State Government" also came to be considered before this Court in Ram Chandra Vs. District Magistrate, AIR 1952 All. 520 and this Court held that a department is a unit or branch of the Government, either Union or State, under the political control of a Minister or Secretary of State or President of the Board. Individual officers serving under a department do not constitute a department. The department has an entity distinct and separate from the officers serving under it.

1231. Drawing distinction between the "Government" and "Instrumentality of the State" within meaning of Article 12 of the Constitution in reference to Section 80 C.P.C. the question arose as to whether notice before filing a suit is a condition precedent to Electricity Board or not. The High Court of Kerala in V.Padmanabhan Nair Vs. Kerala State Electricity Board AIR 1989 Kerala 86 held that the statutory bodies like Electricity Board, Food Corporation, Urban Development Corporation etc. may be an "Instrumentality of the State" within the meaning of "Article 12" of the Constitution, nevertheless would not answer the description of "Government" as understood in law and has understood in the context of Section 80 C.P.C.

1232. We have referred to the term "Government" in detail only to demonstrate that the personality of the Government for the purpose of being sued or to sue is not to be looked into as further divided in various departments but it is the entire executive government including all its departments which constitute the "Government", a legal personality, having status to sue or be sued in that capacity.

1233. Where there is a dispute between two "States" of the Union of India or between one or more States and the Union of India, Article 131 of the Constitution confers original jurisdiction upon the Apex Court in regard to resolution of such dispute. In this context, the Apex Court in Chief Conservator of Forests, Government of Andhra Pradesh Vs. Collector and others, AIR 2003 SC 1805 observed that neither the Constitution of India nor CPC contemplates that two departments of a State or the Union of India will fight a litigation in a Court of law. It is neither appropriate nor permissible for two departments of the "State" to fight litigation in a Court of law. Various departments of the Government are its limbs and, therefore, they must act in coordination and not in confrontation. Although that was a case with respect to the justification of filing a writ petition yet the Apex Court deprecated the attempt of filing writ petition by one department against another and invoking extraordinary jurisdiction of the High Court. The Court observed that it smacks of indiscipline. It also held to be contrary to the basic concept of law that requires for suing or be sued there must be either a natural or juristic person.

1234. In para 13 of the judgment, the Court held:

> " Every post in the hierarchy of the posts in the Government set-up, from the lowest to the highest, is not recognised as a juristic person nor can the State be treated

www.vadaprativada.com

as represented when a suit/proceeding is in the name of such offices/posts or the officers holding such posts, therefore, in the absence of the State in the array of parties, the cause will be defeated for non-joinder of a necessary party to the lis..."

1235. It was made clear that the above principle does not apply to a case where an official of the Government acts as a statutory authority and sues or pursues further proceeding in its name because in that event, it will not be a suit or proceeding for or on behalf of a State /Union of India but by the statutory authority as such.

1236. With respect to the two departments fighting with each other, in para 14 of the judgment, the Court observed:

"It was not contemplated by the framers of the Constitution or the C. P. C. that two departments of a State or the Union of India will fight a litigation in a court of law. It is neither appropriate nor permissible for two departments of a State or the Union of India to fight litigation in a court of law. Indeed, such a course cannot but be detrimental to the public interest as it also entails avoidable wastage of public money and time. Various departments of the Government are its limbs and, therefore, they must act in co-ordination and not in confrontation. Filing of a writ petition by one department against the other by invoking the extraordinary jurisdiction of the High Court is not only against the propriety and polity as it smacks of undiscipline but is also contrary to the basic concept of law which requires that for suing or being sued, there must be either a natural or a juristic person."

1237. Best C.J. in Neale Vs. Turton (1827) 4 Bing. 149 at

page 151 observed that there is no principle by which a man can be at the the same time plaintiff and defendant. Sometimes it may happen that a person may be having different capacities in which he may act but as opined by Salmond in Salmond On Jurisprudence (supra) a man having two or more capacities would not derive a power to enter into a legal transaction with himself. Double capacity does not connote double personality. In certain circumstances, now by statute this concept has been diluted but so far as the two departments of the Government are concerned, the law of the land as already noticed above, is holding the field and we need not deal into this aspect any further.

1238. Thus, it is now settled that a department of the Government by itself has no legal personality and, therefore, it lacks capacity to sue or be sued ignoring the personality of the State. A department of the Government can always sue or be sued under the cover of the personality of the State and not of its own.

1239. This concept, however, would not apply to the cases where a statutory body or an incorporated body on its own enjoy the capacity of legal persona and, therefore, is well within its right to sue or be sued under its own name.

1240. Nobody could suggest in these cases that the Sunni Central Waqfs Board can be said to be a department of the Government. It cannot thus be identified with the Government. Once it is clear that the Waqfs Board has a different and independent juristic personality than the "Government", in the absence of any prohibition or bar either specifically or by or necessary implication in the statute, filing of a suit by one individual juristic personality against another cannot be

objected. Exclusion of remedy by way of filing a civil suit cannot be assumed easily and unless there is an express or by necessary implication a bar provided by the statute, a suit under Section 9 cannot be held “not maintainable”. Though we have expressly held that Sunni Central Waqfs Board is not an instrumentality of the State, yet even if it is so, we are clearly of the view that there is no impediment in its way in filing a suit in its own name against the State or its authorities for redressal of its grievance, if there is anything wrong by such authority.

1241. So far as the second issue that if it is a “State" within Article 12 of the Constitution, it may not act in a manner which may amount to discrimination against one set of community, we have already said and at the pain of repetition hold that the statutory functions of the Waqfs Board is to supervise the management of the Waqfs registered in various manners as provided in the statute and in such discharge of duty, it can take all such steps as permissible in law irrespective of fact whether such step is against an individual of a different religion or the entire community of different faith.

1242. Looking the matter in a wider concept, the act of the Sunni Central Central Waqfs Board in filing Suit-4 even otherwise cannot be said to be an act discriminatory to a community inasmuch treating the disputed property as a Waqf created in accordance with the Islamic laws, the Board is trying to protect the same from being usurped by anybody else, be that it is an individual or a group of individuals or the entire community and in this respect if in a particular manner all such persons constitute members of a particular community, that will not make the act of the Sunni Central Waqfs Board discriminatory or/and against a particular community.

1243. We answer both the above issues accordingly. We hold that neither the Waqf Board is "an Instrumentality of the State" nor it suffers any disability of filing a suit against State Government or its authorities nor there is anything wrong in the Waqf Board to file a suit representing the cause of Muslim community particularly for protection of a property which it claims to be a "waqf property". This is the principal function under the Act 1936, substituted by various subsequent Acts, as discussed above. Even if the Waqf Board is treated to be an "other authority" under Article 12 of the Constitution and covered by the term 'State' as defined under Article 12 of the Constitution, there is no impediment in the way of Sunni Central Waqfs Board in maintaining its suit.

1244. Issue 28 (Suit-5) reads as under:

> "Whether the suit is bad for want of notice under Section 65 of the U.P. Muslim Waqfs Act, 1960 as alleged by defendants 4 and 5? If so, its effect."

www.vadaprativada.com

1245. Defendant No.4-Sunni Central Waqf Board (Suit-5) in para 45 of the written statement dated 26/29 August, 1989 has pleaded about the non-maintainability of suit for want of notice and it reads as under:

> "That as the subject matter of the instant suit is a waqf property and stands registered as a waqf in the Register of Waqf maintained by the Sunni Waqf Board under section 30 of the Waqf Act and a Gazette notification in respect thereto has also been issued by the State Government in 1944 and the same stands recorded as a mosque even in the revenue record and other government records and the same is even accepted as a mosque by the State Government and its officers in the written statements filed

in Regular Suit No. 2 of 1950 as well as in Regular Suit No. 25 of 1950, (the instant suit could not be instituted against the answering defendants until the expiration of two months next after notice, in writing, had been delivered or left at the office of the Board as per requirement of Section 65 of the U.P. Muslim Waqf Act, 1960 and no such notice having been given to the answering defendants by the plaintiffs, the suit is not maintainable and is liable to be dismissed).”

1246. To examine the correctness of the above objection, let us consider Section 65 of U.P. Act No.XVI of 1960 which reads as under :

“Notice of suits by parties against the Board.- No suit shall be instituted against the Board in respect of any act purporting to be done by it in pursuance of this Act or of any rules made thereunder until the expiration of two months, next after notice in writing has been delivered to or left at the office of the Board, stating the cause of action the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff and the relief which he claims; and the plaint shall contain a statement that such notice has been so delivered or left.”

1247. From a bare reading of Section 65 of 1960 Act it is evident that the same would apply where a suit is filed questioning the validity of any action of the Waqf Board. It clearly says that in respect of any act purporting to be done by the Board in pursuance of 1960 Act or of any rules made thereunder, if a suit is filed, the same would not be maintainable unless a two months' notice has been given in writing to the Board giving the details, as mentioned in the aforesaid provision. Suit-5 does not challenge any action of the Waqf

Board taken under 1960 Act or the rules framed thereunder. Ex facie, the above provision is inapplicable considering the relief sought by the plaintiffs (Suit-5) which is confined to a declaration that the property in dispute therein belong to plaintiffs themselves and have sought a permanent injunction against the defendants prohibiting them from interfering with or raising any objection or placing any obstruction in construction of a new temple at the disputed site.

1248. Learned counsel for the defendants 4 and 5 (Suit-5) could not show as to how Section 65 would be attracted in respect of Suit-5. In fact they could not show that any action of the Waqf Board taken under 1960 Act or rules framed thereunder has been the cause of action for filing Suit-5. We therefore, have no hesitation in holding Section 65 of U.P. Act No.XVI of 1960 has no application in respect to the reliefs sought in Suit-5 and therefore, the suit cannot be held "not maintainable" for want of notice.

1249. Since the provisions itself is not applicable, as we have said, the question of considering its effect does not arise. The issue is answered accordingly.

1250. Though no such issue specifically has been framed, but during the course of argument Sri P.N.Mishra, learned counsel appearing for defendant No.20 (Suit 4) pointed out that U.P. Act No.XVI of 1960 has been repealed by Central Act No. 43 of 1995 i.e. Waqf Act, 1995 (hereinafter referred to as '1995 Act')which has came into force on 01.01.1996. He drew our attention to Section 112 of 1995 Act which read as under :

> "Repeal and savings.-(1) The Waqf Act, 1954 (29 of 1954) and the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 1984 (69 of 1984) are hereby repealed.

www.vadaprativada.com

(2) Notwithstanding such repeal, anything done or any action taken under the said Acts shall be deemed to have been done or taken under the corresponding provisions of this Act.

(3) If, immediately before the commencement of this Act, in any State, there is in force in that State, any law which corresponds to this Act that corresponding law shall shall stand repealed;

Provided that such repeal shall not affect the previous operation of that corresponding law, and subject thereto, anything done or any action taken in the exercise of any power conferred by or under the corresponding law shall be deemed to have been done or taken in the exercise of the powers conferred by or under this Act as if this Act was in force on the day on which such things were action was taken."

1251. He submits that since all State Laws have also been repealed by sub-section (3) of Section 112, U.P. Act No.XVI of 1960 is no more operative since 1st January, 1996. He also drew our attention to Section 87 of 1995 Act which reads as under :

"87. Bar to the enforcement of right on behalf of unregistered waqfs.-(1) Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, no suit, appeal or other legal proceeding for the enforcement of any right on behalf of any waqf which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall be instituted or commenced or heard, tried or decided by any Court after the commencement of this Act, or where any such suit, appeal or other legal proceeding had been instituted or commenced before such commencement, no

such suit, appeal or other legal proceeding shall be continued, heard, tried or decided by any Court after such commencement unless such waqf has been registered, in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

(2) The provisions of sub-section (1) shall apply as far as may be, to the claim for set-off or any other claim made on behalf of any waqf which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of this Act."

1252. It is contended by him that the notification dated 26th February, 1944 in respect to the property having been held invalid, no suit in respect to an unregistered waqf is maintainable and Section 87 encompass even the pending suits. He submits that even hearing or trial of the pending suit in respect to an unregistered waqf is not permissible.

1253. Sri Jilani, learned counsel for the plaintiffs (Suit-4) raised serious objection to the above argument pointing out that since no such issue has been framed, it would not be permissible for this Court to look into this aspect of the matter and the above argument has to be rejected outright as not entertainable.

1254. We gave our serious thought to the matter. Since Section 87 of 1995 Act prohibits even pending suits from being heard and tried in respect to an unregistered waqf and this being a mandate of law, this Court cannot ignore the same merely because there is no formal issue framed in this respect particularly considering the fact that enactment of 1995 Act is a subsequent event and the said Act has come into force during the pendency of this matter i.e. at the stage when this Court started recording evidence. However, we find that the question whether Suit-4 cannot proceed by virtue of the mandate contain in Section 87 of 1995 Act is not a pure question of law since

condition precedent for attracting the said provision is that the waqf has not been registered with the Board at all.

1255. Despite our enquiry from the learned counsel for the defendant No.20, Sri Mishra could not show any such pleading in the written statement or additional written statement. In fact no such averment has been made in any of the written statement or additional written statement of any of the defendants that the property in dispute is not a registered waqf.

1257. It is not the case of any of the defendants (Suit-4) that there is no registration or that registration was not done validly in accordance with the procedure prescribed under the Act or the averments contained in para 45 of the written statement of defendants No.4 (Suit-5) or para 16 of the written statement of defendant no. 10 (Suit-1) is factually incorrect. Since the question as to whether a particular waqf property is a registered one or unregistered one is a question of fact and there being an averment stating that the disputed property is a registered waqf, which has not been pleaded to be incorrect by the other side, we are of the view that Suit -4 filed by the Waqf Board and others cannot be held not maintainable by virtue of

1258. It would also be important to notice that the Notification under Section 5 of Act of 1936 was held invalid by the learned Civil Judge in 1966, to be more precise on 21st April, 1966. The defendant No.4 had filed its written statement in Suit 5 on 26/29 August, 1989 stating that the property in question is registered as waqf in the register of waqfs maintained by the Board under Section 30 of Act 16 of 1960. There are three ways in which details of Muslim waqfs can be collected and thereafter they are to be entered in the register maintained by the Board; (i) pursuant to the notification issued by the Board after enquiry made by the Waqf Commissioner; (ii) On an application made by the Mutwalli of the concerned waqf; and (iii) Suo moto by issuing notice by the Board to the Mutawalli of the Waqf..

1259. The averments that the disputed building is registered as 'waqf' in the Board under Section 30 of Act 16 of 1960 having not been seriously challenged by the plaintiffs (Suit-5), no issue on this aspect has been framed. Lots of amendments were made in the pleadings after the decision of the Apex Court in Dr. Mohammad Ismail (supra) but no amendment or addition of any issue in this regard has been found necessary by any of the parties opposing the authority of the Sunni Board in pursuing Suit-4 as plaintiff or other suits as defendant. Mere declaration of the Notification issued under Section 5 of Act 1936 as invalid would not deprive the Sunni Board to take steps for registration of the building in dispute as waqf in the register maintained by it under Act 16 of 1960. In the absence of any factual foundation, it would not be justified for this Court to take recourse of Section 87 of 1995 Act and non suit Sunni Board or other muslim parties.

1260. Sri Mishra, however, made some detailed legal arguments on this aspects hence we propose to consider such submissions to find out substance, if any, therein.

1261. It is said that Section 87 has a non obstante clause and therefore its mandate shall prevail not only over any contract but to any other law for the time being in force. Reliance is placed on Union of India and Others Vs. SICOM Ltd. and Anr. 2009 AIR SCW 635 (at page 638) where para 3 reads as under:

> "3. Mr. Shekhar Naphade, Learned senior counsel appearing on behalf of the respondent, on the other hand, submitted that principle that a crown debt prevails over other debt is confined only to the unsecured ones as secured debts will always prevail over a crown debt. Our attention in this behalf has been drawn to the non obstante clause contained in Section 56 of the 1951 Act. It was furthermore contendd that for the self-same reason Section 529A in the Companies Act was inserted in terms by way of special provisions creating charge over the property and some of the State Government also amended their Sales Tax Laws incorporating such a provision. The Central Government also with that view, amended the Employee's Provident Funds and (Miscellaneous) Provisions Act, 1952 and Employee's State Insurance Act, 1948.
> The learned counsel appears to be right."

1262. Reliance is also placed on State Bank of India Vs. Official Liquidator of Commercial Ahmedabad Mills Co. and Others 2009 CLC 73 where Gujrat High Court in para 13 of the judgement observed:

> "Section 529-A of the Act opens with a non obstante

clause… Therefore, the said provision has an over writing effect not only qua the provisions of the act but also any other law for the time being in force...".

1263. The proposition with respect to a provision having non obstante clause being a well established legal principal admits no doubt. However this by itself may not result in any consequence to the suits in question.

1264. Sri Mishra further submitted that the prohibition contained against unregistered waqf is quite reasonable and in accord with the judgement of the Apex Court in Bhandara District Central Cooperative Bank Ltd. and Others Vs. State of Maharashtra and Anr. 1993 Supp (3) SCC 259 wherein Section 145 of Maharashtra Cooperative Societies Act, 1996, which barred an unregistered society from using the word 'cooperative' in its name or title, was held reasonable and in the interest of general public. There is no challenge to the correctness of Section 87 of 1995 Act and therefore, in our view, the aforesaid submission and the authority cited would have no application in this case.

1265. Relying on a decision of Andhra Pradesh High Court in Pamulapati Buchi Naidu College Committee Nidubroly and Ors. Vs. Government of Andhra Pradesh and Ors. AIR 1958 A.P. 773, it was submitted that registration of waqf confers right upon the Sunni Central Board of Waqf to sue or be sued in respect of the affairs and properties of the registered waqf while in case of unregistered waqf of alleged Babari Masjid, the Sunni Central Board of Waqf has no right to maintain Suit-4. In the above decision it was held that if a society is not registered under the Act, it would have the character of an association which cannot sue or be sued except in the name of all the members of the association. Registration of the society confers on it certain advantages. Once the society is registered, it enjoins the status of a legal entity apart from the members constituting the same and is capable of suing or being sued. To the same effect is another authority relied by Sri Mishra i.e. Radhasoami Satsang Sabha Dayalbag Vs. Hanskumar Kishanchand AIR 1959 MP 172 wherein the Court said that the registration under the Societies Registration Act confers on a society a legal personality and make it corporation or quasi corporation capable of entering into contracts.

1266. In our view, the submission as well as the reliance on the aforesaid judgments in the case in hand is thoroughly misconceived though the ratio of the said authorities is unexceptionable. It is not the case of defendant No.20 that the Sunni Central Waqf Board, a statutory body, was not constituted in accordance with the provisions contained in U.P. Act, 1936. The U.P. Muslims Waqf Act whether of 1936 or 1960 or the Central Waqf Acts of 1954 or 1995 neither create a waqf nor extinguish one, if it already exists. They recognize the waqfs created and existing in accordance with the law of Islam and make provisions for proper administration and maintenance thereof primarily so as to avoid any maladministration, misfeasance of waqf property. Registration of waqf in effect, considering in the light of the provisions of the aforesaid enactments, only means that the waqf is known to the concerned Waqf Board as to whether it is a Shia waqf or Sunni waqf and having entered their name in the register, the concerned Board should be in a capacity to supervise management and administration etc. of such waqfs. The purpose of enactment is public interest so that the waqf property may not be misappropriated or misused. With this objective the legislature intend to compel so as to have a complete picture of all existing valid waqfs created in accordance with Islamic law, has made such provision. By itself, it neither affects the existence of a waqf which though created in accordance with the Islamic law but for one or the other reason could not have been entered in the register of the concerned Waqf Board nor extinguish it. Besides, Section 87 it does not say that a pending suit in respect of a waqf which has not been registered shall stand abated or be dismissed but provides that it shall not be tried, or heard or decided by the Court, after the commencement of the Act, unless such waqf has been registered in accordance with the provisions of 1995 Act. Meaning thereby even during pendency of a matter, such a waqf can be registered by the Waqf Board and thereafter the suit, if pending but deferred, would continue and can be heard and decided.

1267. It is also contended that under U.P. Act, 1936, a waqf can be registered by the Sunni Board pursuant to its name find mention in the gazette issued by the Central Board under Section 5(1) or if it is registered on an application of Mutawalli under Section 38(2) or where the Central Waqf Board has issued direction to concerned Mutawalli to apply for registration of a waqf or supply any information regarding waqf. It is said that the notification dated 26th February 1944 qua the alleged waqf in question having been declared invalid, registration based thereon also becomes null and void. Further that there is no registration as per the procedure prescribed in Section 38 or 40 of 1936 Act, it cannot be said that the Sunni Board can maintain a suit on behalf of such a waqf since Section 18(1) and (2)

enable the concerned Board to maintain suit in respect of administration and recovery of lost properties only of those waqfs to which the provision of the Act applies. It is contended that the Act being inapplicable to waqf in question due to its non registration, the plaintiffs have no right to maintain Suit-4 and it is liable to be dismissed.

1268. In our view, there is no occasion to consider this aspect of the matter for reasons more than one. The notification under Section 5(1) of 1936 Act has been held invalid so far as the alleged waqf in question is concerned. This is not disputed by the learned counsels appearing for the plaintiffs (Suit-4). However, there is a presumption on the part of the defendant No.20 that the alleged registration claimed by the plaintiffs (Suit-4) in para 45 of written statement in Suit-5 is based on the notification dated 26th February, 1944 and none else though defendant 4 (Suit-5) (Central Sunni Waqf Board) has taken this stand in para 45 of their written statement by referring to Section 30 of Act 16 of 1960 and not that of U.P. Act, 1936. There is no averment in pleadings of any of the Hindu parties including defendant No.20 that this averment of defendant No.4 in Suit No.5 is incorrect or that there is no registration of the waqf in question at all. In the absence of any such facts pleaded by the concerned parties and in particular defendant no. 20, we find no reason to consider this aspect of the matter merely on the presumption of defendant No.2 particularly when the question is a mixed question of fact and law and in the absence of specific factual pleading, it would not be appropriate to presume certain facts and thereafter decide the applicability of Section 87 of 1995 Act in this case.

1269. In the written submissions Volume 2 at page 254

para 11 it has been contended by Sri Mishra:

> "As after invalidation of notification under Section 5(1) of the United Provinces Act, 1936 neither fresh survey of the waqf in question was caused under Section 6 of the Uttar Pradesh Muslim Wakfs Act, 1960 nor application for registration was made under Section 29(2) of the said Act of 1960 within a period of three months nor the Board did take any steps for registration of the said wakf under Section 31 of the said Act of 1960. The alleged wakf remained unregistered wakf to which neither 1936 Act nor 1960 Act or 1995 Act are applicable as such the Plaintiff Wakf Board has no locus standi and instant Suit is hit by the provision of Section 87(1) of the Wakf Act, 1995. As such, the instant suit is not fit for being continued, heard, tried or decided and is liable to be dismissed on this score alone."

1270. In respect to the procedure to be followed under 1960 Act without there being any pleading, the learned counsel has presumed that neither any registration was made under Section 29(2) nor any steps were taken under Section 31 of Act 16 of 1960 nor any fresh survey of the waqf in question was made under Section 6 of the aforesaid Act, hence the waqf in question remain unregistered. In the absence of any pleading, we find it difficult to entertain the above submission involving pure factual aspects which ought to have been pleaded. Reference is also made to Section 66E of Waqf Act, 1954 but Sri Mishra, learned counsel could not dispute that Waqf Act, 1954, which was a Central Act, was not made applicable to the State of Uttar Pradesh and therefore, reliance on the said provision is wholly misplaced.

1271. Sri Mishra referred to Section 6 of the Societies Registration Act, 1860 and Section 69(2) of Partnership Act, 1932 which are concerned to registered Society or Firm but in our view, the same would have no application to the case in hand for the reason we have already discussed above with reference to the decisions in Pamulapati Buchi Naidu College Committee Nidubroly (supra) and Radhasoami Satsang Sabha Dayalbag (supra).

1272. Referring to Section 2 of Shariyat Act, 1937 as amended by Madras Act 18 of 1949 as also the Apex Court's decision in C.Mohammad Yunus Vs. Syed Unnissa and Ors. AIR 1961 SC 808, it is contended that the Act was applied to all cities and provinces but in our view, neither the aforesaid provisions nor the decision of the Apex Court in C. Mohammad Yunus (supra) has any relevance with the point in question.

1273. Referring to certain documents, which are on record, and the translation provided thereof, Sri Mishra has submitted in his written arguments as under:

> A. In the application for registration of waqf made under section 38 of the United Provinces Muslim Waqfs Act, XIII of 1936 being exhibit 38 on pages 199 to 205 of the Volume No.11 of the documents filed in the instant suit by the Plaintiffs in its column no.3 it has been stated that there is no waqf but the waqifs are Emperor Babar and Nawab Sa'-a-Dat Ali Khan. Below column no.16 there is a note which says that the claim of the alleged Mutwalli's family is that the within mentioned property said to be granted for maintenance of the alleged Babari Mosque at somewhere else is not a waqf but a Service Grant in their favour. The aforesaid application tells the

Emperor Babar and Nawab Sa'-a-Dat Ali Khan as joint waqifs which is quite impossible because the Emperor Babar died in 1530 AD while Nawab Sa'a-Dat Ali Khan ascended on throne in 1732 AD as such the persons who were not contemporary and there was a gap of 202 years between the former and later they cannot be joint waqifs of same of one waqf alleged to be Babri Masjid Waqf. This fact alone totally falsify the claim of the plaintiffs that the alleged waqf was created by the Emperor Babar. The grant in question was also a service grant not a waqf. The person who made application namely, Syed Kalbe Hussain had also his vested interest as it appears from the note of the application that his intention was to file a case against the persons who were enjoying their property claiming the same to be a service grant; from being motivated with such spirit and he made the aforesaid application for registration making fraudulent dishonest false and frivolous statements.

B. Be it mentioned herein that the plaintiffs have used fraud upon this Hon'ble Court by producing wrong transliteration of the note contained in said application for registration. Though in its original Urdu text it has been recorded that the persons recorded in revenue records do not consider it waqf but in Hindi transliteration thereof the plaintiffs by deleting the word 'nahi' of vital importance which finds place in between the words 'waqf' and 'tasleem' have made it meant that those persons says that it is waqf and nankar mafi. This fact came into light when the original text was read over in open Court by the Hon'ble Justice S.U.Khan, J. during my argument.

C. In the list of Sunni Waqfs published in supplement to the Government Gazette of United Provinces dated 26th February, 1944 under Section 5 of U.P. Muslim Waqfs Act, XIII of 1936 to which, according to the report of the Commissioner of waqfs, the provisions of the said Act apply; on page 11 at serial no.26 (being the volume No.12 of the documents filed in the instant suit) it has been notified that Babri Mosque is located at Qasba Shahnawa not at Ramkot in Ayodhya. Hindi transliteration of relevant page of the said gazette notification containing the name of Badshah Babar on serial No.26 is on page no.341 to 345 of volume 12 of the documents filed in the instant suit. Hindi Transliteration of the proforma of the list as well as the entries against item no.26 of the said reads as follows:

www.vadaprativada.com

	नामे वाकिफ या वक्फ	नाम–ए–मतवली मौजूदा	नौ इयते जायदाद मकूफा
26	बादशाह बाबर	सैयद मोहम्मद जकी मतबली मस्जिद बाबरी कस्बा शाहनबा डाकखाना दर्शनगर

From the above Gazette notification dated 26th February, 1944 it appears that Badshah Babar had erected a Mosque in Shahnawa town within the postal jurisdiction of Darshan Nagar of which Syed Mohammed Zaki was Mutawalli. The said gazette notification did not say that there was a mosque in Ramkot Pargana Havelli, Ayodhya in the district of Faizabad. As such said Babri Mosque Waqf cannot be construed to be waqf of any other Babri Mosque located anywhere else.

D. In the said gazette notification dated 26th February, 1944 (on page 479 of the volume 12 of the documents filed in the instant suit) another Babri Mosque along with the Mausoleum of the Emperor Babur has been mentioned in some other district perhaps in the district of Kanpur. It is well known recognized and admitted fact that the Mausoleum of the Emperor Babur is in Kabul, Afganistan not in India. This is glaring example of the facts of fraud, forgery and fabrication.

E. From the above mentioned relevant entries of the list of the gazette notification dated 26th February, 1944 it becomes clear that the waqf commissioners had not discharged their duties as it was cost upon them under the provisions of the United Provinces Muslim Waqfs Act, 1936 and in very casual manner either on hearsay they have listed several properties as of waqfs or the concern Waqf Commissioner were active participant in the fraud, forgery and fabrication.

F. The Waqf Commissioner Faizabad's report dated 8th February, 1941 says that it appears that in 935 A.H. Emperor Babar built Babari or Janam Asthan Mosque at Ajudhya and appointed one Syed Abdul Baqi as the Mutwalli and khatib of the Mosque and for its maintenance an annual grant of Rs.60 was allowed by the said Emperor which continued till the fall of the Mughal kingdom. Later on said grant was increased by Nawab Sa-a-Dat Ali Khan to Rs.302/3/6 but no original papers about this grant by the king of Oudh are available. Relevant extract of said report reads as follows:

> "It appears that in 935 A.H. Emperor Babar built this mosque and appointed Syed Abdul Baqi as the mutwalli and khatib of the Mosque (vide clause 2 statement filed by Syed Mohammad Zaqi to whom a notice was issued under the Wakf Act.) An annual grant of Rs.60/- was allowed by the Emperor for maintenance of the mosque and the family of the first mutwalli Abdul Baqi. This grant was continued till of the fall of the Moghal Kingdom at Delhi and the ascendancy of the Nawabs of Oudh.

According to Cl. 3 of the written statement of Mohammad Zaki Nawab Sa'adat Ali Khan, King of Oudh increased the annual grant to Rs.302/3/6. No original papers about this grant by the king of Oudh are available."

From the aforesaid extract it is crystal clear that the Commissioner on the basis of mere statement of Syed Mohammed Zaki found that the Disputed Janam Asthan Structure was a mosque built by Emperor Babar which is in total discard to his duty cast upon him under said Act XIII of 1936.

G. Commissioner's said report dated 8th Feb. 1941 says that after the mutiny the British Govt. continued the above grant in cash upto 1864 and in the later year in lieu of cash some revenue free land in village Bhuraipur and Sholeypur was granted. The said report further records that Syed Mohammed Zaki produced a copy of the grant order of the British Govt. which was made on condition that Rajab Ali and Mohammad Asghar would render Police, Military or Political service etc. Thereafter the commissioner records that the above-mentioned object is elucidated in Urdu translation as follows:

"After the Mutiny, the British Government, also continued the above grant in cash upto 1864, and in the latter year in lieu of the cash grant, the British Government ordered the grant of some revenue free land in villages Bhuraipur and Sholeypur. A copy of this order of the British Government has been filed by the objector Syed Mohammad Zaki (vide Flag A). This order says that 'the Chief Commissioner under the authority of the Governor General in Council is pleased to maintain the Grant for so long as the object for which the grant has been made is kept up on the following conditions'. These conditions require Rajab Ali and Mohammad Asghar to whom the sannad was given, to perform duties of land holder in the matter of Police Military or political service etc. Thus the original object of the state grant of Emperor Babar and nawab Sa'adat Ali Khan is continued in this Sunnad by the British Government also i.e. maintenance of the mosque. The Nankar is to be enjoyed by the grantees for so long as the object of the grant i.e. the mosque is in existence."

H. In fact, this Urdu elucidation is creation of the said Waqf Commissioner as it is not in the alleged Sunned being page 33 of the volume 6 of the documents filed in the instant suit. Hindi transliteration and meaning of the said elucidative Urdu text as incorporated in the Waqf Commissioner's said report reads as follows:

''उस नानकार को जबतक कि मस्जिद जिसके वास्ते ये नानकार दी गयी थी बरकरार है। हसबे शरायत,दर्ज जैल कायम फरमाते हैं (जो शर्तें लिखी गयी हैं उसे कहते हैं)''

A handwritten copy of the said sunnad with some error has been reproduced at page 27 of volume 10 of the documents filed in the instant suit. In the said alleged original version of the grant Urdu elucidation did not find place. From the said alleged original version of the alleged grant, it becomes crystal clear that the grant, if any, it was a service grant for rendering police, military and political services to the British Govt. against the enemies of the British Govt. Be it mentioned herein that in those days in the eyes of the Britishers the persons who were fighting against them for liberation of their motherland i.e. India they were considered to be mutineers and enemies of the Britishers. As such it can be inferred that the said service grant was given for helping the Britishers to defeat and rout the freedom fighters, not for a good cause of maintaining any Mosque. Full text of the alleged SUNNAD from page 33 of Vol. 6 (hand written copy on page 27 of Vol. 10 that is not accurate) is reproduced as follows:

"Chief commissioner's

It having been established after due enquiry, that Rajub ally and Mohamad Usgar received a Cash Nankar of (Rs.302.3.6) Rupees three hundred to and three annas and six pie from Mouzah Shanwah Zila Faizabad from former Government. The Chief Commissioner, under the authority of the Governor General in Council is pleased to maintain the grant for long as the object for which the grant has been made is kept the following conditions. That they shall have surrendered all sunnads, title deeds, and other documents relative to the grant. That they and their successor shall strictly (illegible) all the duties of land-holder in matter of police, and an (torn) or political service that they may be required of them by the authorities and that they shall never fall under the just suspicion of favouring in any way designs of enemies of the British Government. If any one of these conditions is broken by Rajub ally and Mohamad Usgar or their successor the grant will be immediately resumed."

I. From the aforesaid alleged to be original text of the grant as produced by the plaintiffs it becomes crystal clear that Urdu interpolation has been done by the said Commissioner with sole motive to deprive the Hindus from their sacred shrine of Sri Ramjanamsthan which has been described as Babri Mosque in the plaint as well as Janam Asthan Mosque in the said Commissioner's report. From the words 'Janam Asthan Mosque' itself it becomes clear that the alleged Mosque was erected over the birth place of someone, and since time immemorial said place is being worshipped by the Hindus asserting that it is the birth place of the Lord of Universe Sri Ram it is needless to say that according to the said Commissioner, the alleged Mosque was erected over the janamasthan of Sri Ramlala.

J. The said Waqf Commissioner after recording the facts that Syed Mohammed Zaki had submitted before him that the said British grant was a service grant in favour of his predecessors for rendering police, military and political services to the Britishers subject to resumption on non-fulfillment of the aforesaid conditions thus it was not a waqf property granted for maintenance of the alleged mosque; the commissioner without any cogent evidence rejected his said contention simply stating that he did not agree to that view because the grant was not originally granted by the Britishers but it was continuation of original grant granted by the Muslim rulers as also for the reasons that after the Ajodhya riot of 1934 Syed Mohammad Zaki had presented an application to Deputy Commissioner in which he had described himself as Mutawalli or trustee of the mosque and of the trust attached thereto. In fact, prior to coming on this reference, in the preceding paragraphs of his said report the said commissioner himself has recorded that no paper of old grant even of the Nawabs of Oudh was available and placed before him. It is contrary to the law of evidence to draw inference on the basis of the statement of a person whose credibility was found suspicious, doubtful and non-reliable. As in his report the commissioner records that said Syed Mohammed Zaki was an opium addict and most unsuited for the proper performance of the duties expect of a Mutwalli of an ancient and historical mosque, which was not kept even in proper repairs for which reason he recommended to discharge the said Mutwalli. Relevant extract from said report is reproduced as follows:

> "Syed Mohammad Zaki, the objector, who is known as the Mutwalli of the Babari mosque, and also called himself as such raises an objection to the land in Sholeypur and Bhuranpur being regarded as a waqf, because he says the grant has been made for his substenance only (in Urdu). In do not agree with this view of his. The written statement filed by Mohammad Zaki himself is sufficient to show that the grant has been continued ever since 935 A.H. only because he and his ancestors were required to look after the mosque and keep it in proper condition out of the income allowed to them and also to provide for the maintenance of himself and his ancestors out of a part of the same grant.

Clearly then the grant of land to Mohammad Zaki must be regarded as a Waqf, the purpose of which is the maintenance of the religious building known as the Babari Mosque.

The learned counsel for Mohammad Zaki has also argued.

1) That the particular grant of land in Sholeypur and Bhureypur has been made by the British Government. A Non-Muslim body and hence the grant cannot be regarded as Muslim Waqf.

2) That the grant is a conditional one, being subject to resumption on non fulfillment by the grantee of any of the police Military or duties enjoined in the Sunnad, and that on account of these conditions the grant cannot be classed as a Muslim Waqf.

I do not agree with either view. firstly the British Government only continued a grant which had been made by the Muslim Government originally and in these circumstances, I cannot but regard the grant as a waqf.

3) As for the second point the conditions have been imposed upon the grantee, and not upon the way in which the grant to be utilized, which latter purpose is recognised as maintenance of the mosque. It is clear that if the conditions are broken the enjoyment of the grant by the Mutwalli himself for his sustence is to be withdrawn apparently implying that any other mutwalli will then be appointed to administer the grant for the original purpose of maintaining the mosque. I am strengthened in this view because I find the mention of the object of the grant i.e. maintenance of the mosque at the very outset of the Sunnad and the desirability thereof seems to be clear from the whole Sunnad.

I also find that after the Ajodhya riot of 1934, Syed Mohammad Zaki presented an application (Flag Ex. A) to Deputy Commissioner, in which he clearly described himself as Mutwalli or trustee of the mosque and of the trust attached thereto.

I also find that this same Mohammad Zaki submitted accounts in 1925 in Tahsildar's court in which he stated that the income from the grant managed by him was utilized for maintenance of the mosque, pay of Imam Muezzin and the provisions of Iftari etc., during Ramzan after deduction of Rs.20/- per month for sustence of the Mutwalli himself. The pay of the Mutwalli spends a much greater portions of the income on his own personal needs.

K. The Wakf Commissioner Faizabad in his said report dated 8th Feb. 1941 says that he examined Abdul Ghaffar, the then pes Niwaz who deposed that the imam was not being paid for last 11 years and thereafter the said commissioner says that the then Syed Mohammud Zaki was an opium addict and most unsuited to the proper performance of the duties expected from an Mutwalli of an ancient and historical mosque, thus he was liable to be discharged from his duties. Relevant extract from the said report which is on page nos. 45 to 48 of the volume No. 6 of the documents filed in the instant suit read as follows:

> "The present Mutwalli is of course a Shia. There is no information as to the sect to which Abdul Baqi himself belonged, but the founder Emperor Babar- was admittedly a Sunni, the Imam and Muezzin at the mosque are Sunni and only Sunnis say their prayer in it. Abdul Ghaffar the present Pesh Niwaj was examined by me. He swear that the ancestors of Mohammad Zaki were Sunnis who latter on was converted to Shia. He further said that he did not receive his pay during the last 11 years. In 1936 the Mutwalli executed a pronote promising to pay the arrear of pay by installment but upto this time nothing actually was done. I think therefore that this should be regarded as a Sunni Trust.
> I must say in the end that from the reports that I have heard about the present Mutwalli, he is an opium addict (vide his statement flag Ez) and most unsuited to the proper performance of the duties expected of a Mutwalli of an ancient and historical mosque, which is not kept even in proper repairs. It is desirable that, if possible, a committee of management should be appointed to supervise the

L. From the second report of the Commissioner of Waqf Faizabad being report dated 8th February, 1941 it becomes clear that the Imam was not being paid since 1930 and the alleged Mutwalli was an opium addict and most unsuitable person and in 1934 riots on 27th March, the alleged Mosque was demolished it can be safely inferred that Sri Ramjanamsthan temple structure was being used as a mosque because it cannot be imagined that a person will discharge duty of imam without getting salary for such a long period as according to Islamic law, only salary is the prescribed means of livelihood no imam can survive for want of salary as such in fact neither there was any mosque nor there was any mutwalli or imam.

M. From exhibit-62 being page nos.367 to 405 of volume 12 of the documents filed in the instant suit which is a report of the four historians it becomes crystal clear that how said report has been prepared having some design in mind or inadvertently and negligently which reflects from page 397 of the said volume where the dimension of the vedi described by Tieffenthaler has been wrongly reproduced as "a square platform 5 inches above ground, 5 inches long and 4 inches wide, constructed of mud and covered with lime. The Hindus call it Bedi, that to say, the birth place. The reason is that here there was a house in which Beschan (Bishan = Vishnu) took the form of Ram". Though correct dimension given by Tiffenthaler reads "a square chest, raised five inches from the ground, covered with lime, about five ells in length by not more than four in breadth. The Hindoos call it bedi, the cradle; and the reason is, that there formerly stood here the house in which Beshan (Vishnoo) was born in the form of Ram." This correct translation is given in the book 'Modern Traveller' volume 3, published by James Duncan in 1828. It is crystal clear that in the report of said historians the word 'ells' has been translated as 'inches' in fact, ells means yards which has been correctly translated in the translation made available by the Govt. of India to this Hon'ble Court. Tieffenthelar has not stated that the Bedi was of mud, it is creation of the mind of the aforesaid historians, as such said report of the historians is not reliable for the reasons of being prepared by incompetent persons or for being biased, motivated.

N. The page No. 155 of volume 6 of the documents filed in the instant suit purported to be copy of a folio of a register contains a pedigree wherein it has been written that the mafi was created for the muezzin and khattib of masjid Babari of Oudh date and year of the waqf is unknown to Syed Baqi therefore his son Syed (illegible) Ali, his son Syed Hussain Ali who was in possession for about 60 years now his son-in-law Rajab Ali and his daughter's son Muhammad Asgar are in existence and were in receipt of cash from village Shahnawa vide receipt (illegible) till fasali year 1263. In the year 1264 fasali enquiry about mafi was started but riot took place (illegible) crop (illegible) year 63 fasali was found (illegible) original (illegible) of and is document (illegible) in respect of mafi (illegible) settlement of village versus (illegible). A copy of the said contents has also been compiled in the said volume no.6 of the documents filed in the instant suit on its page nos. 157 to 161.

O. From the said enquiry report it appears that during the period of 332 years people of five generations including Syed Baqi held the office of muezzin and khattib of alleged Babri mosque during the period of 1528 to 1860 which means 66½ years was average of each generations which is quite impossible as according to Life Insurance Corporation's assessment average span of a change of generation is 26 years. And this pedigree is completely false, forged and fabricated one. During this period 16 generations of the Mughal rulers elapsed average whereof comes about 20 ¾ years. In the matter of Radha Krishan v. State of Bihar the Hon'ble Supreme Court has laid down the principle of law to evaluate and judge authenticity of a pedigree which has been reproduced in this argument at relevant place.

P. The alleged documents and/or transliteration thereof being page nos. 53 to 61 of the volume no.6 of the documents filed in the instant suit tells that the alleged Babri Mosque was demolished by the rioters and Bairagis on 27th March, 1934. The damaged domes were beyond repair. The allege list of damages says that apart from damaging the building, the Hindus either burnt or took away with them three pieces of mats, six pieces of matress, one piece of box, two pieces sandal, six pieces of curtains, five pieces of pitchers, hundred places badhana mitti, four pieces of small earthen pot, one piece chahar, water pot (illegible) three pieces Kasauti Patthar Tarikhi, 3

x 1½ sq. ft. one piece, ladder two pieces, large iron jar two pieces. From the said list it is crystal clear that no engraved stone i.e. inscription was either carried away by the rioters or destroyed by the rioters. As such the story of the destruction of inscription is wholly concocted and the inscription which was prepared by the contractor was done at the instance of the Britishers to deprive the Hindus from their religious place and make the said place as bone of contention between Hindus and Muslims to facilitate their policy of divide and rule. As it has been written in the East India Gazetteer 1828 p. 352, 2nd column last para as well as the preface of the Neil B.E. Baillie's Digest of Moohummudan Law Vol.2 Edn. 1875 Introduction p. xi and xii.

Q. In Waqf Commissioner's report dated Feb. 8 1941, it has been recorded that the alleged Babri Mosque was built by one Abdul Baqi on being ordered to do so by the Emperor Babur. He records that there is no document to show that grant was sanctioned to the said Mosque either by the Mughal Emperors or Nawabs of Oudh, but as in 1864 a sunnud was issued stating that the grant was given to the grantee for rendering military, police and political services. It may be presumed that it was granted in continuance of the grants of Mughal Emperors to Nawabs of Oudh right from the Emperor Babur. The said Commissioner in his waqf report has committed forgery and fabrication by inserting certain words in Urdu transcript to show that the grant was given for maintenance of the alleged Babri Mosque. In fact, said sunnud is on record and entire sunnud is in English language and nothing is written in the said sunnud in Urdu transcript as such question of grant for maintenance of Babri Mosque cannot and does not arise at all. He says that some return submitted in the office of Tahsildar in 1995 shows that though major expenses was done by the grantee for his own maintenance, but a portion thereof was spent on maintaining alleged Babri Mosque. Be it mentioned herein that if grant would have been spent on maintaining alleged Babri Mosque its account would have been submitted to the District Civil court which was made mandatory under the provisions of The Mussalman Wakf Act, 1923 under Section 3 of the said Act. Report also says that the Imam was not paid for last 11 years i.e. since 1930 as also that the Mutwalli is a drug addict and the alleged Mosque is in not good condition as such Mutwalli should be removed.

1274. Suffice it to say that Section 87 would be attracted where a waqf is not registered under the Act. If there was some irregularity or discrepancy in the procedure observed, whether that would make a waqf otherwise registered by the Central Sunni Waqf Board as unregistered, is neither an issue framed nor there is requisite pleadings by the concerned parties giving an opportunity to plaintiffs (Suit-4) to place on record the relevant evidence. So far as the appreciation of the documents, referred to above in sub paras A to Q, we are clearly of the view that the same would not negate an otherwise positive assertion by defendant 4 (Suit-5) which is not disputed at all by the other side by challenging the said pleading. Moreover no issue on this aspect has been framed. In our view, the suits in question cannot be held to be barred by Section 87 of the Act.

1275. There is another aspect. There are specific issues concerning the very existence of the waqf and creation of a valid waqf in accordance with Shariyat Law. Where such a basic issue is involved about the very existence of a waqf, whether in such a case also Section 87 would have any application or not, we have our serious doubts but on this aspect in the absence of any pleadings or arguments on the part of the respective parties we find no occasion to express a final opinion. We are not inclined to widen the scope of the suits in question, the canvass whereof is already enlarged extraordinarily and we have enough complicated issues to consider and decide having wider ramifications. In the totality of the circumstances, as also the discussion as above, we are clearly of the view that the suits in question cannot be held untriable at this stage by virtue of Section 87 of 1995 Act. The submission of Sri P.N.Mishra, learned counsel for defendant 20 in Suit-4 with reference to Section 87 of 1995 Act is hereby rejected. We, however, make it clear that the submissions with respect to various documents in the above mentioned paragraphs F to Q are in fact not relevant to the above aspect of the matter. We intend to consider it later on while deliberating on the concerned issues involving those documents and their effect.

www.vadaprativada.com

(E) Miscellaneous issues like representative nature of suit, Trust, Section 91 C.P.C., non joinder of parties, valuation/ insufficient Court fee/under valuation and special costs.

1276. Issue no. 6 (Suit-4) reads as under:

> "Whether the present suit is a representative suit, plaintiffs representing the interest of the Muslims and defendants representing the interest of the Hindus?"

1277. Issue no. 6 (Suit-4) pertains to the nature of the suit

in a representative capacity in respect to both the parties, i.e., plaintiffs and defendants. It is not disputed by learned counsel for the parties that the Civil Judge passed order dated 08.08.1962 under Order 1 Rule 8 CPC permitting plaintiffs to represent the interest of Muslims and the defendants to represent the interest of Hindus. The relevant part of the order says:

> "I therefore allow appln 4-C and reject the objections 77-C & 97-C. The pltffs are permitted to sue representing the entire Muslim community and the pltffs are also permitted to sue the defdts no. 1 to 4 on behalf of and for the benefit of the entire Hindu community."

None has made any submission otherwise. The issue is answered accordingly in affirmance.

1278. Issue No.22 (Suit-4) relates to special costs in case suit is dismissed. It reads as under:

> "Whether the suit is liable to be dismissed with special costs?"

www.vadaprativada.com

Learned counsel for the defendants have fairly stated that they do not press for any special costs and for they it would be sufficient if the suits are decided on merits expeditiously.

In the circumstances and in view of the above statement made on behalf of the learned counsel appearing for the defendants in Suit-4, we answer Issue no.22 in negative i.e. no special costs need be awarded.

1279. Issues no. 11(a) and 11(b) (Suit-1) reads as under:

> "(a) Are the provisions of section 91 C.P.C. applicable to present suit? If so, is the suit bad for want of consent in writing by the Advocate General?
> (b) Are the rights set up by the plaintiff in this suit independent of the provisions of section 91 CPC? If not, its

1280. These issues are in respect to Section 91 CPC which reads as under:

> "91. Public nuisances and other wrongful acts affecting the public.--(1) In the case of a public nuisance or other wrongful act affecting, or likely to affect, the public, a suit for a declaration and injunction or for such other relief as may be appropriate in the circumstances of the case, may be instituted,-*
> (a) by the Advocate General, or
>
> (b) with the leave of the Court, by two or more persons, even though no special damage has been caused to such persons by reason of such public nuisance or other wrongful act.]
>
> (2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any right of suit which may exist independently of its provisions."

www.vadaprativada.com

1281. The onus to prove the above issue initially lie upon the defendants but no arguments have been advanced in respect to the above issue. Besides, we find from the record that Sri Chaudhary Kedarnath, Advocate, counsel of the plaintiff, Gopal Singh Visharad, who initially filed Suit-1, made a statement on 15.09.1951 under Order 10 Rule 2 stating that he is filing the above suit for enforcement of his individual right of worship and, therefore, has a right to maintain the above suit in his individual capacity. The relevant part of his statement is as under:

> "Q. In what capacity does the plaintiff seek to exercise the relief which he seeks in the plaint.
> Ans. In my individual capacity.

www.vadaprativada.com

Q. What is your individual capacity.

Ans. My individual capacity is distinct from public capacity and in this matter an idol worshipper."

1282. It also appears that an application was filed on behalf of defendants no. 1 to 5 under Order 1 Rule 8 CPC before the Civil Judge, Faizabad praying that the suit be treated to be in a representative capacity but the said application was rejected on 27.10.1951. The order has attained finality as nothing has been placed before us to show that the matter was taken up before the higher Court assailing the order dated 27.10.1951. Section 91 CPC does not take away the independent right of a person where such right partly relates to a public right of others also. It lays down merely the procedure to be adopted in a representative suit where a right of suit already exist. It did not confer or extinguish a new right on its own. In Kadarbhai Mahomedbhai and another Vs. Haribhari Ranchhodbhai Desai and another, AIR 1974 Gujarat 120 a suit was filed by a person affected by public nuisance praying for removal of the public nuisance alleging special damage to him and it was held that such a suit is not barred either by Section 91 CPC or Order 1 Rule 8 CPC. To the same effect is the view taken by this Court in Mst. Bhagwanti Vs. Mst. Jiuti and another, AIR 1975 Allahabad 341. In view of the above we answer issue no. 11(a) (Suit-1) in negative and hold that neither Section 91 CPC is applicable to Suit-1 nor it is bad for want of consent in writing by Advocate General. Issue No. 11(b) (Suit-1) is answered in affirmance, i.e., the right of the plaintiff is independent as set up by him in the plaint as also in view of the statement under Order 10 Rule 2 CPC and has nothing to do with Section 91 CPC. The question of the subsequent part of the issue 11(b) need not be decided in view

1283. Issue no. 12 (Suit-1) reads as under:

"Is the suit bad for want of steps and notice under Order 1, Rule 8 CPC? If so, its effect?"

1284. This issue is with reference to Order 1 Rule 8 CPC which reads as under:

"8. One person may sue or defend on behalf of all in same interest.--(1) Where there are numerous persons having the same interest in one suit,-

(a) one or more of such persons may, with the permission of the Court, sue or be sued, or may defend such suit, on behalf of, or for the benefit of, all persons so interested;

(b) the Court may direct that one or more of such persons may sue or be sued, or may defend such suit, on behalf of, or for the benefit of, all persons so interested.

(2) The Court shall, in every case where a permission or direction is given under sub-rule (1), at the plaintiffs expense, give notice of the institution of the suit to all persons so interested either by personal service, or, where, by reason of the number of persons or any other cause, such service is not reasonably practicable, by public advertisement, as the Court in each case may direct.

(3) Any person on whose behalf, or for whose benefit, a suit is instituted or defended, under sub-rule (1), may apply to the Court to be made a party to such suit.

(4) No part of the claim in any such suit shall be abandoned under sub-rule (1), and no such suit shall be withdrawn under sub-rule (3), of rule 1 of Order XXIII, and no

agreement, compromise or satisfaction shall be recorded in any such suit under rule 3 of that Order, unless the Court has given, at the plaintiffs expense, notice to all persons so interested in the manner specified in sub-rule (2).

(5) Where any person suing or defending in any such suit does not proceed with due diligence in the suit or defence, the Court may substitute in his place any other person having the same interest in the suit.

(6) A decree passed in a suit under this rule shall be binding on all persons on whose behalf, or for whose benefit, the suit is instituted, or defended, as the case may be.

Explanation.-For the purpose of determining whether the persons who sue or are sued, or defend, have the same interest in one suit, it is not necessary to establish that such persons have the same cause of action as the person on whose behalf, or for whose benefit, they sue or are sued, or defend the suit, as the case may be."

1285. As we have already discussed above the application filed on behalf of defendants no. 1 to 5 under Order 1 Rule 8 CPC was rejected by Civil Judge, Faizabad by order dated 27.10.1951. The plaintiff had also made statement under Order 10 Rule 2 CPC that the right of worship, he is claiming by means of Suit-1, is his individual and personal right hence Order 1 Rule 8 CPC has no application. That being so, the question of taking steps and notice under Order 1 Rule 8 CPC does not arise. Issue no. 12 (Suit-1) is accordingly answered in negative, i.e., in favour of the plaintiff (Suit-1).

1286. Issue no. 15 (Suit-1) pertains to non-joinder of defendants and says:

"Is the suit bad for non-joinder of defendants?"

www.vadaprativada.com

1287. It is not pointed out by any of the defendants as to who has not been impleaded as defendant though a necessary or proper party in the suit. No arguments have been advanced on this aspect and in the absence thereof we answer issue no. 15 (Suit-1) in negative, i.e., in favour of the plaintiffs (Suit-1).

1288. Issue no. 16 (Suit-1) reads as under:

"Are the defendants or any of them entitled to special costs under Section 35-A C.P.C."

1289. It relates to special costs. Section 35A CPC says:

"35A. Compensatory costs in respect of false or vexatious claims or defenses.--(1) If any suit or other proceedings including an execution proceedings but excluding an appeal or a revision any party objects to the claim of defence on the ground that the claim or defence or any part of it is, as against the objector, false or vexatious to the knowledge of the party by whom it has been put forward, and if thereafter, as against the objector, such claim or defence is disallowed, abandoned or withdrawn in whole or in part, the Court, if it so thinks fit] may, after recording its reasons for holding such claim or defence to be false or vexatious, make an order for the payment the object or by the party by whom such claim or defence has been put forward, of cost by way of compensation.

(2) No Court shall make any such order for the payment of an amount exceeding three thousand rupees or exceeding the limits of it pecuniary jurisdiction, whichever amount is less:

Provided that where the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of any Court exercising the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes under the Provincial Small Cause

Courts Act, 1887 (9 of 1887) or under a corresponding law in force in any part of India to which the said Act does not extend and not being a Court constituted under such Act or law, are less than two hundred and fifty rupees, the High Court may empower such Court to award as costs under this section any amount not exceeding two hundred and fifty rupees and not exceeding those limits by more than one hundred rupees:

Provided, further, that the High Court may limit the amount or class of Courts is empowered to award as costs under this Section.

(3) No person against whom an order has been made under this section shall, by reason thereof, be exempted from any criminal liability in respect of any claim or defence made by him.

(4) The amount of any compensation awarded under this section in respect of a false or vexatious claim or defence shall be taken into account in any subsequent suit for damages or compensation in respect of such claim or defence."

1290. Learned counsels for the defendants have at the outset stated that they do not press any cost whatsoever and for them the biggest compensation would be the decision of the matter at the earliest and, therefore, none has pressed the above issue. In the result issue 16 (Suit-1) is answered in negative, i.e., in favour of the plaintiff (Suit-1).

1291. Issues no. 11, 12 and 15 (Suit-3) read as under:

"Is the suit bad for non-joinder of necessary defendants?"

"Are defendants entitled to special costs u/s 35

www.vadaprativada.com

"Is the suit property valued and court fee paid sufficient?"

1292. None has pressed the above issues inasmuch as neither any submissions have been advanced as to who is the necessary party not impleaded in the suit rendering it bad for non-joinder nor the learned counsels for the defendants have pressed for special cost and on the contrary very fairly have said that the decision of the suit at the earliest is itself the biggest cost to them. No arguments have been advanced with respect to the valuation and the Court fees in the matter. We, therefore, answer issues no. 11 and 12 (Suit-3) in negative, i.e., in favour of the plaintiffs (Suit-3). Issue no. 15 (Suit-3) is answered in affirmance, i.e., in favour of the plaintiff (Suit-3).

1293. Issue no. 20 (Suit-5) reads as under:

"Whether the alleged Trust creating the Nyas , defendant no.21, is void on the facts and grounds stated in paragraph 47 of the written statement of defendant no.3?"

www.vadaprativada.com

1294. Defendant no. 3 represented by Sri R.L. Verma, Advocate has not placed anything before this Court to show as to how the alleged trust defendant no. 21 is void. Besides, defendant no. 21 is not seeking any relief as such before us. The question as to whether the alleged trust is void or not would have no material bearing on the matter to the relief sought in Suit-5 which has been filed on behalf of two deities through next friend. We, therefore, find no reason to answer the aforesaid issue in the present case. Issue no. 20 (Suit-5), therefore, remain unanswered since it is unnecessary for the dispute in the present case to adjudicate on the said issue. The learned counsel for defendant no. 3 (Suit-5) also could not make any submission persuading us to take a different view.

(F) Issues relating to the Person and period- who and when constructed the disputed building:

1295. Mainly there are three issues under this category which requires adjudication on the question whether the building in dispute was constructed in 1528 AD and whether the construction was made by Babar or under his orders by any of his agent including Mir Baki.

1296. To be more precise, issues no. 6 (Suit-1), 5 (Suit-3) and 1(a) (Suit-4) fall in this category.

1297. Issue No.6 (Suit-1) reads as under:

> "Is the property in suit a mosque constructed by Shahanshah Babar commonly known as Babri Mosque, in 1528 A.D.?"

1298. Defendants no.1 to 5 (Suit-1) in para 9 of their written statement said:

> ''दफा 9. यह कि जिस जायदाद का मुद्दई ने दावा किया है वह शहन्शाह हिन्द बाबर शाह की तामीर करदा मस्जिद मौसूमा बाबरी मस्जिद है। जिसको शहंशाह मजकूर ने बाद फतेहआबी हिन्दुस्तान दौरान कयाम अयोध्या अपने वजीर व मुदारूल मोहाम मीर बाकी के एहतमाम से सन् 1528 ई0 में तामीर कराया और तामीर करके तमाम मुसलमान के लिए वक़्फ आम कर दिया। जिसमें तमाम मुसलमान का हक इबादत है।''
>
> "Para 9. That the property regarding which the plaintiff has filed the suit, is the mosque built by Babar, emperor of India, which is called Babri Masjid. It was built by the aforesaid emperor, after his conquest of India, in the year 1528 through his Governor and confederate (मुदारूल मोहाम) Mir Baqi during his stay at Ayodhya and after building the same, he created a universal Waqf in favour of Muslims in general, and all the Muslims have the right of worship over*

there." (E.T.C.)

1299. In the replication filed by the plaintiff, he denied the existence of Babri Masjid in para 9 and said:

''बाबरी मस्जिद होने से इन्कार है।''

"Its existence as Babri Mosque is denied" (E.T.C.)

1300. The defendant no.10 (Suit-1) in para 2 and 10 of the written statement have said:

"2. .... and the same was constructed during the regime of Emperor Babar....."

"10. That the property in suit is an old mosque constructed around the year 1528 A.D. during the regime of Emperor Babar under the supervision of Mir Baqi and the same has always been used as a mosque and it was never used as a temple or as a place of worship for any other community except muslims."

1301. Issue No.5 (Suit-3) reads as under:

"Is the property in suit a mosque made by Emperor Babar known as Babari Masjid?"

1302. In Suit-3, defendants no. 6 to 8 in written statement dated 28th March, 1960 in para 15 have said:

''धारा 15.. यह कि जिस जायदाद का मुद्दैयान ने दावा किया है वह शहनशाह हिन्द बाबर बादशाह के तामीर करदा मसजीद मौसमे बाबरी मसजिद है जिसको शहनशाह मजकूर ने अपने वजीर व मदारूल मोहाम मीरबाकी के एहतमाम से 1528 ई0 में तामीर कराया और मुसलमानान के लिये वक्फ आम कर दिया जिसमें तमाम मुसलमान का हक इबादत है।''

"Para 15. That the property regarding which the plaintiff has filed a claim, is a mosque built by Babur, Emperor of India, and is known as Babri Masjid. The mosque was built by the afore-named Emperor through his Secretary and Commander, Mir Baqi in 1528 and was given in public waqf to Muslims in which Muslims in general have a right

1303. The plaintiffs (Suit-3), in replication, have denied para 15 of the written statement and said:

"15. The allegations contained in para 15 of the written statement are totally incorrect and are denied. The property in suit is neither a mosque nor is it known as Babri Mosque, nor was it built by Emperor Babar nor is it known as Babri Mosque, nor was it built by Emperor Babar through Mir Abdul Baqi. Nor was it made wakf. The property in suit is the temple of Janma Bhumi."

1304. Issue No.1(a) (Suit-4) reads as under:

"When was it built and by whom-whether by Babar as alleged by the plaintiffs or by Meer Baqi as alleged by defendant no.13?"

1305. Plaintiffs (Suit-4) in para 1 and 2 of the plaint have said:

www.vadaprativada.com

"1. That in the town of Ajodhiya, Pergana Haveli Oudh there exits an ancient historic mosque, commonly known as Babri Masjid, built by Emperor Babar more than 433 years ago, after his conquest of India and his occupation of the territories including the town of Ajodhiya, for the use of the Muslims in general, as a place of worship and performance of religious ceremonies."

"2. That in the sketch map attached herewith, the main construction of the said mosque is shown by letters A B C D, and the land adjoining the mosque on the east, west, north and south, shown in the sketch map attached herewith, is the ancient graveyard of the Muslims, covered by the graves of the Muslims, who lost the lives in the battle between emperor Babar and the previous ruler of Ajodhiya, which are shown in the sketch map attached herewith. .....The mosque and the graveyard are in Mohalla Kot Rama Chander also known as Rama Kot Town, Ayodhya. The Khasra number of mosque and the graveyard in suit are shown in the Schedule attached which is part of the plaint."

1306. Defendants no.1 and 2 (Suit-4) while denying paras 1 and 2 of the plaint, in written statement dated 12th March, 1962 have in para 2 pleaded:

"2. That para 2 of the plaint is absolutely wrong and is denied. There was never any battle between Babar and the ruler of Ajodhya on any graveyard or mosque built as dictated by the said Babar."

1307. Defendant no.2 (Suit-4) in his written statement dated 25th January, 1963 while denying paras 1 and 2 (Suit-4), has further pleaded in para 2 of his written statement:

"2. That para 2 of the plaint is absolutely wrong and is denied, there was never any battle between Babar and the ruler of Ajodhya on any grave yard or Mosque alleged to the built (as dictated) by the said Babar."

1308. Defendants no. 3 and 4 (Suit-4), in their written statement dated 22/24 August, 1962 have pleaded in paras 1 and 2 as under:

"1. The allegations contained in para one of the plaint are totally incorrect and are denied. There does not exist any mosque known as 'Babri Masjid' in Ajodhya – Nor was any mosque built by Emperor Baber in Ajodhya more than 460 years ago as alleged- Nor did Babar made any conquest or occupation of any territory in India at the time alleged in the plaint- The story of the mosque as narrated

in plaint para 1 is a pure fiction."

"2. The allegations contained in Para 2 of the plaint are totally incorrect and are denied. The alleged sketch map is entirely false and imaginary and is the outcome of the plaintiffs fancy. On the Khasra no mentioned in the sketch map there stands neither any mosque nor any grave. The story of the alleged battle between Emperor Babar and any previous ruler of Ajodhya, whose name the plaintiffs are unable to mention in the plaint is pure canard. Neither did any Muslim lose his life in any battle on the land of the said Khasra Nos nor is there any grave or grave yard of any Muslim at the said place. . . . The real facts are that the said Khasra numbers pertain to the 'Temple of Janam Bhumi' and other land appurtenant thereto."

1309. In the additional written statement dated 28/29 November, 1963, the defendants no.3 and 4 (Suit-4) in para 38 said:

"Emperor Babar never built a mosque as alleged by the plaintiffs and...."

1310. Defendant No.13/1 (Suit-4) Dharam Das in his written statement dated 24th December, 1989 in para 1 said:

"1. That the contents of paragraph 1 of the plaint are denied. It is submitted that Babar was not a fanatic but a devout Muslim who did not believe in destroying Hindu temples, it was Mir Baqi, who was a Shia and commanded Babar's hords, who demolished the ancient Hindu temple of the time of Maharaja Vikramaditya of Sri Rama Janma Bhumi, and tried to raise a mosque-like structure in its place with its materials."

1311. Doubting the very factum whether the disputed

building was constructed by Babar during his regime the defendant no.20 (Suit-4) in his written statement dated 5th November, 1989 in paras 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36 has said:

> "32. ...There appears to be no description of any so called Baburi Masjid allged to have been constructed by Emperor Babur.
> "33. That the Faizabad Gazetteer, Volume 43 (XLIII) of the District Gazetteers of the United Provinces of Agra and Avadh compiled by Sri H.R. Nevill, I.C.S., published by Government Press in 1905 under the topic 'Directory' while dealing with Ayodhya (at page 12-F) affirmed that "The Janmsthan was in Ramkot and marked the birthplace of Ram". Later on, it is said, "The Mosque has two inscriptions, one on the outside and the other on the pulpit; both are in Persian and bear the date 935 Hizri, of the authensity of the inscriptions there can be no doubt, but no record of the visit to Ayodhya is to be found in the Musalman historians. It must have occurred about the time of his expedition to Bihar." It is to be noted that nothing has been found so far to establish the visit of Babur to Ayodhya. Only on the basis of these two inscriptions, the conclusion is being drawn all round that the mosque was built by Babur. It is very doubtful that it was so built. It appears to be a creation of Britishers sometimes in the Nineteenth century in order to create hatred between the two communities of India viz. Hindus and Muslims and thereby implement an effective policy of communal disharmony, and thereby create problems of law and order so that their annexation of Avadh may be justified on moral grounds. The script on the outer inscription of the mosque

is pretty bold and more artistic, a style which was developed sometimes in the middle half of the Nineteenth century while the inner inscription is very fine and thin, a style developed in the latter half of the Nineteenth century. It is therefore absolutely certain that on the basis of these two inscriptions it cannot be concluded that either the mosque was build in 1528 AD or in 935 Hizri, or it was built by Emperor Babur or his Governor Mir Baqui, as stated therein."

"34. That in the U.P. District Gazetteers Faizabad published by U.P. Government in 1960 and edited by Smt. Esha Basanti Joshi at page 47 quotes the inscription inside the mosque and relies on it for the date of construction of the mosque. The translation of the inscription in Persian given by her is as follows-

"By the command of Emperor Babur whose justice is an edifice reaching upto the very height of the heavens. The good hearted Mir Baqui built this alighting- place of angels; Buvad Khair Baqi: (May this goodness last for ever). The year of building it was made clear when I said Buvad Khair Baqi (=935)."

This also shows that for both the things i.e. for year of construction and for naming Emperor Babur as the builder of the mosque, authorities have relied upon only on two inscriptions found in the mosque."

"35. That in the Babur Nama translated by Annette Susannah Beveridge, Vol. II published by Sayeed International, New Delhi, in appendix 'U' the heading is 'The Inscriptions of Babur's mosque in Ayodhya (Awadh)'. While reproducing the inscription inside the mosque, and

translating it at page IXXVIII after quoting the cuplets and giving its translation and working out the number 935 to identify the year, the author at the bottom appended the following notes, which is very important-

'Presumably the order for building the mosque was given during Babur's stay in Aud (Ayodhya) in 934 A.H. at which time he would be impressed by the dignity and sanctity of the ancient Hindu shrine- it (at least in part) displaced and like the obedient follower of Muhammad he was in intolerance of another Faith, would regard the substitution of a temple by a mosque as dutiful and worthy. The mosque was finished in 935 A.H. but no mention of its completion is in the Babur Nama. The diary for 935 A.H. has lost much matter, breaking off before where the account of Aud might be looked for. On the next page the author says, 'The inscription is incomplete and the above is the plain interpretation which can be given to the cuplets (aforesaid) that are to hand."

"36. That the Britishers in achieving their object got a book published in 1813 by Laiden and known as Memoirs of Badruddin Mohd. Babur, Emperor of Hindustan and for the first time in this book it was stated that Babur in March 1528 passed through Ayodhya and even though Laiden has not mentioned that Babur in Ayodhya demolished the Hindu temples and built the mosque in their place, yet the British rulers gave currency to this false news that Babur demolished the Ram Janma Bhumi Mandir and constructed the Baburi Masjid thereon. The translated Babur Nama, Memoirs of Babur, published in 1921 and translated by M.A.S. Beveridge has mentioned that Babur never interfered with the religion of others and even though he visited various Hindu temples he appreciated their archaeological beauties. It appears there are no evidences that Babur ever visited Ayodhya or demolished any Hindu temple in Ayodhya. To claim the disputed mosque as one built by Babur 400 years ago by the plaintiffs is therefore wholly wrong. In fact, in Faizabad Gazetteers 1960 at page 352, it is said 'It is said that at the time of Muslim conquest there were three important Hindu shrines (Ayodhya) and little else, the Janmasthan temple, the Swargadwar and the Treta-ke-Thakur. The Janmasthan was in Ramkot and marked the birth place of Ram....."

1312. In para 41, 46, 49 and 50, defendant no.20 though has given some other reasons to show that the building in dispute was not constructed in 1528 AD by Babar but they are more in the nature of characteristics of mosque etc. and therefore, we propose to refer while considering those issues.

1313. Sri Zafaryyab Jilani submitted that it has never been doubted by any authoritative Historian and others that the building in dispute was constructed in 1528 AD under the command of Babar by one of his commander Mir Baki. He admits that the said findings are based on the inscriptions fixed on the disputed building, which came to be noticed for the first time by Dr. Buchanan in the earlier part of 19th century and has consistently been acknowledged and affirmed thereafter by several authorities like Robort Montgomry Martin, P. Karnegi, Alexander Cunningham, W.C.Benett, A.S.Beveridge as well as the ASI. He contends that for the first time this novel argument has been advanced by defendant no. 20 raising doubt over whether the building in dispute was constructed by Babar or not though nothing has been placed on record to prove the same.

1314. Per contra, challenging the very basic submission of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) about construction of the disputed building by Babar in 1528 AD based on the inscriptions installed thereat, Sri Misra very ably argued that the basic premise itself is unsubstantiated, baseless and false. He said that it is an admitted position that Babar was a Sunni Muslim governed by Hanafi school of law as mentioned by A.S. Beveridge in her work titled as "Babur-Nama" (hereinafter referred to as the "Babur-Nama by Beveridge") translated in English from original Turki text, first published in 1921 (reprinted in 2006 by Low Price Publications, Delhi). On page 15, faith of Babur is described in the following manner:

> "He was a true believer (Hanafi mazhablik) and pure in the Faith, not neglecting the Five Prayers and, his life through, making up his omissions. He read the Qur'an very frequently and was a disciple of his Highness Khwaja 'Ubaidu'l-lah (Ahrari) who honoured him by visits and even called him son."

1315. Sri Misra points out that in "Babur-Nama by Beveridge" the daily description of Babar by two days in Hijra 934 has not been given though for the entire earlier part a de die-diem description is given. However, in Hijra 935, narration of events for about 5 months and more is missing. Babar when invaded India entered from the northern front and defeated Sultan Ibrahim Lodi, Emperor of Delhi in the battle of Panipat in April, 1526 AD. He became king/Emperor of the entire area of which Sultan Ibrahim Lodi was exercising his authority as Emperor of Delhi. There was no change of reign in the matter of religion inasmuch as Ibrahim Lodi was also a Muslim and Babar defeated him, therefore, the Muslim rule continued. There was only a change of the Ruler. So far as Oudh is concerned, it was ruled directly by Delhi Emperor, i.e., Ibrahim Lodi and with his defeat the said area immediately fell within the authority of Babar. In "Babur-Nama by Beveridge" the arrangement of Oudh area, has been narrated at page 527 under the head "Action against the rebels of the East" as under:

> "Sl. Ibrahim had appointed several amirs under Mustafa Farmuli and Firuz Khan Sarang-khani, to act against the rebel amirs of the East (Purab). Mustafa had fought them and thoroughly drubbed them, giving them more than one good beating. He dying before Ibrahim's defeat, his younger brother Shaikh Bayazid-Ibrahim being occupied with a momentous matter-had led and watched over his elder brother's men. He now came to serve me, together with Firuz Khan, Mahmud Khan Nuhani and Qazi Jia. I shewed them greater kindness and favour than was their claim; giving to Firuz Khan I krur, 46 laks and 5000 tankas from Junpur, to Shaikh Bayazid I krur, 48 laks and 50,000 tankas from Aud (Oude), to Mahmud Khan 90 laks and 35,000 tankas from Ghazipur, and to Qazi Jia 20 laks."

1316. Sri Mishra says that Shaikh Bayazid, was an appointee of Babar but soon after appointment he (Bayazid) revolted and declared himself independent. About the appointment of Bayazid, on page 544, "Babur-Nama by Beveridge", it says:

> "Humayun, in accordance with my arrangements, left Shah Mir Husain and Sl. Junaid with a body of effective

1317. When Bayazid revolted, to defeat him and some other rebel commanders, the Babar while proceeded towards Bihar moved via Ayodhya, Jaunpur etc. On 28th March, 1528 he reached near Ayodhya. However there is nothing in Babur-Nama to show that he ever entered the city. When Babar came near Ayodhya, the name of his commander was “Chin Timur”. There is no mention of any person as “Mir Baqi” in the entire Babur-Nama by Beveridge, who ever entered Ayodhya as a commander of Baber’s army or otherwise. Bayazid fled away from Ayodhya hearing arrival of Babar and his army. Baber’s commanders chased him from one place to another. Bayazid was ultimately killed by Humayun. There is no mention of a battle between Babar or his army and the then ruler of Ayodhya in 1528 AD. There was no occasion of burying muslims who were killed in the alleged battle in the graves, claimed to exist near the disputed site.

1318. “Babur-Nama by Beveridge” shows that Babar was not fond of destroying temples and instead he visited temples having idols at Gwalior and appreciated the Artistry thereof. It is only at one place where he found naked idols being extremely indecent which he ordered to destroy but not otherwise. Sri Mishra says that the very basis of the pleadings of Muslim parties that there was a battle between Babar and the then ruler of Ayodhya in 1528 AD is false and unsubstantiated.

1319. Referring to the inscriptions which are the basis of identifying the period of construction of disputed building by Babar i.e. 1528 AD, he said that the alleged inscriptions are nothing but a subsequent forgery. They were not installed in 1528 AD as claimed. He submits that the first reference of the inscription is found in "Gazetteer of Territories under the Government of East India Company and of the Native States on the Continent of India" by Edward Thornton, first published in 1858 AD (reproduced in 1993 by Low Price Publications, Delhi) and at page 739 it says that according to native tradition the temples were demolished by Aurangzabe, who build a mosque on the part of the site. The falsehood of the tradition is however, proved by an "inscription on the wall of the mosque", attributing the work to the conqueror Babar, from whom Aurangzabe was fifth in descent. He says that the said inscription has not been quoted in the said gazetteer. However, the Archaeological Survey of India in its book titled as "The Sharqi Architecture of Jaunpur" by A. Fuhrer, first published in 1889, reprinted in 1994 has reproduced the "inscriptions" said to be found on the disputed building at Ayodhya and whatever is mentioned therein has much difference to the text of the inscriptions quoted by Beveridge in her book i.e. "Babur-Nama". This difference fortify the fact that they were subsequently implanted. Some words are different which show that the said building was not constructed at the instance of Babar in 1528 AD.

1320. Fuhrer in Chapter X of the book "The Sharqi Architecture of Jaunpur" has given details of inscriptions found at the disputed building at Ayodhya. He points out that Beveridge claimed that texts of the inscriptions on Babar's Mosque in Ayodhya were received by her through her husband's inquiry made from the Deputy Commissioner of Faizabad. She has given details of the said inscriptions in Appendices 'U' at

page lxxvii in 'Babur-Nama by Beveridge' (supra). The footnote, item two, says that a few changes in the turm of expressions have been made for clearness sake. Again with respect to the date of building she has tried to read it as 935 and in the footnote she says that presumably the order for building the mosque was given during Babur's stay in Aud (Ajodhya) in 934 A.H. though Babur-Nama itself shows that Babar reached near Ayodhya at the end of 934 A.H. and only two days of Hizra 934's description is missing.

1321. Sri Misra then referred to the third version of inscriptions published by ASI in "Epigraphia Indica Arabic and Persian Supplement (in continuation of Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica) 1964-1965" (reprinted in 1987). The chapter under the heading "Inscriptions of Emperor Babar" is said to have been written by Late Maulavi M. Ashraf Husain. The inscriptions dated A.H. 935 from Ayodhya are at page 58, 59, 60, 61 and 62. The opening part of the Chapter make certain comments about writer in the following words:

> "A rough draft of this article by the author, who was my predecessor, was found among sundry papers in my office. At the time of his retirement in 1953*,* he had left a note saying that it might be published after revision by his successor. Consequently, the same is published here after incorporation of fresh material and references and also, extensive revision and editing*. The readings have been also checked, corrected and supplemented with the help of my colleague, Mr. S.A. Rahim, Epigraphical Assistant,- Editor."*

1322. On page 58 the author refers to the reading of inscriptions by A. Fuhrer and says that he (Fuhrer) has

incorrectly read it. In the last paragraph it says that the mosque contains a number of “inscriptions”. On the eastern facade is a chhajja below which appears a Quranic text and above an inscription in Persian verse. On the central mihrab are carved religious texts such as the Kalima (first Creed), etc. There was another inscription in Persian verse built up into right hand side wall of the pulpit. Of these, the last two mentioned epigraphs have disappeared. They were reportedly destroyed in the communal vandalism in 1934 AD but the writer of the chapter Sri Ashraf Husain managed to secure an inked rubbing of one of the them from “Sayyid Badru'l-Hasan of Faizabad”. He further says that the present inscription restored by the muslim community is not only in “inlaid Nasta'liq” characters, but is also slightly different from the original, owning perhaps to the incompetence of the restorers in deciphering it properly. The author further declare the translation and reading of inscription by “Fuhrer” and Beveridge both incomplete, inaccurate and different from the text. Sri Hussain has based his entire conclusions from the estampage claimed to have been received from Saiyyid Badru's Hasan of Faizabad whose credentials have not been given. In the bottom note it has said that the tablet was found in 1906-07 AD by Maulavi M. Shuhaib of the office of the Archaeological Surveyor, Northern Circle, Agra (Annual Progress Report of the Office of the Archaeological Surveyor, Northern Circle, Agra, for 1906-07, Appendix-D. The author had deciphered the three inscriptions on pages 59, 60, 61 and 62.

1323. Sri Mishra submits that the differences in inscriptions appear for the reason that the same were not installed in 1528 AD for the simple reason that no such construction at all took place at that time. He refers to the record of Tieffenthaler and submits that Tieffenthaler himself was a fine scholar with an unusual talent for languages. Besides his native tongue (Austrian) he understood Latin, Italian, Spanish, French, Hindustani, Arabic, Persian and Sanskrit. He argued with vehemence that had such inscriptions been available when Tieffenthaler visited Ayodhya after arriving in India in 1740 AD, he himself could have read it and would not have said in his work that an existing temple was demolished by Aurangzabe to construct three domed structure thereat (also mention that some says that the demolition and construction was made by Babar). Had the inscriptions been there, he would have clearly written that the said work was of Babar and not by Aurangzabe.

1324. Sri Mishra says that the actual demolition and construction, as the case may be, took place later on and was not done by Babar. He says that Mir Baqi is not a name but 'Baqi' means 'Bakshi', i.e., commander of an army of 100 men and 'Mir' is a title used to be given to civilian muslims at that time. Besides, there is no mention of any one named “Mir Baqi” who stayed at Ayodhya and undertook the above job. He submits that forgery of inscriptions by replacing and travelling from one place to another is not unknown. In this regard he referred to the inscriptions of “Rajputon Ki Masjid”. He also points out that “Fuhrer” mentions of only two inscriptions while in “Epigraphia Indica 1964-65” there is mention of three/four inscriptions. According to him the inscription might have been installed between 1776 to 1807 though the building in dispute might have been raised earlier but neither by Babar nor during his time nor by anyone at his instance.

1325. The other learned counsels appearing on behalf of

Hindu parties adhered to their stand that a Hindu temple was demolished in 1528 AD under the command of Babar and thereafter building in dispute was constructed. However, the learned counsels submitted that their stand is not taken to be in refuting or challenging the stand taken by Sri P.N.Mishra, learned counsel appearing on behalf of defendant no.20 (Suit-4) and the same be examined by this Court on the basis of its own merits, in the light of the arguments advanced by him as also contradicted by the learned counsels appearing on behalf of Muslim parties and they (Hindu parties) be not treated to have joined this issue with the Muslim parties. They however submit that their basic premise continue that is demolition of temple at the birthplace of Lord Rama and construction of disputed building.

1326. The question as to whether the building in dispute was constructed in 1528 AD at the command of Babar or by Babar himself is a very important and pivotal issue, which may have its reflection on several other issues in all these connected suits. We proceed to examine this aspect of the matter very carefully.

1327. The root of the entire controversy is the disputed building which is said to have been constructed by Emperor Babar through his Commander/ Governor/Confederator, Mir Baqi. In the pleadings of muslim parties, though there is some difference in the language, but in an undisputed manner it has been pleaded that the building in dispute got constructed in 1528 AD by Emperor Babar after his conquest of India through his Commander/Governor/Confederator, Mir Baqi. This is what is the stand also taken by plaintiffs (Suit-5) and some other Hindu Parties.

1328. Though already referred, but in a concised recapitulation, we may tell hereat that in para 1 of the plaint (Suit-4) it is averred that in Ayodhya there exist an ancient historic mosque commonly known as "Babri Masjid", built by Emperor Babar more than 433 years ago after his conquest of India and his occupation of the territories including the town of Ajodhya. It is also said in para 2 that on the land adjoining the said mosque, on all the four sides, there existed graveyard of Muslims who lost lives in battle between Emperor Babar and the previous ruler of Ajodhya. Suit having been filed in 1961, 433 years took it back to 1528 AD.

1329. In Suit-1, defendants No.1 to 5 in para 2 of their written statement dated 21st February, 1950, have said that the disputed building is a mosque constructed by Emperor Babar. In para 9, (additional pleas), it is averred that the disputed building is Babri mosque constructed by Emperor Babar of India, after conquest of India, during his stay at Ayodhya through his Minister/Commander Mir Baqi. The building in dispute was constructed in 1528 AD. Similar averments are made by defendant no.10 i.e. Sunni Central Waqf Board (Suit-1) in paras 2 and 10 of their written statement.

1330. In Suit-3, defendants No.6 to 8 in para 15 of their written statement, have said that the disputed building is a Babri Mosque constructed by Emperor of India through his Minister/Commander Mir Baqi in 1528 A.D.

1331. In Suit-5, defendant No.4 Sunni Central Waqf Board in para 13 of written statement dated 26/29 August, 1989, has said that the property in dispute is an old mosque known as Babri Mosque constructed during the regime of Emperor Babar. This has been reiterated in para 24. However, in para 24-B

defendant No.4 states that the land in question undoubtedly belong to the State when the mosque in question was constructed on behalf of the State. He further says that Emperor Babar built the Babri Mosque on a vacant land lay in his State territory and did not belong to any one . It could very well be used by his officers for the purpose of mosque especially when the Emperor himself consented and gave approval for construction of the said mosque.

1332. The defendant No.5 (Suit-5) in para 40 of written statement dated 14/21st August, 1989, has averred that according to the inscription in the mosque, the same was constructed by Mir Baqi, one of the Commander of Babar in 1528. The existence of mosque in 1528 AD has been reiterated in para 67. The written statement of defendant No.5 has been adopted by defendant No.6 vide his application dated 21/22 August, 1989.

1333. Defendant No.24 (Suit-5)in para 12 has referred to the period of construction of the disputed building as 1528 AD. However, in para 15 there is slight change in the stand to the effect that Emperor Babar never came to Ayodhya and the Babri Mosque was built by Mir Baqi and not Babar. The period of construction as 1528 has been reiterated in para 22.

1334. Defendant No.25 (Suit-5) though in general supported the claim of other Muslim parties but in the written statement dated 16/18 September, 1989 it has not disclosed any particular date of construction of the building in dispute. The pleading therefore is that the building in dispute was constructed in 1528 AD by Babar or with his consent by Mir Baqi, a senior officer of Emperor Babar, but the basis on which the said date is mentioned is not given in the pleadings.

1335. Except the defendant No.5 (Suit-5) who in written statement has given the basis of such averment i.e. the inscription installed on the building in dispute, no further details of such inscription has been given either by him or anyone else. We however find that the only foundation is the inscription on the disputed building to claim the period of construction as would appear hereinafter.

1336. On behalf of the plaintiffs (Suit-4), 32 witnesses have been examined in all which include Expert Historians (as they claimed) namely Suresh Chandra Mishra, PW 13; Sushil Srivastava, PW 15; Prof. Suvira Jaiswal, PW 18; and Prof. Shirin Musvi, PW-20. Besides, a large number of witnesses examined on facts have deposed mainly about continuous offering of Namaz in the disputed building till December, 1949, possession of Muslims on the disputed building but some of them have also said about date of construction of the disputed building being 1528 AD based on their knowledge derived from various sources but basically derived from the inscriptions said to be existed in the disputed building, inside and outside, and some on the basis of History books without referring any name. Some others who claimed Expert Archaeologists have also said same thing on this aspect.

1337. It would thus be appropriate to see what has been said by these witnesses about the date/period of construction of the disputed building as also the basis of such information/opinion.

1338. P.W.13 Sri Suresh Chandra Mishra in his cross examination has said:

1339. The witness has claimed himself to be an Expert Historian and on page 111 has also claimed that he may be placed in the category of Expert in "Epigraphy". His statement on page 54 shows that Babar was his favourite subject. He is M.A. in Ancient History (Culture and Archeology) and Ph.D. He claims that having undergone a deeper inquiry and study on the dispute he concluded that the mosque was constructed by Mir Baqi and for this purpose there was no destruction of any kind at the disputed site. He referred to Skand Puran, Baburnama, his visit to Ayodhya before 1992 and the report (Exhibit D25, Suit-5) (Paper No. 110C1/96) submitted to the Government of India by Prof. R.S. Sharma, Prof. D.N. Jha and Prof. Suraj Bhan alongwith Prof. Athar Ali being his study material. However, he admits that he did not find any reference of construction of the disputed building/Babari mosque in Baburnama and it also contains no reference of Mir Baqi. On the one hand he accepts of being expert in Epigraphy (page 111) but simultaneously he admits that neither he knows Arabic nor Persian nor Latin, therefore, he had no occasion to understand the language in which the alleged inscription was written. In his statement dated 14.07.1998 he claims that the inscriptions were written in Persian but later on page 72 he retracted and said that the inscriptions were written in Arabic and his earlier statement was wrong for the reason that neither he understand Persian nor Arabic. He attempted this Court to believe in his knowledge of

History being an Expert Historian in Ancient History and that he has made a deep study on the subject which is like a research and therefrom he has come to know that the building in dispute was constructed in 1528 AD by Mir Baqi but his cross examination shows that for arriving at the said conclusion, without any further inquiry into the matter, what was written about the inscriptions in Epigraphica Indica (1964-65) as well as Baburnama by Beveridge and on that basis he believed and concluded as above. The slipshod and casual manner in which he made inquiry about inscriptions is further interesting. On page 79 he says that he carried inside the disputed building, the book "Baburnama by Beveridge" and therefrom compared the script of the inscriptions with the text quoted in the said book and since the matter relate to 1989/1990 he is not able to tell the correct date but thereafter on page 79/80 he admits that for security reasons his entire belongings were made to be left outside the premises and he went inside the disputed building empty handed. The book was also left outside where police checking was going. On page 80 when his statement about comparison of the text of the inscription with the book was further examined he says that he kept the text after reading the book in his mind and compared it with the inscription. This wonderful memory of the witness has to be seen in the light of the fact that the witness admits that he knows neither Persian nor Arabic. On page 79 he also admits that he also do not know Urdu language.

1340. The correctness of his statement can further be scrutinised in the light of what has been written by Maulvi F. Ashraf Hussain in his paper published in Epigraphica Indica (1965) where he admits that the original two inscriptions were damaged in 1934 and replaced by new one. Therefore, in 1989/90 what PW 13 saw, were the inscriptions replaced in 1934 and not that text which was available to Mrs. Beveridge, she has quoted in her book published in 1921. The difference between the text of the inscriptions quoted by Beveridge and that which was available to Maulvi Ashraf Hussain which he published in Epigraphica Indica, we would be demonstrating a bit later. Suffice it to mention at this stage that the inscriptions which were available in 1989/1990, having been replaced in 1934 contains lot of difference. The alleged deep study/research of PW 13 thus become seriously suspicious and make this witness wholly unreliable.

1341. Further, he claims to have read "Baburnama by Beveridge" but on page 197 could not tell whether the names Baqi Shaghawal and Baqi Tashkandi are mentioned therein or not. His lack of knowledge in this matter is writ large from the fact that Mrs. Beveridge has suggested that it is probably Baqi Tashkandi whose name was mentioned in the inscription as Mir Baqi but PW 13 on page 197 says that even if the names of Baqi Tashkandi and Baqi Shaghawal have been mentioned in Baburnama that cannot be connected with the army chief Mir Baqi. He also says that there is reference of Mir Baqi in Baburnama but during the course of arguments the learned counsel for the plaintiff (Suit-4) admits that the words "Mir Baqi" as such are not mentioned in the entire Baburnama translated by Mrs. Beveridge or others but what he submits that most of the Historians are of the view that "Baqi Tashkandi" was "Mir Baqi" since he was given the command and made incharge of Awadh by Babar.

1342. In fact PW 15 another expert historian witness on page 85 has clearly said that “Mir Baqi's” name does not find mention in Baburnama. He also says that there is nothing in Baburnama which may co-relate “Baqi Tashkandi” with “Mir Baqi”.

1343. From the entire statement of PW 13 this much is evident that in his opinion for the period of construction of the building, i.e., 1528 AD, and the person who got it constructed, i.e., Mir Baqi, the ultimate reliance is on the inscriptions (whether two or three, that would be discussed later on) and no other authentic material. The opinion of PW 13 in this regard, however, is based on the information which he received from the book “Baburnama” by Mrs. A.S. Beveridge and Epigraphica Indica (1965) from which he was satisfied and concluded his opinion. Beside that, he had no other reliable information to form the said opinion.

1344. At this stage we may also mention that Dr. S.C. Misra (PW 13) did his Ph.D. under Prof. D.N. Jha (page 49) and claims to be closely acquainted with him. On page 44 he has also admitted that except Baburnama by A.S. Beveridge he has read no other translation at all. On page 31 he says that he has intellectually analysed and contemplated whether God is a reality or not and has come to the conclusion that there is no existence of God, since, he had no occasion to come face to face with God. On page 53, he says that he has also studied the “History of India” written by “Romila Thaper” and has also consulted her in the course of so called deep study on the dispute in question and believed whatever she has written is correct. On the one hand he claims to be a man of scientific temperament and in order to believe anything he looks into the matter and several things, analyse them and only then come to a concrete finding (page 49) but on page 56 he says that on the basis of general conception among majority of people and also because of acceptance on the part of scholars he accepted that Islam emerged through revelation. From reading of the books enumerated he came to a conclusion that scholars opined that Islam appeared through revelation. On page 57 he admits that neither he know what "revelation" means nor has read the process of such revelation and, therefore, he is wholly ignorance of the term "revelation" and its meaning. At several places he sought to correct his statement made earlier which throw light on his knowledge of the matter, his confidence as also his memory. One of such aspect is about the constitution of ASI which he stated to be in 1934 on 14.07.1998 but later, on page 73/74, he admits the incorrectness in the earlier statement and rectify the same by stating that it was constituted in 18th century. In his research he admits of having not read any gazetteer or Government gazette (page 74-75). On page 88 he further contradicted to some extent his statement about his scientific temperament and says that in respect to "Allahoupanishad" he has made statement only on secondary basis. He also admits the falsity of statement that in 1968 he went to the disputed site alongwith his parents but did not go inside although the parents went (page 33) and on page 93 in this regard he has said:

> "यह कहना भी गलत है कि मैंने उसमें यह गलत बयानी की हो कि जब मेरे माता–पिता इस भवन के अन्दर चले गये तो मैं बाहर खड़ा रह गया था। वैसे यह ठीक है कि सन् 66 और सन् 68 में भी इस विवादित परिसर के बाहरी मुख्य द्वार पर ताला बन्द था और कोई भी व्यक्ति अन्दर नहीं जा सकता था।" (पेज 93)
> "It is wrong to say that in the said testimony I have wrongly stated that when my parents went inside this building, I was left standing outside the building. However,

1345. On page 167 PW 13 said that there is nothing like Sanatan Dharm and on the same page he said that the word "Hindu" is a mixed term which comprises several type of people including those who had their origin somewhere outside and who have assimilated in it. Nobody was original Hindu. It is subsequent concept. It commenced from circa 4th or 3rd BC.

1347. The defendants sought to highlight the fact that PW 13 was a paid witness and made certain questions about the manner in which he comes from Delhi. On page 185 he said:

''मैं दिल्ली से लखनऊ इस मुकदमें में गवाही देने के लिए कई बार आया हूं आती दफा कभी हवाई जहाज से नहीं आया लेकिन वापसी पर लखनउ से दिल्ली 2 दफा हवाई जहाज से गया हूं। आज भी मैं हवाई जहाज से वापस जाना चाहता हूं। यह ठीक है कि इस समय अदालत में मेरा हैण्ड बैग रखा हुआ है और उस पर इंडियन एयर और सहारा एयर लाईंस के कई (फिर कहा) एक–एक टेग कुल 2 टेग हैं।'' (पेज 185)

1348. However, later on he retracted and made a different statement on page 201 as under:

"मैं कभी भी गवाही देने के लिए हवाई जहाज से नहीं आया मैं जब कभी गवाही के लिए आता हूं तो या तो अपने पास से खर्च करता हूं या अदालत से मिली हुई धनराशि का प्रयोग करता हूं। मैं रेल यात्रा करता हूं और आने जाने की रिजर्वेशन करा कर चलता हूं। मैं सेकेण्ड ए0सी0, जिसके लिए मैं हकदार हूं द्वारा ही यात्रा करता हूं। यह ठीक है कि मैंने पिछली बार अदालत को बतलाया था कि मैं 2 बार हवाई जहाज से भी वापस दिल्ली गया हूं।" (पेज 201)

It is true that I told the court last time that I had gone back to Delhi by aeroplane two times." (E.T.C.)

1349. His statement fails to inspire confidence and lack independent, fair and impartial opinion. He admits to have done Ph.D. under Prof. D.N. Jha who according to him was one of the signatory to the document "A Historians Report to the Nation" alongwith three others and on page 142 he admits that all these four persons he considered to be the top historians of the country and, therefore, place them above the published research of Hans Baker of Ayodhya. Prof. D.N.Jha in fact did not sign the letter. The other three took a partisan stand as we shall demonstrate later. He do not agree with Baker's conclusions though reason for such disagreement could not be given by him.

Of his own said that on 05.05.99 a letter of Syndicate was received to the effect that I should hand over the charges of the Head of Department and Coordinator to another teacher. On 11.06.99 I submitted my resignation from the post of Professor showing the reason that I have been unable to qualify to the test of Gujarati language in as much as, I could not be confirmed without clearing the aforesaid test. And period of my leave was about to exhaust. For this reason I was discharged from duty on 28.06.99." (E.T.C.)

"It is correct to say that all the teachers of the Department complained against me that they could not work with me. Rather, only few teachers made such proposal. (Further said) that they were not satisfied with my work as Head. It is wrong to say that due to misconduct, I was expelled from the University and without receiving that order, I resigned and returned to Allahabad." (E.T.C.)

1356. For our purposes, however, suffice it to mention that PW 15 has made out a new case and says that according to his study there is grievous doubt whether Babar built the mosque in dispute. He says that neither there is any material to show that Babar ever visited Ayodhya nor the name "Mir Baqi" finds mention in Baburnama. On page 217 he admits that as a result of his research he has written on page 89 of his book that inscriptions might have been fixed on the disputed building later on mentioning that the disputed building was built by Babar and on page 295 he refers to page 91 of his book where he has said that the disputed building might have been constructed at the time of Tughlaqs or Sharkis and may not have been built by Babar. On page 300 he further says that if constructed by Sharki Rulers, the disputed building might have been constructed prior to 1504. He also says that averments in para 2 and 8 of the plaint (Suit-4) that graves around the disputed building were of those muslims who died in battle between Babar and the erstwhile ruler of Ayodhya are incorrect statements (page 300). The witness, therefore, has not supported the case of plaintiff (Suit-

4) and on the contrary has taken a totally different stand. In fact by reaching such inference, he has stated in his examination-in-chief that the disputed building was not constructed after demolishing a temple by Babar.

1357. Here one more aspect we need to mention. Though the witness has been produced as Expert Historian but on page 222 he admits that he had a very little knowledge of history. That being so according to own statement of the witness his statement cannot be taken as an opinion of an Expert Historian and, therefore, inadmissible under Section 45 of the Evidence Act. Even otherwise, the extract of his statement we have noticed above make it clear that neither the witness has made any threadbare inquiry into the matter nor has done his job honestly yet has written a book based on hearsay and has claimed it to be a book written by an Expert. He admits that he cannot read Persian, Arabic, Sanskrit and Urdu (Page 33). He admits that despite being historian he has accepted whatever said by others on the basis of their alleged scholarly feeling and wrote it in his book as a statement of fact (page 38). He has never studied either Calligraphy or Epigraphy (Page 51) but has made statement and recorded finding in this regard in his book. On page 65 he admits that he has raised doubt on the Calligraphy style of the text of the inscription at Babri mosque but simultaneously admits that he had not the least knowledge of art and science of Calligraphy. We in fact find it surprising with the kind of dishonesty, such person has shown. In his book he has given in the footnote reference of a number of books which he admits that he had never studied (page 68). On page 77 he says that he did not pay attention on the fact whether the inscriptions were installed from the beginning or installed

subsequently but on page 217 admits that he has written on page 89 of his book that there is a possibility that the inscriptions might have been installed subsequently. On page 106 on the one hand he admits that he lacks knowledge of Epigraphy, Numismatic, Archeology, Survey of Land, Science of Architecture, Turkish, Arabic and Persian language yet simultaneously he says that though the period of construction of the disputed structure, he could not conclude but according to him it relates prior to Mughal period. We are sorry to find that a person like PW 15 has written a book on such an important and sensitive matter without having made an in-depth study on the subject and has deposed before us claiming himself to be an Expert Historian though simultaneously admit that he has a very little knowledge of history. On page 218 and 219 again contradicting his earlier statement he said that he has made research on the question as to how much old and of which period the inscriptions are and found that the inner inscription appears to be new from the style of calligraphy while the outer one is old. Despite admitting the fact that he has no knowledge of calligraphy he has made such comments on calligraphy of the text of inscription which is not expected from a responsible Expert Historian. Besides his statement ex facie appears to be incorrect in view of the admitted position as also mentioned in Epigraphica Indica (1965) published by ASI that there were three inscriptions out of which two got misplaced in 1934 and were restored by new one which had some mistakes and did not contain the correct original text.

1358. The lack of expertise of PW 15 in respect to Medieval History has also been commented by plaintiff's (Suit-4)'s another witness, i.e., PW 20, Shirin Musvi on page 129 of her statement where she said:

''मैं श्री सूरजभान जो एक आकियोंलाजिस्ट है डा0 सुवीरा जायसवाल जो ऐसीयन्ट इण्डियन हिस्टोरियन हैं और श्री सुशील श्रीवास्तव जो मार्डन इतिहासकार हैं उनकी इस राय से यदि उन्होंने ऐसा कहा है कि मीरबाकी एक शिया था उनकी इस राय से सहमत नहीं हूँ चूंकि वो लोग मेडिवल हिस्ट्री के एथारिटी नहीं है।''

"I do not agree with the opinion of Sri Surajbhan, an Archaeologist, Dr. Suvira Jaiswal, Ancient Indian Historian and Sri Sushil Srivastava, Modern Historian and if they have said so that Mir Baqi was a Shiya, I do not agree with their opinion because they are not authority on Medieval History*." (E.T.C.)*

1359. PW 16, Prof. Suraj Bhan in his cross-examination has said:

*''*मुझे विवादित स्थल पर शिलालेख जो मीरबाकी द्वारा लगवाया गया था उसके अलावा और कोई एपीग्राफिकल इवीडेंस नहीं मिली जिसके आधार पर यह कहा जा सके कि विवादित ढांचा का नाम बाबरी मस्जिद हो। यह शिलालेख उतना ही पुराना था जितनी मस्जिद।'' (पेज 157)

*"*Except for an inscription carved by Mir Baqi, I did not come across any other epigraphical evidence on the basis of which the disputed site may be called Babri Masjid. This inscription is as old as this masjid." (E.T.C.)

''विवादित ढांचे में 2 जगह पर इन्सक्रिप्शन लगे हुए थे। यह दोनों इन्सक्रिप्शन पत्थर में खुदे हुऐ थे परन्तु बाहर वाले इन्सीक्रप्शन का स्लेब दीवार में फिक्स था। यह दोनों उपरोक्त इन्सक्रिप्शन फारसी भाषा में लिखे थें मैं फारसी नहीं जानता यह सही है कि मैं फारसी नहीं पढ़ सकता इसलिए मौके पर मैं उन दोनों इन्सक्रिप्शन को नहीं पढ़ सकता था और अंदर वाली इन्सक्रिप्शन को देख भी नहीं पाया।'' (पेज–175)

"Inscriptions were engraved at two places in the disputed structure. Both of the inscriptions were engraved in the stone but the slab of the outside inscription was fixed in the wall. Both these inscriptions were written in Persian language. I do not know Persian. It is true that I can not read Persian. So I, could not read both the inscriptions at the site and could not even see the inside inscription."(E.T.C.)

"यह मस्जिद बाबर की अपनी बनवाई हुई नहीं थी, बल्कि यह मीरबाकी द्वारा बाबर की इजाज़त से बनवाई गई थी और इसी कारण बाबरी मस्जिद मीरबाकी के साधनों के अनुरूप ही बनी थी।" (पेज 334)

"This mosque not built by Babar on his own; rather, it was built by Mir Baqi with the permission of Babar, and for this very reason, the Babri mosque was built only as per the means of Mir Baqi." (E.T.C.)

"मस्जिद में लिखे शिलालेख में यह लिखा था और मस्जिद के तोड़े जाने से पहले मैंने उसे देखा भी था और उसके बारे में कई रिकार्डस हैं, जो भारत सरकार द्वारा हमें दिए गए थे, उनमें पढ़ा है तथा अयोध्या के ऊपर लिखी गई किताब में भी पढ़ा है।

"It was so written in the stone inscription at the mosque and the same had also been seen by me before demolition of the mosque. There are several records in this behalf, which have been provided to us by the Government of India. I have read it in them and also in the books written about Ayodhya.

This epigraph was engraved at the main gate of the

mosque (again stated) that is to say, above the gate leading to the main dome of the mosque. This stone inscription refers about the construction of the Babri mosque, about which I have already stated. This inscription is in Persian. This inscription does not mentioned that this mosque was built by demolishing any other building."(E.T.C.)

'बाबरी मस्जिद के शिलालेख से यह स्पष्ट है कि यह बाबर के समय में सन् 1528 ईस्वी में बनायी गयी थी।'' (पेज 433)

*"From the inscriptions of Babri mosque, it is clear that it was built in the year 1528 AD during the times of Babar." (E.T.C.)*

''यह विद्वानों ने तय कर दिया है कि यह ढॉचा बाबर के समय में सन् 1528 ई0 में बनाया गया था, मैं भी इसको सही मानता हूँ।''(पेज 433)

"It has been determined by the scholars that this structure had been built in the year 1528 AD during the times of Babar. I also consider it to be correct." (E.T.C.)

''बाबरी मस्जिद का निर्माण प्राप्त तथ्यों के अनुसार सन् 1528–29 ईस्वी में हुआ था। जो मुगल काल में पड़ता है।'' (पेज 457)

"According to the facts determined, Babri mosque was built in the year 1528-29 AD, which falls in the Mughal period." (E.T.C.)

''मेरा इस ढॉचे को बाबरी मस्जिद कहने के पीछे और कोई विषेष उद्देष्य नहीं है, सिवाय इसके कि मैं पुरातत्ववेत्ता हूँ और बाबरी मस्जिद का ढॉचा पुरातात्विक हैरिटेज था, इसी नाम से जाना जाता था। मैंने इसे देखा था, इसको इसी नाम से मैंने अपने लेखों में लिखा है। यह अधिक डेफनिट और अधिक प्रिसाईज ढंग से उस ढॉचे को बताने का तरीका मुझे मालूम देता है।'' (पेज 457)

"I have no special motive in calling this structure Babri mosque, except for the fact that I am an archaeologist and the structure of Babri mosque was a

archaeological heritage and was known by this name. I had seen it and have mentioned it so in my articles. It appears to me, to be a more definite and precise method of describing the said structure." (E.T.C.)

1360. The statement of PW 16 in respect to period of construction and the person by whom, is solely based on two inscriptions which he claims to have affixed on the disputed building in Persian language though neither the witness can read Persian nor could see the inner one. Here also on page 157 read with 334 and 335 though the witness claims that the inscriptions which were installed when he visited the premises were the same as were installed at the time of construction of the building and this shows that he has not read the text of the inscriptions as published in different books from time to time and had no occasion to compare the same but the statement has been made on pure conjecture and surmises.

1362. Further the witness does not claim to be an Expert Historian but he is an Expert Archaeologist. Since he has written an Article on the disputed building i.e. Paper No. 110C1/8 (Exhibit D37, Suit-5), it appears that to support its contents, he came in witness box in his first appearance. For our purposes suffice it to mention that here also the sole foundation for claiming the period of construction of the building as "1528 AD" by Mir Baqi, the entire stress is on the said inscriptions and nothing else.

1363. Another Expert Historian Suvira Jaiswal-P.W.18, in her cross-examination with respect to the aforesaid aspect, has said :

''बाबर अवध के क्षेत्र में आया था ऐसा मैंने पढ़ा है लेकिन अयोध्या आया या नहीं मैं नहीं बता सकती हूँ।'' (पेज 24)

"Babur had come in the region of Awadh, I have read so, but in fact, came to Ayodhya or not, I cannot say."(E.T.C.)

''लेकिन बतौर इतिहासकार मैं बता सकती हूँ कि 16वीं शताब्दी में बाबर ने अयोध्या में बाबरी मस्जिद बनवाई।'' (पेज 103)

"but as a historian I can tell that in 16th century Babar got constructed Babari Mosque in Ayodhya."(E.T.C.)

''मैने बाबरी मस्जिद के बारे में कुछ नहीं पढ़ा विशेष रूप से नहीं पढ़ा इसलिए मैं नहीं बता सकती कि बाबरी मस्जिद कब अस्तित्व में आयी। मैं यह भी नहीं बता सकती कि बाबरी मस्जिद के अस्तित्व में आने के पहले उस स्थान पर क्या था।"(पेज 105)

" I have read nothing about Babari Mosque, I did not study thoroughly, therefore, I cannot say as to when Babari Mosque came into existence. I cannot say as to what was there at the site before coming into existence of Babari Mosque." (E.T.C.)

''मैंने बाबरनामा नहीं पढ़ा है।'' (पेज 121)

"I have not read Babarnama." (E.T.C.)

*'' यह ठीक है कि मैं प्राचीन इतिहास की विशेषज्ञ हूं। यह भी ठीक है कि मैं इस अदालत में प्राचीन इतिहास के विशेषज्ञ के रूप में गवाही देने आई हूं।'' (पेज 122–123)

"This is correct that I am expert in Ancient History. It is also correct that I have come to this Court to tender evidence as specialist in Ancient History." (E.T.C.)

1364. PW 18 admits that she has come to depose her

statement as Expert Historian being specialist in Ancient History (page 122-123). However, while on one hand she claims that the disputed building was constructed in 16th century by Babar at Ayodhya called Babari mosque and this statement she is making as a historian but simultaneously on page 105 she said that she has not read anything about Babari mosque and did not study thoroughly and, therefore, cannot say as to when Babari mosque came into existence. On page 121, she also admits of having not read "Baburnama" at all.

1365. Shrin Musvi-P.W.20 in her examination with respect to the aforesaid aspect has said:

(Examination-in-chief)

"There was an inscription at Babari Masjid divided in three parts and its some part were printed in Beveridge's Babar-Nama. The entire inscription is published in 1965, Epigraphia Indica published by A.S.I. It is in Persian language and Nask-script. It mentions that Mir Baqi got the mosque constructed in 1528-29 AD on the orders and intention of Babar. The date of his construction is found from its script by numerical calculation. (page2-3)

Buchanan visited Ayodhya in 1810 and described about the same in his accounts. He has said that it is alleged that Aurangzeb demolished a temple in Ram Kot and constructed a mosque but he said that the mosque has an inscription of the period of Babar, therefore, the aforesaid view is ill founded." (page-4)*

''यह ठीक है कि बाबर ने मीरबाकी को अवध का कमाण्डर नियुक्त किया था।'' (पेज 29)

"References of visit of Babar to Ayodhya are there but it is not so in his Memoir. I have read these references in other contemporary and nearby sources. Perhaps I have read this in the book written by Khwand Mir. He was contemporary to Babar. He was resident of Central Asia and an officer of Babar. His book is in Persian script. I know Persian. I do not remember presently any other near contemporary source." (E.T.C.)

''बाबरनामा में मुझे जहॉ तक याद है, कहीं भी मस्जिद बनवाने का जिक्र नहीं है। अजखुद कहा कि तब उस जमाने में मस्जिद बनवाना कॉमन प्रैक्टिस थी।'' (पेज–31)

"In Babarnama so far as I remember, there is no reference anywhere of of getting any Mosque constructed. Then of her own, she said that those days, to get mosque constructed was a common practice." (E.T.C.)

''बाबर अयोध्या कब आया था, मैं नहीं बता सकती, क्योंकि बाबरनामा में उसके यहॉ आने का कोई जिक्र नहीं है।'' (पेज–33)

"It is true that 'Sani' means "the other" or 'second'. It is true that in inscription on disputed structure, the title for Mir Baqi was written as 'Asife sani' which was read as Isfehani by Banerji. Perhaps Banerji has written this in his book Babar's religion." (E.T.C.)

''जैसा मैंने ऊपर बयान दिया है विवादित स्थल पर लगे शिलालेख को सन् 75 से 1980 के बीच में पढ़ा था एवं उस पर अध्ययन किया था। उन शिलालेखों का अध्ययन मेरे शोध के लिए आवश्यक था। मैंने अपनी थीसीस में विवादित स्थल पर पाये गये शिलालेख का कोई उल्लेख नहीं किया है इसमें कास्ट आफ कांस्ट्रक्शन के बारे में नहीं लिखा है।''

"Attention was drawn to the date of 18-12-61 shown on Paper No. 2/15-Ka-1 seeing which the witness stated that it is written in para 1 that the Babri Masjid was built by Babur nearly 460 years ago. It can not be older than 460 years if such statement was made in 1961. As Babur did not even come to Hindustan in 1501, there was no question of Babri Masjid being built at that time. Other things written in its para 1 are correct but it is wrong to say that this statement was made 460 years prior to 1961."

"मेरे अनुसार यह मस्जिद मीर बाकी ने बनवाई थी और उसने ऐसा कहा है कि बाबर के हुक्म से बनवाई गयी इसलिए मैं यह नहीं बता सकती कि बाबर का ऐसा आदेश था या नहीं क्योंकि किसी और सोर्स में उसका उल्लेख नहीं है।" (पेज 128)

"According to me, this mosque was got constructed by Mir Baqi and he has said that it was constructed under the commands of Babur, therefore, I can not tell whether Babur had given any such command or not because it is not referred to in any other source." (E.T.C.)

"यह कहना गलत है कि जो इंस्क्रिप्षन विवादित ढांचे पर लगे हुए थे वो 1934 के दंगे के बाद लगा दिये गये थे,बल्कि यह सही है कि वह पहले से लगे हुए थे जिसका जिक्र बुकानन ने सन 1810 के अपने एकाउण्ट में किया है। कुल मिलाकर तीन इन्सक्रिप्षन विवादित ढांचे पर लगे हुए थे। तीनों इन्सक्रिप्षन अलग–अलग अल्फाज में थे परन्तु उनके कन्टेन्ट यानी उनका मतलब कमोबेष एक था। यानी तीनों इन्सक्रिप्षन एक

"It is wrong to say that the inscriptions which stood at the disputed structure were installed after the 1934 riot. However, it is true that they were installed from before, as Buchanan has mentioned in his account of 1810 AD. In all, there are three inscriptions on the disputed structure. They had different wordings but their meaning was almost same. That is to say, the three inscriptions were installed at one and the same time. They all belong to pre-1580 period. As per the study of epigraphics, the script of all the three inscriptions preceded 1580. I have read in Epigraphia Indica Vol 1964-65 that the inscriptions was installed in 1528 itself. Epigraphia Indica is a Journal from the Archaeological Deptt and it is fairly worth relying."(E.T.C.)

"एक्जीबिट 53 को देखकर गवाह ने कहा इसमें लिखे अनुसार मीरबाकी बाबरी मस्जिद का फाउन्डर था। मेरे हिसाब से फाउन्डर का मतलब उससे है जिसने इसे बनाया।" (पेज 146)

"Seeing Exhibit 53, the witness said that Mir Baqi was, as per its contents, the founder of Babri Mosque. According to me, founder means the person who got it built." (E.T.C.)

1366. PW 20 in her examination-in-chief, besides other, has said that the inscription fixed at Babari mosque is divided in three, and some part thereof was published in "Baburnama" by Mrs. Beveridge and the entire inscription is in Epigraphica Indica (1965) and this shows that the building in dispute was constructed by Mir Baqi in 1528-29 AD. It is in Persian and script is Nask. The inscription also shows that the construction was made under the orders and as per the intention of Babar. The first of her statement that there was one inscription divided in three itself is not supported with what is pleaded and sought to be proved by plaintiffs (Suit 4). Further the text of the inscriptions as quoted in Baburnama by Beveridge and in Epigraphica Indica (1965) differs. On page 121 of her statement she claims to have seen the photo of original inscription in Epigraphica Indica (1964-65) while the author has said something else which we shall be discussing a bit later. On page 29 she claims that Mir Baqi was appointed commander of Awadh by Babar and on page 130 she says that Baqi Tashkandi was another name of Mir Baqi and this name has been used by Babar in Baburnama but we do not find mention of Mir Baqi or the fact that Baqi Tashkandi was also called as Mir Baqi in the Baburnama though some of the writers on their own have tried to identify "Baqi Tashkandi" with Mir Baqi but without giving

any material to justify such inference. She further said that Buchanan in his account in 1810 has mentioned about three inscriptions (page 136-137) but we do not find any such publication or book written by Buchanan mentioning the same. On the contrary we find that Dr. Francis Buchanan though made certain survey for about seven years starting from 1807 but could not get himself published any material in this regard and later on his material was processed and a report was published in 1838 by "Robert Montgomery Martin".

1367. In any case despite so many reasons some of which we have already discussed, we find that the statement of the above mentioned Expert witnesses suffer serious flaws and make it extremely delicate situation for this Court to rely on their opinion. The only thing which consistently emerges is that the statement about the period of the construction and the person who got the disputed building constructed is solely founded upon the text of the inscriptions fixed on the disputed building. There is no other material either to corroborate or to support it.

"बाबर जब अयोध्या गया था, तब उसके पूर्व राणासांगा को पराजित कर चुका था। यह सम्भव है कि जिस समय बाबर अयोध्या की तरफ गये, उस समय अयोध्या, अवध के अन्तर्गत आता था और वहां का गवर्नर इब्राहिम लोदी द्वारा नियुक्त रहा हो। बाबर जब अयोध्या की तरफ गये थे, तो वह अयोध्या नहीं गये थे, अयोध्या से कुछ कोस की दूरी पर घाघरा नदी के किनारे उन्होंने अपना पड़ाव डाला था। मुझे इस संबंध में कुछ–कुछ स्मरण आ रहा है कि उस स्थान पर पड़ाव डालने के बाद बाबर ने अपने कुछ साथियों को अयोध्या भेजा, इसके बाद इब्राहिम लोदी द्वारा नियुक्त गवर्नर शेख बायजीद अयोध्या छोड़कर भाग गया। बायजीद के अयोध्या छोड़कर भागने की यह घटना 1527–1528 ई0 में हुई, जो 930 हिजरी के तुल्य है। इसमें कोई सन्देह नहीं है कि इस घटना के बाद के कई महीनों की घटनाओं का विवरण बाबरनामें में उपलब्ध नहीं है। 28 मार्च, 1528 के बाद बाबरनामा में 2 अप्रैल, 1528 की घटना का विवरण मिलता है। उसके बाद का विवरण हो सकता है कि 18 सितम्बर, 1528 से मिलता हो। . . . . .25–26 सितम्बर, 1528 में बाबर ग्वालियर उरवा घाटी में उतरा थां उरवा घाटी के पूर्व वह बहुत से शहरों से होकर गुज़रे थे, हो सकता है कि इसके पूर्व वह आगरा से होकर गुजरे हों। स्वयं कहा कि बाबरनामा में इस संबंध में जानकारी मिल सकती है।" (पेज 79–81)

"By the time Babar went to Ayodhya, he had defeated Rana Sanga. It is possible that when Babar went towards Ayodhya, it fell under Oudh and its Governor may have been appointed by Ibrahim Lodi. When Babar had gone towards Ayodhya, he had not gone to Ayodhya and instead had halted few kose (distance of two miles) away from Ayodhya along the banks of Ghaghra river. I am able to recollect a bit that after halting at that place, Babar had sent few of his associates to Ayodhya due to which Sheikh Baijeed, the Governor appointed by Ibrahim Lodi, fled away from Ayodhya. This fleeing incident of Baijeed occurred around 1527-1528 AD, which is equivalent to 930 Hizri era. There is no doubt that details of incidents occurring many months after this incident, are not available in the Babarnama. After 28th March, 1528, the next detail contained in Babarnama is of 2nd April, 1528. It is possible that the next details commence from 18th September, 1528. . . . . On 25-26th September, 1528 Babar had been to Urva valley in Gwalior and before reaching Urva valley, he had passed through many cities. It is possible that he may have passed through Agra. On the other occasion as well when Babar went towards Ayodhya, he did not enter Ayodhya and halted at a distance of 10 kose from Ayodhya. 1387. Most of the above witnesses are not experts yet what discern undoubtedly that everybody's impression and opinion about the period of construction is based on inscriptions and nothing else. Therefore, scrutiny and study on inscription become vital.

1388. The written material which throws some light on this aspect consists of Gazetteers (published from time to time); settlement and survey reports; History books and certain other books pertaining to the disputed site/building though strictly speaking not written by well known historians but those persons claim to have collected information on the basis of their own inquiry or investigation etc. or had acquired knowledge in the capacity in which they were working or otherwise or due to the interest generated in the matter after dispute spread countrywide. We would place on record what has been said in such published material and also consider their credibility etc. simultaneously.

Gazetteers-Settlement/Survey Reports:

1389. 'Gazetteers', mostly published in 19th and 20th century during the pre-independence period, and, one after independence, published under the auspices of U.P. Government and another by the Government of India are the documents heavily relied in these cases. It is not in dispute that 'Gazetteers' are not the documents published under some statutory provision. In order to understand their evidenciary value and authority we have to first consider what 'Gazetteer' means.

1390. Learned counsels have placed before us a printout taken from internet from the site "Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia" under the heading "Gazetteer". It says that a 'gazetteer' is a geographical dictionary or directory, an important reference for information about places and place names, used in conjunction with a map or a full Atlas. It geographically contains information concerning the geographical makeup of a country, regions or continent as well as the social statistics and physical features such as mountains, waterways, or roads. Examples of information provided by gazetteers include the location of places, dimensions of physical features, population, literacy rate, etc. The “Oxford Dictionary” defines the “gazetteer” as a geographical index or dictionary. It refers to a document published by British Historian “Laurence Echard” in 1693 bears the title “Gazetteer's or Newman's Interpreter: Being a Geographical Index”. Echard wrote that the title “gazetteers” was suggested to him by a very eminent person whose name was not disclosed. The next part was published by Echard in 1704 as “the Gazetteer simply”. This is considered to be the introduction by the word gazetteer into the English language. It is said that since 18th century the word gazetteer has been used interchangeably to define either its traditional maning (i.e., a geographical dictionary or directory) or a daily news paper such as London Gazetteer. Tracing the history of gazetteer Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia says:

> “Gazetteers of ancient Greece existed since the Hellenistic era. The first known gazetteer of China appeared by the 1st century, and with the age of print media in China by the 9th century, the Chinese gentry became invested in producing gazetteers for their local areas as a source of information as well as local pride. Although existent only in fragments, the geographer Stephanus of Byzantium wrote a geographical dictionary in the 6th century which influenced later European compilers of gazetteers by the 16th century. Modern gazetteers can be found in reference sections of most libraries as well as on the Web.

> In his journal article "Alexander and the Ganges" (1923), the 20th century historian W.W. Tarn calls a list and description of satrapies of Alexander's Empire written between 324 and 323 BC as an ancient gazetteer. Tarn

notes that the document is dated no later than June 323 BC, since it features Babylon as not yet partitioned by Alexander's generals. It was revised by the Greek historian Diodorus Siculus in the 1st century BC. In the 1st century BC, Dionysius of Halicarnassus mentioned the chronicle-type format of the writing of the logographers in the age before the founder of the Greek historiographic tradition, Herodotus (i.e. before the 480s BC), saying "they did not write connected accounts but instead broke them up according to peoples and cities, treating each separately." Historian Truesdell S. Brown asserts that what Dionysius' describes in this quote about the logographers should be categorized not as a true "history" but rather as a gazetteer. While discussing the Greek conception of the river delta in ancient Greek literature, Francis Celoria notes that both Ptolemy and Pausanias of the 2nd century AD provided gazetteer information on geographical terms.

Perhaps predating Greek gazetteers were those made in ancient Egypt. Although she does not specifically label the document as a gazetteer, Penelope Wilson (PhD, Lecturer in the Department of Archaeology at Durham University) describes an ancient Egyptian papyrus found at the site of Tanis, Egypt (a city founded during the Twentieth dynasty of Egypt) which provides the following for each administrative area of Egypt at the time.

The Domesday Book initiated by William I of England in 1086 was a government survey on all the administrative counties of England; it was used to assess the properties of farmsteads and landholders in order to tax them sufficiently. In the survey, numerous English castles were listed; scholars debate on exactly how many were actually referenced in the book. However, the Domesday Book does detail the fact that out of 3,558 registered houses destroyed in 112 different boroughs listed, 410 of these destroyed houses were the direct result of castle construction and expansion. In 1316, the Nomina Villarum survey was initiated by Edward II of England; it was essentially a list of all the administrative subdivisions throughout England which could be utilized by the state in order to assess how much military troops could be conscripted and summoned from each region. The Speculum Britanniae (1596) of the Tudor era English cartographer and topographer John Norden (1548–1625) had an alphabetical list of places throughout England with headings showing their administrative hundreds and referenced to attached maps. Englishman John Speed's Theatre of the Empire of Great Britaine published in 1611 provided gazetteers for counties throughout England, which included illustrative maps, short local histories, a list of administrative hundreds, an index of parishes, and the coordinates of longitude and latitude for county towns. Starting in 1662, the Hearth Tax Returns with attached maps of local areas were compiled by individual parishes throughout England while a duplicate of their records were sent to the central government offices of the Exchequer. To supplement his 'new large Map of England' from 1677, the English cartographer John Adams compiled the extensive gazetteer "Index Villaris" in 1680 that had some 24,000 places listed with geographical coordinates coinciding with the map. The "Geographical Dictionary" of Edmund Bohun

was published in London in 1688, comprising 806 pages with some 8,500 entries. In his work, Edmund Bohun attributed the first known Western geographical dictionary to geographer Stephanus of Byzantium (fl. 6th century) while also noting influence in his work from the Thesaurus Geographicus (1587) by the Belgian cartographer Abraham Ortelius (1527–1598), but stated that Ortelius' work dealt largely with ancient geography and not up-to-date information. Only fragments of Stephanus' geographical work Ethnica (Εθνικά) have survived and were first examined by the Italian printer Aldus Manutius in his work of 1502.

The Italian monk Phillippus Ferrarrius (d. 1626) published his geographical dictionary "Epitome Geographicus in Quattuor Libros Divisum" in the Swiss city of Zurich in 1605. He divided this work into overhead topics of cities, rivers, mountains, and lakes and swamps. All placenames, given in Latin, were arranged in alphabetical order for each overhead division by geographic type;. A year after his death, his "Lexicon Geographicum" was published, which contained more than 9,000 different entries for geographic places. This was an improvement over Ortelius' work, since it included modern placenames and places discovered since the time of Ortelius.

Pierre Duval (1618–1683), a nephew of the French cartographer Nicolas Sanson, wrote various geographical dictionaries. These include a dictionary on the abbeys of France, a dictionary on ancient sites of the Assyrians, Persians, Greeks, and Romans with their modern

equivalent names, and a work published in Paris in 1651 that was both the first universal and vernacular geographical dictionary of Europe. With the gradual expansion of Laurence Echard's (d. 1730) gazetteer of 1693, it too became a universal geographical dictionary that was translated into Spanish in 1750, into French in 1809, and into Italian in 1810.

Following the American Revolutionary War, United States clergyman and historian Jeremy Belknap and Postmaster General Ebenezer Hazard intended to create the first post-revolutionary geographical works and gazetteers, but they were anticipated by the clergyman and geographer Jedidiah Morse with his Geography Made Easy in 1784. However, Morse was unable to finish the gazetteer in time for his 1784 geography and postponed it. Yet his delay to publish it lasted too long, as it was Joseph Scott in 1795 who published the first post-revolutionary American gazetteer, his Gazetteer of the United States. With the aid of Noah Webster and Rev. Samuel Austin, Morse finally published his gazetteer The American Universal Geography in 1797. However, Morse's gazetteer did not receive distinction by literary critics, as gazetteers were deemed as belonging to a lower literary class. The reviewer of Joseph Scott's 1795 gazetteer commented that it was "little more than medleys of politics, history and miscellaneous remarks on the manners, languages and arts of different nations, arranged in the order in which the territories stand on the map." Nevertheless, in 1802 Morse followed up his original work by co-publishing A New Gazetteer of the Eastern Continent with Rev. Elijah Parish,

the latter of whom Ralph H. Brown asserts did the "lion's share of the work in compiling it."

1392. The above discussion gives us an idea and broad feature of documents published and termed as "Gazetteer". There is distinction between Gazette and Gazetteer. The British Government enacted "Official Gazette Act, 1863" (Act No. XXXI of 1863) and published various Gazettes thereunder. The Gazetteer, as said above though is not founded on a statute but being a document published under the authority or auspices of the Government, deserve much more reliability and confidence. It constitute an important source of historical and other informations in general and most authenticated data about the then existing affairs.

1393. The extent to which informations contained in Gazetters can be believed, relied and considered has been subject matter of Courts time and again wherein the information contained in the Gazetters has also been utilized in one or the other manner. Some of such cases may be referred as under. It appears that the consensus of the judicial opinion is that information contained in a Gazetteer can be considered but carrectness thereof may need corrorroboration. It all depend on the nature of dispute in every case.

1394. In Fulbati Kumari Vs. Maheshwari Prasad Singh AIR 1923 Patna 453 a Division Bench of Patna High Court relied upon the Bengal District Gazetteer, Volume XVII in order to gather some information about what happened at Dumri when Captain Brown took over charge of the operations in the jungle terry tracts in 1774.

1395. In Sukhdev Singh Vs. Maharaja Bahadur of Gidhaur AIR 1951 SC 288 Bengal District Gazetteer, Vol. XVII was referred and in para 10 the Apex Court held:

> "The statement in the District Gazetteer is not necessarily conclusive, but the Gazetteer is an official document of some value, as it is compiled by experienced officials with great care after obtaining the facts from official records."

1396. In Gopal Krishnaji Ketkar Vs. Mahomed Jaffar Hussein AIR 1954 SC 5 a dispute regarding management of a Darga known as Haji Malang came to be considered before the Apex Court. The Darga had two tomb, one of a Hindu and another of Muslim saint. The Court referred to the Gazetteer of Bombay to find out the history which is said to have lost an antiquity and from the gazetteer it appears that a Muslim saint came to India as an Urban missionary in 13th century and after his death, he was buried in the said Darga. There was another tomb called Mayi's tomb where the body of a Hindu Raja's daughter treated by Bawa Malang as his daughter was buried. In the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, the Apex Court observed that such matter cannot be governed either by Hindu or Muslim law but should be governed by its own special customs or by general law of public religious and charitable trust.

1397. In Chhote Khan & others Vs. Mal Khan & others AIR 1954 SC 575, the Court referred to Gazetteer Gurgaon District (1910) with respect to the properties owned by Meos of Ferozepore Tehsil and others villages in Gurgaon. It also

referres to the settlement record of 1877 observing that it is an important document.

1398. In Biswambhar Singh & others Vs. State of Orissa & another AIR 1954 SC 139, the Court referred to Hunter's Imperial Gazetter, Volume 4, page 478 which mentions certain facts about the origin of Bhuyans as also the Settlement Report of 1907-1911.

1399. In Commissioner of Income-tax Vs. Sri Ramakrishna Deo AIR 1959 SC 239, the Court referred to the District Gazetteer, Vishakhapatnam, 1907 in para 3 of its judgment.

1400. In State of Bihar & others Vs. Bhabapritananda Ojha AIR 1959 SC 1073, the Court referred to Bihar District Gazetteer relating to Santal Parganas, 1938.

www.vadaprativada.com

1401. In Swami Motor Transports (P) Ltd. & Anr. Vs. Sri Sankaraswamigal Mutt & Anr. AIR 1963 SC 864 the Court resorted to rely on "Madras District Gazetteers, Madurai" in respect to certain statistical data published therein in support of the claim of the State observing that this is the information furnished from authorized Government publication.

1402. In Mahant Shri Srinivasa Ramanuj Das Vs. Surayan Dass & Anr. AIR 1967 SC 256 the Court said:

> "These statements in the Gazetteer are not relied on as evidence of title but as providing historical material and the practice followed by the Math and its head. The Gazetteer can be consulted on matters of public history."

1403. In Laxman Siddappa Naik vs. Kattimani Chandappa Jampanna and others AIR 1968 SC 929 the Apex Court approved the consultation of Bombay Karnatak Gazetteer of 1893 and certain other similar documents to find out the distinguishing customs and manners of different tribes.

1404. Sri R.L.Verma, however, submits that in a suit where the question of title of temple or property is involved, it cannot be said to be a question of history and therefore, neither the Gazetteers nor the report of Archaeological Survey etc. can be an appropriate book of reference for deciding such a controversy and placed reliance on Farzand Ali Vs. Zafar Ali 46 IC 119 where it is observed:

> "We are inclined to think that the use of the historical works to establish title to the property cannot be justified on the strength of Section 57 of the Indian Evidence Act. The question of title between the trustee of a mosque, though an old and historical institution, and a private person, cannot, in our opinion, be deemed to be a 'matter of public history' within the meaning of the said section."

1405. The submission, in our view, is totally misconceived and travels much beyond the point for which the various copies of gazetteers have been filed before us by the parties and in fact some observations therefrom are also relied by Sri Verma. For the purpose of historical events and fact as they were centuries ago, the manner in which they have taken are detailed in the documents published under the authority of the then Government in the form of Gazetteers.

1406. Mahant Shri Srinivasa Ramanuj Das (supra) dictum has been followed in Yadarao Dajiba Shrawane (Dead) Vs. Nanilal Harakchand Shah (Dead) & Ors. 2002 (6) SCC 404.

1407. The first gazetteer in respect to Indian sub-continent came to be published in 1828 under the title "East India

www.vadaprativada.com

Gazetteer" by Walter Hamilton (second edition reprint 1993 by Low Price Publications, Delhi) containing particulars and descriptions of the Empires, Kingdoms, Principalities, Provinces, Cities, Towns, Districts, Fortresses, harbours, rivers, lakes and, C. of Hindostan and the adjacent Countries, India beyond the Ganges and the eastern Archipelago.

1408. Hamilton's "Gazetter" of 1828 on page 353 under the heading 'Oude' gives following information about Ayodhya :

> "Pilgrims resort to this vicinity, where the remains of the ancient city of Oude, and capital of the great Rama, are still to be seen; but whatever may have been its former magnificence it now exhibits nothing but a shapeless mass of ruins. The modern town extends a considerable way along the banks of the Goggra, adjoining Fyzabad, and is tolerably well peopled; but inland it is a mass of rubbish and jungle, among which are the reputed site of temples dedicated to Rama, Seeta, his wife, Lakshman, his general, and Hanimaun (a large monkey), his prime minister. The religious mendicants who perform the pilgrimage to Oude are chiefly of the Ramata sect, who walk round the temples and idols, bathe in the holy pools, and perform the customary ceremonies."

1409. Thereafter Robert Montgomery Martin, for the first time sought to contradict local belief or tradition about the person who made construction by referring to an inscription on the wall of the disputed building according to which it was the work of the conqueror Babar falsifying the local tradition of its construction by Aurangzabe in his work "The History, Antiquities, Topography and Statistics of Eastern India" (1838 AD) (Ex. 20, Suit 5-Paper No.107C1/109-110). The copy of the book in all 6 volumes available to the Court is the first Indian reprint 1976 by Cosmo Publications, Delhi. The details of inscription referred to in the above passage have not been given. It says at page 334/335, Vol.II, as under:

> ".... if these temples ever existed, not the smallest trace of them remains to enable us to judge of the period when they were built; and the destruction is very generally attributed by the Hindus to the furious zeal of Aurungzebe, to whom also is imputed the overthrow of the temples in Benares and Mathura. What may have been the case in the two latter, I shall not now take upon myself to say, but with respect to Ayodhya the tradition seems very ill founded. The bigot by whom the temples were destroyed, is said to have erected mosques on the situations of the most remarkable temples; but the mosque at Ayodhya, which is by far the most entire, and which has every appearance of being the most modern, is ascertained by an inscription on its walls (of which a copy is given) to have been built by Babur, five generations before Aurungzebe."

1410. Edward Thornton in "A Gazetteer of the Territories under the Government of the East-India Company and of the native States on the Continent of India", first published in 1858 (reproduced in 1993) by Low Price Publications, Delhi (Book No. 10) on page 739 (Paper No.107C1-10 i.e. Ex.5 Suit 5) under the heading "Oudh" observed as under:

> "According to native tradition, they were demolished by Aurungzebe, who built a mosque on part of the site. The falsehood of the tradition is, however, proved by an inscription on the wall of the mosque, attributing the work to the conqueror Baber, from whom Aurungzabe was fifth in descent. The mosque is embellished with fourteen columns of only five or six feet in height, but of very elaborate and tasteful workmanship, said to have been taken from the ruins of the Hindoo fanes . . . . .” (emphasis added)

1411. We do not find from the above Gazetteer whether Thornton himself had viewed the alleged inscription, whether there was only one inscription or more than one and whether Thornton was capable of himself reading Persian/Arabic or the said information is based on secondary evidence, i.e., information he might have received from somebody else whose authenticity is also not known. To us it appear that the above observations are founded on what has been noticed by Robert Montgomery Martin in “The History, Antiquities, Topography and Statistics of Eastern India” by Robort Montgomry Martin (Vol-II) (first published in 1838 AD) (Supra) (Ex. 20, Suit-5-Paper No. 107 C1/109-110) where referring to the survey made by the Dr. Buchanan, Martin referred the inscription and contradicted local belief and tradition of demolition by Aurangzeb and said that it must have been the work of Babar.

1412. However, from the words “an inscription”, to us it appears that according to his information there existed only one inscription on the wall of the mosque which attributed the work to Emperor Babar.

1413. Then comes P. Carnegy's “A Historical Sketch of Tahsil Fyzabad, Zillah Fyzabad” (hereinafter referred to as “P. Carnegy's Historical Sketch”). He was an Officiating Commissioner and Settlement Officer at Faizabad and in 1967 prepared the said report which was published in 1870. Copies of frontispiece, pages 5, 6, 7, 19, 20 and 21 have been filed as paper No.107C1/17-23 i.e. Ex.49, Suit 5 (Register 20, page 35-47). Appendix-A containing the list of sacred places in and about Ajudhia has been filed as Ex. A-10 (Suit4) (Register 16, pages 67 to 78). With respect to construction of the disputed building, on page 20 and 21 of the book, (Paper No.107C1/22-23), P. Carnegy has said:

> "The Janamasthan and other temples.- It is locally affirmed that at the Mahomedan conquest there were three important Hindu shrines, with but few devotees attached, at Ajudhia, which was then little other than wilderness. These were the "Janamasthan," the "Sargadwar mandir" also known as "Ram Darbar" and the "Tareta-ke-Thakur."
>
> On the first of these the Emperor Babar built the mosque which still bears his name, A.D. 1528. On the second Aurangzeb did the same A.D. 1658-1707; and on the third that sovereign, or his predecessor, built a mosque, according to the well known Mahomedan principle of enforcing their religion on all those whom they conquered.
> Babar's mosque.- According to Leyden's memoirs of Babar that Emperor encamped at the junction of the Serwa and Gogra rivers two or three kos east from Ajudhia, on the 28th March1528, and there he halted 7 or 8 days setting the surrounding country. A well known hunting ground is spoken of in that work, 7 or 8 kos above Oudh, on the banks of the Surju. It is remarkable that in all the copies of Babar's life now known, the pages that relate to his doings at Ajudhia are wanting. In two places in the Babari mosque the year in which it was built 935 H. corresponding with 1528 A.D. is carved in stone, along with inscriptions dedicated to the glory of that Emperor.

1414. The reference of inscriptions in Carnegy's Historical Sketch is also at page 27, Section VI under the heading "Buildings" at Serial Item 5 which states as under:

> "Babar's mosque with stone inscriptions in Ajudhia, date A.D. 1528, and stone columns of infinitely greater antiquity."

1415. Here Carnegy has referred two inscriptions on the disputed building to infer that the same was constructed in 935 Hizra (corresponding with 1528 AD). He has also not said anything further. He also gave no details or the text of the alleged inscriptions.

1416. In "Gazetteer of Oudh" by Mr. W.C. Benett, C.S., Assistant Commissioner (1877) (Book No. 11), the factum of the construction of disputed building is given on page 6/7 which is a virtual reproduction of what is said in P. Carnegy's Historical Sketch (supra) as evident from the following:

> *"The Janamasthan and other temples.--It is locally affirmed that at the Muhammadan conquest there were three important Hindu shrines, with but few devotees attached,* at Ajodhya*, which was then little other than a wilderness.* These were the "Janamasthan," the "Swargaddwar mandir" also known as "Ram Darbar," "Treta-ke-Thakur."

Babar's mosque.--According to Leyden's Memoirs of Babar, that Emperor encamped at the junction of the Serwa and Gogra rivers two or three kos east from Ajodhya, on the 28th March 1528, and there he halted seven or eight days, settling the surrounding country. A well-known hunting ground is spoken of in that work, seven or eight kos above Oudh, on the banks of the Sarju. It is remarkable that in all the copies of Babar's life now known, the pages that relate to his doings at Ajodhya are wanting. In two places in the Babari Mosque, the year in which it was built, 935 H., corresponding with 1528 A.D., is carved in stone, along with inscriptions dedicated to the glory of that Emperor.*

If Ajodhya was then little other than a wilderness, it must at least have possessed a fine temple in the Janamasthan; for many of its columns are still in existence and in good preservation, having been used by the Musalmans in the construction of the Babari Mosque. These are of strong, close-grained, dark-colored or black stone, called by the natives kasauti (literally touch-stone slate,) and carved with different devices. To my thinking these more strongly resemble Buddhist pillars than those I have seen at Benares and elsewhere. They are from seven to eight feet long, square at the base, centre and capital, and round or octagonal intermediately." (emphasis added)

1417. Next is the "Gazetteer of the Province of Oudh" Vol. I (three volumes in one) published by Low Price Publications, Delhi (first published in 1877-78) (reprinted in LPP 1993)

www.vadaprativada.com

(Book No. 11). Copy of pages No.6 and 7 of the aforesaid Gazetteer have been filed as Papers No.107C1/25-26 i.e. Ex.7, Suit-5 (Register 20, Page 51-53). The 'introduction' of the above gazetteer has been written by Mr. W.C. Benett, C.S., Assistant Commissioner. Therefore, to us it appears that the above gazetteer was prepared by or under the supervision of Mr. Benett who might have been assisted with a number of other officers contributing write ups on different items. On page XXXIX, chapter I, "Introduction", it says:

> "The great Afghan captains whom that prince defeated in Oudh have left no representatives, and the four pages describing the events which attended his entry to Ajodhya, where it is possible that the Hindu chiefs rallied round the centre of their religion, are missing from all the known copies of his memoirs. The only record remaining is an ancient mosque, which preserves the invader's name on the holiest spot of all—the birthplace of Rama."

1418. Thereafter on page 6/7, under the headings "The Janamasthan and other temples" and "Babar's mosque" it mentions about the inscriptions at two places in the disputed building to show the period of construction and the person by whom it was constructed. It is again a repetition of what was said in P. Carnegy's Historical Sketch (supra) and there is no substantial difference therein:

> "The Janamasthan and other temples—It is locally affirmed that at the Muhammadan conquest there were three important Hindu shrines, with but few devotees attached, at Ajodhya, which was then little other than a wilderness. These were the "Janamasthan" the

On the first of these the Emperor Babar built the mosque, which still bears his name, A.D. 1528. Babar's mosque—According to Leyden's Memoirs of Babar, that Emperor encamped at the junction of the Serwa and Gogra rivers two or three kos east from Ajodhya on the 28th March 1528, and there he halted seven or eight days, settling the surrounding country. The book on the very first page mentions that it contains partly, reports and notes of P. Carnegy, late Settlement Officer, and J. Woodborn, late Officiating Settlement Officer. Copies of the frontispiece as well as page No.218, 231, 235 and 236 have been filed as Paper No.107C1/27-30A i.e. Ex.8, Suit-5 (Register Vol.20 Pages 55-62).

1420. Here also reference of the disputed building, the period of its construction by Emperor Babar is in the same language as stated in P. Carnegy's Historical Sketch (supra) and there is no substantial difference in the two except of some addition as is evident from para 666 and 667, read as under:

> *"666. 1421. Next comes "Barabanki: A gazetteer being Volume XLVIII of the District Gazetteer of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh" compiled and edited by H.R. Nevill, I.C.S., printed by F. Copy of pages No.168-169 have been filed as Paper No.107C1/40-41; Ex.52, Suit-5. He does not refer to any inscription etc. but while describing Hindu Muslim clash said to have occurred in 1853, he observed:

"The cause of the occurrence was one of the numerous disputes that have sprung up from time to time between the Hindu priests and the Musalmans of Ajodhya with regard to the ground on which formerly stood the Janamasthan temple, which was destroyed by Babar and replaced by a mosque."

> "Ajodhya is pre-eminently a city of temples, and apart from these there are but few points of interest in the place. Not all of these places of worship are connected with the Hindu religion. There are six Jain shrines which have been already mentioned in Chapter III in connection with Jainism in this district; and there are also the Musalman mosques and tombs. It is locally affirmed that at the time of the Musalman conquest there were three important Hindu shrines at Ajodhya and little else. These were the Janamasthan temple, the Swargaddwar, and the Treta-ka-Thakur, and each was successively made the object of attention of different Musalman rulers. The Janamsthan was in Ramkot and marked the birthplace of Rama. In 1528 A.D. Babar came to Ajodhya and halted here for a week. He destroyed the ancient temple and on its site built a mosque, still known as Babar' mosque. The materials of the old structure were largely employed, and many of the columns are in good preservation; they are of close grained black stone, called by the natives Kasauti, and carved with various devices. Their length is from seven to eight feet, and the shape square at the base, centre and capital, the rest being round or octagonal. The mosque has two inscriptions, one on the outside and the other on the pulpit; both are in Persian and bear the date 935 Hijri. Of the authenticity of the inscriptions there can be no doubt, but no record of the visit to Ajodhya is to be found in the Musalman historians. It must have occurred about the time of his expedition to Bihar." (emphasis added)

The copy of the frontispiece and pages No.172, 173, 171, 175, 176 and 177 have been filed as paper No.107C1/42-48; Ex.11, Suit-5; Register Vol.20 page 85-97.

1423. Next is "Imperial Gazetteer of India—Provincial Series—United Provinces of Agra and Oudh"-Vol. II (1908) (Book No. 16) published by Superintendent of Government Printing Calcutta, where at page 388-389 (Ex.10 Suit-5; Paper No.107C1/37-39) it says:

> "At one corner of a vast mound known as Ramkot, or the fort of Rama, is the holy spot where the hero was born. Most of the enclosure is occupied by a mosque built by Babar from the remains of an old temple, and in the outer portion a small platform and shrine mark the birthplace. Close by is a larger temple in which is shown the cooking-place of Sita, the faithful wife of Rama. A lofty temple stands on the bank of the Gogra at the place where Lakshmana bathed; and Hanuman, king of the monkeys, is worshipped in a large temple in the town, approached by an immense flight of steps, which bears the name Hanuman Garhi. Other noticeable temples built during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries are the Kanakbhawan, a fine building erected by a Rani of Tikamgarh, the Nageshwarnath temple, Darshan Singh's temple, and a small marble temple built by the present Maharaja, Ajodhya also contains a number of Jain temples, five of which were built in the eighteenth century to mark the birthplaces of the five heirarchs who are said to have been born at Ajodhya. Besides the mosque of Babar, two ruined mosques, built by Aurangzeb, stand on the sites of celebrated Hindu shrines--the Swargadwara, where Rama's body was cremated, and the Treta-ka-Thakur, where he sacrificed." (emphasis added)

1424. The above gazetteer only refers the name of Emperor Babar that he constructed disputed building but neither the period nor the basis of such information is mentioned.

1425. H.R. Nevill, I.C.S., published another gazetteer in 1928 under the title "Fyzabad: A Gazetteer being Vol. XLIII of the District Gazetteers of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh". Copy of the frontispiece and pages no.178, 179, 180 and 181 have been filed as Paper No.107C1/49-53 (Register 20, pages 99-107). In the preface written by Nevill in February, 1905 he said that in the earlier gazetteer of the province of Oudh, articles dealing with District Fyzabad and its various other divisions, towns and villages were taken almost wholly from the valuable and defuse Settlement Report of Mr. A.F. Millett, which embodied a large proportion of the remarkable notes and reports of Mr. Patrick Carnegy and the late Sri John Woodburn. These contain much that is now obsolete and still more of a purely traditional and speculative character. After collecting fresh materiel he found the necessity of publication of the said gazetteer. Chapter V deals with 'History'. For the present purpose we are confining to that part of the Gazetteer which deals with the period of construction of the disputed structure. On pages 151-152 the facts about the first Muslim invasion of Oudh is mentioned as under:

> "The first Musalman invasion of Oudh was, according to the popular tradition, that of Saiyid Salar Masaud. The Mirat-i-Masaudi states that the youthful invader went from Multan to Ajodhya, where, after taking the city without a struggle, he remained hunting for some time and then set out for Delhi in 1030 A.D. The route taken is remarkable and the story must be confused in some manner. There is no mention of his passing through Ajodhya on his march from Satrikh to Bahraich, where he met his death; but popular legend steps in to fill the gap."

1426. The above narration is sought to be supported by referring to the "History of India-As told by its own Historians" by Sir H.M. Elliot and John Dowson, Vol. II, page 531. We have with us all the eight volumes of the book of Elliot and Dowson which was first published in 1866-1877 and reprinted in 1990, 1996, 2001 and 2008. In the appendix Chapter III which starts from page 528 of Vol. II it appears that Salar Masud son of Sultan Mahmud Subuktagin came to India by crossing the river Indus. Having conquest Multan he led his army against 'Ajudhan'. A few lines from page 530-531 of Elliot and Dowson's book are as under:

"The rainy season had now set in, so they remained at Multan the next four months. After the rains, Mas'ud led his army against Ajudhan. Although, in those days, that place and its vicinity was thickly peopled, it was subdued without a struggle. Mas'ud was delighted with the climate of Ajudhan, and as, moreover, it was a good sporting country, he remained there till the end of the following rains, when he set off for Delhi."

1427. On page 530, footnote, the authors (Elliot and Dowson) have said:

"Ajudha or Ayodhya is the old form of the name Oudh. The scene of Mas'ud's later exploits is laid in the neighbourhood of Oudh."

1428. This narration claims to be an English translation of

www.vadaprativada.com

"Mir-at-i-Masaudi" written by Abdu-r Rahman Chishti. On page 513 the editor of the book "History of India" has mentioned about the author and the book "Mir-at-i-Masaudi" as well the following facts in order to enhance the degree of reliability on the aforesaid work in respect to life story of Salar Masaud:

> "This is professedly a life of Mas'ud the Ghaznivide, and finds an appropriate place here after the story books. The author of this extraordinary work was by name' Abdu-r Rahman Chirsti. He explains the motives which impelled him to its composition, and the sources of his information after the following manner: "The history of the King of Martyrs, Salar Mas'ud, the facts of his birth, of his coming to Hindustan, and of his martyrdom, are told by different men in various ways, which have not found a place in any historical work of repute. The writer had long endeavoured to ascertain the real facts; and, after much research he obtained possession of an old book written by Mulla Muhammad Ghaznawi. This man was servant of Sultan Mahmud Subuktigin. He was also in the service of Salar Sahu, and of the Prince of Martyrs, whom he survived. The writer perused this old book from beginning to end with the greatest pleasure, and the doubts which he had entertained were dispelled. The book was very long, it entered into details about the wars of Sultan Mahmud, and Salar Sahu, mentioning incidentally here and there the King of Martyrs, and closing with an account of his martyrdom. Several of the beloved friends and attendants of the Martyr Sultan, in the abodes of the blessed, have urged the writer to the task which he has undertaken; but no one has made the same demand on behalf of Sultan Mahmud. It therefore

seemed expedient to him that he should select and commit to writing all that related to the Martyr King. He would not, however, have been able to succeed, even in this, without the directions he graciously received from the spirit of the departed. When he had set about his selection, and had engaged earnestly in the work, one night the spirit of the deceased martyr appeared to the writer in a vision, and most condescendingly expressed, with his blessed tongue, his approval of the work. Being thus graciously honoured, the author humbly replied that he had begun the work, and begged for assistance wherever his narration might be too high, or too low, too short, or too long. The spirit, with great affability, directed the author to write, and that he would attend to him and assist him. The present work is the result, to which the author has given the name Mir-at-i Mas'udi. May the reader of it also be (mas'ud) blessed. This is the author's prayer. The biography of the King of Martyrs having been derived from the aforesaid history, is here related in five chapters (dastans). Sundry incidents, and miraculous statements, which have been found in trustworthy books, have been selected, and, after being verified by oral communications with the author's spiritual visitors, have been inserted in the present work."

1429. The editor of "History of India" thereafter has termed the book as a historical romance and says that the book mainly seems to rest on the last word "Tawarikh-i-Mahmudi" of Mulla Muhammad Ghaznawi but at places it is difficult to rely on the narration. We do not find it expedient to go further except to point out that in all the subsequent Gazetteers, this history of invasion of Ayodhya by "Syed Salar Masud" has been followed

referring to Elliot and Dowson's "History of India" Vol. II page 530/531 where the learned authors got confused by identifying "Ajudhan" as "Ayodhya" though the two are different places. "Ajudhan" was a place in "Punjab" while "Ayodhay" is much far therefrom. This mistake unfortunately has continued in a lot of History books also which have been published until recently.

1430. Dr. T.P. Verma, Historian and author of the book "Ayodhya Ka Itihas Evam Puratatva" (Exhibit 3-Suit 5) (Book No. 141) who has also written the same fact at page 110/111 in his above titled book, in his cross examination has admitted this error. He admits that "Salar Masud" never came to "Ayodhya" and he has wrongly mentioned the same in his book as is evident from the following:

''इस बात की सम्भावना कम है कि 11वीं शताब्दी में अयोध्या में मुसलमानों की आबादी रही होगी। सालार मसूद के सैनिक अधिकारी ख्वाजा मिट्ठे 1032 ईस्वी के करीब अयोध्या में आये रहे होगें। मेरे विचार से अयोध्या की सबसे पुरानी मस्जिद वही मस्जिद थी, जो बाबरी मस्जिद कही जाती थी। ...13वीं से 17 वीं शताब्दी के बीच में अयोध्या की गणना भारत वर्ष के बड़े शहरों में होती थी, जो आज की अयोध्या से बड़ी रही होगी। उस समय फैजाबाद नाम का कोई शहर नहीं था। ... मिराते – मसूदी में 10 – 12 राजाओं के नाम दिये हैं परन्तु यह नहीं दिया गया है कि अयोध्या में उस समय राजा कौन था।'' (पेज 347–348)

"There is least probability that Muslim populace may have existed in Ayodhya in the 11th century. Salar Masood's army officer Khwaja Miththe may have visited Ayodhya around 1032 AD. In my view, the oldest mosque in Ayodhya was the same mosque, which was called Babri mosque ... Ayodhya was considered to be a major city of India between 13th to 17th century, which was bigger than Ayodhya of today. At that time there was no city named Faizabad. ... The Mirate-Masoodi contains names of 10-12

kings, but it has not been given as to who was the king at that time." (E.T.C)

"गवाह ने अपनी पुस्तक प्रदर्श ओ0ओ0एस0 5 –3 के पेज 158 के द्वितीय कालम को देखकर कहा कि यह वाक्य कि "इसके पूर्व उसने सतरख (साकेत अथवा अयोध्या) में डेरा डाला था", कथन गलत है,सही नहीं है, और ऐसा कोई वर्णन मीरात–ए–मसूदी में नहीं मिलता है। "मीरात–ए–मसूदी" में सतरख में डेरा डालने की बात कही गयी है, लेकिन यह सतरख, साकेत या अयोध्या है यह बात सही नहीं है। सतरख (सतरिख) फैजाबाद और बाराबंकी के बीच में स्थित एक स्थान का नाम है जो अवध क्षेत्र में पड़ता है। जिसकी दूरी वर्तमान अयोध्या से 50 मील से अधिक होगी। .... क्षेत्र से मेरा तात्पर्य न तो अयोध्या है और न सतरिख बल्कि इससे मेरा तात्पर्य सम्पूर्ण अवध क्षेत्र से है।" (पेज 349–350)

"After looking at second column of page 158 of his book, exhibit O.O.S 5-3, the witness stated that the sentence reading as 'prior to this he had camped at Satrakh (Saket or Ayodhya)' , is wrong and is not correct and no such reference is found in Mirat-e-masoodi. The Mirat-e-masoodi mentions about camping at Satrakh, but it is not correct that this Satrakh is Saket or Ayodhya. Satrakh (Satrikh) is a place situated between Faizabad and Barabanki, which falls in Awadh area and whose distance would be more than 50 miles from the present Ayodhya. ... By area, I neither mean Ayodhya nor Satrikh and instead I mean the complete Awadh zone." (E.T.C)

"मीराते ए मसूदी में सालार मसूद के अयोध्याा आने की बात नहीं कही गयी है यह मैं स्वीकार कर चुका हूं लेकिन इस बात की सम्भावना अभी भी बनी हुई है कि उसके सैनिकों की किसी टोली ने जन्म भूमि मंदिर को क्षति पहुंचाई हो क्योंकि आज ही मैं थोड़ी देर पहले बता चुका हूं कि हनुमान गढ़ी में सालार मसूद के सैनिक अधिकारी ख्वाजा मिट्ठे की कब्र होने की बात कही है।" (पेज 350)

"The Mirat-e-masoodi nowhere mentions about

www.vadaprativada.com

Salar Masood visiting Ayodhya. I have admitted this, but this probability still exists that certain group of his soldier may have caused damage to Janmbhumi temple because I have stated a short while ago that the existence of the grave of Khwaja Miththe, an army officer of Salar Masood, has been claimed at Hanumangarhi." (E.T.C)

''ख्वाजा मिट्ठे की कब्र अयोध्या में होने अथवा उनके सालार मसूद के सैनिक अधिकारी होने की बात मीराते–ए–मसूदी में नहीं आती है। 1955 में बिहार से प्रकाशित हनुमान गढ़ी का इतिहास'' नामक पुस्तक जिसके लेखक अमर्त्य – सिंह हैं, ने इस बात का हवाला अपनी पुस्तक में दिया है और कहा है कि ख्वाजा मिट्ठे के कब्र की बात को एक इश्यू बनाया गया था इसी आधार पर मैंने अयोध्या में मसूद के सेनाओं के आक्रमण की बात और उसके मंदिरों के क्षतिग्रस्त करने के बारे में लिखा है। मैंने अपनी पुस्तक प्रदर्श ओ0ओ0एस0 5–3 में अमर्त्य सिंह की पुस्तक '6 हनुमान गढ़ी के इतिहास का हवाला नहीं दिया है और न ही मैंने अपनी पुस्तक में ख्वाजा मिट्ठे के कब्र के होने का हवाला दिया है।'' (पेज 351)

www.vadapativada.com

"The Mirat-e-masoodi neither mentions about existence of the grave of Khwaja Miththe at Ayodhya nor about he being an army officer of Salaar Masood. This fact has been referred in the book titled 'Hanumangarhi Ka Itihas', published in 1955 from Bihar and written by Amartya Singh, and it has been mentioned that the fact of Khwaja Miththe's grave had also been made an issue. On this basis, I have written about Ayodhya's invasion by the army of Masood and the destruction of its temples. In my book, exhibit O.O.S 5-3, I have neither referred to Amartya Singh's book 'Hanumangarhi Ka Itihas' nor have I referred about existence of grave of Khwaja Miththe."(E.T.C)

''स्वयं कहा कि मीरात–ए–मसूदी को इतिहास की पुस्तक का दर्जा

"Stated on his own that the Mirat-e-masoodi is not recognized as a history book. It is said to be historical romance or historical novel, in which facts and imaginations have been used liberally, which is so claimed by Elliot and Dawson." (E.T.C)

''इस पृष्ठ पर क्रम सं0 5 के नीचे दी गयी टिप्पणी से मैं अब इस समय पूरी तरह सहमत नहीं हूँ। ... गवाह ने अपनी पुस्तक के पृष्ठ 176 के क्रम सं0 21 के नीचे दी गयी टिप्पणी के प्रथम वाक्यांश ''सालार मसूद के आक्रमण के लगभग सात दशकों के बाद'' को देखकर कहा कि मैं अब इससे भी सहमत नहीं हूँ।'' (पेज 355–356)

"At present, I do not completely agree with the comment contained below serial no.5 of this page. . . . . After looking at part of the first sentence of the comment under serial no.21 of page 176 of his book reading as 'after about seven decades of invasion of Salar Masood', the witness stated that now I do not agree with this as well." (E.T.C)

1431. Now coming back to "Fyzabad Gazetteer 1928" (supra) page 155, it mentions:

"In 1528 Babar built the mosque at Ajudhya on the traditional spot where Rama was born."

1432. Again in the later part a directory is appended and deals with Ayodhya at page 179/180, it says:

"It is locally affirmed that at the time of the Musalman conquest there were three important Hindu shrines at Ajodhya and little else. There were the Janamsthan temple, the Swargaddwar and the Treta-ka-Thakur, and each was successively made the object of 1433. Here also Nevill in the footnote has placed reliance on Elliot and Dowson's "History of India" Vol. 4 page 283 which is english translation of "Tuzak-I Babari" which is said to be Leyden and Erskine's translation as per the preface of the book. We have gone through the entire page 283 of the said book but do not find any fact mentioned about the construction of disputed site or building mentioned therein.

1434. After independence under the authority of Government of Uttar Pradesh (Revenue Department) District Gazetteers of Uttar Pradesh in the revised form were published. The "Uttar Pradesh District Gazetteers-Faizabad" by Smt. Esha Basanti Joshi (Book No. 17) was published in 1960 printed at the Indian Press (Private) Ltd., Allahabad. Copy of the

frontispiece and pages No.34, 36, 46, 47, 352 and 354 have been filed as paper No.107C1/54-61 i.e. Ex.13, Suit-5 (Register 20, pages 109-123). With reference to the construction of disputed building by Babar and the period it says:

> "The Janmasthan was in Ramkot and marked the birthplace of Rama. It seems that in 1528 A.D. Babur visited Ayodhya and under his orders this ancient temple was destroyed and on the site was built what came to be known as Babur's mosque*. The material of the old temple was largely employed in building the mosque and a few of the original columns are still in good preservations; they are of cloe grained black stone (kasauti) bearing various Hindu bas-reliefs (see Plate I), the outer beam of the main structure being of sandal wood. The height of the columns is seven to eight feet, the shape of the base, the middle section and the capital is square, the rest being round or octagonal.* There are two inscriptions in Persian, one on the outside and the other on the pulpit bearing the date 935 Hijri*."*

1435. Broadly, we find and in fact it is even admitted by Sri Jilani that the sole basis for determining the period of construction of the disputed building and to co-relate it with Emperor Babar is/are the inscription(s) said to be installed in the disputed building referred to in certain Gazetteers etc. The text of these inscriptions have been given in different books which needs threadbare scrutiny to find out whether the disputed building was constructed in 1528 by or under the order of Emperor Babar is correct or not.

1436. The first document which has reproduced the text of said inscription(s) is the publication of Archaeological Survey

of India titled as "The Sharqi Architecture of Jaunpur; with notes on Zafarabad, Sahet-Mahet and Other Places in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh by A. Fuhrer; Original edition 1889 (reprinted in 1994) by the Director General Archaeological Survey of India, New Delhi (hereinafter referred to as "Fuhrer's Report"). This is edited by Z.A.Desai. Chapter-X thereof refers to the inscriptions i.e., no. XL; XLI; XLII found at Ayodhya and is supported with the inscriptions found by Fuhrer at Ayodhya. It says that there were three inscriptions wherefrom he (Fuhrer) formed the opinion that the said building was constructed at Ayodhya in A.H. 930, or A.D. 1523, by Mir Khan, on the very spot where the old temple Janam Asthanam of Ramachandra was standing.

1437. The inscription No. XL was over the central mihrab, written in Arabic characters and gives twice the Kalimah as under:

1438. Inscription No. XLI was found on the mimbar (right hand side of the disputed building) written in Persian poetry, the metre being Ramal, in six lines:

1439. Inscription XLII was found above the entrance door of the disputed building written in Persian poetry, the metre being Ramal in ten lines. He further says that some characters of the second and whole third lines are completely defaced:

1440. After referring the aforesaid inscriptions and text, Fuhrer on page 68, Chapter X has made the following observations:

"The old temple of Ramachandra at Janamasthanam must have been a very fine one, for may of its columns have been used by the Musalmans in the construction of Babar's masjid. These are of strong, close-grained, dark-coloured or black stone, called by the natives kasauti, "touch-stone slate," and carved with different devices. They are from seven to eight feet long, square at the base, centre and capital, and round or octagonal intermediately."

1441. The second extremely relied work is "Babur-Nama" by A.S. Beveridge (first published in 1921) (reprinted in LPP 1989, 1997, 2000), two volumes in a single bound book (Book No. 6). Besides the book itself, extract of some of the pages of the said book (of different editions) have also been filed by the parties which are exhibits as under:

(i) Paper No. 78 A-2/ 21-24 (Ex. J5, Suit-4) (Register Volume 13, page 39-45)

(ii) Paper No. 87 B-1/ 7 (Ex. J8, Suit-4)

(iii) Paper No. 87 B-1/ 8 (Ex. J9, Suit-4)

(iv) Paper No. C2-163/ 1-2 (Ex. J13, Suit-4) (Register Vol. 34 page no. 73-74)

(vi) Paper No. C2-156/ 1-5 (Ex. Q2, Suit-5) (Register Vol. 34 page 37-45)

1442. Appendix U at page LXXVII, LXXVIII and LXXIX refers to two such inscriptions, one inside the mosque and another outside the mosque. Photocopy of the aforesaid pages of Appendix U have been placed on record as Exhibit T3 (Suit-4)

(Paper No. 43A-1/22-24), (Register 18 page 45-49). It appears from Appendix U that she got the text of the two inscriptions through the Deputy Commissioner of Fyzabad on an enquiry made by her husband about two inscriptions mentioned by several Gazetteers said to be existed on the Babar's mosque at Ayodhya. However, at the bottom, note 2, she says that while reproducing the text a few slight changes in the term of expression have been made for clearness sake. The text of the inscription inside the mosque as quoted in Babar-Nama by A.S. Beveridge is as under:

3. In the world, it is widely talked about Qalandar Babur that he is a successful emperor." (E.T.C.)

1444. With respect to the second inscription that is outside the mosque, the Beveridge said that it is incomplete.

1445. The third set of text of inscription we are confronted with, is that published in "Epigraphia Indica-Arabic & Persian Supplement (In continuation of Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica) 1964 and 1965" reprinted 1987 published by the Director General Archaeological Survey of India, New Delhi. On page 49, the chapter begins with the heading "Inscriptions of Emperor Babur" said to be written by the Late Maulvi M. Ashraf Husain and edited by Z.A.Desai. Editor's note in the aforesaid Chapter is of some importance:

"A rough draft of this article by the author, who was my predecessor, was found among sundry papers in my office. At the time of his retirement in 1953, he had left a note saying that it might be published after revision by his successor. Consequently, the same is published here after incorporation of fresh material and references and also, extensive revision and editing. The readings have been also checked, corrected and supplemented with the help of my colleague, Mr. S.A.Rahim, Epigraphical Assistant,-Editor."

1446. On page 58 under sub-chapter VIII-X, "Inscriptions Dated A.H. 935, from Ajodhya", the author has referred to three inscriptions said to have existed at Babur's mosque. The author's comments about those inscriptions are:

"These three records are from Ajyodhya, in Fyzabad district of Uttar Pradesh. Ajodhya, called Ayodhya in ancient works, is a place of great antiquity. It was the earliest capital of the kingdom of Kosala in the later Vedic

period, which may be traced down to 600 B.C. In the fifth and sixth centuries after Christ, the Gupta dynasty ruled over it and called it Saket, by which name it is also known in the Ramayana. From the seventh century onwards, a period of neglect ensued and according to Muslim historians, parties enjoyed hunting in its vicinity."

The chief fame of Ajodhya lies in its being the birth-place of Sri Rama, the deified son of Raja Dasaratha and hero of the Ramayana. At the Muslim conquest, three important temples are reported to have existed here, viz. Janmasthana or birth-place Temple, the Treta-ki-Thakur or the place where Sri Rama performed a great sacrifice in commemoration of which he set up images of himself and his wife Sita, and the Svargadvaram or Rama-Darbar, which is believed to be the place where he was cremated. The second and third are popularly believed to have been pulled down by Aurangzeb, and on the site of the first the present Baburi mosque is stated to have been built. The supposition is apparently anachronistic inasmuch as Aurangzeb was born about a century after A.H. 935, the date of Babur's record, and so the demolition could not have taken place so late.

The Baburi-Masjid, which commands a picturesque view from the riverside, was constructed according to A.Fuhrer in A.H. 930 (1523-24 A.D.) but his chronology, based upon incorrect readings of inscriptions supplied to him, is erroneous. Babur defeated Ibrahim Lodi only in A.H. 933 (1526 A.D.), and moreover, the year of construction, recorded in two of the three inscriptions studied below, is clearly A.H. 935 (1528-29 A.D.). Again, it was not built by Mir Khan as stated by him. The order for building the mosque seems to have been issued during Babur's stay at Ajodhya in A.H. 934 (1527-28 A.D.), but no mention of its completion is made in the Babur Nama. However, it may be remembered that his diary for the year A.H. 934 (1527-28 A.D.) breaks off abruptly, and throws the reader into the dark in regard to the account of Oudh.

The mosque consists of three compartments, each crowned by a dome. The squinch-arches and stalactite pendentives turn each aisle of the prayer-chamber into a squarish room. The drums of the domes inside were originally relieved by arched recesses, and the central dome was embellished with ornamental incised plaster discs, but the present domes were only reconstructed in the thirties of this century and are devoid of any original features*.*

The mosque contains a number of inscriptions. On the eastern facade is a chhajja, below which appears a Quranic text and above, an inscription in Persian verse. On the central mihrab are carved religious texts such as the Kalima (First Creed), etc. On the southern face of the pulpit was previously fixed a stone slab bearing a Persian inscription in verse. There was also another inscription in Persian verse built up into the right hand side wall of the pulpit. Of these, the last-mentioned two epigraphs have disappeared. They were reportedly destroyed in the communal vandalism in 1934 A.D*., but luckily,* I managed to secure an inked rubbing of one of them from Sayyid Badru'l Hasan of Fyzabad. The present inscription, restored by the Muslim community, is not only

in inlaid Nasta'liq characters, but is also slightly different from the original, owing perhaps to the incompetence of the restorers in deciphering it properly.

The readings and translations of the historical epigraphs mentioned above, except in the case of one, were published by Fuhrer and Mrs. Beveridge, but their readings are so incomplete, inaccurate and different from the text that their inclusion in this article is not only desirable but also imperative.

The epigraph studied below was inscribed on a slab of stone measuring about 68 by 48 cm., which was built up into the southern side of the pulpit of the mosque, but is now lost, as stated above. It is edited here from the estampage obtained from Sayyid Badru'l Hasan of Fyzabad. Its three-line text consists of six verses in Persian, inscribed in ordinary Naskh characters within floral borders. It records the construction of the mosque by Mir Baqi under orders from emperor Babur and gives the year A.H. 935 (1528-29 A.D.) in a chronogram."

1447. The inscriptions found at the southern side of the pulpit of the mosque is said to be found inscribed on a slab of stone measuring about 68 by 48 cm. He says that the original is lost. The quoted inscription is one edited from the estampage obtained from Sayyid Badru'l Hasan of Fyzabad. Further explanation at note 4 at the bottom at page 59 given by author is as under:

"It may be argued that since this epigraph is not quoted in Fuhrer's SAJ, the slab had already disappeared before he wrote. But that is not the case, since the tablet was found there in 1906-07 A.D. by Maulavi M. Shuhaib of the office of the Archaeological Surveyor, Northern Circle, Agra (Annual Progress Report of the Office of the Archaeological Surveyor, Northern Circle, Agra, for 1906-07."Appendix-D

1448. The first inscription's text which author has mentioned at plate XVII (b) is as under:

بفرمود ٔ ہ شاہ بابر کہ عدلش بنائ است بأ کاخ گردوں ملاقی

(English Translation by Author)

1449. The Fuhrer's inscription no. XLI which he mentions that the same was found inside the mosque on the mimbar (right hand side of the disputed building) has been termed as second inscription by Maulvi F. Ashraf Hussain. It consists of three couplets arranged in six lines. He (Hussain) clearly admits non existence of the said inscription by observing "the epigraphical Tablet" which was built up into right hand side wall of the pulpit, does not exist now, and, therefore, the text of the inscription is quoted here from Furher's work, for the same reason, its illustration could not be given." Sri Husain/Desai however, did not agree to the reading of the inscription by Fuhrer and observed that Furher's reading does not appear free from mistakes.

1450. About the third inscription, on page 60/61 of the book, the author has given narration as follows:

> "The third record of Babur in the Ajodhya mosque, comprising a fragment of eight Persian verses of mediocre quality and a colophon, appears over the central entrances to the prayer-chamber above the chajja. The four-line text is executed in fairly good Naskh characters in relief amidst floral borders, on a slab measuring about 2 m. by 55 cm. The text is fairly well preserved, and Fuhrer must have been misinformed to affirm that 'a few characters of the second and the whole third lines are completely defaced'. The purport of the record is the same as that of the previous epigraphs, but here an additional edifice is also mentioned : In verse six, in line three, a fort-wall (hisar) is said to have been built along with the mosque in A.H. 935 (1528-29 A.D.), by Mir Baqu, who is here called the second 1455. From perusal of the text of the inscription said to be found inside the mosque i.e., the 6-lines inscription it is evident that the text quoted by Fuhrer, Beveridge and Maulvi F. Ashraf Hussain has apparent and demonstrable differences. The first line of the text by the three reads as under:

'बमंशाये बाबर खदयू जहां'' (Fuhrer)

''बफरमूद–ए–शाहे बाबर कि अदलश,'' (Beveridge)

''बफरमूद–ए–शाह बाबर कि अदलश,'' (Maulvi F. Ashraf Hussain)

1456. Similarly, we find difference in line 2 which is demonstrated as under:

''बशाने कि बा काख़ गरदूँ इनां '' (Fuhrer)

''बिनाइस्त बा–काख़ गरदूँ मुलाकी।'' (Beveridge)

''बिनाइेस्त बा–काख़ गरदूँ मुलाकी।'' (Maulvi F. Ashraf Hussain)

1457. The third line is also not the same.

''बिना कर्दा–ए–ख़ान–ए–पायेदार'' (Fuhrer)

''बिना कर्द–ए–महबते कुदसियां रा'' (Beveridge)

''बिना कर्दह ईं महबते कुदसियां रा'' (Maulvi F. Ashraf Hussain)

www.vadaprativada.com

1458. The fourth line of Fuhrer is different than what is contained in Beveridge and Maulvi Ashraf Hussain as is evident from the following:

''अमीरे सआदत निशां मीर खां'' (Fuhrer)

''अमीरे सआदत निशां मीर बाक़ी'' (Beveridge)

''अमीरे सआदत निशां मीर बाक़ी'' (Maulvi F. Ashraf Hussain)

1459. Fifth line of all the three is different as demonstrated below:

''बमानद हमेशा चुनां बानियश'' (Fuhrer)

''बुवद खैरे बाक़ी कि तारीख़ मस्जिद,'' (Beveridge)

''बुवद खैरे बाक़ी व साले बिनाइश,'' (Maulvi F. Ashraf Hussain)

1460. Sixth line of Beveridge and Maulvi F. Ashraf Hussain is the same but different from Fuhrer as seen below:

''चुनां शहरियारे ज़मीनो ज़मां'' (Fuhrer)

''अयां शुद चूं गुफतम बुवद ख़ैर बाक़ी'' (Beveridge)

''अयां शुद चूं गुफतम बुवद ख़ैर बाक़ी'' (Maulvi F.Ashraf Hussain)

www.vadaprativada.com

1461. The next inscription which according to Fuhrer was a ten-line Persian poetry, Beveridge could get only three lines thereof and termed incomplete, Maulvi M.Ashraf Husain however found complete and running in about 10/11 lines. The distinction therein are:

Line-1 ''बिसमिल्लाहिर्रहमानिर्रहीम'' (Fuhrer)

No such line is found in Beveridge's text.

''बिसमिल्लाहिर्रहमानिर्रहीम व बिही सिकती''

(Maulvi F. Ashraf Hussain)

Line-2 ''बनामे आं कि.....'' (Fuhrer)

''बनामे आंकि दाना हस्त अकबर'' (Beveridge)

(Maulvi F.Ashraf Hussain)

Line-3 ''कुनद खालिक़ बकलमे जावेदानी'' (Fuhrer)

www.vadaprativada.com

''कि ख़ालिक़ जुमला आलम लामकानी'' (Beveridge)

''कि खालिक जुमला आलम लामकानी''

(Maulvi F.Ashraf Hussain)

Line- 4: completely defaced in the text of Furher but Beveridge and Maulvi F.Ashraf have given the following text:

*''दूरूद मुस्तफा बाद अज़ सतायश'' (Beveridge)

''दूरूदे मुस्तफा बाद अज़ सनायश'' (Maulvi F.Ashraf Hussain)

Line-5 : Completely defaced in Furher's text but in Beveridge's and Maulvi F.Ashraf's text it is quoted as under:

''कि सरवर अंबिया–ए–दो जहानी'' (Beveridge)

''कि सरवर अंबिया जुब्दा जहानी'' (Maulvi F.Ashraf Hussain)

Line-6 : Completely defaced in Furher's text but in Beveridge's and Maulvi F.Ashraf's text it is quoted as under:

''फसाना दर जहां बाबर क़लन्दर'' (Beveridge)

''साना दर जहां बाबर कलन्दर'' (Maulvi F.Ashraf Hussain)

Line-7 : Completely defaced in Furher's text but in Beveridge's and Maulvi F.Ashraf's text it is quoted as under:

''कि शुद दर दौरे गीती कामरानी'' (Beveridge)

''कि शुद दर दौरे गीती कामरानी'' (Maulvi F.Ashraf Hussain)

1462. After Line-7 Beveridge does not give any further text but has given remark that the inscription was incomplete but Furher and Maulvi F.Ashraf Husain have given the following text:

*Line-8 ''चुनां शाहंशहे मशहूरे अक़लीम'' (Fuhrer)

1463. We are extremely perturbed by the manner in which Ashraf Husain/Desai have tried to give an impeccable authority to the texts of the alleged inscriptions which they claim to have existed on the disputed building though repeatedly said that the original text has disappeared. The fallacy and complete misrepresentation on the part of author in trying to give colour of truth to this text is writ large from a bare reading of the write up. We are really at pains to find that such blatant fallacious kind of material has been allowed to be published in a book published under the authority of ASI, Government of India, without caring about its accuracy, correctness and genuineness of the subject. We have already given write up of Ashraf Husain. Firstly, he said that the mistake was committed in number of inscriptions. He claims that on the eastern façade is a Chhajja below which appears a Quranic text and above thereto an inscription in Persian verse. Then he says that on the central mehrab are carved religious text such as Kalma (First creed), etc. Then he says that on the southern face of the pulpit previously there affixed a stone slab bearing a Persian inscription in verse and another inscription in Persian verse was built up into right hand side wall of the pulpit. Both these inscriptions i.e., the one claimed to be on the southern face of the pulpit and the other on the right hand side wall of the pulpit are said to be non-available by observing "of these the last mentioned two epigraphs have disappeared". The time of disappearance according to Maulvi Ashraf Husain was 1934 A.D. when a communal riot took place at Ayodhya. However, he claimed to have got an inked rubbing on one of the two inscriptions from Syed Badrul Hasan of Faizabad. The whereabouts of Syed Badrul Hasan , who he was, what was his status, in what way and manner he could get that ink rubbing of the said inscription and what is the authenticity to believe it to be correct when original text of the inscription are not known. There is nothing to co-relate the text he got as the correct text of the inscription found in the disputed building claimed to have lost in 1934.

1464. He also admits that the existing inscription which was restored by Muslim community was 'inlaid nastaliq' character but simultaneously says that the restored inscription is slightly different from the original and this distinction he attributes perhaps to the incompetence of the restorer in deciphering it properly. When the original was already lost and there was nothing to verify the text of restored inscription with the original, neither the restored one can be relied upon nor it is understandable as to how he could have any occasion to compare the restored one with the alleged nonest/lost original one. It appears that the text which he got from Syed Badrul Hasan of Faizabad treated by him to be correct and taking it as the original text he has proceeded accordingly. It is also interesting to note that in the footnote realising this difficulty at item no.4, he has said that this tablet was found in 1906-07 A.D. by Maulvi M. Suhaib of the office of Regional Archaeological Surveyor, Northern Survey (Annual progress report of the office of Archaeological Surveyor, Northern Survey Agra for 1906-1907), Appendix 'D'). We however, find it difficult to understand this reference if the inscription was fixed on the wall of the disputed building, the question of finding tablet by Maulvi M.Ashraf Husain does not arise. If what he intends to suggest is that the inscription was noticed by Maulvi M. Suhaib in 1906-07 and he has made some reference in the annual progress report of 1906-1907, the text of the inscription if was published in the said report, the author ought to have taken material from such report and not from a stranger namely Syed Badrul Hasan of Faizabad whose credentials and authenticity is unknown and whether any such person actually existed or not, even this is doubtful, as has been argued by Sri Mishra and we find substance therein.

1465. The matter does not rest here. Ashraf Husain has critically commented upon the reading of one or two inscriptions as published by Fuhrer and Beveridge stating that "....their readings are so incomplete, inaccurate and different from the text that their inclusion in this article is not only desirable but also imperative."

1466. Once the alleged two inscriptions are lost and one of such inscriptions according to Sri Husain was found by Fuhrer who has published its text, without having either the inscription itself with him (Husain) or the authenticated stampage of the text of such inscription, how there could be any occasion for Husain to claim that the text given by Fuhrer is incorrect. Similarly, he also could not have any occasion to compare that text with that of Beveridge. Admittedly, the date of publication of such inscription by Fuhrer and A.S. Beveridge is before the date of disappearance i.e. 1934 as alleged by Ashraf Hussain. Therefore, so far as Fuhrer and Beveridge are concerned they could have an occasion to peruse the inscription that was installed before 1934 but so far as Maulvi M. Ahsraf Husain is concerned, this occasion in his own words, could not have arisen. The text, description and whatever had been set up by

Ashraf Husain in respect of the above inscription is unbelievable and lacks trustworthiness. We are constrained to observe at this stage that in the matter of historical events and that too, when it bears a religious importance and the matter has also seen serious disputes between two communities, the persons who are connected with history etc. must behave responsibly and before making any write up, should check up, cross check and verify very carefully what they are writing since the consequences of their write up may be dangerous and irreparable.

1467. We move on to one more aspect. Even the text of the inscription which Ashraf Husain has given in plate 17(b), he says that the same is not what was printed in the existing inscription as restored by Muslim community after 1934 riots but the same is an added version from the stampage obtained from Syed Badrul Hasan of Faizabad. At this stage, we are unable to compare even the restored text of the inscription as the same is not available and Maulvi M. Ashraf Hussain instead of giving the existing text as it is of the restored inscription has changed it according to his whims and caprices.

1468. Coming to the authenticity of the text of the two inscriptions given by Beveridge, we find that she herself had neither read the said texts nor visited Ayodhya at any point of time. She claims to have received copy of the text through some correspondence made by her husband, Henry Beveridge, an I.C.S. Officer in British India Government.

1469. The text of two inscriptions are the copy which she claims to have received from Deputy Commissioner of Faizabad on an inquiry made by her husband. In this regard at page 656, foot note 3 at the bottom she has said:

"that he spent a few days near Aud (Ajodhya) to settle its

affairs. The D.G. Of Fyzbaa (H.E. Nevill) p.173 says "In 1528 AD, Babur came to Ajodhya (Aud) and halted a week. The destroyed the ancient temple" (marking the birth-place of Rama) "and on its site built a mosque, still known as Babur's Mosque..... It has two inscriptions, one on the outside, one on the pulpit; both are in Persian; and bear the date 935 AH." This date may be that of the competition of the building.--(Corrigendum:-On f.339 n. 1, I have too narrowly restricted the use of the name Sarju. Babur used it to describe what the maps of Arrowsmith and Johnson shew, and not only what the Gazetteer of India Map of the United Provinces does,. It applies to the Sarda (f.339) as Babur uses it when writing of the fords.".

1470. Perhaps she went through the description of the disputed site in the light of the observations made by Sri Nevill who wrote 1904 -1905 Gazetteer (Supra). Whether the alleged text made available to her by the Dy. Commissioner, Faizabad was an ink stampage of the text of the alleged two inscriptions or it was obtained by him through somebody else by reading the contents or the manner in which the said text was collected, is not known. Rather there appears to be something otherwise. Footnote 2 on page lxxvii , Appendics 'U' of Baburnama (Memoirs of Babur) shows that some changes were made by Beveridge also:

> "2. A few slight changes in the turn of expressions have been made for clearness sake."

1471. To what extent the corrections have been made and what was necessity thereof is not ascertainable. Why a verbatim reproduction could not be made is also not understandable. At least there is nothing on record enabling us to examine this aspect of the matter. The second inscription, text whereof is quoted at page lxxviii, Appendices 'U' of Baburnama by Beveridge, we find that the same is incomplete and the reason assigned by Beveridge is that it is not now legible. The text of second inscription was not legible to Beveridge whose book was first published in 1914/1921. We fail to understand how its complete text could be available to Maulvi M. Ashraf Husain after more than forty years thereafter who got it published in Epigraphia Indica -Arabic and Persian Supplement 1965 (supra).

1472. From the text of A. Fuhrer the period of construction of the disputed building is not 1528 AD and it also does not say that the same was built by Mir Baqi. The inscription no. XLI, line four mentions the name of Mir Khan and inscription no. XLII shows the period of construction as Hijra 930. The text given by Sri Sushil Srivastava, PW 15 in his book "The Disputed Mosque-A Historical Enquiry" is based on the text of two inscriptions given by A.S. Beveridge and Prof. Radhey Shyam as is evident from page 78-79 of his statement. Athar Hussain's text is the reproduction from Beveridge. Dr. Radhey Shyam has taken the text of three inscriptions from M. Ashraf Hussain's write-up published in Epigraphia Indica-Arabic and Persian Supplement in 1964-65.

1473. The apparent distinction, as appear from Fuhrer's reading of the inscription, is:

(a) There is no mention of word of "honour" before the name of Babar.

(b) Instead of "Mir Baqi" it mentions "Mir Khan".

(c) There is no use of the word "mosque" but it mentions "lofty building" and also shows no

www.vadaprativada.com

dedication to Almighty.

This is in respect to the first inscription.

1474. Then comes the second inscription, where the marked distinction is the date i.e. 930 A.H. (1523 AD). It is a well known fact that in 1523 AD Babar was not in Hindustan but in Kandhar/Kabul.

1475. Archaeological Survey of India also published a book "The Monumental Antiquities And Inscriptions In The North-Western Provinces And Oudh" described and arranged by A. Fuhrer published by the Superintendent, Government Press, N.-W. Provinces and Oudh, 1891. Copy of the frontispiece as well as pages No.295, 296 and 297 thereof have been filed as Paper No.107C1/33-36 i.e. Ex.9, Suit-5 (Register Vol.20, Pages 67-73). We have the entire book published in 1967 by Rameshwar Singh, Indological Book House, Varanasi (Book No.94). Pages No.295-297 are verbatim the same filed as paper Nos.107C1/34-36. About construction of building in dispute, on page 297 it says, "It is locally affirmed that at the Musalman conquest there were three important Hindu temples at Ayodhya; these were the Janamasthanam, the Svargadvaram, and the Treta-ke-Thakur. On the first of these Mir Khan built a masjid, in A.H. 930, during the reign of Babar, which still bears his name." The reference has been made to Archaeological Reports (New Series), Vol.1, page 67.

1476. Ex. 81 (Suit-4) (Paper No. 216C1/1-21) consists of certain pages from book "Babarnama" translated by Yugjeet Navalpuri, first published 1974, third publication 1996, 1998 and reprint 2002 by Sahitya Academy, New Delhi. The Editorial Note says that the book consist of Hindi translation by Navalpuri of F.G. Talbot's Edition of the "Memoirs of Baber".

However, the Chapter "Introduction" running from Page 9 to 18, pages 438 to 456 giving history from AH (1527 AD) and then for the year AH 936, page 510 has been filed. Sri Jilani from the above extract of the book has sought to submit that there is no mention either of entry of Babar to Ayodhya or any act of demolition of any temple or construction of a Mosque. For the date of construction of the disputed building in 1528 AD, he refers to Footnote 48 on page 447 which refers two inscriptions at the disputed building as under :

''48. (नेविल) 'जिला गजेटियर फ़ैजाबाद' में लिखा है: ''1529 ई0 में बाबर अयोध्या (अवध) आया और एक सप्ताह रहा। उसने प्राचीन मंदिर (राम–जन्मस्थान) तुड़वाकर उसके स्थान पर मसजिद बनवाई। . . .'' इस मसजिद पर दो अभिलेख हैं। (1) मसजिद के भीतर:

''बफ़रमूदये शाहि बाबर कि अदलश बनाईस्त ता क़ाख़ि गरदूं मुलाकी

(2) मसजिद के बाहर:

''बनामे ऑ कि दाना हस्त अकबर कि ख़ालिकि जुमला आलम लामकानी

'मुसतफ़ा' (मानव–सहज दुर्गुणों से अछूता) मुहम्मद साहब का विशेषण–नाम है। बाबर 'कलंदर' (दे0) इसलिए है कि भारत–साम्राज्य–लाभ के बाद उसके लिए किसी लौकिक स्पृहा का अवकाश ही न रहा (राग–'नदी पार करके' विरागी हुआ वह)। अथवा (फ़रिश्ता के अनुसार) इसलिए कि भारत में 'उपार्जित' अपार धनकोषों में से उसने अपने लिए कुछ भी न रखा।'' 1477. The language of the inscriptions is same as that is quoted in Baburnama by Beveridge (supra) who claimed to have text of the two inscriptions from the Deputy Commissioner of Faizabad and has referred to Nevill's Gazetteer of 1905 on page 556 of the book. Reading of the words "Mir Baqi" as "Shaghawal", "Tashkandi" appears to be the understanding of the author himself inasmuch it is not in dispute that both the names i.e. Baqi Shaghawal and Baqi Tashkandi have been mentioned separately in "Baburnama" and there is nothing to co-relate the two being name of the same person or that to corelate with 'Mir Baqi'. Sri Jilani also could not place anything to co-relate Mir Baqi with Baqi Shaghawal or Baqi Tashkandi to show that they were the names of one and the same person. We also find that on page 11 (Paper No. 216C1/5, the writer has mentioned : ''शकावुल ने[11], एक सौ बीस ईगाच[12] की दूरी चार दिन में ही तय कर ली थी।'' Statistics 11 has been explained on page 15 (Paper No. 216C1/7) as under :

''11. बेगों के नाम राजपत्र लिखने वालों का प्रधान, मुख्य सचिव, संचार–व्यवस्था का अधिकारी तथा सभी काजियों (न्यायाधीशों) और मुल्लाओं का प्रमुख। मीर–मुंशी और डाकपाल।

inscriptions found at the disputed building. On 26.3.1946, Sri A. Akhtar Abbas went to read the inscriptions and noted on his inspection note as under :

According to both parties this katba was replaced & new in place of the original tablet which was demolished during the communal riot in 1934.

There is another tablet at the central arch of the mosque facing the court-yard and it contains the following couplets:-

1479. In the book Ayodhya Ka Itihas by Sri Avadhwasi Lala Sitaram, first published in 1932, reprinted in 2001, published by Arya Book Depot, New Delhi, the transcript of the in-script has been mentioned at page 115/116 which is a verbatim copy of the text quoted by A.S. Beveridge. The learned author has given, however, totally different reasons and history of the construction of the disputed building. There is nothing to show the basis on which he has written the said history. Sri Jilani has castigated the contents of this entire book of Lala

Sitaram contending that neither he was a historian nor there is any authority mentioned in his book to generate confidence for what has been written therein, therefore, this book is not reliable. This author retired from the office of Deputy Collector as appearing from the Forward of his book written by Sri Devendra Swaroop.

1480. The above discussion tells us that basically there are three version in respect to the text or transcript of the inscriptions fixed on the disputed building. The text available to A.Fuhrer says that "a firmament-like lofty strong building was erected by an auspicious noble Mir Khan under the command of Babar in the year 930 AH i.e. 1523 AD and foundation of the said building was laid down by the King of China and Turkey in presence of Babar". The transcript made available to Beveridge reveal that "under the command of Emperor Babar, good hearted Mir Baki built that alighting place of angels in 935 AH i.e. 1528-29". The last one is that of ASI report of 1964-65 edited by Z.A.Desai, the transcript whereof says that “by the order of King Babar that descending place of Angles was built by the fortunate noble Mir Baki". In respect to another inspection, Desai text says that "a lofty building and lasting house (of God) was founded by Mir (and) Khan (Baqi)". The words placed within brackets are that of Mr. Husain or Dr. Desai's own insertion and do not find place in the text of the inscription as such.

1481. The fourth one, which can be said to be very recent and inspire more confidence than other is the one when pursuant to the order of the learned Civil Judge, Faizabad, Sri A. Akhtar Ahasan made inspection of the disputed structure on 26th March, 1946 and obtained text of two inscriptions fixed on the disputed building at that time. This text, as is reproduced in judgment dated 30.03.1946 (Ex. A42, Suit-1) in R.S. No.29/1945 says that in the first inscription the words are “by the order of Shah Babar, Amir Mir Baki built the resting place of angles in 923 A.H. i.e. 1516-17 AD". In respect to second inscription, he says that “Mir Baki of Isphahan in 935 AH i.e. 1528-29 AD”. We find that the reading of text of inscriptions by Civil Judge, Faizabad was earlier than Dr. Z.A.Desai's publication yet there is a good variance with the text of the estampage procured and transcribed by Desai.

1482. In the entire Babar-Nama i.e. all the translations made by various writers, we are not informed that the words “Mir Baki Isfahani" has been mentioned at any place. What has been said is Baki Tashkendi and various other Bakis but not Mir Baki Isfahani. We are informed by Sri P.N.Mishra, which is not disputed by other learned counsels, that Taskend is a city of Uzbekistan while Isfahan is a province of Iran.

1483. Sri Mishra, on the basis of the above facts submits that Baki Isfahani and Baki Taskandi cannot be regarded as one and the same person. Baki Isfahani a person not known to Babar having not been mentioned in Babarnama could not have any kind of authority at all in the period of Babar. It is therefore safe to presume that it is fictitious name which adds and fortify the argument that the inscription has been implanted later on with a transcription which is fictitious and false and had no factual authenticity.

1484. The above discussion raises a serious doubt over the genuinity and authenticity of the text or transcript of the inscriptions and the time when they were fixed on the disputed building. To base a finding in a judicial proceeding while

adjudicating a dispute of this nature, it would be improper and against the all cannons of the principles applicable in such matter. However, there are some more facts and material which needs to be considered before recording a final opinion on the matter.

1485. The very first document/historical book in this regard is "Tuzuk-i-babri", i.e., "Baburnama" or "daily diary of Babar" which has been translated and published by several well known authors and some of them are considered to be the authentic work internationally also. Broadly the learned counsels for the parties and the Expert Historians have also not disputed authenticity of such work which we now propose to refer.

1486. Babur-nama (Tuzuk-i-babri) commences its description from 899 Hizra (1493-94 AD). In the total life span of 47 years and 10 months, the description of only 18 years of Babur's life is available and that too in various spans. The period, for which the details are not available, are as under:

1. History from the birth (14th February, 1483 AD) till Singhasanarohan Ramazan 899 Hijri (June 14, 1494 AD)
2. Description from 908 Hijri (1503 AD) till 909 Hijri (1504 AD)
3. Description from 914 Hijri (1508 AD) till 925 Hijri (1519 AD)
4. Description from 4 Safar 926 Hijri(15th January 1520 AD) till 30 Muharram 932 Hijri (16th November, 1525 AD)
5. Description from 13 Rajab 934 Hijri (3rd April 1528 AD) till 2 Muharram 934 Hijri (17th September, 1528 AD)
6. History of following days of 934 Hijri (1528-29 AD):
    (a) 1, 2 Muharram 934 Hijri (16, 17th September

(b) 21 Muharram 934 Hijri (6th October 1528 AD) to 26 Muharram 934 Hijri (11th October 1528 AD)

(c) 6 Safar 934 Hijri (20th October 1528 AD) to 8 Safar 934 Hijri (22nd October 1528 AD)

(d) 11 Safar 934 Hijri (25th October 1528 AD) to 20th Safar 934 Hijri (3rd November 1528 AD)

(e) 29 Safar 934 Hijri (12th November 1528 AD) to 8 Rabi-ul-Avval (20th November 1528 AD)

(f) 15 Rabi-ul-Avval (27th November 1528 AD) to 18 Rabi-ul-Avval (1st December 1528 AD)

(g) 24 Rabi-ul-Avval (7th December 1528 AD) to 28 Rabi-ul-Avval (11th December 1528 AD)

(h) 13 Rabi-ussani (25th December 1528 AD) till 15 Rabi-ussani (27th December 1528 AD)

(i) 6 Jamadi-ul-Avval (16th January 1529 AD) till 9 Jamadi-ul-Avval (19th January 1529 AD)

(j) 19 Shavval (25th June 1529 AD) till 30 Shavval (6th July 1529 AD)

(k) 5 Zikad (11th July 1528 AD) till 11 Zikad (17th July 1529 AD)

(m) 11 Zilhijja (17th August 1529 AD) till 29 Zilhijja (4th September 1529 AD)

7. 4 Muharram 936 Hijri (8th September 1529 AD) till 6 Jamadi-ul-Avval 937 Hijri (26th December 1530 AD).

1487. In India, Babar came in 1526 AD and the description available of that period till his death is as under:

1. From 1 Safar 932 Hijri (17 November 1525 AD) till 12

Rajab 934 Hijri (2nd April 1528 AD)

2. From 3 Muharram 934 Hijri (18th September 1528 AD) till 3 Moharram 936 Hijri (7th September 1529 AD). In this way the description of only three days of first month of 936 Hijri is available. The description of many days in between 935 Hijri is also not available.

1488. The missing record is of the period 2nd April, 1528 A.D. to 17th September, 1528 A.D. which is crucial for this matter. Out of this period, 2nd April, 1528 to 15th April, 1528 was part of 934 A.H. and 15th September, 1528 to 17th September, 1528 was part of 935 A.H. It means in the crucial year i.e. 935 A.H., the missing record is only of three days. Therefore, non mention of anything about disputed building in 935 A.H. in Babar-Nama does not sound to any reason.

1489. On crossing of the Babar's army led by his commander Sultan Chin Taimur, they found that Bayazid and Biban had already fled away and therefore, no fight at Ayodhya could have occurred. That being so, the question of killing of any Muslim and making of grave at the disputed site does not arise.

1490. The Manuscripts (in short "MS") of Baburnama, as available has been noticed by Mrs. A.S. Beveridge based on the magazine published by Royal Asiatic Society, Landon in 1900 AD:

1. MS written by Babur
2. MS sent to Khwaja Kalan
3. MS written by Humaun
4. MS possessed by Alphinston
5. MS kept at British Museum, Landon
6. MS in the India office of British Government
7. MS of Asiatic Society, Bengal

www.vadaprativada.com

8. MS at Mysore
9. MS of Biblothika Lindesiyana.
10. MS at Hyderabad
11. MS of St. Peteres Berg University.
12. MS kept at foreign office of St. Peters Berg
13. MS kept at Asiatic Society Museum of St. Peters Berg
14. MS of Bukhara
15. MS of Nazerbe Turkistan

1491. It is said that probably Babur got prepared two MS but presently none is available / traceable. Similarly MS sent to Khwaja Kalan, which is referred in his (Babur's) description dated 4th March, 1529 is also not available/traceable. Even otherwise since it is said to have been sent on 4th March, 1529, it could not have been completed after 4th March, 1959. MS of Mysore that is possessed by Tepu Sultan is also not available / traceable.

1492. Elphinston purchased the MS of Babur at Peshawar in 1809 AD, which probably was prepared between 1543 to 1593 AD and the said MS is kept in the Advocate's library, Edimbara.

1493. Dr. Leyden translated some of the part of Babur's autobiography from the MS of Elphinston and Erskin made corrections in his translation on the basis of the said MS.

1494. MS of Biblothika Lindesiyana was purchased in 1865 AD and is incomplete.

1495. MS of Hyderabad was made available to Mrs. Beveridge from the library of Sir Salar Jang. It is said to be prepared in 1700 AD. It is most complete available MS, as claimed by Mrs. A.S. Beveridge. She has written her translation of 'Baburnama' on the basis thereof.

www.vadaprativada.com

1496. MS of St. Petersberg is said to have been prepared from another MS copied in 1617 AD. Dr. George Jaikab Kehar prepared the said MS in 1737 but the MS where from it was prepared is not traceable. Elminski published Turkish Edition of Baburnama in 1857 AD on the basis of the said MS and French translation of Babur-nama made by Dr. Pevet Kotele was also based on the said MS.

1497. From the reading of translation of 'Babur-nama' we do not find any title thereof. However, now it is commonly known as "Babur-nama" or "Tuzuk-i-babri" by all.

1498. In the earlier part of Babur-nama i.e. upto 1508-09 AD, it is in the form of history where the details have been given of various events occurred in different years but from 1519 AD till end, it is a day to day description.

1499. Baburnama was originally written in Turkish. Initially, it was translated in Persian prose by Sheikh Zain Wafai Kwafi. One of the MS of the said translation is in Raza Library, Rampur, U.P. (India) and another is in British Museum, Landon. Another Persian translation was made by Mirza Payanda Hasan Gajnavi in 1586 AD under the orders of Behroz Khan Gajnavi, who in fact made a partial translation and it was completed by Mohd. Kuli Mugul Hisari. The most universal popular Persian translation was made by Mirza Abdurrahim Khane Khana Bin Bairam Khan (Abul Fazal) in 1589 AD.

1500. The first English translation of Babur-nama was attempted by "Dr. John Leyden" in 1810 AD. However, he could not complete the same and died in August, 1811 AD. At the same time "William Erskine" also commenced his English translation from Persian under the instructions of General Sir John Malcom and Elphinstone and completed his work in 1813

AD. Thereafter he found that there was a lot of differences in the work of Dr. John Leyden. Since Leyden had commenced his translation from Turkish MS, Erskine made corrections in his translation and this work was published in 1826 AD under the title "Memoirs of Zehir-ed-Din Muhammad Babur" by "John Laden and William Erskine".

1501. Another translation was made in English by Mrs. Annette Susannah Beveridge, (hereinafter referred to as "Beveridge") under the title "Babur-nama (Memoirs of Babur)". Initially her translation was published in four parts as under :-

i. History prior to Babur's victory of Kabul (the period relating to Phargana) – published in 1912 AD.

ii. From Kabul Victory till India victory ; published in 1914 AD

iii. From India's victory till end ; published in 1917 AD

iv. Introduction, Glossary etc. ; published in 1921 AD

www.vadaprativada.com

1502. The complete four parts in two volumes were published collectively in 1922 under the title "The Babar Nama in English".

1503. French translation was made by Pevet-de-Kotele published in 1871 AD.

1504. The learned counsels for the parties have not disputed that the contents of the book of Beveridge's translation of Babur-Nama available to the Court has no difference with the photocopies of some of the pages filed as Exhibits, detailed above.

1505. The parties agree that amongst various books translating "Babur-nama, Mrs. Beveridge's translation is the most authentic and complete. The 'Affairs of Hindustan' commences from page 439 which says:

www.vadaprativada.com

"The centre of interest in Babur's affairs now moves from Qandahar to a Hindustan torn by faction, of which faction one result was an appeal made at this time to Babur by Daulat Khan Ludi (Yusuf-khail) and 'Alau'd-din 'Alam Khan Ludi for help against Ibrahim."

1506. The details of meeting of Dilawar Khan and Babur giving an occasion to him to come to India has been written by Mrs. Beveridge on page 440 as under :

"b. Reception of Dilawar Khan in Kabul.

Wedding festivities were in progress when Dilawar Khan reached Kabul. He presented himself, at the Char-bagh may be inferred, and had word taken to Babur that an Afghan was at his Gate with a petition. When admitted, he demeaned himself as a suppliant and proceeded to set forth the distress of Hindustan. Babur asked why he, whose family had so long eaten the salt of the Ludis, had so suddenly deserted them for himself. Dilawar answered that his family through 40 years had uphelf the Ludi throne, but that Ibrahim maltreated Sikandar's amirs, had killed 25 of them without cause, some by hanging, some burned alive, and that there was no hope of safety in him. Therefore, he said, he had been sent by many amirs to Babur whom they were ready to obey and for whose coming they were on the anxious watch."

"c. Babur asks a sign.

At the dawn of the day following the feast, Babur prayed in the garden for a sign of victory in Hindustan, asking that it should be a gift to himself of mango or betel, fruits of that land. It so happened that Daulat Khan had sent him, as a present, half-ripened mangoes preserved in

honey ; when these were set before him, he accepted them as the sign, and from that time forth, says the chronicler, made preparation for a move on Hindustan."

1507. Babur's expedition to India (Hindustan) this time was the fourth one and commenced in 930 AH i.e. 10th November, 1523 AD. The first battle ensued between Babur and Bihar Khan leaving a section of army of Ibrahim Ludi at Lahor since Daulat Khan had already fled therefrom. Babur defeated Bihar Khan and his troops followed Bihar Khan fugitive men into Lahor, plundered the town and burnt some of the bazars. Thereafter Babur moved to Dibalpur and samething happened thereat also i.e. it was stormed, plundered and put to the sword. We need not go into further details about other battles except the major battle against Ibrahim Lodi son of Sikundar Lodi (An Afghan) at Panipat which he (Babar) won on 20th April, 1526 A.D. This battle resulted in killing of about 40-50 thousand soldiers. Babur immediately appointed Humayun to reach Agra and take over the palace as also to mount guard over the Treasure. Some of the confidents of Babur were directed to keep watch on the Treasuries at Delhi.

1508. On 21st April, 1526, Babur visited bank of Jumna, on 24th April, 1526 A.D., he visited Sheikh Nizamud-din Auliya's Tomb on the bank of river Jumna at Delhi and also made an excursion into the Fort of Delhi where he spent night. On next day i.e. 25th April, 1526 A.D., he visited Khwaja Qutbud-din's Tomb, and the Tombs and residences of Suleman Ghiyasu'd-din Balban and Suleman Alauud-din Khilji and his Minar, the Hoze-shamsi, Hoze-i-khas and the Tombs and gardens of Suleman Buhlul Ludi and Sikandar Ludi. On page 476, Mrs. Beveridge mention:

"We bestowed the Military Collectorate (shiqdarlighi) of Dihli on Red Wali, made Dost Diwan in the Dihli district, sealed the treasuries, and made them over to their charge."

1509. On 28th April, 1526 A.D. Babur moved on for Agra and also made an excursion to Tughluqabad. He reached near Agra on 4th May, 1526 A.D. and stayed at the mansion of Sulaiman Farmuli in a suburb of Agra and moved on the next day to Jalal Khan's house. At Agra the garrison did not surrender to Humayun, and, therefore he sat down to watch the roads out of Agra till the arrival of Babur.

1510. The king of Gualiar (Gwaliar) had died in the battle of Panipat but his son and other family members were at Agra at that time. When Humayun reached Agra, they tried to flee away, but could not due to the close guard of outside ways by Humayun's army. They offered a mass of jewels and valuables including the diamond Koh-i-nur to Humayun which was offered by Humayun to Babur on his arrival but Babur gave it to Humayun back. It is said that the said diamond weigh about 320 ratis (8 misqals). On 10th May, 1526 AD, Babur entered the fort of Sultan Ibrahim Ludi at Agra.

1511. The biography though said to have been written de die in diem, but the record of some period being not available, the biography in respect to those dates is admittedly missing. Regarding his activities at Ayodhya, from a perusal of Page 602 of the book, it appears that he reached at some distance above the junction of rivers Ghaghara and Saryu on 28.3.1528, i.e., Saturday the 7th Rajab 934 A.H. The area reigned by Shaikh Bayazid Baqi Shaghawal, along with some others crossed the river and conquered the place. Babur stayed on the Bank of Saryu for sometimes. The autobiography contains the date 2nd

April 1528 but thereafter there is a break of narrative between 2nd April to 18th September 1528 AD, i.e. Jumada II 12th, 934 A.H. and Moharram III 935 A.H.

1512. What happened at Ayodhya, whether Babur actually visited Ayodhya or not, nothing is mentioned about it in the said autobiography. The contents of his autobiography of dated 28.3.1528 and 2.4.1528 as contained on Page-602 are reproduced as under :

> "(March 28th) On Saturday the 7th of Rajab we dismounted 2 or 3 kurohs from Aud above the junction of the Gagar (Gogra) and Sird(a). Till today Shaikh Bayazid will have been on the other side of the Sird(a) opposite Aud, sending letters to the Sultan and discussing with him, but the Sultan getting to know his deceitfulness, sent word to Qaracha at the Mid-day Prayer and made ready to cross the river. On Qaracha's joining him, they crossed at once to where were some 50 horsemen with 3 or 4 elephants. These men could make no stand; they fled, a few having been dismounted, the heads cut off were sent in.
> Following the Sultan there crossed over Bi-khub (var. Ni-khub) Sl. and Tardi Beg (the brother) of Quj Beg, and Baba Chuhra (the Brave), and Baqi Shahghawal, Those who had crossed first and gone on, pursued Shaikh Bayazid till the Evening Prayer, but he flung himself into the jungle and escaped. Chin-timur dismounted late on the bank of standing-water, rode on at mid-night after the rebel, went as much as 40 kurohs (80 m.), and came to where Shaikh Bayazid's family and relations (nisba?) had been; they however must have fled. He sent gallopers off in all directions from that place; Baqi Shaghawal and a few braves drove the enemy like sheep before them, overtook the family and brought in some Afghan prisoners.

(April 2nd) On Thursday the 12th of the month I rode out intending to hunt." (emphasis added)

1513. Page 617 of the above book, mentions activities of 22.10.1528 as under :

"(Oct. 22nd) By this time the treasure of Iskandar and Ibrahim in Dihli and Agra was at an end. Royal orders were given therefore, on Thursday the 8th of Safar, that each stipendiary (wajhdar) should drop into the Diwan, 30 in every 100 of his allowance, to be used for war-material and appliances, for equipment, for powder, and for the pay of gunners and matchlockmen."

1514. For the period, i.e., 2.4.1528 to 18.9.1528, the record of biography whereof is not available, during this period of five and half months, the Babur is said to have proceeded to Junpur (Jaunpur), Chausa, Baksara (Baksar) etc. and was ill for 40 days. Beveridge on Pages 603 and 604 of Babur-Nama has said:

"Mr. Erskine note (Mems. p.381n.) that he found the gap in all MSS. he saw and that historians of Hindustan throw no light upon the transactions of the period. Much can be gleaned however as to Babur's occupations during the 5½ months of the lacuna from his chronicle of 935 AH. which makes several references to occurrences of "last year" and also allows several inferences to be drawn. From this source it becomes know that the Afghan campaign the record of which is broken by the gap, was carried on and that in its course Babur was at Jun-pur (f. 365), Chausa (f. 365b) and Baksara (f. 366-366b); that he swam the Ganges (f. 366b) bestowed Sarun on a Farmuli Shaikh-zada (f. 374b and f. 377), negociated with Rana Sanga's son Bikramajit (f. 342b), ordered a Char-bagh laid out (f. 340), and was ill for 40 days (F. 346b). It may be inferred too that he visited Dulpur (f. 353b), recalled "Askari (f. 339), sent Khwaja Dost-i-khawand on family affairs to Kabul (f. 345b), and was much pre-occupied by the disturbed state of Kabul (see his letters to Humayun and Khawaja Kalan written in 935 AH.).

It is not easy to follow the dates of events in 935 AH. because in many instances only the day of the week or a "next day" is entered. I am far from sure that one passage at least now found s.a. 935 AH. does not belong to 934 AH. It is not in the Hai. Codex (where its place would have been on f. 363b), and, so far as I can see, does not fit with the dates of 935AH. It will be considered with least trouble with its context and my notes (q.v. f.363b and ff. 366-366b)."

1515. From Page 679 of 'Babur-Nama' by Beveridge, it further appears that Babur received message on 27.5.1529 about taking of 'Luknur' by Baqi and one Abdullah (kitabdar). The extract of the autobiography dated 27.5.1529 is reproduced as under :

"(May 27th) On Friday (19th) I rode out to visit Sikandarpur

www.vadaprativada.com

and Kharid. Today came matters written by 'Abdu'l-lah (kitabdar) and Baqi about the taking of Luknur."

1516. On 28.5.1529, it is mentioned that the Babur sent one Kuki along with a troop to join Baqi.

1517. At Page 680 the author (Beveridge) has mentioned about a surprise survival of some record of 934 A.H. and has written that this part of the writing appears to be in respect to Aud (Ayodhya) where Babur spent some days in 934 A.H. It reads as under :

"After spending several days pleasantly in that place where there are gardens, running waters, well-designed buildings, trees, particularly mango-trees, and various birds of coloured plumage, I ordered the march to be towards Ghazipur." (emphasis added)

1518. Pages 684 and 685, refer the dates 13th June 1529 A.D., 17th June 1529 A.D. and 20th June 1529 A.D., and say that Baqi joined Babur in pursuit of Biban and Bayazid near Dalmud (Dalmau) and Baqi was given leave along with his army of Aud (Ayodhya) on 20th June 1529 A.D.

1519. "John Layden and William Erskine's" book on "Babar/ Babur-Nama" also does not throw any light on this aspect.

1520. "Lieut.-Colonel F.G. Talbot" in his book "Memoirs of Baber Emperor of India-First of the Great Moghuls", first published in 1909 (first Indian reprint 1974 published by Ess Ess Publications, Delhi) has said that with an intent to set up an Empire in India, he set out on march in 1525 A.D. along with about 12 thousands men. On 29th December, 1525 A.D., he reached at Sialkot. Here he has given his experience with Jats

and Gujers in the following words :

> "Every time that I have entered Hindustan, the Jats and Gujers have regularly poured down in prodigious numbers, from their hills and wilds, in order to carry off oxen and buffaloes. These were the wretches that really inflicted the chief hardships, and were guilty of the severest oppressions on the country." (Page 174)

1521. Therefrom he proceeded to Panipat where he defeated Ibrahim Lodi, Sultan of Delhi in April 1526 A.D. On page 187 to 188, Talbot has narrated Baber's memoirs after defeating Ibrahim Lodi as under :

> "On Thursday, the 28th of Rejeb, about the hour of afternoon prayers, I entered Agra, and took up my residence at Sultan Ibrahim's palace. From the time when I conquered the country of Kabul, which was in the year 1504, till the present time I had always been bent on subduing Hindustan. Sometimes, however, from the misconduct of my Amirs and their dislike of the plan, sometimes from the cabals and opposition of my brothers, I was prevented from prosecuting any expedition into that country, and its provinces escaped being overrun. At length these obstacles were removed. There was now no one left, great or small, noble or private man, who could dare to utter a word in opposition to the enterprise. In the year 1519, I collected an army, and having taken the fort of Bajour by storm, put all the garrison to the sword. I next advanced into behreh, where I prevented all marauding and plunder, imposed a contribution on the inhabitants, and having levied it to the amount of four hundred thousand shahrukhis in money and goods, divided the proceeds among the troops who were in my service, and returned back to Kabul. From that time till the year 1526, I attached myself in a peculiar degree to the affairs of Hindustan, and in the space of these seven or eight years entered it five times at the head of an army. The fifth time, the Most High God, of his grace and mercy, cast down and defeated an enemy so mighty as Sultan Ibrahim, and made me the master and conqueror of the powerful empire of Hindustan*."*

1522. The Empire of Hindustan on Page 189 of Talbot's Memoirs of Baber (supra) is described in the following words :

"The empire of Hindustan is extensive, populous and rich. On the east, the south, and even the west, it is bounded by the Great Ocean. On the north, it has kabul, Ghazni, and Kandahar. The capital of all Hindustan is Delhi."

www.vadaprativada.com

1523. He also narrated that on one hand Baber criticised the country he has recently invaded and conquered but simultaneously he has expressed very high opinion. Page 190 of the Book 'Memoirs of Baber' (supra) says:

"Hindustan is a country that has few pleasures to recommend it. The people are not handsome. They have no idea of the charms of friendly society, of frankly mixing together, or of familiar intercourse. They have no genius, no comprehension of mind, no politeness of manner, no kindness or fellow-feeling, no ingenuity or mechanical invention in planning or executing their handicraft works, no skill or knowledge in design or architecture; they have no good horses, no good flesh, no grapes or musk-melons, no good fruits, no ice or cold water, no good food or bread

1524. Though it is not necessary for the present purpose to discuss Babur-nama at great length since we are not concerned with the history of Babur or his invasion to India, laying of empire here-at, and its other political, social and other consequences but in the light of the respective arguments advanced by the parties it may be of some importance to have a bird eye view of some incidental relevant aspects borne out from the description given in Babur-nama. Sri Mishra said that Babar was a thorough religious person. In fact the submission of Sri Misra that Babar was a deeply indulged religious man, had no hatred towards idols, never visited Ayodhya and, therefore, had no occasion to order for construction of any building/disputed building, i.e., mosque at Ayodhya, are duly concurred and in fact in the line of what has been argued by Sri Jilani and other counsels appearing for various Muslim parties. This however is in direct contradiction to the arguments of Sri H.S.Jain, M.M. Pandey, A.K.Pandey etc.

1525. In Beveridge's Babur-Nama on page 15, the quality and habits of Babar are described:

"He was a true believer (Hanafi mazhablik) and pure in the Faith, not neglecting the Five Prayers and, his life

through, making up his Omissions. He read the Quran very frequently and was a disciple of his Highness Khawaja 'Ubaidu'l-lah (Ahrari) who honoured him by visits and even called him son. His current readings were the two Quintets and the Masnawi of histories he read chiefly the Shah-nama. He had a poetic nature, but no taste for composing verses. He was so just that when he heard of a caravan returning from Khitai as overwhelmed by snow in the mountains of Eastern Andijan, and that of its thousand heads of houses (awiluq) two only had escaped, he sent his overseers to take charge of all goods and, though no heirs were near and though he was in want himself, summoned the heirs from Khurasan and Samarkand, and in the course of a year or two had made over to them all their property safe and sound.

He was very generous; in truth, his character rose altogether to the height of generosity. He was affable, eloquent and sweet-spoken, daring and bold. Twice out-distancing all his braves, he got to work with his own sword, once at the Gate of Akhsi, once at the Gate of Shahrukhiya. A middling archer, he was strong in the fist,- not a man but fell to his blow. Through his ambition, peace was exchanged often for war, friendliness for hostility.

In his early days he was a great drinker, later on used to have a party once or twice a week. He was good company, on occasions reciting verses admirably. Towards the last he rather preferred intoxicating confects and, under their sway, used to lose his head. His disposition was amorous, and he bore many a lover's mark. He played draughts a good deal, sometimes even threw the dice."

1526. The treasure, Baber received at Agra was distributed to his son Humayun and other relatives, army men and also sent to his relatives in Samarkand and Khurasan:

> "(May 12th) On Saturday the 29th of Rajab the examinations and distribution of the treasure were begun. To Humayun were given 70 laks from the Treasury, and, over and above this, a treasure house was bestowed on him just as it was, without ascertaining and writing down its contents. To some begs 10 laks were given, 8, 7, or 6 to others. Suitable money-gifts were bestowed from the Treasury on the whole army, to every tribe there was, Afghan, Hazara, 'Arab, Biluch etc. to each according to its position. Every trader and student, indeed every man who had come with the army, took ample portion and share of bounteous gift and largess. To those not with the army went a mass of treasure in gift and largess, as for instance, 17 laks to Kamran, 15 laks to Muhammad-i-zaman Mirza, while to 'Askari, Hindal and indeed to the whole various train of relations and younger children went masses of red and white (gold and silver), of plenishing, jewels and slaves. Many gifts went to the begs and soldiery on that side (Tramontana). Valuable gifts (saughat) were sent for the various relations in Samarkand, Khurasan, Kashghar and 'Iraq. To holy men belonging to Samarkand and Khurasan went offerings vowed to God (nuzur); so too to Makka and Madina. We gave one Shahrukhi for every soul in the country of Kabul and the valley-side of Varsak, man and woman, bond and free, of age or non-age."

1527. The revenue of the country held by Babar in 1528 A.D. from Bhira to Bihar was 52 krurs (judged by Erskine in 1854 A.D. at about Pound 4,212,000).

1528. At the time Babar invaded India, it was governed by five Musalman Rulers and two Pagans which he described as respected and independent Rulers. Besides them, there were many Rais and Rajas in the hills and jungles, held in little esteem. The seven Principle Rulers are described on page 481 to 484 of Babur-Nama by Beveridge:

> "At the date of my conquest of Hindustan it was governed by five Musalman rulers (padshah) and two Pagans (kafir). These were the respected and independent rulers, but there were also, in the hills and jungles, many rais and rajas, held in little esteem (kichik karim).
>
> First, there were the Afghans who had possession of Dihli, the capital, and held the country from Bhira to Bihar. Junpur, before their time, had been in possession of Sl. Husain Sharqi (Eastern) whose dynasty Hindustanis call Purabi (Eastern). His ancestors will have been cup-bearers in the presence of Sl. Firuz Shah and those (Tughluq) sultans :they became supreme in Junpur after his death. At that time Dihli was in the hands of Sl. 'Alau'u'-din (Alam Khan) of the Sayyid Dynasty to whose ancestor Timur Beg had given it when, after having captured it, he went away. Sl. Buhlul Lodi and his son (Sikandar) got possession of the capital Junpur and the capital Dihli, and brought both under one government (88I AH.--1476 AD).
>
> Secondly, there was Sl. Muhammad Muzaffer in Gujrat; he departed from the world a few days before the defeat of Sl. Ibrahim. He was skilled in the Law, a ruler (padshah) seeking after knowledge, and a constant copyist of the Holy Book. His dynasty people call Tank. His

www.vadaprativada.com

ancestors also will have been wine-servers to Sl. Firuz Shah and those (Tughluq) sultans; they became possessed of Gujrat after his death.

Thirdly, there were the Bahmanis of the Dakkan (Deccan, i.e., South), but at the present time no independent authority is left them; their great begs have laid hands on the whole country, and must be asked for whatever is needed.

Fourthly, there was Sl. Mahmud in the country of Malwa, which people call also Mandau. His dynasty they call Khilij (Truk). Rana Sanga had defeated Sl. Mahmud and taken possession of most of his country. This dynasty also has become feeble. Sl. Mahmud's ancestors also must have been cherished by Sl Firuz Shah; they became possessed of the Malwa country after his death.

Fifthly, there was Nasrat Shah in the country of Bengal. His father (Husain Shah), a Sayyid styled 'Alau'u'd-din, had ruled in Bengal and Nasrat Shah attained to rule by inheritance. A surprising custom in Bengal is that hereditary succession is rare. The royal office is permanent and there are permanent offices of amirs, wazirs and mansab-dars (officials). It is the office that Bengalis regard with respect. Attached to each office is a body of obedient, subordinate retainers and servants. If the royal heart demand that a person should be dismissed and another be appointed to sit in his place, the whole body of subordinates attached to that office become the (new) officeholder's. There is indeed this peculiarity of the royal office itself that any person who kills the ruler (padshah) and seats himself on the throne, becomes ruler himself;

amirs, wazirs, soldiers and peasants submit to him at once, obey him, and recognize him for the rightful ruler his predecessor in office had been. Bengalis say, "We are faithful to the throne; we loyally obey whoever occupies it". As for instance, before the reign of Nasrat Shah's father 'Alau'u'd-din, an Abyssinian (Habshi, named Muzaffar Shah) had killed his sovereign (Mahmud Shah Ilyas), mounted the throne and ruled for some time. 'Alau'u'd-din killed that Abyssinian, seated himself on the throne and became ruler. When he died, his son (Nasrat) became ruler by inheritance. Another Bengali custom is to regard it as a disgraceful fault in a new ruler if he expend and consume the treasure of his predecessors. On coming to rule he must gather treasure of his own. To amass treasure Bengalis regard as glorious distinction. Another custom in Bengal is that from ancient times parganas have been assigned to meet the charges of the treasury, stables, and all royals expenditure and to defray these charges no impost is laid on other lands.

These five, mentioned above, were the great Musalman rulers, honoured in Hindustan, many-legioned, and broad-landed. Of the Pagans the greater both in territory and army, is the Raja of Bijanagar.

The second is Rana Sanga who in these latter days had grown great by his own valour ans sword. His original country was Chitur; in the downfall from power of the Mandaus Sultans, he became possessed of many of their dependencies such as Rantanbur, Sarangpur, Bhilsan and Chandiri. Chandiri I stormed in 934 AH. (1528 A.D.) and, by God's pleasure, took it in a few hours; in it was

Rana Sanga's great and trusted man Midni Rao; we made general massacre of the Pagans in it and, as will be narrated, converted what for many years had been a mansion of hostility, into a mansion of Islam.

There are very many rais and rajas on all sides and quarters of Hindustan, some obedient to Islam, some, because of their remoteness or because their places are fastnesses, not subject to Musalman rule."

1529. From the above it does appear that Babar's visit to India for its conquest was a well intended plan and fulfillment of a dream which he had. At page 478 Mrs. Beveridge has written:

"From the date 910 at which the country of Kabul was conquered, down to now (932 AH.) (my) desire for Hindustan had been constant, but owing sometimes to the feeble counsels of begs, sometimes to the non accompaniment of elder and younger brethren, a move on Hindustan had not been practicable and its territories had remained unsubdued. At length no such obstacles were left; no beg, great or small (beg begat) of lower birth, could speak an opposing word. In 925 AH. (1519 AD.) we led an army out and, after taking Bajaur by storm in 2-3 gari (44-66 minutes), and making a general massacre of its people*, went on into Bhira. Bhira we neither over-ran nor plundered;* we imposed a ransom on its people*, taking from them in money and goods to the value of 4 laks of shahrukhis and having shared this out to the army and auxiliaries, returned to Kabul.* From then till now we laboriously held tight to Hindustan, five times leading an army into it*. The fifth-time, God the Most High, by his own mercy and favour, made such a foe as Sl. Ibrahim the*

vanquished and loser, such a realm as Hindustan our conquest and possession." (emphasis added)

1530. It also appears therefrom that Babur treated himself to be the third invader who have conquered and ruled Hindustan. First according to him was Mahmud of Ghazni (also called Mahmud Ghaznavi), a "Turk" by race, who invaded India on several occasions and though died in 1030 AD but his descendants set long on the seat of Government in Hindustan. The second was Shihabuddin of Ghur (also known as "Muhammad Ghori") who died in 1206 AD and then the third was Babur.

1531. It thus appear that Babur did not came to Hindustan with an intention to spread Islam religion but he had intention to conquer and rule the country. It is true that Hindustan in the present form under a single hand could not have been there in 1526 AD and on the contrary it was independently ruled by several Rulers treating each part as a country but as a whole also it used to be called by Babar as “Hindustan”. This is also evident from page 479 of the aforesaid book where it is mentioned:

"All Hindustan was not under one supreme head (padshah), but each Raja ruled independently in his own country."

1532. It thus cannot be doubted that most of the persons, who ruled Indian sub-continent at that time were followers of Islam with whom Baber fought to set up his empire.

1533. About the construction of buildings in general and the workmen for construction work, on page 520 of "Babur-Nama" by Beveridge, she said:

“Another good thing in Hindustan is that it has

unnumbered and endless workmen of every kind. There is a fixed caste (jam'i) for every sort of work and for every thing, which has done that work or that thing from father to son till now. Mulla Sharaf, writing in the Zafar-nama about the building of Timur Beg's Stone Mosque, lays stress on the fact that on it 200 stone-cutters worked, from Azarbaijan, Fars, Hindustan and other countries. But 680 men worked daily on my buildings in Agra and of Agra stone-cutters only; while 1491 stone-cutters worked daily on my buildings in Agra, Sikri, Biana, Dulpur, Gualiar and Kuil*. In the same way there are numberless artisans and workmen of every sort in Hindustan."*

1534. There is mention of buildings in Babur-Nama at different places including temple of Gwalior, mosque at Delhi, Agra, Gwalior and other several places but it is true that neither there is mention of demolition of any religious place by Babar in Awadh area nor there is anything to show that he either entered Ayodhya or had occasion to issue any direction for construction of a building and in particular a Mosque at Ayodhya.

1535. The Babar's camping at Ghaghar has also been described by William Erskine in his book "History of India under Baber" (May 1845), though published for the first time in 1854 after his death (Book No. 65) (Published in 1994 by M/s Atlantic Publishers and Distributors). Erskine came to India in 1803 AD as Secretary of Sri James Mackintosh at Bombay and later came to be appointed as Master in equity in the Recorder of Bombay Court but had to leave India in 1823 on suspicion of embezzlement. He was born in 1773 and died in 1852. After return from India he spent rest of his life in Scotland occupying the post of Provost of Saint Andrews in 1837-38 AD. It says:

"Baber, having brought the war of Chanderi to a conclusion, lost no time in marching to meet the danger that threatened him in the East. Having repassed the Jamna, he proceeded without intermission towards Kanauj. On the road, he learned that his suspicions of Sheikh Bayezid's fidelity had not been unfounded. That chief had joined Baban and Maaruf, the leaders of the revolt, with his whole army; so that Baber's troops had been compelled to retreat across the Ganges, to evacuate even Kanauj and to fall back on Raberi, movements that had enabled the enemy to take Shemsabad, a rich town in the Doab, by storm."

1536. In "History of India under Baber" by William Erskine (Supra) on page 87, there is a footnote showing that Mir or Mirza was a title:

www.vadaprativada.com

"The princes of Taimur's family, even those who held the supreme power, had not yet assumed the title of shah or padshah, king of emperor; they were called Mir or Mirza, and often Sultan. In the text, however, the ruling prince is often called King, for distinction's sake; following the usage of historians in general, and even of Baber himself. The title of Sultan was not confined to the sovereign, many chiefs, and children of chiefs, especially among the Moghul tribes, being called by that name, which is an Arabic term, nearly equivalent to Lord. The titles, Mir, Mirza, and Shah, came also, in process of time, to be very commonly given to religious guides and holy men, or mendicants, and, from a sort of flattery, were often continued to the descendants as part of the family name. The title of Mirza, in later times, has been lavished by common usage on secretaries and

clerks; and in general on all who pretend to learning. Mirza is merely mirzadeh, son of a Mir."

1537. The reference of Oudh in the said book of Earskine is on page 406, 443 and 450. Referring Lodhi dynasties expansions on page 406-407 Easrskine has written:

"Behlul's son, Sultan Sekander Lodi, a prince of talent, in a reign of thirty years, enlarged the kingdom still farther. In the Est, he subdued Behar, the last province that remained in the possession of the Sherki kings; and even advanced into Bengal, where Sultan Husein Shah had taken refuge. By a convention concluded with Sultan Ala-ed-din of Bengal, it was agreed, that Sekander should retain Behar, Tirhut, Sirkar Saran, and all that he had conquered; that he should not again invade Bengal; and that neither prince should support the enemies of the other. On the west, he gained possession of Dhulpur and Chanderi, and received the submission of the Raja of Gualiar and and other princes; so that, at his death, his kingdom had attained a very great extent, containing the Penjab, the Doab, the provinces of Oud, Laknau, Juanpur and Behar, besides a wide tract of country to the west of the Jamna, from the Satlej to Bandelkand. These extensive possessions, however, though under one king, had no very strong principle of cohesion. The monarchy was a congeries of nearly independent principalities, jagirs and provinces, each ruled by a hereditary chief, or by a zemindar or delegate from Delhi; and the inhabitants looked more to their immediate governors, who had absolute power in the province, and in whose hands, consequently, lay their happiness or misery, than to a distant and little known sovereign. It was the individual, not the law, that reigned. The Lodi princes, not merely to strengthen their own power, but from necessity, had in general committed the government of the province, and the chief offices of trust, to their own countrymen, the Afghans; so that men of the Lodi, Fermuli, and Lohana tribes, held all the principal jagirs; which, from the habitual modes of thinking of their race, they considered as their own of right, and purchased by their swords, rather than as due to any bounty or liberality on the part of the sovereign."

1538. Again on page 441-443 while referring political condition of the area under rule of Ebrahim Lodhi who was defeated by Babar in April 1526 AD, Earskine has said (including the description of political sovereignty on Ayodhya):

"But, though Baber had been victorious in the field, and was in possession of the two great capitals of the kingdom, it soon appeared that his situation, far from being one of safety or ease, was surrounded with difficulty and danger. He and his army were strangers to the people whom he had subdued; and a mutual dislike soon manifested itself between his soldiers and the inhabitants of Agra, his head-quarters. The peasantry, as well as the fighting men of the country, shunned and fled from his followers. The north of India, at the time of Baber's conquest, still retained much of its original Hindu organization; its system of village and district administration and government; its division into numerous little chieftainships, or petty local governments; and, in political revolutions, the people looked much more to their own immediate rulers, than to the prince who governed in the capital. Except at Delhi and Agra, the inhabitants everywhere fortified their towns, and prepared to resist. The invasion was regarded as a temporary inundation, that would speedily pass off. Every man in authority raised troops, and put himself in a condition to act. Those who held delegated authority or jagirs, being generally Afghans, were consequently hostile to the new state of things. They soon came to an understanding among themselves, and took measures for mutual co-operation. Raja Hasan Khan of Mewat, in the neighborhood of Agra, was the grand instigator of the opposition; which was supported by Nizam Khan, in Biana; Muhammed Zeitun, in Dhulpur; Tatar Khan Sarang-Khani, in Gualiar; Husein Khan Lohani, in Raberi; Kutb Khan, in Etawa; Alim Khna Jilal Khan Jighat, in Kalpi; Kasim Sambhali, in Sambhal; and Marghub, a slave, in Mahawan, within twenty kos of Agra. Indeed, all of these chiefs were immediately around Agra, or close upon its borders. They looked for aid from Rana Sanga, the powerful chief of Cheitur; who, on his part, laid claim to a great part of the right bank of the Jamna. These Western Afghans wished to place Sultan Mahmud Lodi, a Brother of the late Sultan Ibrahim, on the throne of Delhi; and so to preserve the Afghan and the Lodi dynasty.

In the Eastern provinces of Juanpur and Oud, the opposition presented even a more regular form. There, the confederacy of Afghan chiefs, who had been in open rebellion against Ibrahim for two years before his death, still continued. The revolt was originally headed by Nasir Khan Lohani, Maaruf Fermuli, and others. The insurgents,

we have seen, had elected Baber Khan Lohani, the son of Deria Khan of Behar, for their king; and proclaimed him, under the name of Sultan Muhamed Shah. They now possessed, not only Behar, but nearly the whole territories of the old Sherki monarchy, especially the country on the left bank of the Ganges; and had even crossed to the right bank of the river, and taken possession of Kanauj, and advanced into the Doab. Sultan Ibrahim had sent an army, under Mustafa Fermuli and Firuz Khan Sarang-khani, to reduce the rebels to obedience. Mustafa had met the revolted chiefs, and defeated them in some well-contested actions. On his death, which occurred some time before the defeat of Sultan Ibrahim, he was succeeded in the command by Sheikh Bayezid, his younger brother. The army under his orders was formidable; and it was naturally to be expected, that, changed as circumstances now were, the two armies opposed to each other in the field, being both Afghans, would lay aside their mutual animosities, and, animated by national feelings, unite to expel Baber, the common enemy."

1539. The Afghan Chiefs who ruled in various territories of India without any subordination, when realized that Babar may settle in India ending their unlimited authority, their further action is described at page 443/444:

"It was clear that the Afghan chiefs, who till now had ruled with nearly unlimited authority both in Delhi and Behar, must be ruined if Baber settled in Hindustan, They, therefore, stirred up, with great success, the apprehensions of the natives, whether Musulman or Hindu, by the most false and groundless reports. The people of the country were told, that they had every thing to dread from their barbarous invaders; that they would be robbed of their property; that their wives and children would be dishonoured; their temples profaned or destroyed. Baber and his army had reached Agra in May, in that climate the hottest season of the year. The inhabitants, in terror, fled before them, and abandoned their dwellings, so that no grain or provender could be procured for man or beast. The villagers fled to the waste, and infested the highways, plundering and robbing on every side. The roads became impassable. Baber's force was so small that he was unable to send out detachments sufficient to protect the different districts. To add to these difficulties, the heats that year happened to be uncommonly intense, so that many of his men, who were from more temperate climates, unaccustomed to the burning sun of India, dropped down and died on the spot."

1540. However, the manner in which Babar managed the things has been said on page 446 showing that Awadh was assigned to Bayazid Fermuli. To take possession of the assigned territory, Humayun moved alongwith army and on page 450 it has mentioned:

"Humayun, after putting to fight the Afghan army, crossed the Ganges and took possession of Juanpur. He next marched to Ghazipur, intending to attack Nasir Khan's army, which had retired into that neighborhood. But the Afghans, on his approach, retired behind the Gogra, as it would appear, into the territory of Bengal; and a detachment that he sent to pursue them returned, after plundering the country of Kherid and Behar. Having thus

expelled them from the Juanpur territory, he left Shah Mir Husein, in the city of Juanpur, supported by Sultan Juneid Birlas with some of his best troops; and Sheikh Bayezid in Oud, with every means of maintaining the country; and then, in compliance with orders which he received from his father, recrossed into the Doab; and marching back by Kalpi, of which he gained possession by the submission of Alim Khan, rejoined the Emperor at Agra, bringing Alim Khan along with him."

1541. The movement of Babar in the last week of March 1528 AD near Awadh is described on page 487:

"The Emperor sending Sultan Chin Taimur, with a strong force to pursue them, himself advanced and occupied Laknau on the 21st, and passed the Gumti. Moving again in pursuit of the retreating enemy, he encamped, on the 28th, four or five miles above Oud, at the junction of the Gogra and Sirwu. Till then, Sheikh Bayazid had maintained his ground beyond the Sirwu, and had prevented Sultan Chin Taimur, Baber's general, from crossing. Being now reinforced, however, Chin Taimur effected a passage, and found the Afghans in full retreat. He followed them with great alacrity, slew numbers of them, and dispersed their army. Sheikh Bayezid threw himself into a jungle and escaped. Chin Taimur, after a pursuit of sixty miles, reached a spot which the families of the fugitives had left but a short time before. The light force was now divided into several parties, who followed the flying enemy in different directions. Their baggage and families were overtaken and seized; and several Afghans brought in as prisoners. The success was complete."

www.vadaprativada.com

1542. Here also there is no mention of anyone as Mir Baqi or about entry of Babar in Awadh. It was submitted that there was no occasion for Babar either to demolish a temple or to construct a mosque at Ayodhya in 1528 AD.

1543. On page 443, he has described the state of affairs at Ayodhya in 1526 that the Afghan Chief at Oud revolted against Ibrahim Lodi about two years back his death and the revolt was originally headed by Nasir Khan Lohani, Maaruf Fermuli and others. After the death of Mustafa Fermuli, Sheikh Bayezid succeeded him in his command who was his younger brother.

1544. On page 450, he mentions that Humayun after taking possession of Jaunpur left Shah Mir Husein thereat supported by Sultan Juneid Birlas along with some of his best troops and Sheikh Bayezid in Oud along with every means of maintaining the country and thereafter crossed Doab and marched towards Kalpi of which he gained possession after surrender of Alim Khan and immediately thereafter he rejoined the Emperor at Agra. In 1527, Babar proceeded on his march to fight against Rajputs where he defeated Rana Sanga. This victory has been described on page 473, Erskine's History of India (supra) as under :

> "No victory could be more complete. The enemy were quite broken and dispersed. The whole fields around were strewed with the dead, as well as the roads to Biana and Alwar. Among the slain were Hasan Khan Mewati, who fell by a matchlock shot; Raul Udi Singh, of Dongerpur; Rai Chanderbhan Chohan; Manikchand Chohan, and many other chiefs of note. Baber directed a tower of heads to be erected; on a rising ground near the camp; and henceforth assumed the proud title of Ghazi, Victorious in a Holy War.

Rana Sanga himself escaped; it is said by the devotion of some of his followers, who threw themselves in the way of the pursuers, and sacrificed their lives for his safety; and the regret expressed by Baber for not having urged the pursuit in person has reference probably to the escape of his illustrious rival. It is remarkable that, since this defeat of Rana Sanga, no Rana of Cheitur has ever taken the field in person against any of the princes of the House of Taimur. When these princes were along with their armies, the Rana's troops have been entrusted to some eminent Rajput chief, the Rana himself withdrawing to some one of the hill-forts of his country."

1545. Baber returned to Agra on 25th April, 1527 and, thereafter, gained Chandwar, Raberi and Etawa which were surrendered by Kutb Khan who held it. The victory of Babar within a year after defeat of Ibrahim Lodi against Rajputs and others has been described on page 477 of Erskine's History of India (supra) as under :

"That battle has broken the power of the Afghans in India, as that of Kanwa had since broken that of the Hindu confederacy. He had evinced, to every class of men in the country, the decided superiority of his arms; and, with his mental resources, the awe inspired by his hardly northern troops, and his own bravery and conduct, the conquest of every part of India seems to lie open to his arms."

1546. Baber took some rest as mentioned on page 478 of Erskine's History of India:

"During the rains he visited Sikri, Dhulpur, and Bari, proceeding as far as the Chambal; he thence returned to Agra; and went to Kol or Koel in the Doad, and on to

www.vadaprativada.com

Sambhal, beyond the Ganges, returning by a different route."

1547. He, thereafter, planned to march against Afghans of the East, who still held out, in considerable force, beyond the Ganges and in Behar and some of the Hindu chiefs in the West whose confederacy he had felt to be so formidable, i.e. Medini Rai of Chanderi. After defeating Medini Rai at Chanderi, he proceeded to East, i.e., Kanauj. On page 484, Erskine's History of India, it is said that Baber got information that his suspicion of Sheikh Bayezid's fidelity is not unfounded. Bayezid had joined Baban and Maaruf, the leaders of the revolt with his whole army. As we have already noticed Sheikh Bayezid was posted at Oudh by Humayun to look after that area but on joining revolt, Baber had to move to Oudh. He reached near Ayodhya (Oudh) on 28th March 1528 A.D. and has narrated the events which took place thereafter as under :

www.vadaprativada.com

"The light force was now divided into several parties, who followed the flying enemy in different directions. Their baggage and families were overtaken and seized; and several Afghans brought in as prisoners. The success was complete."

1548. Here also we do not find anything so suggest that Baber either entered Ayodhya or gave direction to anyone to construct a Mosque or to demolish a temple so as to construct a mosque.

1549. Lastly, we have Hindi Translation, i.e. "Mughal Kaleen Bharat Baber (1526-1530)" by Sayed Athar Abbas Rizvi (Supra). In the chapter titled as "Review" Rizvi has observed that due to lack of confidence on Afghans, Baber already separated them from his army except a few one of confidence. Commenting on construction activities and available revenue on page 44, Chapter "Review", Rizvi has said:

''पानीपत के युद्ध के पूर्व जो कुछ भी धन सम्पत्ति प्राप्त होती थी उसका अधिकांश भाग वह लोगों में बांट दिया करता था। 5 मार्च को हुमायूँ के हमीद पर विजय प्राप्त करके लौटने के उपरान्त उसने उसे हिसार फ़ीरोज़ा तथा उसके अधीनस्थ स्थान एवं एक करोड़ नक़द धन पुरस्कार स्वरुप प्रदान कर दिया। आगरा के खज़ाने को भी उसने इसी प्रकार बड़ी उदारता से लोगों को बांट दिया और अपने आपको क़लन्दर कहलाने में गर्व का अनुभव किया करता था। हिन्दुस्तान में भी उसने प्रचलित शासन पद्धति का अनुसरण किया और विभिन्न प्रदेशों को पूर्ण रुप से अधिकार में करने तथा वहां शान्ति स्थापित रखने के लिए अक़्तादार एवं शिक़दार नियुक्त किये। कुछ प्रदेश खालसा में सम्मिलित कर लिये गये। किन्तु फिर भी उसके निर्माण कार्यों तथा दान पुण्य के कारण उसे धन के अभाव का सर्वदा ही सामना करना पड़ा। 22 अक्टूबर 1528 ई0 के वृतान्त में वह लिखता है कि ''इस बीच में सिकन्दर तथा इब्राहिम के देहली एवं आगरा के खज़ानों का अन्त हो गया। अतः बृहस्पतिवार 8 सफ़र को यह शाही आदेश हुआ कि प्रत्येक वजहदार युद्ध की सामग्री, अस्त्र–शस्त्र एवं बन्दूक़ तथा तोप चलाने वालों के वेतन हेतु अपनी वजह में से 100 में से 30 दीवान में दाखिल कर दें।''

1550. On page 46 Rizvi says :

''बाबरनामा में तत्कालीन विभिन्न प्रान्तों की जमा (राजस्वं) की भी चर्चा की गई है। इस कारण कि आइने अकबरी के अतिरिक्त अकबर के पूर्व के इतिहासों में राजस्व के सम्बन्ध में इतना भी ज्ञान किसी ग्रन्थ से नहीं प्राप्त होता बाबरनामा का यह वृतान्त अत्यन्त महत्वपूर्ण है। बाबरनामा से यह भी पता चलता है कि उस समय तक हिन्दुस्तान के समस्त आमिल, कारीगर एवं श्रमिक हिन्दू होते थे। मालगुजारी की वसूली में तुर्कों के राज्य में भी बड़ी कठिनाई होती थी। अलाउद्दीन के तत्सम्बन्धी कठोर नियम बड़े प्रसिद्ध हैं। बाबरनामा के वृतान्तानुसार हिन्दुस्तान के मैदान के बहुत से भागों में बड़े बड़े कांटेदार जंगल होते थे जहां परगनों के निवासी शरण ले लेते थे और विद्रोह कर देते थे तथा कर नहीं अदा करते थे। देहली के सुल्तानों के इतिहासों में मवास शब्द का इसी प्रसंग में बड़ा अधिक प्रयोग हुआ है जिसका अर्थ यही कांटेदार जंगल

www.vadaprativada.com

बाबरनामा से यह भी पता चलता है कि सुल्तान सिकन्दर ने अपने राज्यकाल में धौलपुर में एक बांध का निर्माण कराया था जहां ऊँचाई पर वर्षा का जल एकत्र होता था, जिससे एक बहुत बड़ी झील बन जाती थी। इस झील के पूर्व में एक उद्यान भी था।''

1551. Again on page 48, the Rizvi has mentioned about Baber's observation regarding workmen in India and says:

''वह लिखता है कि ''हिन्दुस्तान का एक बहुत बड़ा गुण यह है कि यहां हर प्रकार एवं हर कला के जानने वाले असंख्य कारीगर पाये जाते हैं। प्रत्येक कार्य तथा कला के लिए जातियां निश्चित हैं जो अपने पिता और पिता के पिता के समय से वही कार्य करती चली आ रही हैं। मुल्ला शरफ़ ने तीमूर बेग की पत्थर की मस्जिद के निर्माण के विषय में इस बात पर बड़ा अधिक जोर दिया है कि इसमें अज़रबाईजान, फ़ारस, हिन्दुस्तान तथा अन्य देशों के 200 पत्थर काटने वाले रोज़ाना काम करते थे किन्तु केवल आगरा में ही इसी आगरा के पत्थर काटने वालों में से 680 व्यक्ति मेरे आगरा के भवनों के निर्माण में कार्य करते थे। मेरे आगरा, सीकरी, व्याना, दौलपुर, ग्वालियर तथा कोल के भवनों के निर्माण में 1491 पत्थर काटने वाले रोज़ाना कार्य करते थे। इसी प्रकार हिन्दुस्तान में प्रत्येक प्रकार के अगणित शिल्पकार तथा कारीगर हैं।'' 1552. The constrtuction activies in India have been detailed on page 49-50 by Rizvi in Mughalkalin Bharat as under :

''हिन्दुस्तान में निर्माण–कार्य

उसकी राजधानी आगरा का वर्तमान रुप सुल्तान सिकन्दर लोदी के समय से ही प्रारम्भ हुआ था। इससे पूर्व राजधानी देहली में रहती थी। सुल्तान फ़ीरोज शाह तुग़लुक़ के राज्यकाल के अन्तिम वर्षों से ही उत्तरी भारत के विभिन्न प्रदेश स्वतंत्र होने लगे थे। अन्तिम सैयिद सुल्तान की बादशाही तो देहली से पालम तक ही सीमित रह गई थी। सुल्तान बहलोल का अधिक समय विद्रोहियों के दमन में व्यतीत हुआ। सुल्तान सिकन्दर लोदी के समय में यद्यपि बहुत से भाग विद्रोहियों से मुक्त हो गये थे किन्तु उसके राज्य में शान्ति स्थापित न हो सकी थी। अपने पूर्वी राज्यों को वश में रखने के लिए तथा इटावा, ग्वालियर, व्याना, कालपी एवं मेवात के अधिक निकट रहने और मालवा तथा राजपूतों के स्वतंत्र राज्यों पर दृष्टि रखने के उद्देश्य से सुल्तान सिकन्दर लोदी को आगरा को बसाने की आवश्यकता पड़ी किन्तु लोदियों के राज्यकाल में आगरा को अधिक उन्नति न प्राप्त हो सकी। वहां के भवन भी सम्भवतः देहली के भवनों की अपेक्षा सुन्दर न थे अतः बाबर की उनके प्रति घृणा स्वाभाविक ही थी। लोदी सुल्तानों ने उपयोगिता की दृष्टि से जो भी निर्माण–कार्य किये होंगे वे बाबर को अपनी ओर आकृष्ट न कर सके अतः उसने आगरा में विशेष रुप से उद्यान, भवनों, हम्माम, कुओं इत्यादि का निर्माण कराया। उसने अपने निर्माण–कार्य के लिए सिकन्दर लोदी के आगरा के निकट ही यमुना के उस पार उचित भूमि की स्वयं खोज की। यद्यपि जो भूमि चुनी गई वह उसे पसन्द न थी किन्तु किसी अन्य अच्छी भूमि के अभाव के कारण उसे वही भूमि चुननी पड़ी। उसने वहां जो चारबाग़ अथवा शाही बाग़ लगवाया उसका नाम हश्त बहिश्त रक्खा। आगरा में उसने महल बनवाये। हम्मामों के निर्माण से तो उसे बड़ी खुशी हुई। वह लिखता है, ''मुझे हिन्दुस्तान की तीन बातों से बड़ी घृणा थी– गरमी, आंधी तथा धूल। इन तीनों से हम्मामों द्वारा ही रक्षा हो सकती है। यहां धूल तथा आंधी कहॉ प्रवेश? गरमी में यह इतना अधिक ठंडा हो जाता है कि लोग ठंडक के कारण कांपने लगते हैं। ''खलीफ़ा, शेख़ जैन, यूसुफ़ अली तथा अन्य अमीरों को भी जहां कहीं कोई अच्छी भूमि मिली वहीं उन्होंने हौज़ सहित बड़े सुडौल तथा उत्तम कुओं एवं भवनों इत्यादि का निर्माण करा लिया। लाहौर तथा दीबालपुर के समान रहॅट यहां भी मंगवाकर लगवाये गये। एक प्रकार के बड़े कुएं जिसे बाई कहते हैं, उस समय बड़े प्रचलित थे। इबने बतूता ने

www.vadaprativada.com

कोल के अतिरिक्त जुरफ़त्तन की भी एक बाई का उल्लेख किया है। बाबर ने भी अपने आगरा के चारबाग के निर्माण के पूर्व ही एक बाई का निर्माण प्रारम्भ करा दिया था। इसमें रहॅट भी लगवाया गया जिसके द्वारा जल क़िले चहारदीवारी से होता हुआ ऊपर के उद्यानों में जाता था। धौलपुर में उसने 22 अगस्त 1527 ई0 को पहाड़ी को कटवाकर एक छतदार अष्टाकार हौज़ के निर्माण का आदेश दिया। उसने वहां एक मस्जिद भी बनवाई। 5 अक्टूबर 1528 ई0 को वह उस छतदार हौज़ का निरीक्षण करने के लिए स्वयं पहुंचा। उसका प्रवेश द्वार भलीभॉति सीधा न हुआ था। उसने कुछ पत्थर काटने वालों को बुलवाकर आदेश दिया कि वे हौज़ के नीचे की सतह चिकनी करके उसमें जल भर दें और जल की सहायता से दीवार को एकसा कर दें। इस प्रकार बाबर ने स्वयं अपनी देख–रेख में दीवारेां को चिकना कराया। इसी प्रकार सीकरी में भी उसने अप्रैल 1527 ई0 के पूर्व ही बाग़ लगवाने का आदेश दे दिया था किन्तु जब 14 अक्टूबर 1528 ई0 को वह सीकरी पहुंचा तो वह बाग़ की दीवार तथा कुएं के निर्माण–कार्य से सन्तुष्ट न हुआ अतः जिन लोगों के सिपुर्द यह कार्य किया गया था, उनको उसने ताड़ना भी दी।''

www.vadaprativada.com

बाग़ों में फल तथा पौधे लगाने से भी उसे बड़ी रुचि थी। काबुल में पहुंचने के उपरान्त उसने वहां आलू बालू की क़लमें लगवाईं। 1523–24ई0 में उसने जब पहाड़ खां को पराजित करके लाहौर तथा दीपालपुर को विजय किया तो बाग़े– वफ़ा में, जो उसने काबुल में सम्भवतः 1508–9ई0 में लगवाया था, केले ले जाकर लगवाये। इसके पूर्व उसने वहां गन्ने भी लगवाये थे और उसे अपने इस प्रयास में बड़ी सफलता मिल चुकी थी। उसने गन्ने बुखारा तथा बदख्शां में भी भिजवाये। हिन्दुस्तान में भी उसने काबुल की ओर के फलों को लगवाने का प्रयत्न किया। उसने बल्ख़ के खरबूजा बोने वालों को बुलवाकर आगरा में खरबूजे लगवाये। 24 जून 1529 ई0 को जब वह कुछ खरबूजे लेकर उपस्थित हुआ तो बाबर बड़ा प्रसन्न हुआ। इसी प्रकार प्रकार उसने आगरा के हश्त बहिश्त नामक उद्यान में उत्तम अंगूर की बेलों के लगाने का भी आदेश दिया था। 24 जून 1529 ई0 के वृतान्त में वह लिखता है कि '' शेख गूरन ने मुझे टोकरी भरकर अंगूर भेजे जो बुरे न थे। हिन्दुस्तान में इस प्रकार के खरबूजे तथा अंगूर उगाकर मुझे बड़ी प्रसन्नता हुई।''

1553. Rizvi has also not found Babar's entry in Ayodhya or

construction of a mosque or direction to anyone including Mir Baqi for construction of any building at Ayodhya.

1554. Some of the authors have appreciated the character of Babar depicting him a holy, religious, kind hearted brave man having respect for all the religions etc. This is placed before us to deny even a possibility that Babar could have ordered to construct a mosque in a religious place of others.

1555. Dr. Radhey Shyam in his book "Babar" (supra) on page 441 has observed that Babar was what his fortune and misfortune, man and environment, his foes and friends, his joys and sorrows had made him. He was a soldier, a born warrior, a seasoned statesman and an accomplished diplomat, a loving husband and a man of many virtues seldom to be found in one single individual. Dr. Radhey Shyam thereafter referred to the comments of Abul Fazl about the qualities of Babar, describing him as "bakht buland, himmat arjumand, Qudarat Kishwar kushai, mulkdai, Koshish dar mamulai balad, Sarfi niyat bar Rifayat abad, Khushdil wakhtan sipahi, zabt ashar az tabahi (Akbar Nama)". This appreciation by Abul Fazl is understandable since he had to show great regards to the grandfather of the Emperor in whose regime, he was employed.

1556. Dr. Radhey Shyam has further referred to the comments of Nizamuddin Ahmad (Tabqat-i-Akbari), translation II, page 40, Mirza Haidar Doghlat, the author of Tarikh-i-Rashidi. Dr. Radhey Shyam proceeded to characterise Babar as charitable, benevolent, liberal, kind, just, adjustable temperament, robust vigour and dynamic personality. On page 443 Dr. Radhey Shyam said that "he was deeply imbued with humen feelings." On page 444 Dr. Radhey Shyam said that "he followed his religion like a comman man without allowing it to prejudice his mind against the followers of other religions. Even after the conquest of Hindustan he continued to maintain such an attitude." On page 447 he observed that "he never worked under the influence of religion. . . . . To him Shias and Sunnis were all alike."

1557. We would not like to make any comment on the above observations as if we are sitting in appeal over the work of learned author but suffice it to mention that the learned author has ignored what is contained on page 554-555 of Beveridge's Baburnama (supra) where the breaking of the wine couplets in pieces has been compared with the dashing of the God of the idolaters. To the same effect is what has been translated by Rizvi (supra) also.

1558. Besides, we may refer at this stage the own observations of Dr. Radhey Shyam on page 451 of the book:

> "As regards the destruction of the HIndu temples there is historical evidence both in Babar's support and against him. During the course of his campaigns or pleasure trips Babar occasionally came across large number of Hindu temples. These temples provoked great interest in him. Some of them he visited and appreciated their architectural beauty. While at Gwalior in 1528 Babar visited the fort, wherein he saw the places of Raja Man Singh and Vikramaditya. On the west of Rahim Dad's garden he saw a "Lofty idol house." This was famous Teli Mandir which is said to have been constructed by Raja Man Singh's Gujari wife Mrignaini. Then in the Urwa valley he saw the idol statues and he writes, "three sides of the Urwa valley are solid rock, not the red rock of Bayana but one paler in colour. On these sides people have cut out idol - statues, large and small. One large on the south side being perhaps 20 qari (yards) high. These idols are shewn quite naked without covering for the privaties, " writes that, "we rode ....to visit the idol-houses of Gualiar. Some are two, and some are three storeys high, each storey rather low, in the ancient fashion. On their stone plainths are sculptured images. Some idol-houses in College fashion, have portico, large high cupola. In the lower celles are idols carved in the rock. Except in the case of Jain idols in the Urwa valley, Babar never gave orders for the destruction of the temple of other places. As regards the Jain statutes of the Urwa Valley he himself has mentioned, in his Memoirs that the, "naked idols are its defect, I for my part ordered them to be destroyed." It is rather doubtful whether this order was ever carried out. Mrs. Beveridge in a brief note writes that, "they were already in a mutilated conditions and they continue to be so until the Jains repaired them with coloured plaster." (emphasis added)

1559. Thereafter, he has considered an inscription found at Jami Masjid at Sambhal (in the State of U.P.), which is said to have been constructed by demolishing Hari Mandir out of the debris of that temple:

"It is related that at his orders famous Hari Mandir at Sambhal was demolished and a Jami mosque was constructed out of the debris of that temple by his famous general Hindu Beg. An inscription on one of the walls of the mosque reads :

"Translation by author"

The Collector of the buildings of grace and beauty the raiser of the standards of rule and faith, the spreader of the wings of peace and tranquillity, the builder of the buildings of knowledge and deed, Muhammad Babar, a Jam in dignity—May God Almighty have him in His protection, Kindled in India the lamp of power, when a ray of it fell upon Sambhal,
To build this mosque may it be protected from destruction and decay,
He gave orders to his mean slave, who is one of the principal officers,
Mir Hindu Beg, the intelligent and wise who is an example to others in polite manners,*
And when in consequence of the order of the sovereign of the world by guidance of Providence to the mosque was completed."

1560. Its date is first day of the month of Rabi L 933 H. (December 1526 A.D.)

1561. Dr. Radhey Shyam, however, has then doubted

correctness of the contents of the said inscription on pages 454-457:

> "This inscription clearly mentions that at Babar's orders the mosque was built and completed on the first day of the month of Rabi-ul-Awwal 933 H./6th December 1526 by Hindu Beg. But it is quite surprising that Babar who was quite festidious in mentioning about everything that concerned him or even others, has not mentioned about the construction of a mosque by Hindu Beg at Sambhal. Nor did he mention that he gave orders to Hindu Beg to demolish any Hindu temple and construct a mosque over it. There is no reference to any order for the destruction of a Hindu temple and construction of a mosque by Hindu Beg at Sambhal in his Memoirs. Babar visited Sambhal in Sept.-Oct. 1527 and stayed there for three days but in his Memoirs he does not say a word about the fanatical activities of Hindu Beg there. His annoyance at the destruction of the Hindu temple by Hindu Beg at Sambhal is reflected in his silence and his indifference towards the whole affair. During the years 1526-27 his position in Hindustan was so precarious that it was not possible for him to take any drastic action against any general, Hindu Beg being one of them; even though they might have continued to commit gruesome acts in the name of their master. However, it is definite that though Babar's name was associated with the construction of the mosque, as was the prevailing practice, the Hindu temple was not demolished at his orders. Hindu Beg might have demolished the temple on his own account and even did not care to refer this matter to his master.

Nevertheless, the whole affair has aroused controversy. Mr. Carlleyele is of the opinion that the Jami mosque which is still standing amidst the beautiful surrounding was not constructed by Hindu Beg and it is of much earlier period. The district Gazetteer of United Provinces (Moradabad) mentions that "Babar's inscription in the mosque is a great historical forgery of all times." And the account of the temple and the mosque given in it is as follows: 'The erection of Hari Mandir is variously ascribed to Prithviraj, to a Raja named Jagat Singh and one Nar Singh, the grandson of Raja Vikram Sen one of the Dors of Baran. This temple no longer exists and its place is taken by a striking mosque, which forms the conspicuous feature in the landscape for miles around. This building is mainly of stone, which is certainly the material employed for the great central dome, for the outer walls and porch and for the flooring of the broad courtyard." In 1874 Mr. Carlleyele visited and inspected the mosque and was convinced that the dome was of Hindu workmanship, but the bricks were of Musalman workmanship. The whole of the mosque is coated with plaster so that it is impossible to ascertain the material. The wings are divided by a lateral row of pillars into two aisels and each had three arched openings on the courtyard. A flight of stone steps on either side gives access to the roof of the mosque, from which fine view of the town and the surrounding country can be obtained. Mr. Carlleyele came to the conclusion that the conversion of the temple into a mosque was of very recent date*. He based his decision on the fact that there has been recent litigation on the subject of the site between*

the Musalmans and Hindus and appears to have been influenced by the arguments of the latter to the effect that the old inscriptions on the mosque walls were impudent forgeries*. This claim of the Hindus was of course rejected in the civil courts. Mr. Carlleyele could not see the documents going back to the days of Jahangir, now in possession of the guardians of the mosque. General Cunningham has repudiated the suggestion that the inscription were not genuine. The most important of these, states that the mosque was built by Hindu Beg at the orders of Babar in December 1526. It is certainly curious that the temple should have remained till that date, for Sambhal had long been the seat of the Muslim government, and it is even more surprising that a noted inconoclast like Sikandar Lodi should have allowed a building of such sanctity to stand in his temporary capital. . . . . But the mosque at Sambhal might well be older than Babar, to judge from its appearance. The architecture resembles that of Pathan buildings such as great mosque of Badaon and the huge sloping bastions on the west. The whole structure is very plain, severe, and massive, and if the Hindu materials have been employed the ornamentation has been very effectively concealed, since the only traces of Hindu covering visible are two rosettes on the stone slabs of the steps leading from the eastern gateway to the quadrangle. In the middle of the latter is a tank and fountain, filled from a large well outside the gateway. Whether Babar built it or simply repaired the mosque cannot be positively stated, but it is curious that the Ain-i-Akbari has referred to the celebrated temple of Vishnu at Sambhal. An inscription in the south*

wing states that Rustam Khan Deccani repaired the mosque in 1657, while a similar tablet in the north wing was erected by one Sayyid Qutb in 1626. The two inscriptions above the outer and inner arches of the central chamber record the restorations affected by the Musalmans of the town and district about 1845." Thus Carlleyele's report asserts that Jami Masjid of Sambhal is of earlier date (ii) the inscription is fake (iii) that it was constructed much later.

But the arguments given against the construction of the mosque by Hindu Beg are not tenable. Had the mosque been of earlier date there should have been an inscription on it bearing the date of its construction. The grounds on which the inscription which assigns the construction of the mosque to Hindu Beg, has been declared fake, have not been indicated. Then the report itself records that in the mosque at places the use of the debris of a Hindu temple is visible. In addition to it may also be observed that ever since the occupation of Sambhal by the Mughals in December 1526 or a little earlier till the date when it was conferred on Humayun in jagir, the position of the Mughals there had always been very precarious. This is borne out by the fact that after its occupation Ali Yusuf was appointed to hold its charge. After his death Abdullah Kitabdar was sent and thereafter Hindu Beg and both of them returned to Agra after a few days and waited on Babar. Why did they return from there without being summoned to emperor's presence? Babar does not mention the reason which forced them to return from Sambhal. Nor does any other authority. It can however be presumed that the Hindu

population which was so hostile to Hindu Beg did not permit him to stay there any longer and to continue to display the zeal of a fanatic. Nor did Babar like to send him again to Sambhal. Even if it is conceded that the mosque is of the earlier date, it can be presumed that its repair by Hindu Beg was not liked by the Hindu population."

1563. But if we consider what has been writeen in Babarnama by the Babar in straight words without twisting or mincing them we find that like any other brave, couragious, tactful but brutal warrior, Babar also possess all these qualities. It is true that he was truly religious but it means that he was a complete Islamic person and lacked tolerance atleast to the idol worshippers. He had no hitch in destroying idols worshipped by the inhabitants of India at that time and this we find very visibly from the words which are translated by Mrs. Beveridge from Babar's manuscript of "Tuzuk-i-babri" as is evident from page 554-555 as under:

"And I made public the resolution to abstain from wife, which had been hidden in the treasury of my breast. The victorious servants, in accordance with the illustratious order, dashed upon the earth of contempt and destruction the flagons and the cups, and the other utensils in gold and silver, which in their number and their brilliance were like the stars of the firmament. They dashed them in pieces, as, God willing! soon will be dashed the gods of the idolaters,--and they distributed the fragments among the poor and needy." (emphasis added)

1564. In respect to the inhabitants of Hindustan, at page 518 of the aforesaid book it says as under:

> "Most of the inhabitants of Hindustan are pagans; they call a pagan a Hindu. Most Hindus believe in the transmigration of souls. All artisans, wage-earners, and officials are Hindus. In our countries dwellers in the wilds (i.e. nomads) get tribal names."

1565. Like other invaders whenever he defeated the local Rulers, his army did all such acts of loot, general massacre etc. While conquering Sambhal on page 528 the act of the army of Babur is mentioned as under:

> "Malik Qasim cut off the heads of part of his force, took many horses, a few elephants and mass of booty."

1566. After defeating Rana Sanga and his other supporters, at page 576 of the Babarnama by Beveridge it is mentioned that as a trophy of victory an order was given to set up a pillar of pagan heads on the infact-hill (koh-Bacha) between which and his camp the battle had been fought.

www.vadaprativada.com

1567. Similarly, on page 587 of the aforesaid book on 27th September, 1527 AD he mentions:

> "Humayun had left Darwish (-i-ali) and Yusuf-i-ali in Sambal; they crossed one river, fought Qutb Sirwani and a party of rajas, beat them well and killed a mass of men. They sent a few heads and an elephant into Kul while we were there." (emphasis added)

1568. Though in the army of Babur Hindustani soldiers were also included but it appears that he did not repose much confidence therein as is evident from page 547 of the aforesaid book:

> "As little confidence was placed in Hindustani people----------"

1569. As an invader Babar entered the Indian subcontinent, conquered it and did what he could or found necessary to claim victory which nobody can comment atleast today. It is said that all is fair in love and war and laws of war are not set by pen since they are decided in a war field by those who are fighting or by their commanders. Discussion may be held as to whether the manner in which a war took place, fought and the action of the soldiers therein was justified or not but the fact remains that before the matter has been taken in 20th Century by various countries to lay down certain principles to be observed during war and also recognise certain rights of prisoners of war, prior thereto no such principle in general were observed by the Rulers of different countries though at local level some kind of practice with respect to time etc. might have been followed. What had been done several hundreds years back by a king invading a country or between war of two kings is obviously beyond the pale of judicial review of this Court and of any Court functioning in independent India after the promulgation of our Constitution on 26.01.1950. We have not been shown of any authority by any learned counsels that we can examine the legality, correctness or genuinity of an action of a Ruler prior to the enforcement of British enactments in the subcontinent.

1570. However, the attempt by some of the authors to glorify or justify brutal massacre or action of some of the invaders or Rulers even if they might have conquered the subcontinent, by providing justification, explanation etc. is not understandable for the reason that the things which are evident and straight cannot be clothed with a velvet cover and would not provide a shell to give it a different colour. It shall only mislead the public at large and in particular the students of history. In our view, the historical events must be placed straight without any distortion, without any addition of words and without providing any explanation or justification in the words of the author as the same would be nothing but a sheer conjecture and surmise. If we claim that Babar felt happy having seen the mound of human heads and still we tell somebody that he was a kind hearted religious man, had no love for violence it would a blatant lie. This kind of attitude on the part of some of authors whose work has been placed before us for our consideration shows that these authors can go to the extent of glorification of any kind of misdeed which in the present day's civilised society can never appreciate or swallow. If innocent persons are killed either in terrorist activities or naxalite activities, in our view the action of these persons ex facie is inhuman, amounts to henious offence, deserved to be condemned without mincing words so as not to dilute the degree of violence and atrocity committed by them irrespective of the purpose, objective or whatever is behind such activity. Any other view is nothing but a serious contempt to the very mankind and would be a clear disrespect to those innocents who become victim of such incidents. Though the present days activities may not have any comparison with the wars and battles fought hundreds and thousands years back but to find out a positive character in such activities of the the Ruler/Kings under whom the army had done all these kind of brutalities would be a thought of abnormal minds. The lack of respect of Emperor Babar to idols meant for worship has already been demonstrated above and is fortified from what has been mentioned at page 611 of the Book “Baburnama” by Beveridge stating that he did not hesitate in destroying the idols on

www.vadaprativada.com

28.09.1528 at Uruwa (Gwalior) where he found three sites occupied by a solid rock wherein the people had cut out idols statue large and small and he ordered for destruction thereof.

1571. Ex. 82 (Suit-4) (Paper No. 218C1/1-20) contain certain pages from "Memoirs of Baber- Emperor of India" by Lieut. Colonel F.G. Talbot, first published 1974 by Ess Ess Publications, Delhi. This work is mainly based on the English translation of "Tuzuk-I-Babari" by John Leyden and William Erskine, first published in 1826 and it is said that the book being out of print for many years, therefore the Memoirs of Babar are practically now unknown. The author, however, has also taken help from Stanley Lane-Poole's Introduction to Babar. Pages no. I to XV from Chapter "Introduction", 1 to 3, 46 to 49 and 196 to 213 are before us. The attempt on the part of Sri Jilani is that from no part of the book it does appear that Babar ever encouraged destruction of Hindu temple or religious place of other religions. Sri H.S. Jain, on the contrary, submitted that his disliking to Hindus and other religions is writlarge from the fact that he addressed Hindus as 'Pagans' and declared war against Rana Sanga as 'Holy war' which shows his character and extreme religious fervour towards 'Islam'. He referred to the following passage from page 207 of the book (Paper No. 218C1/16) :

> "From the eleventh year of my age till now, I had never spent two festivals of the Ramza in the same place. Last year's festival I had spent in Agra. In order to keep up the usage, on Sunday night the thirtieth, I proceeded to Sikri to keep the feast there. A stone platform was erected on the north-east of the Garden-of-Victory, on which a set of large tents was pitched, and in them I passed the festival.

The night on which we left Agra, Mir Ali departed. He was extremely fond of playing cards, and had asked for some, which I sent him."

1572. The issues need to be decided by this Court does not get any help from the above documents. One thing, however, is clear that Babar came to India with a clear intention to stay and rule. In furtherance therefor, for keeping the morale of his force high and for other reasons, he took all necessary steps as he found expedient. It is evident from page 208 (Paper No. 218C1/17) and page 210 (Paper No. 218C1/18) :

"Hitherto the peoples of India had regarded Baber as a temporary raider who would depart as soon as he had gathered enough spoil; but when they found he had come to stay they began to consider what policy to pursue, and in weariness of incessant warfare began to see the merits of a master.

Three thousand Afghans from the Doab were the first to come over to him, and were rewarded with territories in Oudh, which was still in revolt.

One of the first acts of the Conqueror was to lay out a road from Agra to Kabul, and the distance having been actually measured, a tower twenty-four feet in height was erected at every fourteen miles, while at every sixteen miles a post-house for six horses was built, and an allowance fixed as a provision for post-house keeper, courier, grooms, and the keep of horses. Where the road lay through a rich man's territory he was made to pay all the costs of maintenance." (Page 208)

"The affairs of Hindustan had now been reduced to a certain degree of order. The revenue from land was returned at 4,212,000/-. This was from land alone and by no means represented the total income." (Page 210)

1573. The life of Babar after his conquest was very short inasmuch it is not in dispute that he died on 26th December 1530 AD at Agra. Thereafter in the light of his last wish, he was buried in the garden on the hillside at Kabul.

1574. Ex. 83 (Suit-4) (Paper No. 220C1/1-11) and Ex. 84 (Suit-4) (Paper No. 222C1/1-5) are also the photocopies of certain pages from "Babarnama" translated by Yugjeet Navalpuri Edn. 2002 and nothing has been referred therefrom by the learned Counsels for the parties. We also do not find any thing therefrom which may throw any light for deciding the issues in question.

1576. Sri P.N. Misra, Advocate has vehemently argued that the entire Baburnama does not mention any person in the army or otherwise relating to Babar with the name of Mir Baqi. He says that Baqi was a military decoration in the army of Babar and Mir was a civil honour to the persons of respectability etc. He says that the part of the army sent to Ayodhya was headed with Timur Begh, Baqi Tashkindi etc. but it does not mention any person as Mir Baqi.

1577. Sri P.N. Misra, learned counsel appearing on behalf of defendant no. 20 (Suit-4) supported the above stand and also contended that there is nothing in the said diary maintained by Babar that he ever entered Ayodhya either in March 1528 or in

April 1528. It is common ground that the Babar-Nama misses the text between 2nd April to 18th September 1528 AD. The reason we are not concerned. Sri Jilani raised the above argument in order to buttress his submission that Babar when did not enter Ayodhya himself there was no question of any demolition of a temple by him and construction of mosque. The pleadings of Hindu parties in connected suits to this effect are not correct, is what he tried to persuade us. Sri Misha, however, agree so far as the former part is concerned that there was no occasion for Babar himself to direct for demolition of any temple and construction of mosque since he did not enter Ayodhya but he tried to explain the things otherwise by submitting that this also shows that the disputed building was not constructed in 1528 AD and there is no historical document of contemporary period to substantiate the above claim of defendants no. 6 to 8 and 10 in Suit-1, the plaintiffs of Suit-4 and all muslim defendants in Suit-3 and 5. Sri Mishra also pointed out that Shaikh Bayazid was then governing Awadh/Ayodhya. The Army Commanders of Babar who crossed the river so as to enter Ayodhya were Tardi Beg of Quj Beg, Baba Chuhra, Baqi Shaghawal and Chin Timur. It is pointed out that there is no person named as Mir Baqi in the entire Babur-Nama. Sri Mishra placed before the Court Babur-Nama by Beveridge to show that it mentions Baqi Beg Chaghaniani; Qib Chaq Turk; Baqi Gagiani Afghan; Baqi Hiz; Kwaja Baqi son of Yahiya son of Ehrari who was murdered in 1500 AD; Baqi Beg Taskindi; Baqi Beg Shaghawal; Baqi Beg Mingbashi; Baqi Takhan. Sri Mishra submitted that there is no mention of any Mir Baqi in Babur-Nama. Our attention was also drew to page 684 of Beveridge's Babur-Nama to show that it is

Baqi Tashkindi who came from Awadh (Ayodhya) on 13.06.1529 AD to meet Babar. Page 685 of Babur-Nama shows that Babar sent Baqi Shaghawal on 16.06.1529 while camping near Kalpi to collect information about his enemy, i.e., Biban and Bayazid. On 17.06.1529 AD it is mentioned that one of Baqi Beg's retainers came informing that Baqi had beaten scouts of Biban and Bayazid, killed one of their good men, Mubarak Khan Jalwani and some others, sent in several heads, and one man alive. He says that Baqi Shaghawal has been addressed as Baqi Beg and Baqi Tashkindi who came from Ayodhya has been addressed as Baqi but there is no mention of any of the person addressed as Mir Baqi. It is contended by Sri Mishra, Advocate that the later historians/translators, of their own, identified Baqi Tashkindi as Baqi Shaghawal as well as Mir Baqi though in the entire Babur-Nama, Babar has not addressed anybody or any one as Mir Baqi. He drew our attention to certain persons whose name started with the word Mir, namely, Mir Bujurg Tirmizi; Mir Khurd Bakawal; Mir Mughul son of Abdul Wahab Saghawal; Mir Sang-Tarash; Mir Zadas of Khwast and none of these persons, he submit, can be said to be possibly addressed as Mir Baqi.

1578. In Lieut. Colonel F.G. Talbot's under the title "Memoirs of Baber Emperor of India First of the Great Moghuls" (Supra) on page 90, with respect to the events of the year 1504 AD there is a reference of Baqi Beg and on page 91 for the same period there is reference of Baqi Beg as well as Baqi Chaghiani. The relevant extract whereof are mentioned as under:

> "At this same period, Baki Beg repeatedly, and with much earnestness, urged his sentiments, that to have two

www.vadaprativada.com

sovereigns in one country, and two generals in one army, was an unfailing source of confusion and ruin, and inevitably productive of rebellion, mutiny, and finally of dissolution; as the poet says—

'Ten dervishes may repose on one cloak,
But two sovereigns cannot be contained in the same climate.
The man of God, when he eats half a loaf,
Divides the other half among the poor and needy.
If a king subdues a whole kingdom, nay a climate,
Still, as before, he covets yet another."

At this period, information arrived that Sheibani Khan had taken Andejan. On hearing this news, Khosrou Shah, unable to support himself in Kundez, took the route of Kabul with his whole force. No sooner had he left Kundez, than one of his old and confidential servants occupied that fortress, and declared for Sheibani Khan. Just as I reached the Red River, three or four thousand heads of houses of the Moghul clans, who had been dependent on Khosrou Shah, came and joined me, with their whole families. Here, in order to gratify Baki Beg, I was obliged to discharge Kamber Ali, the Moghul, who has been so often mentioned. He was a thoughtless and rude talker; and Baki Beg could not put up with his manners.

When Khosrou Shah learned that the Moghul tribes had joined me, he felt his own helplessness; and, seeking no remedy left, sent his son-in-law as his envoy, to make professions of submission and allegiance, and to assure me that, if I would enter into terms with him, he would come and submit himself. As Baki Cheghaniani, a man of much weight, though steadily attached to my service, yet was not without a natural bias in favour of his brother, he recommended a compromise to be made, on condition that Khosrou's life should be spared, and his property left entirely to his own disposal. A treaty was accordingly concluded on these terms."

1579. Another name, namely, Baqi Tarkhan is mentioned at page 11 of Talbot's Memoirs of Baber (supra) and that is also with reference to a much earlier period. The extract wherein the above name is mentioned on page 11 is as under:

"Baki Terkhan was another. In the time of Sultan Ali Mirza, he rose to great consequence, his retainers amounting to five or six thousand. He was far from being in a proper state of subjection or obedience to Sultan Ali Mirza. He was very fond of hawking, and is said to have had seven hundred falcons at one time. His manners and habits were such as cannot well be described; he was educated and grew up in the midst of magnificence and state."

1580. Besides, on page 4 it mentions the name of Mir Ghias Taghai; on page 26 it mentions about Mir Shaha and has appreciated about his gallantries; on page 114 there is a reference of Mir Beder and his dancing in the events relating to the year 1506 AD; on page 116 there is reference of Mir Jaan and his singing; on page 174/175 Mir Miran is mentioned and on page 207 Mir Ali is referred but there is no reference of any Mir Baqi. Talbot has not said anything about the Ayodhya visit except that of page 208 where he has referred to Awadh once only in the following manner:

"Thee thousand Afghans from the Doab were the first to come over to him, and were rewarded with territories in Oudh, which was still in revolt."

1581. On behalf of plaintiffs (Suit-4) copies of certain pages of "Mughal Kalin Bharat-Babar (1526-1530) by Syed Athar Abbas Rizvi (Supra) have been filed which are marked as Exhibit 85, Suit-4 (paper No. 223C1 and 224C1/1-62). These photocopies are from the 1960 edition of the book. Pages No. 19-20, 49-50, 232-233, 272-281, 310-313, 318-320, 328-341, 353, 375, 380-387 and 420-421 have been filed. We, however, are referring from 2010 reprint since this book in its entirety is available to the Court. On page 272, the book narrates the incidents of 28.03.1528 and 02.04.1528 which is almost similar to what is contained in Beveridge's Babur-Nama for the said date but since it is a translation by a Muslim writer having authority on the subject which is admitted to the plaintiffs of Suit-4 also, we reproduce the same as under:

1583. On page 659 he has mentioned the words Amir Mir Baqi but that is with reference to his translation of stone inscriptions said to be there on the disputed building with which we have already discussed. In the entire translation of Babur-Nama and other description there is no mention of anyone as Mir Baqi. The aforesaid work also nowhere mention or shows that Babar at any point of time did enter Ayodhya or Awadh after reaching near thereto on 28.03.1528 though it is said that he stayed thereat for about a few days.

Traveller's Account

1584. There are two travellers account which have to be considered at this stage. One that of "William Finch" and another is that of "Father Joseph Tieffenthaler".

1585. William Foster published a book, namely, "Early Travels in India" (1985 First Edition distributed by Munshiram Manoharlal Publishers Pvt. Ltd.) which contains the narratives of seven Englishmen who traveled in northern and western India during the reigns of Akbar and Jahangir. These travelers are Ralph Fitch (1583-91); John Mildenhall (1599-1606); William Hawkins (1608-13); William Finch (1608-11); Nicholas Withington (1612-16); Thomas Coriyat (1612-17) and Edward Terry (1616-19). William Finch came to India in August 1608 and landed at Surat with Capt. Hawkins. With respect to Ayodhya, Finch has written on page 176 of the book as under :

> "To Oude (Ajodhya) from thence are 50 c.; a citie of ancient note, and seate of a Potan king, now much ruined; the castle built foure hundred yeeres agoe. Heere are also the ruines of Ranichand(s) castle and houses, which the Indians acknowled(g)e for the great God, saying that he tooke flesh upon him to see the tamasha of the world. In these ruines remayne certaine Bramenes, who record the names of all such Indians as wash themselves in the river running thereby; which custome, they say, hath continued foure Iackes of yeeres (which is three hundred ninetie foure thousand and five hundred yeeres before the worlds creation). Some two miles on the further side of the river is a cave of his with a narrow entrance, but so spacious and full of turnings within that a man may well loose himself there, if he take not better heed; where it is thought his ashes were buried. Hither resort many from all parts of India, which carry from hence in remembrance certaine graines of rice as blacke as gun-powder, which they say have beene reserved ever since. Out of the ruines of this castle is yet much gold tryed. Here is greate trade, and such abundance of Indian asse-horne that they make hereof bucklers and divers sorts of drinking cups. There are of these hornes, all the Indians affirme, some rare of great price, no jewell comparable, some esteeming them the right unicornes horne."

1586. William Finch who visited Ayodhya between 1608-1611 AD neither found any building of importance of Muslim nor Muslim population nor any activity of Muslims noteworthy in Ayodhya. Had the building in dispute been constructed in 1528 i.e. just about 80 years back, it is quite difficult to understand that would not have been considered to be a place of importance and could have gone unnoticed by Finch. He has specifically referred to Castle of Lord Ram Chandra Ji which, in his understanding, was constructed about 400 years ago. Obviously, it could not be related to the building in dispute as such. Here also what he says that there existed ruins of Ram Chandra's castle and houses which the Indians acknowledge the Great God. He also says that in these ruins certain Brahmins used to record the names of visiting Indians which is a practice still in continuance in various holy places and those Brahmin people are normally called as Panda/Mahraj where one can find the record of hundreds of years back belonging to their predecessors who had earlier visited these holy places.

1587. Sri Jilani sought to argue that write up of William Finch lends no credence for it does not mention very clearly as to which place in Ayodhya he visited. However, Sri Jilani also could not suggest that in Ayodhya there is any place other than that which included the disputed site which may or could be considered to be the fort of King Dashrath or Lord Rama in ancient times. At least this much cannot be disputed that William Finch's travel account did not find mention of any big building known as "Babri Mosque" to have existed in Ayodhya having been constructed just about 80 years ago before his visit. His travel account suggests that the number of Muslim inhabitants in Ayodhya city in earlier 17th Century was negligible.

1588. Next comes another travel account of "Father Joseph Tieffenthaler" who visited India sometime in 1740 and remained here for about 20-25 years. He also visited Ayodhya during his above stay and had written travel account which was written in Latin in the book "DESCRIPTION : HISTORIQUE ET GEOGRAPHIQUE : D E L' I N D E" under the title "TOME 1. NOUVELLE EDITION. Contenant la

Geographic de l'Ind-Uftan, avec. 39,. Planches". English translation of which is "HISTORICAL AND GEOGRAPHICAL DESCRIPTION OF INDIA" VOLUME 1 NEW EDITION containing the Geography of Hindustan, with 39 illustrations". The account of Tieffenthaler was translated in French and was published by M. Jean Bernoulli in 1786, photo copy of the first two pages of the French publication as well as pages no. 252 to 255 was provided to this Court which has been marked as Exhibit No. OOS 5-133 (Paper No. 107 C/96-104) (Register 21 page 273-289).

1589. The aforesaid documents were written in French (except of very few words which were in Lati). Since the English translation supplied by plaintiffs (Suit-5) was seriously disputed, we directed the Government of India to get an authenticated English Translation of the aforementioned pages which have been made available to us and after giving opportunity to the parties to file their objection has been admitted vide order dated 10.03.2010. The relevant part in the aforesaid report, i.e.,pages 253 is reproduced as under:

> *"L'empereur Aurengzebe a fait demolir la fortereffe appelee ramcot, & a eleve au meme lieu un temple mahometan, a triple coupole. D'autres difent qu'il a etc conftruit par Babor. On y voit I 4 colonnes de pierre noire, hautes de 5 empans, qui occupoient l'emplacement de la fortereffe. Douze de ces colonnes portent maintenant les arcades intericures de la Mosquee: deux (de ces I 2) font placees a la porte du cloitre. Les deux autres font partie du tombeau d'un certain Maure. Emperor Aurengzebe got the fortress called Ramcot demolished and got a Muslim temple, with triple domes, constructed at the same place. Others say that is was constructed by 'Babor'. Fourteen black stone pillars of 5 span high, which had existed at the site of the fortress, are seen there. Twelve of these pillars now support the interior arcades of the mosque. Two (of these 12) are placed at the entrance of the cloister. The two others are part of the tomb of some 'Moor'. It is narrated that these pillars, or rather this debris of the pillars skillfully made, were brought from the island of Lanca or Selendip (called Ceylan by the Europeans) by Hanuman, King of Monkeys.

1590. Sri Mishra pointed out that there appears to be an english translation also of the travel record of Tieffenthaler. He refers to the english translation of Tieffenthaler in para 5 of his written argument and gave a brief biodata of father Tieffenthaler in para 6 which read:

"5. Father Josef Tieffenthaler, a Jesuit Missionary and noted geographer on Hindustan visited Ayodhya in 1770 did not find any Inscriptions even that superscription "Allah" mentioned by the Ld. District Judge in 1886. From Josef Tiffenthaler's description it appears that at that time also Hindus were worshipping inside the Ramjanmsthan Temple alleged to be converted into mosque either by Aurangzeb or by Babar. As he was not only a Missionary but an excellent Historian, Geographer

and great linguistic having mastery over several languages including Arabic, Persian and Sanskrit, there was no possibility of overlooking the alleged Inscriptions by him as it would have enabled him to tell the people with certainty the name of the Tyrant Emperor who attempted to convert Sri Ramajanmasthan Temple into Mosque. English translation of a portion of his book “Descriptio Indiae” being description of Oude including the Sri Ramajanmasthan has been published on pages 312 to 317 in the “ Modern Traveller, a Popular Description, Geographical, Historical, and Topographical of the Various Countries of the Globe- India. Vol. III” ; London Edn.1828 published by James Duncan and has been digitalised by Google. Relevant extracts thereof read as follows:

"Its appearance, in 1770, is thus described by Tieffen Thaler: “Avad with Ajudea by the learned Hindoos, is a city of the highest Antiquity.” ..... (Ibid.312)

“The most remarkable place is that which is called Sorgodoari, that is to say, the heavenly temple; because they say, that Ram carried away from thence to heaven all the inhabitants of the city. The deserted town was repeopled and restored to its former condition by Bikaramajit, the famous King of Oojein. There was a temple here on the high bank of the river; but Aurangzebe, ever attentive to the propagation of faith of Mohammed, and holding the heathen in abhorrence, caused it to be demolished, and replaced it with a mosque with minarets, in order to abolish the very memory of Hindoo superstition. Another mosque

has been built by the Moors, to the East of this near the Sorgodoari in an edifice erected by Nabalroy, a former Hindoo governor. But a place more particularly famous is that which is called Sitha Rassoce, a table of Sitha (Seeta), wife of Ram; situated on an eminence to the south of the city. The emperor Aurangzebe demolished the fortress called Ramcote, and erected on the site of Mohammedan temple with a triple dome. According to others, it was erected by Baber. There are to be seen fourteen columns of black stone, five spans in height, occupied the site of the fortress. Twelve of these columns now support the interior arcades of the mosque: the two other form part of the tomb of a certain Moor. They tell us that these columnsms, are rather these remains of skillfully wrought columns, were brought from the Isle of Lanca or Selendip (Ceylon) by Hanuman, King of the Monkeys. On the left is seen a square chest, raised five inches from the ground covered with lime about 5 ells in length by not more than four in breadth. The Hindoos call it Bedi. The cradle; and the reason is, that there formerly stood here the house in which Beshan (Vishnoo) was born in the form of Ram, and were also, they say, is three brothers were born. Afterwards, Aurangzebe or, according to others, Baber caused the place to be destroyed, in order to deprive the heathen of the opportunity of practising there their superstitions. Nevertheless, they still pay superstitious reverence to both these places; namely, to that on which the Natal dwelling Ram stood, by going three > times around it, prostrate on the earth. The two places are surrounded with a low wall adorned with battlements. Not far from this is a place where they dig up grains of black rice changed into little stones, which are affirmed to have been hidden under ground ever since the time of Rama. On the 24th of the month of Tshet (Choitru), a large concourse of people celebrate here the birth-day of Ram, so famous throughout India."…… (Ibid. 313- 314)

6. Josef Tieffenthaler was born at Bozen in the Tyrol, on 27th August, 1710 and died at Lucknow on 5 July, 1785. He entered the Society of Jesus 9 October, 1729, and went in 1740 to the East Indian mission where he occupied various positions, chiefly in the empire of the Great Moghul. After the suppression of the Society he remained in India, and on his death was buried in the mission cemetery at Agra, where his tombstone still stands. He was a fine scholar with an unusual talent for languages; besides his native tongue he understood Latin, Italian, Spanish, French, Hindustani, Arabic, Persian, and Sanskrit. He was the first European who wrote an exact description of Hindustan. A brief list of his works is the best proof of his extraordinary power of work and his varied scholarship. In geography, he wrote a "Descriptio Indiae", that is a circumstantial description of the twenty two provinces of India, of its cities, fortresses, and the most important smaller towns, together with an exact statement of geographical positions, calculated by means of a simple quadrant. He wrote a large book on the courses of the Ganga. In history, he wrote many books. He wrote

on the origin of the Hindus and their religion in Latin, expeditions of Nadir Shah to India in German, the Deeds of the Mughal Emperor Shah Alam in Persian, Incursions of the Afghans and the Conquest of Delhi in French. He wrote a book on contemporary history 1757-64. In linguistics he prepared a Sanskrit-Parsee Lexicon, treatises in Latin on the language of the Parsees, on the proper pronunciation of Latin, etc.. In the area of religion, he wrote 'Brahmanism' and works on Indian polytheism, Indian asceticism, the religion of Parsee Islam and relations of these religions to one another.In the field of the natural sciences he wrote on astronomical observations on the sunspots and zodiacal light, studies on the Hindu astronomy, astrology and cosmology. In addition, he wrote on the descriptions and observations of the flora and fauna of India. Thus he was an intellectual giant and a linguistic wizard and not mere a traveller or a merchant who made casual remarks. His published works along with biographical notes can be lucidly gleaned from Catholic Encyclopedia (1913) and 'Christianty in India' through Wikisource and Wikipedia's website respectively. His writings and contributions also find place in the books -HUONDER, Deutsche Jesuitenmissionäre des 17. und 18. Jahrh. (Freiberg, 1899), 179; NOTI. Jos.Tieffentaller, S. J., A Forgotten Geographer of India (Bombay, 1906); HOSTEN, Jesuit Missionaries in Northern India (Calcutta, 1907).

1591. Sri P.N. Mishra argued that Father Joseph Tieffenthaler himself was a linguist knowing Persian and Arabic very well. Had the inscriptions been two or three, as the case may be, whatever, fixed to the disputed building till the time he visited Ayodhya including the disputed site, he could have himself read the same and would have mentioned categorically that the building in dispute was constructed by Babur. There could not have been any occasion in such a case to mention that there was a demolition by Aurangzeb and construction of mosque by him and thereafter further that some says that it was done by Babur. Sri Mishra suggested that Aurangzeb died in 1707 A.D. and had ruled the most part of the country for about forty-eight years. Whether he himself visited Ayodhya or not is irrelevant for the reason that his Farman (command) for demolition of Hindu temples is referred to in several history books including some of the contemporary Muslim literature written by Muslim authors. He argued that the existing Hindu temple was demolished by Aurangzeb and it is during his regime, the disputed building was constructed but at that time no inscription was installed thereat. These inscriptions did not exist till Father Joseph Tieffenthaler visited Ayodhya including the disputed site between 1740 to 1760-65. He pointed out that the inscriptions on the disputed building came to be noticed for the first time by Dr. Francis Buchanan who was appointed by the Governor General in Council to undergo a survey of the Provinces ruled by the Presidency of Bengal in 1807 AD visited Ayodhya in 1810 AD.

1592. Here it would of some importance to have an idea of biography of Dr. Francis Buchanan. He was borne at Bardowie, Callander Perthshire on 15th February, 1762. His family originated in Spittal and claim the Chiefdom of the name of Buchanan. He studied medicines at the University of Edinburgh. He also studied Botany under John Hope in Edinburgh. After several voyages on merchant navy ship to area, he served in the Bengal Medical Service from 1794 to 1815 AD. From 1803 to 1804 AD he was Surgeon to the Governor General of India, Lord Wellesley in Calcutta. There he organised a Zoo, later known as Calcutta Alipore Zoo. He worked on Indian Fish Species entitled “An account of fishes found in the river Ganges and its branches (1822)” which describes over 100 species not formerly recognised scientifically. He also collected and described very new plants in the region and collected a series of Watercolours of Indian and Nepalese plants and animals, probably painted by Indian artists, which they say that they are now in the library of Linnean Society of London. After Tipu Sultan's defeat in 1799 AD he was asked to survey Southern India resulting in a journey from Madras through the countries of Mysore, Canara and Malabar (1807 AD). From 1807 to 1814 AD under the instructions of the Governor General and Council, Bengal he made a survey of the areas within the jurisdiction of the British East India Company, i.e., the provinces subject to the Presidency of Bengal. He became Superintendent of the Calcutta Botanical Garden in 1814 but due to his ill health return to Britain in 1815 AD. In the same year he inherited his mother's estate and in consequence took her surname of Hamilton, referring himself as “Francis Hamilton, formerly Buchanan” or simply “Francis Hamilton”. However, he is variously referred to by others as “Buchanan Hamilton”, “Francis Hamilton Buchanan” or “Francis Buchanan Hamilton”. He is considered to be Scottish Physician who made significant contribution as a Geographer, Zoologist and Botanist while living in India. He died on 15.06.1829.

1593. Apparently work of Dr. Buchanan could not be given

final shape by him. However, it appears that three journals were published by the government of Bihar and Orissa sometime in 1923 AD and onwards. One was published relating to Patna and Gaya districts sometimes in 1923 AD under the editorship of Mr. Jackson, another was published soon thereafter dealing with the district of Sahabad under the care of Mr. Oldham and third one was published narrating the survey of District Bhagalpur conducted in the cold weather of 1810-11 AD edited by Mr. Oldham.

1594. As already said, in 1807 AD under the orders of Governor General and Council, East India Company Dr. Francis Buchanan was directed to conduct survey of all the provinces subject to the Presidency of Bengal. He was required to collect information upon the general topography of each districts; the condition of the inhabitants, their religious customs, the natural productions of the country, fisheries, forests, mines and quarries; the state of agriculture; the condition of landed property and tenures; the progress made in the arts and manufactures; the operations of commerce, and every particular that can be recorded, as forming an element, in the prosperity or depression of the people. The survey was pursued for seven years and in 1816 AD the results were transmitted to England.

1595. Due to bad health of Dr. Buchanan the matter could not proceed and it appears that the East India Company thereafter took the help of Mr. Robert Montgomery Martin. The Court of Directors permitted Mr. Martin to inspect the manuscripts with a view to selection for publication. It was sometimes in 1836 or 1838 Mr. Martin was required to study the material collected by Dr. Buchanan, prepare a report so as to place before the British public.

1596. This leads us to look into the biography of "Robert Montgomery Martin". Born in Dublin of Protestant Irish Stock in 1801 AD he spent 10 years in medical practice in Shillong, East Africa and New South Wells and working as journalist in Calcutta. There he helped, found and edit "The Bengal Herald" before he return to Britten. He wrote on the colonies and colonial policy. On return he become embroiled in domestic, political and economic debate. In politics he initially supported Repeal of the Act of Union between England and Ireland but later switched to pro-unionism on religious and economic grounds. In economics he was an opponent of popular recardianism. He called for repeal of the 1819 AD currency legislation; vigorously advocated protectionism for British agricultural; concern himself with the principle of taxation. Due to limited personal finances and an interest in policy matters he sought Government patronage for official employment or financial support.

1597. Buchanan made survey in the then territory of District Behar, Shahabad, Bhagulpoor, Goruckpoor, Dinajpoor, Puraniya, Ronggopoor and Assam. Mr. Martin found that the time when the survey was made and when he was required to inspect the manuscripts has made certain matters irrelevant. He, therefore, in his wisdom confined his views to an examination of the geography and physical aspect of the country; to its traditional or recorded history, to the monuments or relics of antiquity; physical and moral conditions of the people amounting (according to the survey estimates) to 1.6 crore and to the resources of the soil which they till; the manufactures which carry on; and to the products and profits of agricultural and commercial industry. In his views the survey depicted a painful picture of human poverty, debasement and wretchedness. The report was submitted by Mr. Martin in February' 1838 which was first published in 1838. It has now been reprinted in 1976 in India by Cosmo Publications, Delhi. Martin's report has been published under the title "Eastern India" and is running in six volumes. It is a matter of importance that Martin has not claimed to have visited North West Provinces of India under East India Company. His entire opinion is based only on the perusal of record sent by Buchanan.

1598. In the Chapter "District Gorukhpoor", certain facts about Ayodhya have been given. District Gorukhpoor (now spelt as "Gorakhpur") at that time situated to the left or north of the river Ghoghra. According to survey map published in Vol-2 and printed between page 290 and 291, book titled as "Eastern India" by Mortin, we find that on the western and southern side, the boundary wall is depicted by the rivers Gharghara/Ghaghara and Saryu; and on the northern and western side, the entire area termed as Domain of Nawab Vazir of Oudh. About river Ghaghra, description is on page 297 as under :

> "Ghaghra. - The accounts of the great river, which passes the ancient city of Ayodhya, that I have received, differ not only very much from the maps of Danville and Rennell, but disagree very much among themselves. The confusion is increased to the most perplexing degree by very different names being not only given to different parts of the same river ; but even the very same portion by different people and tribes is called by different names. Finally the native maps, that I have received of the country; through which the remote branches of this river flow, are more imperfect than those of the country either to the east or west, so that what I have to advance on the subject is liable to great doubt ; but as the information, if true is curious, I think, that until more accurate information is obtained, it should not be neglected.

At the city of Ayodhya this great river among the Hindus is usually called Sarayu (Soorjew, Rennell), and this name is in use in their sacred language; but by the Muhammedans it is called Ghaghra, from the Sangskrita word Gharghara. This name Mr. Gladwin (Ayeen Akbery) wrote sometimes Gehgher, sometimes Goghar; and Major Rennell writes it Gogra. The mountaineers from the east side of this river assure me, that neither name is known on the hills, and that the Sarayu celebrated in their legends is formed by the junction of the Bheri river, which I take to be the Soorjew of Major Rennell, with the Karanali Salasu, or Sanbhadrik, which is no doubt the Gogra of that eminent geographer, as the remarkable fountains emitting flame at Dulubasandra are situated near its bank. The inhabitants of the low country also in general agree with Major Rennell, in calling the eastern branch the Sarayu, and the western the Ghaghra, but the western branch which they mean, is quite different from that on which Dulubasandra is situated, and at any rate its principal branch on the mountains is the Kalinadi. Both these authorities therefore, that is, the mountaineers east from the river, and the people of the low country agree, that a great river coming from the west, and named the Ghaghra, unites with the Sarayu, coming from the east, and that this latter among the Hindus is considered as the principal river, and communicates its name to the united stream while the Muhammedans adopt

the opposite opinion, and continue the name Ghaghra to the river at Ayodhya. A learned and intelligent Brahman, however, Hariballabh of Kuman, from the mountains on the west side of the river, and perfectly acquainted both with the country and the legends, says, that the names Sarayu and Ghaghra are applicable to the same river, through the whole length of its course. That it rises by two petty sources in the Pergunahs of Karuvirpoor and Danapoor, on the hills north form Almorha ; but far removed from the snowy peaks of Emodus. These two torrents uniting at Bagheswar form the Sarayu, which continues to run east, receiving the Panar a small channel producing gold, and the Ramagangga of considerable size. Some way east from the junction of the latter, the Sarayu receives a river much larger than itself, which rises from the perennial snows of Emodus, and is called the Kalinadi. The united stream is the Sarayu, or Gharghara, and passes south-westerly towards the plains, nor does my informant know more of its course ; but, that it passes by Ayodhya to join the Ganges at Dadri, he has learned from legend*.*

The account of the most intelligent boatmen that I could procure at Ayodhya, is as follows. The boats which load timber, can proceed no higher up the Ghaghra than Mundiya ghat, which is in the Bareli district, about 18 coss, or 27 miles, road measure, from Pilibhit. The channel is there very wide, but the stream is not large, and is not above two cubits deep. The territory of Gorkha commences about seven or eight coss from Mundiya, at a large forest named Langsar, from which much timber comes. About twelve coss below Mundiya the Ghaghra receives from the mountains a branch called Neaula, down which much timber comes from the territory subject to Gorkha. Twelve coss lower down, it receives the Kauriya, and immediately below its mouth a third named the Geruya enters. Timber is brought down both these rivers, and on the latter, in the dominions of Gorkha, are two great forest, Amba and Palamu. I suspect, that the Kauriyar and Geruya, and perhaps even the Neaula are only different mouths of the same river, which in the mountains is called Setigangga, or the white river. The Hindus have given the preference to the Sarayu, which is said to be the smallest, nor is the larger branch any where fordable below the mouth of the Bhakosa. The united channel begins to form the boundary between this district and the territories of the Nawab Vazir, just at the city of Ayodhya, where its channel and stream seem fully larger than that of the Ganges at Chunar. For about 18 miles below Ayodhya its width is from one to three miles, as it surrounds two very large islands, the property of the upper of which is disputed by the landholders of the two governments; but the lower is the undisputed property of the Muhammedan prince. About ten miles above where the Ghaghra comes to be the boundary, it sends off a channel merely called the Sota, or branch, which runs parallel to the main river for above six miles, forming for more than four the boundary between the two governments, when it joins the Teri river. I crossed this branch on the 11th of December, where it was about a quarter of a mile wide, and perhaps a fourth of the channel might be covered with water knee deep, but nearly stagnant.

The Teri comes to the boundary of this district, about 14 miles from where it receives the above-mentioned branch of the Ghaghra, and, at the boundary receives from the north-west a marshy channel called the Nawara jhil, which forms the boundary for about four miles. The united channel called Teri is inconsiderable, and winds much, partly along the boundary, and partly on both sides of it, until about four miles from where it receives the branch of the Ghaghra called Sota. It there joins with a similar branch of that river called Bhagala, which for some way serves as the boundary. The united channel is called the Teri." (pages 297-300)

1599. Dealing with historical and topographical part of District Gorakhpur, on page 325 and onwards it says :

"This district forms a considerable part of the territory, which in ancient legend is called Maha Kosala. ..... This very extensive and fertile region has always been considered as the proper patrimony of the family of the sun, as it is called, which for a very long period governed large portions of India and at times produced its paramount lords." (page 325)

1600. The study which was conducted by Martin, the source of his information etc. in writing this chapter and in particular what he has observed on pages 325 to 337 can not be well understood unless we go through details of his entire discussion on the matter and, therefore, it would be necessary to reproduce the following from his book :

"The history of the Hindus has been thrown into such confusion by an attempt to reconcile the actual succession of their princes with a modern system of

astronomy, as most ably explained by Mr. Bentley in the eighth volume of the Asiatic Researches, that the utmost difficulty attends all attempts to reconcile with any thing like reason such ancient accounts as have been preserved in the monstrous and modern legends called the Purans. The difficulties attending this subject may be fully appreciated by examining the different attempts of Sri William Jones in the second volume, of Major Wilford in the fifth volume, and of Mr. Bentley in the eighth volume of the Asiatic Researches, although in the latter the real source of the difficulties seems to have been fully discovered. Still, however, many great difficulties exist, which these authors have not fully explained, and of which the two first do not seem to have been fully aware. Sir William Jones seems, without examination, to have adopted the account given of the Indian dynasties by Radhakanta, in his Puranartha-prakasa, as the doctrine generally received by the Hindus on the subject, and alleges (Asiatic Researches, vol. 2, page 26), that it begins with an absurdity so monstrous as to overthrow the whole system, he then endeavours to turn the whole of the early pedigree into an allegory, denying altogether the existence of many princes, because their names signify light, sky, sun, moon and so forth*; although he might have considered, that such names are sometimes used for men among ourselves, and among the present Hindus are very common. The grand objection to the system of Radhakanta is, however, his having adopted as a maxim, that there was always a supreme king of each of the families of the sun and moon, so that India, according to*

him, was governed like Lacedaemon, by two chiefs of two families possessing equal power ; and that each dynasty contained exactly the same number of generations in the respective periods, into which the history is divided. This is a fable like many others, usually called opinions universally received among the Hindus, which Mr. Bantley (Asiatic Researches, vol. 8, page 244) so justly exposes. But the receiving it, as an universally acknowledged opinion, led Sir William Jones, from the imperfect lists composed by Radhakanta, to doubt whether any such personages as the Indian princes of the families of the sun and moon existed (Asiatic Researches, vol. 2, page 131). Had Sir Willam consulted the various genealogies contained in the different Purans, he would have found, that this opinion, by which he was staggered, rested entirely on the imagination of Radhakanta, or of some person from whom he borrowed it*, and could not be supported by the remains of history in the Purans.* So far as I can learn from Pandits, that I have employed to extract the Hindu genealogies from their books, there was only one paramount king admitted at a time, and in general the succession to this power was totally irregular, not only between the tow great families, but among the branches of the same family, and, as I have mentioned in the account of Shahabad, was as irregular as the succession in Ireland during the government of the families descended of Heber and Heremon. It would even appear, that the succession to the supremacy was not strictly confined to the two families of the sun and moon, as Pandu and his successors were in fact descended of Vayasa ; and also that many intervals occurred, in which no one king possessed paramount authority.

The table given by Major Wilfort is highly valuable ; although, when he says, that it is extracted from the Vishnu Puran, the Bhagawat, and other Puranas, without the least alteration whatever, we are only to understand, that Major Wilford made no alteration on the table, after it was extracted by his assistants from the Hindu records ; for the genealogies contained in the different books, to which he alludes, differ so much from each other, that no one table could be constructed from them without making numerous alterations. This interesting table is however exceedingly valuable in showing how nearly these genealogies, by taking the human age at a just valuation may be reconciled with the real eras pointed out by Mr. Bentley, on astronomical data. It must however be evident, that both systems are liable to some doubt. In the first place there is a very great difficulty in establishing any calculation upon the number of generations contained in the Hindu genealogies, owing to the very great carelessness, with which they have been constructed. Besides numerous transpositions it would seem, that in many parts, what in one Genealogy is detailed as a succession of several generations, is given in another genealogy as a list of brothers, so that by the former process the length of a dynasty is monstrously enlarged. Again in some genealogies a whole dynasty is represented by a single name, which occasions the most absurd anachronisms to be commonly received as canonical, by such as have studied only a part of these genealogies. These

anachronisms are so distressing, that some learned persons have considered as quite vain the attempt of founding any thing like a regular chronology on the Hindu genealogies. I hope however, that this judgement is too harsh, and that a careful perusal of all the remains may lead to something as satisfactory as chronologies of equal antiquity usually admit. So far as I can at present judge, for I have not yet procured any thing like a full copy of the genealogies, the eras, even as curtailed by Major Wilford and Mr. Bentley, would require to be considerably reduced. I consider it necessary to reduce the former from the numerous interpolations of brothers and collaterals in place of sons. The argument of Mr. Bentley goes only to show the manner, in which some former systems of chronology, detailed in the Graha Mangjari, have been deformed by the present system of Varaha Mihira ; but these ancient systems were also mere astronomical fictions, and, although their application to history was not attended with such monstrous difficulties, as the present system, there is nothing in its nature to show, that it is in any degree connected with what actually happened. One great difficulty occurs relative to the deluge, which Mr. Bentley and Major Wilford agree in placing immediately before the government of the family of the Sun in Kosala commenced, so that they consider the government of Swayambhuwa and his successors, kings of Vithora (Betoor Rennell) near Kanpoor, as in the antediluvian age, while Swayambhuwa they call Adam, and Vaiwaswata father of the first king of Kosala, they call Noah. One of the legends, on which this opinion

rests has been given by Sir William Jones (Asiatic Researches, vol.2, page 117); but this, as explained by the Pandits, whom I have consulted, is not reconcilable with the opinion above mentioned; and these Brahmans insist, that no general deluge (Pralaya) has taken place since the time of Swayambhuwa. The mistake consists in supposing, that Satyabrata (Satjavrata) and Vaiwaswata are the same person, and that whatever is related of one, may be attributed to the era of the other. But the Brahmans say, that these two personages, although the same soul in different transmigrations, lived at very remote periods, Satyavrata having been saved in an ark by God, when the deluge happened, while in his subsequent birth as Vaiwaswata, after an interval of many ages, he became a law-giver (Manu or Mamu), and founded the city of Ayodhya. It must be farther observed, that although the legend concerning the escape of Satyabrata or Satyarupa has a strong resemblance to the history of Noah, he is far from being considered by the Hindus as being like Noah the second father of the human race ; but he is said to have died without children, and was born again in the family of the Sun ; while Swayambhuwa was created to people the world after the deluge ; and from him were descended the first kings of India, who governed at Vithora, and who were perhaps natives, although it is possible, that they may have been Assyrians. In place therefore of allowing the family of the Sun to have governed from the time of the deluge, and that the Treta yug or silver age extended to that event, we must, I imagine, allow the golden age or Satya yug, and the government of the descendants of

www.vadaprativada.com

Swayambhuwa to be subsequent to that period, and of course must bring the time, when the kingdom of Kosala was founded, much latter than Major Wilford and Mr. Bentley do. Could we depend on the accuracy of the numbers, as Sir William Jones observes, there is circumstance mentioned by Abul Fazil, that could throw much light on this subject. It would appear that, the Brahmans, whom that person consulted, had not always applied to the history of their princes the astronomical fictions of Varaha Mihira, and they placed the birth of Budha, I presume the grandson of Atri, and son in law of Vaiwaswata first king of Ayodhya, in the year 1366 before the birth of Christ (Asiatic Researches vol. 2.p.125). This entirely coincides with the opinion I have above stated, and places the commencement of the historical silver age, commencing with Budha, in the 1366th year before Christ, in place of the 2204th as given by Mr. Bentley from the astronomical systems of the Graha Mungjari. Such a reduction on the era of the silver age, and foundation of the kingdom of Kosala I am far from thinking absolutely necessary; but on the whole I am inclined to believe, that it approaches near the truth than the systems of Major Wilford or Mr. Bentley, although I must confess, as I have mentioned, that the coincidence of the two systems, founded on principles totally different, affords a strong presumption in favour of the result.

In Hindu legend the appearance of certain persons named Brahmadikas created by God, and commonly called the progenitors of every living thing, forms a remarkable era, but the accounts concerning these personages are totally dissonant, as may be seen in the account of Major Wilford (Asiatic Researches, vol. 5, page 246). One authority makes the three sons of Swayambhuwa to have been the Brahmadikas, placing them thus at the commencement of the golden, and not at the beginning of the silver age; and I have already stated my opinion, that these were the aboriginal inhabitants or earliest conquerors of India, but other authority give another class totally different, and always containing Marichi, Atri, Anggirasa, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kritu, and Vasishtha, while others add Daksha, Bhrigu and Narada. The descendants of these personages governed India both in spirituals and temporals from the commencement of the silver age until about the time when the Greeks made their appearance, and numerous chiefs still claim to be of their family. They are all called Brahmans, either as being created by the God of that name, or perhaps more probably as being persons more intelligent than those who preceded them; far from being all of the sacred order, the greater part of their descendants were princes, statesmen and soldiers, and one in particular is stated to have been a merchant (Vaisya).

We have seen that Swayambhuwa, the founder of the kingdom of Vithora, by the whole of what is called the golden age (Satya yug), preceded Vaiwaswata, the founder of the kingdom of Kosala, and the latter was the great grandson of Marichi, while Budha, who founded the adjacent kingdom of Kuru, and reigned at Pratisthan, opposite to Prayag, about the same time with Vaiwaswata, whose daughter he married, was the grandson of Atri. I look upon these Brahmadikas, therefore, as the leaders

of a colony, which at the end of the golden age, settled in India, and assumed the name of Brahmans , as being farther advanced in the arts than the descendants of Swaymbhuwa, its more early princes. I look upon it also as probable, that these personages came from western Asia, introducing with them the Sangskrita language, generally admitted to be radically the same with the Persian dialect, while the languages spoken among all the rude tribes that inhabit the fastnesses of India, and which are probably remains of its ancient tongue, have no sort of analogy to the languages of the west. In the history of Kasmira, preserved by Abul Fazil, Kasyap, who was the son of Marichi, is said to have introduced the Brahmans (that is, a colony of civilized men) into that country, and the traditions of Behar state, that he there founded a city, of which I was shown some of the remains. These no doubt were of much later date than the time of Kasyap, although he may have been the founder of the city to which they once belonged. One of the sons of Kasyap, named Viwaswa, is supposed to be now the deity presiding over the sun, owing probably to his having introduced from Persia the worship of that luminary, and, from flattery, his descendants were usually called the family of the sun (Suryabangsa). His son Vaiwaswata, who, in a former transmigration, had been Satyabrata (perhaps Noah), founded the kingdom of Kosala, long one of the most powerful in India, and built the city of Kosalapoori, or Ayodhya*.*

If I am right in supposing that Budha was born about 1366 years before Christ, he being the son-in-laws of

Vaiwaswata, it is probable that this prince may have been born about the year 1399, and we may allow him to have been 33 years old when he founded Ayodhya, and the kingdom of Kosala. In the genealogies may be found several different lists of his successors, who are commonly supposed by Pandits to have succeeded each other from father to son, by right of primogeniture, nor did one prince fail to leave his kingdom to his eldest son for many generations (Asiatic Researches, vol. 2, p. 130). This, however, seems to be a mere supposition taken for granted, because in some of the genealogies the names follow each other without any remark, for the direct line failed in Ambarisha, and went to the descendants of his brother; and Bharata usurped the government for 14 years from his elder brother Rama. The genealogies differ so much in the names, number of persons, and order of succession, that without a very careful examination of all that is to be found concerning each person, little reliance can be placed on the particulars, although it is evident, that these genealogies have been taken from some common source; and I have no doubt, that a careful examination would enable the intelligent antiquary to remove many difficulties and contradictions, that now appear.

Far from the princes of Ayodhya having enjoyed an uninterrupted succession of supreme power for numerous ages, and from father to son, very few of them would appear to have been Chhatradharis, or lords paramount of India; and there is even reason to suspect, that the family at different periods was subject to great disasters, and repeatedly lost the dominion of even Kosala. The learned

of Ayodhya informed the Pandit of the Mission, that their city had been three times destroyed, and that on these occasions all the people were carried to heaven with their Rajas Harischandra, Ambarisha, and Rama. The successors of these princes again collected people to occupy the city. The Pandits, whom I have employed, have not been able to trace the passages in which the two first catastrophes are mentioned; but the third is known to every one*. Several traditions, however, that I have heard, confirm the opinion of Harischandra having been expelled from Ayodhya, as he is said to have removed the seat of government to Ellora, while his son Rohitaswa lived at Rautas, and his grandson founded Champa, at Bhagulpoor in Bengal. That Ambarisha also met with some misfortune is probable; as in the Sri Bhagwat, he is not succeeded by his son, and the line is carried on by Sindhudwipa, his brother, while in the Bangsalata, his immediate successor is Ritaparna, who, according to the Sri Bhagwat was the grandson of Sindhudwipa, and* until the time of Ritaparna it is probable that the family did not recover from its misfortune. The severe treatment of his wife Sita, is said to have induced that princes to excite her sons to rebel against their father Rama, and this, more probably than his piety, sent him and his adherents to heaven. Ayodhya, however, was rebuilt by the son Kusha, who left a numerous offspring, that held the until the reign of Vrihadbala. From Vaiwaswata to Rama inclusive, the Sri Bhagwat reckons 55 princes, the Mahabharat reckons 69, and the Bangsalata 78; but the Ramayana of Valmika reckons only 36. This being it is supposed by far the most ancient account, is probably the most correct, and we may suppose it to be free from the interpolations of collateral successions and dynasties introduced by later writers, and to be the actual succession of the kings of Ayodhya; unfortunately Valmiki gives no list of Rama's successors and the Purans, as usual, are filled with numerous discordance*. Vrihadbala, killed by Abhimanaya in the great war at the commencement of the iron age, was one of the most remarkable successors of Rama. According to the Sri Bhagwat, he was the 27th descent from Rama. In the Mahabharat he is the 33rd, and in the Bangsalata he is the 25th. As, owing to similar causes these numbers are probably as much increased as the predecessors of Rama, the number of princes, taking the scale of the Sri Bhagwat reduced by that of Valmiki as a guide, from Rama to Vrihadbala may have been 17, or from the commencement of the silver to the commencement of the iron age, 53 princes, which, they were also generations of 3 to a century, would give a duration of 1766 years. There is no impossibility in admitting such a duration;* but I think, as I have said, that in all probability it must be reduced. Major Wilford (table in 5th Vol. of Asiatic Researches) has found in the Purans. 59 princes from the time of Rama to that of Chandragupta, contemporary nearly with Alexander. Reducing these by the scale of Rama's predecessors, we shall have 31 princes, which added to Rama and his predecessors, will give in all 67 princess, if these commenced their government 1366 years before Christ and ended it 300 years before this event, there will be on an average about

15 ½ years for each prince which can only be understood of reigns, and not of generations. On these grounds, Vaiwaswata being placed in the year before Christ, 1366, Rama will be placed in 775, and Vrihadbala, or the commencement of the historical iron age in the year 512. But, if the antiquary prefers with Major Wilford to consider these 67 as generations, we must double the length of each period; that is, we must say, that Ayodhya was founded 2732 years before Christ, that Rama flourished 1550 years before that event, and that Vrihadbala was killed in the 1024*.*

It must be observed, that in the Purans, little amplification seems to have been made in the family of the moon, as from Budha, one generation after Vaiwaswata to Krishna, contemporary with Vrihadbala, the Sri Bhagwat reckons 55 persons, a difference of only two persons from that which is given by the correction that is required in the list of the family of the sun, by comparing Valmiki with the Sri Bhagwat; and this coincidence, I consider as in a great measure proving, that the nature of the correction which I have adopted is not subject to material error, so far as relates to the number of successions; but it decides nothing as to the points of whether we are to consider these as reigns or as generations.

The people of Ayodhya imagine, that after the death of Vrihadbala, their city was deserted, and continued so until the time of Vikrama of Ujjain, who came in search of the holy city, erected a fort called Ramgar, cut down the forests by which the ruins were covered, and erected 360 temples on the places sanctified

by the extraordinary actions of Rama, of his wife Sita, of his brother Lakshman, and of his General Mahavira. The only foundation probably for such a tradition is, that Vikrama may have erected some temples, and that in the Mahabharata the genealogy of the family it continued no lower than the time of Vrihadbala, as being foreign to the subject of the book; but in the Sri Bhagwat Vrihadbala is succeeded by 29 princes, and in the Bangsalata by 24. These, taken according to the scales of Ramas predecessors in Valmiki and the Sri Bhagwat, would give 18 princes, and this will give us 279, or 558 years, according as we call these successions reigns or generations, brining the existence of the family down to the time nearly of Alexander; but none of the latter princes rose to considerable power, and they were vassals of the Kings of Magadha. Their existence, however, throws a great doubt on the whole story concerning Vikrama.

This Vikrama is usually suppose to have been the personage from which the era called Sambat is derived, and, according to the reckoning used in Kosala, this era commences 57 years before the birth of Christ*, so that the city had been then deserted about 280 years.* How the places remarkable for the actions of the God could be traced after such a long interval, and amidst the forest, seems rather doubtful; and the doubt will be increased, if it supposed that they latter Vikarama, the son in law of the Emperor Bhoja, was the person who constructed the temples at Ayodhya. This I am inclined to think was probably the case, for although Rama was probably worshipped before the time of elder Vikrama, yet his worship as that peculiarly distinguishing a sect of begots, seems to have been first established by Ramanuja about the time of the latter Vikrama, who may from thence be supposed peculiarly eager to discover the traces of the deity of his own sect. Unfortunately if these temples ever existed, not the smallest trace of them remains to enable us to judge of the period when they were built; and the destruction is very generally attributed by the Hindus to the furious zeal of Aurangzebe, to whom also is imputed the overthrow of the temples in Benares and Mathura. What may have been the case in the two latter, I shall not now take upon myself to say, but with respect to Ayodhya the tradition seems very ill founded. The begot by whom the temples were destroyed is said to have erected mosques on the situations of the most remarkable temples; but the mosque at Ayodhya, which by far the most entire, and which has every appearance of being the most modern, is ascertained by an inscription on its walls (of which a copy is given) to have been built by Babur*, five generations before Aurangzebe. This renders the whole story of Vikrama exceedingly doubtful, specially as what are said to be the ruins of his fort, do not in any essential degree differ from those said to have belong to the ancient city, that is consist entirely of irregular heaps of broken bricks, covered with soil, and remarkably productive of tobacco;* and, from its name, Ramgar, I am inclined to suppose that is was a part of the building actually erected by Rama*.*

Although I did not fail to visit the place, and

whatever the Hindus reckon remarkable, I did not choose to take any measurements, so as to draw with any accuracy of plan of the space which the ruins occupy, as the doing so might have given offence to government of the Nawab Vazir, in whose territory, separated from this district only by the river Sarayu, they are situated*.*

I may in a general manner observe, that the heaps of bricks, although much seems to have been carried away by the river, extend a great way, that is, more than a mile in length, and more than half a mile in width; and that although vast quantities of materials have been removed to built the Muhammedan Ayodhya or Fyzabad, yet the ruins in many parts retain a very considerable elevation; nor is there any reason to doubt, that the structure to which they belong, has been very great; when we consider, that it has been ruined for above 2000 years. None of the Hindu buildings at present existing are in the least remarkable either for size or architecture, and they are all not only evidently, but avowedly, quite modern, that is, they have been all erected since the reign of Aurangzebe, or most of them even within the memory of man. Although they are built on what I have no doubt are the ruins of the palace that was occupied by the princes of the family of the sun, their being built on the spots, where the events which they are intended to celebrate, actually happened, would have been extremely doubtful, even had the elder Vikrama built temples on the various places which had been destroyed by Aurangzebe, so that the spots selected by Vikrama might be known by tradition; but the whole of that story being

liable to strong suspicion, we may consider the present appropriation of names to different places as no better founded than the miracles, with several of them are said to commemorate.

It is said that in digging for bricks many images have been discover, but the few which I was able to trace were too much broken to ascertain what they were meant to represent, except one at the convent (Akhara) of Guptar, where Lakshman supposed to have disappeared. This represents a man and women carved on one stone. The latter carries somewhat on her head, and neither has any resemblance to what I have before seen. The only thing except these two figures and the bricks, that could with probability be traced to the ancient city, are some pillars in the mosques built by Babur. These are of black stone, and of an order which I have seen nowhere else, and which will be understood from the accompanying drawing. That they have been taken from a Hindu building, is evident, from the traces of images being observable on some of their bases; although the images have been cut off to satisfy the conscience of the begot. It is possible that these pillars have belonged to a temple built by Vikrama; but I think the existence of such temples doubtful; and, if they did not exist, it is probable that the pillars were taken from the ruins of the palace. They are only 6 feet high. There is a Shiva Lingga called Nageshwar, which is called on by all the pilgrims to witness their faith, when they have performed the usual ceremonies; and this supposed to be the oldest image of the place. As Lakshman the brother of Rama is supposed to have founded one of the orders of Yogis, there is a probability that the great God was a principal object of worship at the court of his brother, and this image may actually have then existed, as from its form, if kept from the weather, it may have lasted from the first origin of things; but it leads to no conclusions, and may be of very modern date. Could we believe what is said of the chief objects of worship now at the place, they would be of singular curiosity. They are images said to the present Rama, Lakshman, and Sita, made by the first personage, and thrown by him into the Sarayu, when he was about to proceed on an expedition to the Indus. In modern times they were divulged to a fortunate merchant by the ordinary course of dreaming. He drew them from the river, and built temple for them, which was destroyed by Aurangzebe, but the images were allowed to escape, and Ahilya, the widow of Holkar, lately built for them a small temple, which is only opened at peculiar times, and only to the faithful. Sitting aside the dream, the escape of the images from Aurangzebe, as they are made of gold, renders the story very problematical. They are about a span high, and were so covered with flowers, and shown in so dark a place, that my people who went to worship could form no opinion either as to their shape or materials*.*

I procured a good many old copper coins, and many were said to be of the Hindu Kings; but on examination, except two, all appear to contain Arabic inscriptions, but in very old characters, and I had similar ones at Agra. One said to have been found in the Sarayu retains a defaced

figure in the human form; and another the figure of a lion. These are probably Hindu coins, but they contain no legend, nor anything to indicate that they belonged to princes of the family of the sun.

The person who finally expelled the family of the sun from Ayodhya, is not stated by tradition, nor, so far as I can learn, in legend, but the learned of this district have heard of the dominion of the Cheros, although this impure tribe has here left no monuments of its power, the place being far removed from the seat of government." (pages 325-337)

1601. What is apparent from the above report of Martin is that he was the first person to tell us about inscriptions on the wall of the disputed building to say that it was built by Babar. We have also noticed that Buchanan must have visited the area between 1807 to 1814, i.e. after about 280 years (if the disputed building was constructed by Babar in 1528 AD). Martin however, has observed that the building appears to be most modern. He also found that locally the people said that after destructing a temple, the Mosque was constructed by Aurangzeb. It is difficult to believe that till 1807 there was no Hindu person capable of reading and writing Persian or Arabic, as the case may be, to find out what was written in the said inscriptions in the Mosque and to tell others that the disputed building was actually constructed by Babar. Buchanan also does not appear to have actually visited the disputed building in order to collect the details as is evident from the next para that he did not do so (collect measurement) for the reason that it might have offended the Government of Nawab Vazir. We may notice hereat that upto 1814 and even thereafter, the entire area of

Avadh was within the sovereignty of Nawab Vazir of Lucknow though for some part of defence etc. Nawab Vazir has entered into a treaty with East India Company in 1801 but only the area which was in the territory of Banaras was within the authority of East India Company and rest of the part, particularly Avadh, was not within the reigning territory of East India Company. The text of the alleged inscriptions, the number of inscriptions etc. are not mentioned in the report. The language, however, shows that there was only one inscription which could be seen by Buchanan. The text of the inscription, as existed when Buchanan visited Ayodhya between 1807 to 1814, has not been placed before us in an authentic manner though plaintiffs (Suit-5) has sought to rely on a text of the inscription which he claims to have collected from British Museum but the same having not been proved in accordance with Evidence Act, we find it difficult to place any reliance thereon. Even if we place reliance thereon, nothing helps us to form an opinion that the building in dispute was actually constructed in 1528 by Mir Baqi under the command of Babar.

Nustalick writing

We are informed by the ancients who were acquainted with the these facts that there was formerly a Prince named Tugli Khan Oimyeed throne. His Wuzeer had a daughter betrothed to Moosa Ashiquan. (Lit. The comforter of Lovers). After some time the Wuzeer departed from this dwelling of mortality to the abode of Eternity. --

The king having sent written orders for the purpose of sezing the property in the Wuzeer's house; at that moment Moosa Ashiqan was struck with the reflection that "This World is nothing". He gave orders that all the people should plunder and carry off whatever money and effects were in his house' – The people did as he directed. As soon as the plundering was over, he enquired whether anything remained. The attendants told him that there remained some grain. He directed them to carry off that also. After this he again made enquiry, if anything was yet left. The servants replied that there was only a piece of coarse canvas or Taut, upon which the horses were wont to eat their gram". "That" said he "will be of use to me". In short having taken and torn althrough the middle and threw it over his shoulders (or neck) he became a Durwish. --

Babur one of the Princes, hearing the report of his becoming a Durwish and the other circumstances, privately presented himself before his Highness. Beholding the wretched condition of Babur, he gave him some sweetmeats to eat and (addressing him) "Thou", said his Highness" shalt be King "Babur arose and having made his Salam,

was departing. His Highness again said "I am annoyed by the Hindoos who are constantly ringing their Bells- When thou becomest King thou shalt build a Musjid at this place.

Sometime afterwards Babur mounting the royal throne was created King; but forgot His Highness's directions. Moosa Ashiqan sending a person from himself reminded him of it. Upon this the Soobadar received His Majoxty's commands--Meer Buqaoola Khan then Soobedar, and he erected this Massjid."

1607. Sri Ravi Shankar, Senior Advocate, Sri P.N.Mishra, Sri Hari Shankar Jain, Sri R.L.Verma, Advocates, learned counsels for Hindu parties sought to refer to the above documents to show that this is the extract of the report and documents of Dr. Buchanan himself and makes it very clear that the building in dispute was constructed much later what is being claimed as it contains the name of Emperor Alamgir (Aurangzab) also. As we have already said, the above documents were not proved by the concerned party and a properly obtained document from British Library, Oriental and India Office Collections has also not been produced. It is therefore difficult for us to place any reliance on the said documents.

1608. The worship of places by Hindus, however, has been noticed in the History, Antiquities, Topography And Statistics of Eastern India (supra) published in 1838. In Vol. I at page 195, Martin has observed:

"It must be observed, that the Hindus very often worship (Puja) without any temple or images. ... There are places, however, that are reckoned more holy than the house..."

1609. The long passage we have quoted from several pages of Martin's Eastern India, Vol. II above has some reason. We have no bias or prejudice against the agents of East India Company or the then British Government, but the manner in which they have dealt with the Indian ancient scriptures and have written down about its culture, religion, society etc. needs some deeper consideration. In fact, the history of India, which is substantially embodied in ancient religious scriptures, has been initially attempted to be penned down by the western writers after advent of East India Company. In 18th and 19th century a mass of work has been undertaken by them which has aroused anxiety and has drawn attention of the people abroad to know more about India. Before making further comments, one thing which is a matter of appreciation, we cannot forget is that whatever was written by western so called intelligentsia mainly in the two centuries as said above, at least has given a foundation or a point of commencement to others, whether in India or outside, to go for further research in the matter and endeavour to place the correct history of this sub-continent before the world at large.

1610. The ancient scriptures in India was basically written in Sanskrit irrespective of the script. It was not a language of the common man. Therefore, virtually substantial section of the sub-continent comprising Hindustan at that time was in dark about the contents, meaning and the message derivable from those scriptures. It was confined to a particular class, i.e., Brahmans and there also a very few were learned having some deeper knowledge of those scriptures, otherwise general class was more satisfied with the superficial working knowledge sufficient for their day to day earning and survival.

1611. The East India Company after its initial few steps towards India, brought such a huge revenue to England that the people thereat were simply stunned and shocked to find out as to how this part of the Country could muster such a huge wealth. Another surprising aspect was that the Indian sub-continent was under the attack/invasion by outsiders for almost a thousand and more years in the past and had continuously been looted by them. Massive wealth continuously was driven off from the Country, yet when the merchant companies of Britishers in the form of East India Company visited India, in the first one and half decade i.e. upto 1613, it showed remarkable earning to their shareholders and public at large in England. This created great anxiety amongst the Britishers to know more about India. It also inspired other European Countries as we have seen that almost simultaneously the merchant ships travelled India through sea routes from the Countries like Portugal, France and England obvious. Trade from India to other Countries, i.e. Africa, Arab, China etc. had been going on since long and time immemorial as a result whereof merchants were able to garner extraordinary wealth by exporting several things like spices, sandalwood etc. from India. Besides fertile land of this Country also help in producing wealth. They also found that amongst the Hindus, age old traditions, religious faith carried down from generations to generations from time immemorial and had not got diluted despite several religious attacks, conversions, etc. All these things, which were really surprising, aroused lot of anxiety amongst the Europeans to know more about this Country.

1612. According to their concept, the oldest culture in the world was Roman and Greek and they knew nothing more than that. It was really difficult for them to believe that a much more advanced and that too more ancient culture could have existed in this part of the world for such a long time and has successfully faced all bad times to survive while the Roman and Greek culture has perished long back. With this idea lots of people from Europe came to India and tried to find out the source of its cultural and religious history from the written work whatever was available. Since, the work was mainly in Sanskrit, thus the written material was also available with the selected Brahmans. Several kinds of manuscripts they possessed which were collected by these western people in one or other way. They tried to find out in their own way the most authenticated and original manuscripts on the subject concerned. A language, a culture which was several thousands and more years old, it is surprising that these western intelligentsia class claim to have learnt and understood and that too achieved mastery. They dealt with the above collected material in their own way. Without making any serious comment on this aspect, suffice to mention that the spirit, the context of real intention of a culture which has developed in several thousand years is improbable, if not impossible, to be understood in such a short time. Even today those who are constantly studying and dealing with those matters, are still undergoing rigorous discussion, research and investigation to understand the correct and real intention behind the particular words, sentences, phrases and verses, as the case may be.

1613. The only thing which we really find commendable is that the zeal of the western intelligentsia to know more about the Indian ancient culture brought out the ancient literature from the confines of the Brahmans and as a result of its translation in English and other languages, the things became accessible to the entire lot so that they may also look into the matter, ponder over it so as to appreciate and understand. In fact this translation attracted the world people to go for more indepth research, discoveries and investigation and that is how the things started and today in 21st century we find several new and startling facts which belie a lot of settled concepts of the western writers of 18th or 19th century.

1614. The casual manner in which the long genealogy covering a very long period was found inconceivable by these writers and has been shortened at their whims and conjectures only because they could not have a complete chain is really startling. It means that if I am unable to tell the chain of my ancestors to five or seven or ten generations, that would mean that I have no such past chain of generation or it can be reduced to the extent of missing part. Non-availability does not mean non existent. No one can accept that merely because somebody could not give the detail of past generations, that would mean that he has no such ancestry. The casual and contemptuous manner in which Dr. Buchanan or Martin in the above work, i.e., Eastern India (supra) have dealt with the things we have quoted give a few example. If some needs a little more can be demonstrated from page 433 and onwards, some part of which we may notice hereunder :

> "The highest science is here reckoned the theology of the Vedas, which is more studied, than would appear from the reports of the Pandit of the survey, who like other Bengalese holds this science, if such it can be called, in great contempt. The doctrines of Sangkara are chiefly followed; and the works most commonly studied are the Vedantasar, composed by a pupil of Awaitananda, a Brahman of the south, who dedicated his life to religion; the Pangchadasi, and the ten Upanishad Bhashyas of

Sangkara. The theologians here insist, that every word, sentence and verse in the Vedas, as they now exist, was formed by Brahma before the earth, and that Vyasa did not alter a syllable; but only arranged the original parts into four books, which previously had been comprehended in one. All mention therefore of events, that have happened since the creation, is supposed to be prophetical. Such, I believe, is the opinion, that very generally prevails among the Brahmans of the south, as well as those here; and, having been communicated to the learned in Europe, was supposed by them to imply, that the books now called the Vedas were the work of a great lawgiver named Brahma, who formed the laws of the Hindu nation, and introduced science. When it was discovered, that these works mentioned many personages, who lived very long after the commencement of the Hindu government, as the power of prophecy could not be received by any one but a Hindu, it was justly concluded, that they were not the works of the lawgiver Brahma, who in fact is a mere creature of imagination; and Mr. Pinkerton is fully justified in calling the Vedas modern forgeries, even had Mr. Colebrooke proved that they were written by Vyasa, and that Vyasa lived 12 centuries before the birth of Christ; for in comparison of the commencement of the Hindu history, before which the Vedas are alleged to have been written, even this distant period of Vyasa is but as yesterday. But that the Vedas, which now exist, were written by Vyasa the son of Parasara, or so early, seems to me completely incompatible with the mention made in them of the success, that had attended the ceremony used at the coronation of

Janmejaya the son of Parikshita, by which he had conquered the world; for Janmejaya was grandson of Abhimanya, who was the great grandson of Vyasa the son of Parasara, and it is altogether impossible, that so remote an ancestor should live to celebrate the conquest of the world by his descendant. But besides this conquest is not likely to have been mentioned by any contemporary author; for in all probability the supreme government of India was not then vested in the spurious offspring of Vyasa, but in the house of Jarasandha. Mr. Colebrooke indeed states, that besides the descendant of Vyasa he has heard from the Brahmans of another Janmejaya son of Parikshita; but on a careful examination of the genealogies, extracted from the Purans by Manogyadatta, I can find no such person; nor can that learned Pandit recollect any such, although there are many Janmejayas, especially the son of Puru, kind of Pratishthan, and the names are so alike, that they may readily have misled the Pandits consulted by Mr. Colebrooke, speaking from recollection. If a Vyasa, therefore, was author of the present Vedas, it was not the son of Parasara, but some person, who probably lived shortly before Sangkara Acharya; and many in fact allege, that the instructor of this great doctor was named Vyasa. If so, the author, or compiler, or perhaps rather corrupter of the Vedas, lived about the ninth or tenth century of the Christian era, in the age emphatically called dark, and to judge from the account given of the Vedas by Mr. Colebrooke, the work is worthy of the age.

It is probable, however, that before this time, there existed a system of science (Veda), extending, according to

a passage quoted by Mr. Colebrooke, not only to the four kinds of sacred knowledge, detailed in the present Vedas, but to grammar and history, the first of which in the passage alluded to is called the chief of the (Vedas) sciences, although the books now called Vedas do not treat on the subject. The historical part, there is reason to think, was valuable; but being irreconcilable with doctrines, which the author wished to establish, was totally new modelled in separate works called the Purans. Although all these go under the name of Vyasa, there is certain grounds to doubt of his having composed the whole, as it seems scarcely possible, that any one man in his senses would attempt to pass on the credulity of mankind a number of books, treating on the same subject in manners totally discordant and contradictory, as happens in these works. Many circumstances mentioned in these Purans, would show the time in which Vyasa actually lived, could any of these works be traced with certainty to him; and I suspect, that not only the historical part (Purana) of the ancient system of science, but that written by Vyasa has been new modelled in the various works now called Purans, all probably very modern, and composed by various persons."

1615. The long observations, we have just made are in the context of the fact that the Buchanan's survey relates to the earliest part of 19th century, i.e., 1807 to 1814. Aurangzeb died in 1707 after having ruled for about 50 years. Therefore, the memory of the people in respect to the incidents which took place during Aurangzeb were just 100 to 150 years old in comparison to that of Babar who was there about more than 275 years back. The people's memory is better reliable in respect to the recent incidents in comparison to ancient one. The belief of the local people about the destruction or construction at the disputed site, in the same way noticed by Tieffenthaler about 50 years back from the period of Buchanan and same thing noticed by Buchanan, in our view, ought to have been given more reliability than simply discarding the same on the basis of an inscription, the possibility whereof was always to be installed at any later point of time. In the absence of any material or anything to show that it was fixed almost 272 years back and the belief of the local people was perverse, we find it difficult to rely only on the observations of Buchanan based on inscriptions, the language whereof was not known to him and there is nothing to show that he could read or understood it.

1616. Sri P.N. Mishra, learned counsel further submitted that had the building in dispute constructed in 1528 and that too at the command of Emperor Babar, it would be inconceivable that Abul Fazal Allami in his work "Ain-e-Akbari" would have failed to notice the same though, if correct, it would have been the work of Akbar's grandfather. He refers to the "Ain-e-Akbari" written by Abul Fazal Allami, translated in English by H. Blochmann edited by Leiut. Colonel D.C. Phillott, first published 1927-1949 reprint 1989 published by Low Price Publications, Delhi. He pointed out that Abul Fazal Allami has referred to "Ayodhya" and its religious importance for Hindus and also certain religious places of Muslims. Therefore, it is improbable that he would have missed or ignored to mention about a grand mosque constructed by grandfather of Emperor Akbar though has mentioned about other places of Ayodhya. This shows that till the date when the aforesaid work was written by Abul Fazal, building in dispute had not came into existence and it is incorrect to suggest that it was constructed in 1528 AD. He explained that this is the reason why we do not find any such mention in the work of Goswami Tulsidas, a great follower of Lord Ram. From Volume 1 of "Ain-e-Akbari", Sri P.N.Mishra placed certain extracts from page 162 and onwards to show that a large number of places of worship were constructed in 983 AH and onwards (see page 179, "Ain-e-Akbari") and that tax levelled on non-Muslims was abolished in 987 AH. About the abolition of tax on non-Muslims, page 198 of "Ain-e-Akbari" Vol.-1 quote as under :

> "In this year the Tamgha (inland tolls) and the Jazya (tax on infidels), which brought in several krors of dam were abolished, and edicts to this effect were sent over the whole empire."

1617. He also referred to pages 201, 202 and 203 to show that the policy of Akbar was not so fanatic and was judicious to Hindus also. Had there been such a construction at the religious place of Hindus, the Akbar would have allowed it to be removed. The various orders and actions as noticed by Allami in "Ain-e-Akbari" Vol.-1 on pages 201 and onwards are as under:

> "His majesty was now [990] convinced that the Millenium of the Islamitio dispensation was drawing near. No obstacle, therefore, remained to promulgating the design which he had planned in secret. The Shaykhs and Ulamas who, on account of their obstinacy and pride, had to be entirely discarded, were gone, and His Majesty was free to disprove the orders and principles of the Islam, and to ruin the faith of the nation by making new and absurd regulations. The first order which was passed was that the coinage should show the era of the Millenum, and that a history of the one thousand years should be written, but commencing from the death of the Prophet. Other extraordinary innovation were devised as political expedients, and such orders were given that one's senses got quite perplexed. Thus the sijda, or prostration, was ordered to be performed as being proper for kings; but instead of sijda, the word zaminbos was used. Wine also was allowed, if used for strengthening the body, as recommended by doctors; no mischief or impropriety was to result from the use of it, and strict punishments were laid down for drunkenness, or gatherings and uproars. ....

"Beef was interdicted, and to touch beef was considered defiling. The reason of this was that, from his youth, His Majesty had been in company with Hindu liberation, and had thus learnt to look upon a cow- which in their opinion is one of the reasons why the world still exists- as something holy. Besides the Emperor was subject to the influence of the numerous Hindu princess of the Harem, who had gained so great ascendancy over him as to make his forswear beef, garlic, onion, and the wearing of a beard, which things His majesty still avoids. He had also introduced, though modified by his peculiar views, Hindu customs and heresies into the court assemblies, and introduces them still, in order to please and win the Hindus and their castes*; he abstained from everything which they think repugnant to their nature, and looked upon shaving the beard as the highest sign of friendship and affection for him. Hence this custom has become very general. Pandering pimps also expressed the opinion that the beard takes its nourishment from the testicles; for no eunnch had a beard; and one could not could exactly see of what merit or importance it was to cultivate a beard.*

Moreover, former ascetics and looked upon carelessness in letting the beard grow as one way of mortifying one's flesh, because such carelessness exposed them to the reproach of the world; and so, at present, the silly lawyers of the Islam looked upon cutting down the beard as reproachful, it was clear that shaving was now a way of mortifying the flesh, and therefore praiseworthy, but not letting the beard grow. (But if any one considers this argument calmly, he will soon detect the fallacy.) Lying, cheating Muftis also quoted an unknown tradition, in which it was stated that 'some Qasis' of Persia had shaved their beards. But the words ka-ma gaf alu ba'z' 'l-quzdt (as some Qasis have done), which occur in this tradition, are based upon a corrupt reading, and should be ka-ma yaf 'a' u ba l-gusat (as some wicked men have done). . .

"The ringing of bells as in use with the Christians, and the showing of the figure of the cross, and . . . . . and other childish anything of theirs; were daily in practice. The words Kufr shay shud, or 'heresy' 'became common', express the Tdrikh (985). Ten or twelve years after the commencement of these doings, matters had gone so far that wretches like Mirza Jani, chief of Tattah, and other apostates, wrote their confessions on paper as follows :- 'I, such a one, son of such a one, have willingly and cheerfully renounced and rejected the Islam in all its phases, whether low or high, as I have witnessed it in my ancestors and have joined the Divine Faith of Shah Akbar, and declare myself willing to sacrifice to him my property and life, my honour and religion'. And these papers- there could be no more effective letters of damnation- were handed over to the Mujtahid (Abu'l Fazl) of the new creed, and were considered a source of confidence or promotion. The

Heavens might have parted as under, and earth might have opened her abyss and the mountains have crumbled to dust!

"In opposition to the Islam, pigs and dogs were no longer looked upon as unclean. A large number of these animals was kept in the Harem, and in the vaults of the castle, and to inspect them daily was considered a religious exercise. The Hindus, who believe in incarnations, said that the boar belonged to the ten forms which God Almighty had once assumed.

"God is indeed Almighty- but not what they say."

"The saying of some wise men that a dong had ten virtues, and that a man, if he possesses one of them, was saint, was also quoted as a proof. Certain courtiers and friends of His Majesty, who were known for their excellence in every department, and proverbial as court poets, used to put dogs on a tablecloth and feed them, whilst other heretical poets. Persians and Hindustanis, followed this example, even taking the tongues of dogs into their own mouths, and then boasting of it.

"Tell the Mir that thou hast, within thy skin, a dog and a carcass.

"A dog runs about in front of the house; don't make him a messmate.

"The ceremonial ablution after emission of semen was no longer considered binding, and people quoted as proof that the essence of man was the sperma genitale, which was the origin of good and bad man. It was absurd that voiding urine and excrements should not require ceremonial ablutions, whilst the emission of so tender a fluid should necessitate ablution; it would be far better, if people would first bathe, and then have connexion.

"Further, it was absurd to prepare a feast in honour

of a dead person; for the corpse was mere matter, and could derive no pleasure from the feast. People should therefore make a grand feast on their birthdays. Such feasts were called Ash i haydt, food of life.

"The flesh of a wild boar and the tiger was also permitted, because the courage which these two animals possess would be transferred to any one who fed on such meat.

"It was also forbidden to marry one's cousins or near relations, because such marriages are destructive of mutual love. Boys were not to marry before the age of 16, nor girls before 14, because the offspring of early marriages was weakly. The wearing of ornaments and silk dresses at the time of prayer was made obligatory.

"The prayers of the Islam, the fast, nay even the pilgrimage, were henceforth forbidden. Some bastards, as the son of Mulla Mubarak, a worthy disciple of Shaykh Abu'l Fazl wrote treatises, in order to revile and ridicule our religious practices, of course with proofs. His Majesty liked such productions, and promoted the authors.*

"The era of the Hijrah was now abolished, and a new era was introduced, of which the first year was the year of the emperor's accession (963). The months had the same names as at the time of the old Persian kings, and as given in the Nisab" 's.sibniyan'. Fourteen festivals also were introduced, corresponding to the feasts of the Zoroastrians; but the feasts of the Musalmans, and their glory were trodden down, the Friday prayer alone being retained because some old, decrepit, silly people used to go to it. The new era was called Tdrikh I llahi, or 'Divine Era'. On copper coins and gold muhrs, the era of the Millennium was used, as indicating that the end of the religion of*

Muhammad, which was to last one thousand years, was drawing near. Reading and learning Arabio was looked upon as a crime; and Muhammadan law, the exegesis of the Quran, and the Tradition, as also those who studied them, were considered bad and deserving of disapproval. Astronomy, philosophy, medicine, mathematics, poetry, history and novels, were cultivated and thought necessary. Even the letters which are peculiar to the Arabic language, as the ث-، ع،ح،ص، ض and ظ- were avoided. Thus for عبداللہ people wrote ابـداللہ Abdullah; and for احـدی Ahadi, اهـد Ahadi etc. All this pleased His Majesty. Two verses from the Shahnama, which Firdawsi gives as part of a story, were frequently quoted at court-

From eating the flesh of camels and lizards
The Arabs have made such progress,
That they now wish to get hold of the kingdom of Persia.
Fie upon Fate! Fie upon Fate!

"Similarly other verses were eagerly seized, if they conveyed a calumny, as the verses from the ....., in which the falling out of the teeth of our prophet is alluded to.

"In the same manner, every doctrine and command of the Islam, whether special or general as the prophetship, the harmony of the Islam with reason, the doctrines of Ru yat, Taklif, and Takwin, the details of the day of resurrection and judgment- all were doubted and ridiculed. And if anyone did object to this mode of arguing, his answer was not accepted. But it is well known how little chance a man has who cite proofs against one who will reject them, especially when his opponent has the power of life and death in his hands; for equality in condition in a sine qud

"Here Bada, on mentions the translations from Sanscrit into Persian, which have been alluded to above, p.110. It is not quite certain whether the translation were made from Sanscrit or from Hindi translations, or from both. Bada, on clearly states that for some translations, as at the Atharban, Hindus were used as interpreters. For other works as the Mahabharat, there may have been Hindi translations or extracts, because Akbar himself (vide p.111, note 2) translated passages to Naqib Khan. Abu'l-Fazl also states that he was assisted by Pandits when writing the fourth book of the A-in. Compare Sir H. Elliott's Index to the Historians of India, p. 259." (Page 209)

"In these days (991) new orders were given. The killing of animals on certain days was forbidden as on Sundays, because this day is sacred to the Sun*; during the first eighteen days of the month of Farwardin; the whole month of Ahan (the month in which His Majesty was born); and* on several other days to please the Hindus*. This order was extended over the whole realm, and capital punishment was inflicted on every one who acted against the command. Many a family was ruined. During the time of those fasts,* His Majesty abstained altogether from meat, as a religious penance, gradually extending the several fasts during a year over six months and even more*, with the view of eventually discontinuing the use of meat altogether." (Page 209-210)*

"In the same year (991) His Majesty built outside the town two places for feeding poor Hindus and Muhammadans, one of them being called Khayrpura and the other Dharmpura. Some of Abu'l-Fazl's people were put in charge of them. They spent His Majesty's money in feeding the poor. As an immense number of Jogis also flocked to this establishment, a third place was built, which got the name of Jogipura." (Page 210)

"His Majesty once ordered that the Sunnis should stand separately from the Shiahs, when the Hindustanis, without exception, went to the Sunni side, and the Persians to the Shiah side." (Page 212)

1618. Vol. 2 "Ain-e-Akbari" Page 181 and onwards deals with "Oudh" and Sri Mishra placed the following part thereof :

"It is situated in the second climate. Its length from the Sarkar of Gorakhpur to Kanauj is 185 kos. Its breadth from the northern mountains to Sidhpur on the frontier of the Subah of Allahabad is 115 kos. To the east is Bihar; to the north, the mountains; to the south, Manikpur, and to the west Kanauj. Its climate is good. Summer and winter are nearly temperate. Its principal streams are the Saru (Sarju), the Ghaghar (Gogra) the Sai and the Godi (Gumti). In the first mentioned, divers aquatic animals and foms of strange appearance show themselves. Agriculture is in a flourishing state, especially rice of the kinds called Sukhdas, Madhkar, and Jhanwan, which for whiteness, delicacy, fragrance and wholesomeness are scarcely to be matched. They sow their rice three months earlier than in other parts of Hindustan. When the drought begins, the Sai and Gogra rise high in flood and before the beginning of the rains, the land is inundated, and as the waters rise, the stalks of rice shoot up and proportionately lengthen: the crop, however, is destroyed if the floods are in full force before the rice is in ear. Flowers, fruits and game are abundant. Wild buffaloes are numerous. When the plains are inundated the animals take to the high ground where the people find sport in hunting them. Some of the animals remain all day in the water and only at night approach the dry ground and breathe in freedom. Awadh (Ajodhya) is one of the largest cities of India*. In is situated in longitude 118°, 0', and latitude 27°, 22'. It ancient times its populous site covered an extent of 148 kos in length and 86 in breadth, and* it is esteemed one of the holiest places of antiquity*.* Around the environs of the city, they sift the earth and gold is obtained. At the distance of one kos from the city, the Gogra, after its junction with the Sai, [Saraju] flows below the fort. Near the city stand two considerable tombs of six and seven yards in length respectively. The vulgar believe them to be the resting places of Seth and the prophet Job, and extraordinary tales are related of them. Some say that at Ratanpur is the tomb of Kabir, the assertor of the unity of God." (Page 181-182)

1620. He also referred to the two footnotes one of which is with respect to Ram and another with respect to Sant Kabir and read as under : .

"The 7th avatar, who in this capital of the solar dynasty founded on the chariot wheel of Brahma, consummated the glories of sixty generations of solar princes and as the incarnate Rama, i.e. the hero of the famous epic that bears his name*." (Page 182)*

"His doctrines were preached between A.D. 1380 and 1420 and attempted the union of Hindu and Muhammadan in the worship of one God whether invoked as Ali or Rama. On his deceased both these sects claimed the body and while they contested it, Kabir suddenly stood in their midst and commanding them to look under the shoud, vanished. A heap of beautiful flowers was there discovered, which, divided among the rival worshippers, were buried or burnt according to their respective rites. Pilgrims from upper India to this day beg a spoonful of rice water from the Kabir Monastery at Puri in Orissa." (Page 182)

1621. He also pointed out to page 184 which gives certain other statistics of Oudh showing that main castes residing therein were "Brahmans" and "Kumbi". Then on page 311 of Vol. 2 Sri Mishra says that Abul Fazal has also taken note of various incarnations of Lord Vishnu in the form of Varahavatara or Boar-Incarnation, Nara-Sinha or Man-Lion Incarnation, Vamana or Dwarj-Incarnation, Parasurama or Incarnation of Ram with axe, then Ramavatara or Ram Incarnation, Krishnavatara or Incarnation as Krishna, Buddhavatara or Buddha Incarnation, Kalkyavatara or Kalki Incarnation. On pages 316-317, Ramavatara has been described as under :

"They relate that Ravana one of Rakshasas two generation in descent from Brahma, had ten heads and twenty hands. He underwent austerities for a period of ten thousand years in the Kailasa mountain and devoted his heads, one after another in this penance in the hope of obtaining the sovereignty of the three worlds. The deity appeared to him and granted his prayer. The gods were afflicted by his rule and as in the former instances, solicited his dethronement which was vouchsafed, and Rama was appointed to accomplish this end. He was accordingly born during the Treta Yuga on the ninth of the light half of the month of Chaitra (March-April) in the city of Ayodhya*, of Kausalya wife of Raja Dasaratha. At the first dawn of intelligence, he acquired much learning and withdrawing from all worldly pursuits, set out journeying through wilds and gave a fresh beauty to his life by visiting holy shrines. He became lord of the earth and slew Ravana. He ruled for eleven thousand years and introduced just laws of administration." (Page 316-317)*

1622. Chapter IX Vol. 2 of "Ain-e-Akbari" deals with sacred places of pilgrimages and it includes a number of rivers as well as several places including Ayodhya as under :

"CHAPTER IX

SACRED PLACES OF PILGRIMAGE

Although profound and enlightened moralists are convinced that true happiness consists in the acquisition of virtue and recognise no other temple of God but a pure heart, nevertheless the physicians of the spiritual order, from their knowledge of the pulsation of human feeling, have bestowed on certain places a reputation for sanctity and thus rousing the slumberers in forgetfulness and instilling in them the enthusiastic desire of seeking God, have made these shrines instruments for their reverencing of the just, and the toils of the pilgrimage a means of facilitating the attainment of their aim.

These holy places are of four degrees.

The first is termed deva or divine and dedicated to Brahma, Vishnu and Mahadeva. The greatest among these

are twenty-eight rivers in the following orders:- [P.177] (1) Ganges, (2) Sarasvati, (3) Jamuna, (4) Narbada, (5) Vipasa, Known as Biah (Hyphasis), (6) Vitasta (Hydaspes or Bidaspes) known as the Bihat, (7) Kausiki, a river near Rhotas in the Panjab, but some place it in the neighborhood of Garhi in the eastern districts (8) Nandavati (9) Chandrabhaga, known as the Chenab, (10) Sarayu (Sarju) known as the Sarau*, (11) Satyavati, (12) Tapi known as Tapti upon the (north) bank of which is Burhanpur. (13) Paravati, (14) Pasavati (15) Gomati (Gumti) near Dvaraka. (16) Gandaki, upon the banks of which is Sultanpur of the Subah of Oudh, (17) Bahuda, (18) Devika (Deva or Gogra). (19) Godavari, called also Banganga. Pattan of the Dekhan is situated on its bank. (20) Tamraparni at the extremity of the Dekhan. Here pearls are found. (21) Charmanvati (22) Varana, near Benares (23) Iravti, known as the Ravi (Hydraotes), Lahor is on its bank. (24) Satadru (the hundred-Channelled), known as the Sutlej. Ludhiana is upon its bank. (25) Bhimarathi, [178] called also the Bhima, in the Dekhan. (26) Parnasona. (27) Vanjara, in the Dekhan, (28) Achamiyya, Some include the Indus, but it is not of the same sanctity.*

Each of these rivers as dedicated to one of these deities, has peculiar characteristics ascribed to it: Some of the places situated on their banks are esteemed holy, as, for example, the village of Soron on the Ganges, to which multitudes flock on the twelfth of the month of Aghan (Nov-Dec). Some regard certain cities as dedicated to the divinities. Among these are Kasi, commonly called Benares. The Adjacent country for five kos around the city is held sacred. Although pilgrimages take place throughout the year, on the Siva-ratri multitudes resort thither from distant parts and it is considered one of the most chosen places in which to die. Final liberation is said to be fourfold: (1) Salokya passing from the degrees of paradise to Kailasa. They say that when a man goes to heaven through good works, he must return to earth, but when after various transmigrations, he attains that region, he returns no more (2) Sarupya (assimilation to the deity); when a man partakes of the divine elementary form, he does nor revisit the earth. (3) Samipya (nearness to the deity) is when a man after breaking the elemental bonds, by the power of good works is admitted into the presence of God's elect, and does not return to earth. (4) Sayuiya (absorption into the deity); after passing through all intermediate stages, he obtains the bliss of true liberation. They have likewise divided the territory of Benares into four kinds. The characteristic of two parts is that when a being dies therein, he attains the fourth degree of Mukti; if he dies in one of the others, he reaches the third degree, and if in the remaining one, the second degree.

Ayodhya, commonly called Awadh. The distance of forty kos to the east, and twenty to the north is regarded as sacred ground. On the ninth of the light half of the month of Chaitra a great religious festival is held*.*

Avantika, Ujjain. All around it for thirty-two kos is accounted holy and a large concourse takes place on the Siva-ratri.

Kanchi (Conjervaram) in the Dekhan. For twenty kos around it is considered sacred. On the eighth of every Hindu month that falls on a Tuesday, there is a great concourse of pilgrims.

www.vadaprativada.com

Mathura is sacred for forty-eight kos around, and even before it became the birthplace of Krishna, was held in veneration. Religious festivals are held on the 23rd of the month of Bhadra (Aug-Sept) and the 15th of Karitika (Oct-Nov).

Duaraka. The country for forty kos in length and twenty in breadth is esteemed holy. On the Dlwalt festival, crowds resort hither.

Maya, known as Haridvra (Hardwar) on the Ganges. It is held sacred for eighteen kos in length. Large numbers of pilgrims assemble on the 10th of Chaitra.

These seven are called the seven (sacred) cities.

Prayaga now called Illahabas. The distance for twenty kos around is venerated. They say that the desires of a man that dies here are gratified in his next birth. They also hold that whoever commits suicide is guilty of a great crime except in this spot where it meets with exceeding reward. Throughout the year it is considered holy, but especially so during the month of Magha (Jan-Fab).

Nagarkot For eight kos round it is venerated. On the eighth of the months of Chaitra and Kartika, many pilgrims assemble.

Kashmir is also accounted of this class and is dedicated to Mahadeva. Many places in it are held in great veneration.

The second are the shrines of the Asuras, which are temples dedicated to the Daitya race. In many things they share the privileges of the devatas; but the latter are more pure, while the others are filled with the principle of tamas (darkness). Their temples are said to be in the lower regions (Patala).

The third are called Arsha, or shrines of the great Rishis, men who by virtue of austerities and good works are in near proximity to the deity. [180] Their shrines are counted by thousands. Amongst them are Nimkhar (Nimishara), Pukhra (Pushkara), Khushab, and Badiri.

The fourth are called Manusha, or appertaining to men who by their power of good works are superior to mankind in general, though they do not obtain the rank of the third degree. Their shrines also are numerous. Among them is Kurkushetra, which for forty kos around is considered holy, and numerous pilgrims resort thither during eclipses of the sun and moon.

Ceremonies are laid down for each pilgrimage and their various meritorious results are declared.

O THOU! That seekest after divine knowledge, learn wisdom of these Hindu legends! Each particle among created atoms is a sublime temple of worship. May the Almighty deliver mankind from the wanderings of a vain imagination troubles over many things." (Page 332-336)

"...taken from the letter which is therewith connected and a name of more than four letters is considered blameworthy. In the fourth month they bring it into the sun before which time it is never carried out of the house. In the fifth month they bore the lobs of the right ear. In the sixth month, if the child be a boy, they place various kinds of food around him, and feed him with that for which he shows a preference. If it be a girl, this is not done till the sixth or seventh month. When it is a year old, or in the third year, they shave his head, but by some this is delayed till the fifth year, by others till the seventh, and by others again till the eighth year, when a festival is held. In the fifth year they send him to school and meet together in rejoicing.

They observe the birthday and annually celebrate it with a feast, and at the close of each year make a knot on a thread of silk. He is invested with the sacred string at the appointed time. At each of these occasions they perform certain works and go through some extraordinary ceremonies." (Page 349)

1623. On page 349, the important religious festivals of Hindus are also discussed which include Rama-Navami on page 350. Sri Mishra says, while acknowledging Ayodhya at length on various aspects of the matter, Abul Fazal having not noticed any building said to have been constructed by or under the command of Babar in 1528 AD proves that the same was not actually built in that manner and did not exist till then also.

1624. Sri Mishra, when asked that the building in dispute ex facie appears to be a Mosque, then how it came into existence if not constructed in 1528, submitted that it was actually attacked and damaged at the time of Aurangzeb and attempt was made to give it shape of a Mosque and inscriptions on the said building were fixed by someone much thereafter. He placed before us "Indian Texts Series-Storia Do Mogor or Mogul India 1653-1708" by Niccolao Manucci translated in English by Milliam Irvine Vol. III pages 244/245 where it deals with the Hindu holy places and reference to destruction of chief temple of Ayodhya by Aurangzeb and reads as under :

"In this realm of India, although King Aurangzeb destroyed numerous temples, there does not thereby fail to be many left at different places, both in his empire and in the territories subject to the tributary princes. All of them

are thronged with worshippers; even those that are destroyed are still venerated by the Hindus and visited for the offering of alms. The Hindus assert that in the world there are seven principal places where it is possible to obtain what one has imagined and desired-that is to say, in cases where a person wishes to become emperor or king, wealthy, powerful, or to attain other positions of the same order. Now they ordinarily hold that on dying a person's soul is transferred according to the deeds he has done; if he has done good, his soul will pass into some one of consideration or of wealth, and should the deceased have done evil, his soul will be sent into some animal- an elephant, camel, buffalo, cow, tiger, wolf, a bird, a snake, a fish, et cetera. Now, some great sinner, deserving of hell, may be anxious for delivery therefrom, and want to become an emperor or great noble, or whatever he fancies; it can be done by sacrificing his life by drowning himself in a river or in the tanks found near temples at the foot of the gates.

The principal temples referred to above are these- that is to say:

1. The first, Maya, to be found among the mountains of the north.
2. Matura (Mathura), which is near the city of Agrah.
3. Caxis (Kashi), which is on the Ganges, in the city of Benaras.
4. Canchis (Kanji), in the Karnatik
5. Evantica, in the mountains of Tartary.
6. Puris (Puri), on the borders of Cochin China.
7. Darahotis (? Gangotri), at the source of the Ganges, as they suppose it to be [+5].

Bands of interested persons make these lengthy pilgrimages, enduring a thousand hardships on the way, only at the end to drown by their own choice, without considering where they are about to take up their abode.

The chief temples destroyed by King Aurangzeb within his kingdom were the following:*

2. Matura (Mathura),

3. Caxis (Kashi)'

and an infinite number of others; but, not to tire the reader, I do not append their names." (Page 244-245)

1625. Niccolo Manucci was a traveller, who came to India during the reign of Aurangzeb and had written his account of travel in the aforesaid book.

www.vadaprativada.com

1626. Sri Mishra pointed out that the reign of Emperor Aurangzeb was a total Islamic reign and all actions to cause damage to Hindu religion and religious places were taken by him. He not only revived Jizya which was a tax payable by non-Islamic people but also caused damage to Hindu religious places at a large scale. Sri Mishra refers to "India in the 17th Century (Social, Economic and Politician) Memoirs of Francois Martin (1670-1694)" Volume II, Part I (1681/1688) translated by Lotika Varadarajan first published 1984 by Manohar Publications, New Delhi, page 880 where it discusses about the rate of 'Jizya' increased by the Emperor in October 1683 AD and says :

"Towards the beginning of October, the principal bania merchants assembled to discuss the orders to increase the rate of jizya which had been sent by the Emperor to the Governor. I have already spoken about this tax which is similar to the carage paid by Christians in Turkey. During the remaining part of the month, several more meetings took place but these met with small success. If the entire amount due from this tax had been properly collected and paid into the imperial exchequer, the amount obtained by the Emperor under this head alone would have been far larger than the entire revenue accruing to him from the many kingdoms which made up his vast empire." (Page 880)

1627. About the destruction of religious places, Sri Mishra referred to Page 914 which says :

"When it had come to the knowledge of the Emperor that many rich Gujarati banias had built temples within their homes to perform their devotions, in his religious fervour, he ordered that the Governors of the province should carry out an inspection. All the temples in the cities and villages had been destroyed. Now these inner sanctums were also to be laid low and the least sign of the practice of Hindu religion was to be wiped out. The members of this community, particularly at Hyderabad and Cambay where they were to be found in large numbers, were greatly alarmed at these instructions. It was said that the banias managed to circumvent the Mughal orders by giving presents to the Governors who thereupon took their inspection tours very lightly." (Page 914)

1628. Volume II, Part II or "India in the 17th Century (Social, Economic and Politician) Memoirs of Francois Martin (1670-1694)" first published in 1985 page 1249 was

relied by Sri Mishra which reads as under :

> "Following the Emperor's orders with regard to the destruction of temples, the Moors brought one down in the Carnatic. This incited the Hindus to revolt in an attempt to prevent this action. The two communities clashed openly and both sides sustained loss of life. As a result, the Moors were forced to postpone their demolition activities to a later date."

1629. He also referred to footnote 31 on page 1249 which says :

> "31. According to French archival sources, B.N., N.A., 6213 (16), the Emperor had ordered all Hindu temples to be destroyed including that of Jagannath at Puri. This had brought about a Hindu rebellion as a result of which the edict was not enforced."

1630. He also referred to "Mughal Documents (A.D. 1628-59) Volume II by S.A.I. Tirmizi (first published 1995 by Manohar Publishers and Distributors, New Delhi). On page 142 at sl. no. 426 there is a reference of a Farman of Aurangzeb of 15th March 1659 AD, which reads as under :

> "426. Manshur of Aurangzeb addressed to Abul Hasan states that it has been brought to the notice of the royal court that the Brahmins of Banaras are being removed from their ancient offices and that Hindus of Banaras and its neighbourhood are harassed. In accordance with the sharia the ancient temples, are not to be destroyed and new ones are not to be built and since our innate kindness of disposition and natural benevolence, the whole of our untiring energy and our upright intentions are engaged in promoting the public welfare and bettering the condition of all classes, high and low, it is ordered that no person should interfere with or disturb the Brahmins and other Hindus so that they may, as before, remain in their ancient occupation and engage themselves with peace of mind in offering prayers for the continuance of our God-gifted empire so that it may last forever (JPHS, V(1)., pp. 247-48).

1631. He contended that initially the existing policy of Akbar, Jahangir and Shahjahan was followed by Aurangzeb, i.e. neither to destroy existing Hindu religious places nor to allow them to construct any new religious building but later on he took a different stand and pursuant thereto demolished a large number of Hindu temples.

1632. The total change of heart in reversing the earlier policy is said to have taken place almost after 10 years, i.e., with the start of 11th year of his reign in April 1669. It has been discussed in detail by Stanley Lane Poole in his book "Aurangzib-and the decay of the Mughal Empire", first published in 1890, reproduced in 1995, published by Low Price Publications, Delhi on page 135-137. The relevant extract is as under:

"It seems to have been 1669 that the storm began to gather. In April of that year Aurangzib was informed that the Brahmans of Banares and other Hindu centers were in the habit of teaching their 'wicked sciences,' not only to their own people but to Muslims. This was more than the orthodox Emperor could tolerate; but the severity of his measures shows that he had been only waiting for a pretext to come down like a thunderbolt upon the unfortunate

'heathen.' 'The Director of the Faith,' we are told, 'issued orders to all the governors of provinces to destroy with a willing hand the schools and temples of the infidels; and they were strictly enjoined to put an entire stop to the teaching and practising of idolatrous forms of worship.' It is not for a moment to be supposed that these orders were literally carried out. Even the English Government would not dare to risk such an experiment in India. All that was done was to make a few signal examples, and thus to warn the Brahmans from attempting to make proselytes among the True Believers. With this object the temple of Vishnu at Benares was destroyed and a splendid shrine at Mathura was razed to the ground, to make room for a magnificent mosque. The idols found in the temples were brought to Agra and buried under the steps of the mosque, so that good Muslims might have the satisfaction of treading them under foot." (para 135-136)

"It is very difficult to trace the cause and effect of Aurangzib's successive steps in his reactionary policy towards the Hindus. In the eleventh year of his reign he suddenly put a stop to the system of official chronicles, which had been minutely recorded by historiographers royal since the time of Akbar. Now, it was strictly forbidden to write any chronicles at all, and those that have come down to us were recorded in secret, or merely treasured in the memory, and have all the confusion and fragmentary character of haphazard reminiscences. There are probably several links missing in the chain of events which connected the first destruction of Hindu temples in 1669 with the imposition of the hated jizya or poll-tax on

unbelievers, a few years later. The revolt of the Satnamis is one of the few links that have been preserved by the secret chroniclers, who were naturally disinclined to soil their pens with the doings of 'unclean infidels.' Another event is the rash interference of the Emperor in the matter of Jaswant Singh's children." (pares 137-138)

1633. Sri P.N.Mishra also tried to take help from the judgment of the District Judge Fyzabad in Suit 1885 since he himself had visited the disputed premises on 18th March, 1886. In para 7 and 8 of his written argument Sri Mishra formulated his argument based on the above as under:

7. The District Judge of Faizabad who visited Sri Ramjanmasthan/alleged Baburi Masjid on 18th March 1886 did not find any of the Inscriptions published by A. Fuhrer in 1989 and by A. S. Beveridge in 1921. Said Ld. Judge in his Judgment has recorded that the entrance to the enclosure was under a gateway which bore the superscription "Allah" immediately on the left as the platform or Chabootra of masonary occupied by the Hindus. His said finding is recorded in Judgment and Order dated 18th March 1889 passed in Civil Appeal No.27 of 1886 Mahanta Raghubardass, Mahant Janam Asthan City Oudh VS. Secretary of State of India, Court of Council and Mohd. Asghar by the said Judicial Officer Mr. F.E.A. Chamier, District Judge Faizabad which constitute pages 87 to 91 of the volume 10 of the Documents of O.O.S. No. 4 of 1989 being Volume I of the plaintiffs' documents. Relevant portion from page 89 of the said Volume being an extract of the said judgment reads as follows:

"I visited the land in dispute yesterday, in the presence of all parties.

I found that the Masjid built by the Emperor Babar stands on the border of the town Ajudhia-that is to say to the west and south it is clean of inhabitations. It is most unfortunate that a Masjid should have been built on land specially held sacred by the Hindus, but as the event occurred 356 years ago it is too late now to remedy the grievance all that can be done is to maintain the parties in status quo. In such a case as the present one any (Sic) would cause more harm and damage (Sic) of order than benefit. The entrance to the enclosure is under a gateway which bears the superscription "Allah" immediately on the left as the platform or Chabootra of masonary occupied by the Hindus. On this is a small superstructure of wood in the form of a tent. This "Chabootra" is said to indicate the birthplace of Ram Chan deer. Infront of the gateway in the entry to masonary Platform of the Musjid. A wall pierced (illegible) and therewith railings divides the platform of the Musjid from the enclosure in which stands the "Chabootra"."

Be it mentioned herein that said judgment is Judgment per Incuriam as it has been passed in ignoratum of law. Prior to annexation of Oudh to British Rule the Law of Shar was law in force which law neither had rule of Limitation nor did recognise adverse possession. Apart from this Hindu law in respect of Debutter property also did not recognise adverse possession. This principle of Law had already been laid down by the Indian Courts of

Record as well as Privy Council, London as such said judgment passed in ignoratum of those judicial pronouncement has no force of law. Moreover in the said Suit the Disputed Structure was not subject matter of that suit nor was declaration of title in respect thereof prayed for.

8. In the aforesaid judgment recording of the Ld. Judge the superscription "Allah" leaves no doubt that he had inspected the disputed premises and Structure very minutely and it is needless to say that if there would have been alleged Inscriptions that would not have gone unnoticed by him. Be it mentioned herein that according to Hindus' sacred book "Allopanisad" "Allah" is one of the several names of the almighty. Be it mentioned herein that the "Allopanishad" has been reproduced by the founder of Arya Samaj Maharshi Dayanand Saraswati in his book "Satyarthaprakash" 2nd revised edition published in Vikram Samvat 1939 i.e. 1882 A.D.. According to him it was written during the reign of Emperor Akbar. The text of "Allopanishad" as published on pages 556-67 of 'Satyarthaprakash' in "Dayanand-Granthmala published by Srimati Paropakarini Sabha, Ajmer 1983 Edn. reads as follows:

1634. Be that as it may, the above discussion and the material considered by us make it very clear that the foundation of the entire history regarding construction of disputed building by Babar in 1528 AD is based upon the inscriptions said to be fixed thereon. The original text of the said inscriptions is not available at all. At least it has not been produced before us from any authentic source. The text of the said inscriptions published in different books and historical work, we have discussed, shows several crucial discrepancies therein. The historians, it appears being aware that Babar came to India in 1526 AD and visited Ayodhya in 1528 AD formed opinion in majority and read the text of the inscriptions that the date of construction of the building therein is 1528 AD i.e. 935 AH. However, in the earliest Journal of ASI, the text is not only different but the period mentioned is also different i.e. 930 AH.

1635. Interestingly there are some work written in Urdu in the 19th Century by some Muslim writers. Therein mostly they have mentioned the period of construction of the disputed building as 923 Hijri and further that it was constructed by the Babar at the instance of Syed Musa Ashikan. One of such document is titled as "Ameer Ali Shaheed Aur Marka Hanuman Gari" by Shekh Mohammad Ajmat Ali Alvi

Kakoravi (written in 1886) revised by Dr. Zaki Kakoravi published in 1987 and on page 9/10 it says:

1636. Thus the very basis of forming the view that the disputed building was constructed in 1528 AD by Babar or at his command by his agents is founded solely on inscriptions whose authenticity itself is not creditworthy.

1637. Unlike the historians who without any further probe, proceeded on the observations of Dr. Buchanan as published by Martin in 1838, we do not find it possible to record a finding that the building in dispute was constructed in 1528 AD by Babar or any of his agents.

1638. If we summarize our reasons, we find firstly that Babar in his chronological detail (to the extent it is available) in "Baburnama" has mentioned various buildings which he got constructed mainly at Agra where he stayed and made his

headquarter and in the nearby areas or else. Obviously, if some construction or alteration in an existing building was made by any of his army officer or non-army officer who accompanied him from Farghana, there could not have any occasion for him to mention about the same in a work in which he recorded his daily affairs. His period of rule in the then Hindustan is very short, i.e., slightly more than four years. He being the founder of the dynasty, later known as Mughal dynasty, obviously was more interested in expansion of his reigning territory and not to indulge in avoidable confrontation which strategically may have added to his agony. A careful study of Baburnama show that wherever possible he made friends among non-muslims also so as to lessen rebels. Of course this was subject to the acceptance of those non-muslim Rulers about his supremacy. Besides the fact that no army commander of the name of "Mir Baqi", as such is mentioned in Baburnama, we find that Baqi Shaghawal who was made incharge of Oudh (Ayodhya) territory did not have any rest at Ayodhya. From 28.03.1528 and onwards, for a sufficiently long time, he remained on his toes chasing Bayazid and others. He was granted leave in June 1529 AD by Babar. It is the admitted case of the muslim parties that in a legendary work of Goswami Tulsidas on Lord Rama, i.e. 'Ramcharitmanas' which came into existence in a very short time after Babar, there is no mention of construction of a huge mosque at Ayodhya by Babar or anyone else. We are using the term "huge mosque" in the context of the place where the disputed building was constructed.

1639. Then in two traveller's account of Finch and Tieffenthaler also, this conspicuous miss cannot be overlooked. The first reference of Ayodhya and in particular the fort of Lord

Rama at Ayodhya in the travellers account just after about 75 years and more, i.e., of "William Finch" who visited India between 1608 to 1611 AD. It is nobody's case that besides the area which is known today as Mauja Ramkot there was any other place where it was ever believed or seen by anybody the alleged house or fort of Lord Rama. On the contrary, what has been pointed out that in the first settlement of 1861 the site in dispute was part of plot no. 161 which had a total area of more than 9 Bighas. William Finch did not mention about any recently constructed Islamic building or mosque in this area and instead has referred to a house or fort which according to him was constructed about 400 years ago and belief of Hindus as birthplace of Ramchandar (Lord Rama). The period he mentions may be approximate, i.e., may or may not be very accurate but it carries the period of the then existing building to 11th or 12th century when Ayodhya was under the rule of Gaharwals. He also mentions about Pooja and worship being performed by Hindus (Brahmans) in the said area but there is no mention about the existence of muslims or their religious place of a recent construction in the said area. It is difficult to believe if such a huge construction was existing at that time, the same would have gone unnoticed by a person who has given so much details of the area he visited at Ayodhya.

1640. Then comes the next available version of Nicolo Minouchi who travelled India during the reign of Aurangzeb. On the one hand it cannot be disputed that he has mentioned about demolition of a temple at Ayodhya during the aforesaid period but further particulars have not been given. It gives an occasion to the learned counsels for the plaintiff (Suit-4) to contend that the travellers account of Minouchi does not throw

any light that the alleged destruction of temple mentioned in his travellers account relates to the alleged Janambhumi temple and none else. This argument is unexceptionable since Minouchi's travellers account does not pin point any building or the area but then there is some further material.

1641. Father Joseph Tieffenthaler, an Austrian traveller visited India and remained here for more than two decades. In fact he stayed in India till his death. His credentials which have been made available to us through an internet printout of Wikipedia site shows that he was a linguist and well conversant with the languages like Persian and Sanskrit. It is this account which for the first time mentions about the alleged temple at the birthplace as well as its demolition by a muslim Ruler, in particular Mughal Ruler and construction of a mosque thereat. Tieffenthaler, however, says when he visited, the people in locality said that the demolition was caused by Emperor Aurangzeb though some people said that it was Babar. Had the inscriptions alleged to be fixed on the building in dispute at the time of its construction, would have existed thereat when Tieffenthaler visited the site, it is difficult to conceive that he could have written in his work whether it was Aurangzeb or Babar since he himself could have noticed the correct facts by reading the inscriptions for which he did not require any external help. Tieffenthaler's work which though written like a travellers guide between 1740-1760 and onwards but could not be seen by subsequent historians or those who prepared historical data perhaps for the reason that it remained unpublished in English. It might have been published in the Latin itself, the language in which Tieffenthaler wrote his diary but the publically known work is the "French translation" which is said to have been published in 1786. To us it appears that the building in dispute by the time Tieffenthaler came to Ayodhya had already been constructed but the inscriptions were not there. Besides, even at that time, inside the building in dispute, the Hindu religious structure in the form of a 'Vedi' existed which was being worshipped by Hindus. Here also it is remarkable that Tieffenthaler though has noticed worship by Hindus but is conspicuously silent about worship by muslims in the disputed building.

1642. We tried to enquire from learned counsel for the plaintiffs (Suit-4) as to how it could happen that a mosque was constructed but inside the premises a Hindu religious structure was allowed to remain as to be worshipped by Hindu public. In the absence of any source material on this aspect no reply obviously was forthcoming but to us it appears that though the building in dispute was constructed but immediately thereafter or after sometime it stood deserted by muslims. Hindus made their entry and raised a religious structure in order to continue with the sanctity of their belief that the place in dispute was the birthplace of Lord Rama and that is how their worship continued. It is inconceivable that at the time when the disputed building was constructed the people who did so would have allowed a Hindu religious structure inside the premises particularly when the building which they constructed was an Islamic religious place, i.e., mosque. We also find that Islamic religious scriptures clearly prohibit same place fit for worship by the persons of different faith and religion. We make it clear our use of the word mosque herein these issues be not treated as our finding since it being a separate issue shall be dealt with later.

1643. Though it amounts to delving into some kind of conjectures but since here is a case which necessarily goes in history and particularly when for sufficiently long time the things are in dark, in the absence of anything contrary, we do not find it impermissible to think in this manner. It would come within the domain of preponderance of probability.

1644. The position appears to be that when the building in dispute was constructed, obviously the Islamic people, were in power who constructed the building in dispute. They did not allow or could not have allowed any Hindu religious structure to exist within the premises of the disputed building. If it was done after demolition of a Hindu religious structure, it is inconceivable while demolishing such structure, some part thereof would have been allowed to remain so as to be worshipped continuously by Hindu people after entering the premises of the mosque. Thus initially when it was constructed no such structure could have existed but as soon as the local Hindu people got opportunity, they created or made a symbolic structure to continue with the worship according to their belief with regard to the birthplace of Lord Rama and that is how structure in the form of Vedi was there and noticed by Tieffenthaler in his work which relates to the period of 1740-1760 AD.

1645. The building in dispute, therefore, not constructed in 1528 AD or during the reign of Babar, the preponderance of probability lie in favour of the period when Aurangzeb was the Emperor since it is again nobody's case that such an action could have been taken during the reign of Humaun, Akbar or Shahjahan. Without entering into the wild goose chase on this aspect suffice it to say that the building in dispute must have come into existence before 1707 AD when the reign of Aurangzeb ended on his death. Tieffenthaler's visit to Ayodhya is 35-55 years thereafter and this gave sufficient time in which the things as we have indicated above could have happened. The inscription on the disputed building either inside or outside was not there otherwise there was no occasion that the same could not have been noticed and seen by Tieffenthaler who himself was quite conversant with the language in which these inscriptions were written and found subsequently.

1646. Then comes the person who for the first time noticed the above inscription, i.e., Dr. F. C. Buchanan. He was a medicine man and, as his autobiography says, worked as personal physician of Lord Wellesley at the end of 18th century. He was entrusted with the work of survey of the territory within the hold of East India Company in North-West provinces at the commencement of 19th century. Obviously this was not his field of expertise and, therefore, it can well be conceived that he actually functioned as an overall Observer or Supervisor but in effect must have been assisted/attended by a team of the persons knowing the work of survey and also quite conversant with the local tradition, languages etc. The survey continued for about 7 years, i.e., 1807-1814. The survey report was said to have been submitted in more than one set. It appears that the record of the said survey sent to Calcutta office of East India Company as also to its main office in London. At the time he conducted survey, the area of Oudh as such was not within the reigning territory of East India Company but was part of the reigning territory of Nawab Vazir of Lucknow with whom East India company had a kind of agreement entered in 1801. The area towards Gorakhpur, Varanasi etc. was in the territory of East

India Company and the demarcating land appears to be the bank of river Saryu near Ayodhya as is evident from the observations of Buchanan where he said that he did not undertook the exercise of measurement etc. at Ayodhya as it would have offended Nawab Wazir of Lucknow who was the reigning authority of that area. It is Buchanan who for the first time referred to an inscription wherefrom he could notice that the disputed building was erected in 1528 AD at the command of Babar though local people still at that time believed and said that the same was constructed at the time of Emperor Aurangzeb after demolishing a Hindu temple. When Buchanan visited Ayodhya, i.e. between 1807-1814, the period of Aurangzeb was about 100 years back while the period of Babar was about 275 years and more. It is difficult to conceive that the local people were not conversant as to who was responsible for construction or during whose reign the construction was made particularly when the matter was comparably recent. The people's memory is not so short and fades away with such a pace that they cannot recollect the events of just 50-60 years back. During the period of Buchanan it was a matter of just 100 years or more. Comparatively period of Aurangzeb was quite recent. Therefore, Buchanan's approach to ignore local belief that the building in dispute was constructed during the reign of Aurangzeb, in the absence of any concrete material, and not to make any further probe cannot be appreciated. However some margin has to be given to him since he was not an expert historian. It may happen that on plain reading of text, the period mentioned therein found 923 AH or 930 AH but he, knowing the period of Babar took upon himself to correct it.

1647. Moreover, Buchanan also cannot be said at fault since

he had a reason to contradict this local belief based on an inscribed document which he found fixed on the building in dispute. To us it appears that this inscription must have been fixed in the building in dispute sometime between the visit of Tieffenthaler and survey of Dr. Buchanan. In order to give importance and antiquity to the building so as to avoid local hatred and conflict the inscript writer or the person responsible for it tried to co-relate it with the reign of Babar but due to lack of information or mistake, the period got written wrongly, i.e., 923 A.H. or 930 A.H. and he also mentioned a name i.e. Mir Baki or Mir Khan which did not find mention in Babar's "Tuzuk-i-Babri".

1648. Whether Buchanan actually noticed 923 A.H. or 935 A.H., we find difficult to record any concrete finding in the absence of any authenticated text of such inscription as was available to Buchanan. To us it appears when he noticed the name of Babar mentioned in the inscription even if the period in the inscription would have written as 923 A.H. he might have got it corrected in the light of the known period of visit of Babar at Ayodhya. This part of our observation as to what Buchanan might have done at that time is obviously in the realm of conjecture and we are conscious about it, but for us it is suffice to mention that in the absence of an authenticated text of the inscription as noticed by Buchanan, the only thing relevant for us is that the inscription was noticed for the first time by Buchanan and at that time he tried to contact the local people with respect to the period and person who constructed the disputed building. He was told about Aurangzeb but he discarded it on the basis of inscription and said that it is Babar and not Aurangzeb as locally believed. It is again nobody's case that the inscription of the period of Buchanan was replaced or changed at any later point of time atleast when it was so noticed and read by A. Fuhrer.

1649. In the meantime, we find that this text has been referred to in certain books written by muslim writers after 1855 AD. Without entering into the question whether those writers were well known Historians or merely story writers or whatever the case may be, for us suffice it to mention that in all these books they have mentioned the period of construction contained in the inscription as 923 A.H. Obviously it cannot be said that those writers who have written their books in Persian and Arabic were not capable of correctly reading the inscription and they committed a mistake in reading.

1650. In brief, we summarize the things and the position boils down as under:

i. Dr. Fransis C. Buchanan said to be first person who read and collected the transcription but this text duly proved in accordance with law is not available to us. However, this found the basis of contradicting the local belief as it prevail till then i.e. around 1810 AD that the building in dispute was constructed during the reign of Aurangzebe after demolition of a temple was wrong and it was actually Babar, as borne out from the inscription.

ii. Next is A. Fuhrer. He was the first archaeologist who read and translated in 1889/1891 and got published three inscriptions alleged to be fixed on Babari Masjid which was alleged to be built under command of Emperor Babur at the site of Sri Ramjanmasthan.

A. Fuhrer's translations and introductory notes thereto read as follows:

www.vadaprativada.com

"Babar's- Masjid at Ayodhya was built in A.H. 930, or A. D. 1523, by Mir Khan, on the very spot where the old temple Janamasthanam of Ramchandra was standing . The following inscriptions are of interest. Inscription No.XL written in Arabic character over the mihrab of the masjid it gives twice the Kalimah:-

"There is no God but' Allah, Muhammad is His Prophet"

Inscription no.XLI is written in Persian poetry, the meter being Ramal, in six lines on the member, right-hand side of the masjid.

"1.By order of Babar, the king of the world,
2. This firmament-like, lofty,
3. Strong building was erected.
4. By the auspicious noble Mir Khan.
5. May ever remain such a foundation,
6. And such a king of the world."

Inscription No.XLII is written in Persian poetry ,the metre being Ramal, in ten lines, above the entrance door of the masjid. A few characters of the second and whole third lines are completely defaced.

"1. In the name of God, the merciful, the clement.
2. In the name of him who…; may God perpetually keep him in the world.
3. . . . . .
4. Such a sovereign who is famous in the world, and in person of delight for the world.
5. In his presence one of the grandees who is another king of Turkey and China.
6. Laid this religious foundation in the auspicious Hijra

930.

7. O God ! May always remain the crown, throne and life with the king.

8. May Babar always pour the flowers of happiness; may remain successful.

9. His counselor and minister who is the founder of this fort masjid.

10. This poetry, giving the date and eulogy, was written by the lazy writer and poor servant Fath-allah-Ghori, composer."

The old temple of Ramachandra at Janamasthan must have been a very fine one, for many of its columns have been used by the Musalmans in the construction of Babar's masjid. These are of strong, close-grained, dark- coloured or black stone, called by the natives Kasauti, "touch-stone slate," and carved with different devices. They are from seven to eight feet long, square at the base,centre and capital, and round or octagonal intermediately.

(The Sharqi Architecture of Jaunpur by A.Fuhrer Ph.D. p 67-68)

ii. Third is Annette Susannah Beveridge was the second british scholar who in 1921 published texts of two Inscriptions purported to be of alleged baburi Mosque which were supplied by the Deputy- Commissioner of Fyzabad alongwith English Translation and Transliteration thereof done by a Muslim. In her said book A.S. Beveridge before giving Text and Translation of the alleged two Inscriptions writes as follows:

" Thanks to the kind response made by the Deputy-

www.vadaprativada.com

Commissioner of Fyzabad to my husband's enquiry about two inscriptions mentioned by several Gazetteers as still existing on 'Babur's Mosque" in Oudh, I am able to quote copies of both."

After giving text and transliteration of an Inscription he gives Translation with her exaggerating value thereof as follows:

"The translation and explanation of the above, manifestly made by a Musalman and as such having special value, are as follows:-"

"The inscription inside the Mosque is as follows:-"

After giving its Text and Transliteration she translates the alleged First Inscription as follows:

"1. By the command of the Emperor Babur whose justice is an edifice reaching up to very height of the heavens,

2. The good-hearted Mir Baqi built this alighting-place of angels;

3. Bavad khair baqi ! (May this goodness last for ever!) The year of building it was made clear likewise when I said Buvad khair baqi (=935)."

"The inscription outside the Mosque is as follows:-"

After giving its Text and Transliteration she translates the alleged Second Inscription as follows:

"The explanation of the above is as follows:-"

"In the first couplet the poet praises God, in the second Muhammad, in the third Babur - there is a peculiar literary beauty in the use of the word la-makani in the 1st couplet. The author hints that the mosque is meant to be the abode of God, although

> he has no fixed abiding-place. - In the first hemistich of the 3rd couplet the poet gives Babur the appellation of qalandar, which means a perfect devotee, indifferent to all worldly pleasures. In the second hemistich he gives as the reason for his being so, that Babur became and was known all the world over as a qalandar, because having become Emperor of India and having thus reach the summit of worldly success, he had nothing to wish for on this earth.
> The inscription is incomplete and the above is the plain interpretation which can be given to the couplets that are to hand. Attempts may be made to reed further meaning into them but the language would not warrant it."

www.vadaprativada.com

1651. The text and translation of these above two authorities are evidently distinct and different. Beveridge's claim that the inscriptions were well existing on Baber's mosque in terms as to be understood about the existence of inscriptions and not for the text since admittedly she had not seen the inscriptions and its text but had collected the same as a secondary evidence.

1652. Then next comes the Civil Judge, Faizabad who has mentioned the text of the two inscriptions in his judgment dated 30.03.1946 in R.S. No.29 of 1945. He has also discussed the same as under:

> "Lastly there are the two Inscription in the mosque which have been reproduced in my inspection notes. These are also referred to in the Gazettes and according to the date in the inscription on the pulpit it was built in 923 Hijri, while according to other it was in 935 H. corresponding with 1528 A.D. These inscriptions were the sheet-anchor of the plff's case but I am of the opinion that they are inconclusive.

The 1st inscription contains three couplets in Persian and when translated runs as follows:

"By the order of Shah Babar, whose justice went up to the skies (i.e. was well known), Amir (Noble) Mir Baqi, of lofty grandeour, built this resting place of angels in 923 Hijri."

The 2nd inscription is more elaborate and contains usual high flown language on eulogy of Babar & describe Mir Baqi of Isphahan as his adviser and the builder of the mosque. This inscription no doubt s the plff's case, because it does not say that it was by the order of Babar shah & it only refers to the reign of Babar but the 1st couplet in the 1st inscription near the pulpit, clearly supports the theory that Babar had ordered the building of the as stated in the Gazettes and the settlement report."

1653. By this time, damage of inscription in 1934 and its restoration is admitted to the parties. Whether the restoration was accurate and if so on what basis is not known.

1654. Then next come Dr. Z.A. Desai's edited work in "Epigraphia Indica Arabic & Persian Supplement 1964-65" which gives another story with much difference. Paras 17, 18 and 19 of written argument:

17. Dr. Z.A. Desai informs that Fuhrer's reading does not appear to be free from mistakes. But he does not specify the mistakes committed by Fuhrer in his reading of the texts and translations thereof. From the scrutiny of Dr Desai's translation it appears that Dr. Desai in 4th line

has added "and" between 'Mir' and 'Khan' and "Baqi" after 'Khan'. So he has converted 'Mir Khan' into 'Mir Khan Baqi'. And in the 3rd line he has added "of God" after 'this lasting house' to make it a mosque. He has neither given any rational explanation for his said conversion of 'Mir Khan' into 'Mir Baqi' nor He has exhibited as to how the Fuhrer's translation is different from the original text.

18. Dr. Z.A. Desai In his detailed discussion on all inscriptions of Babur's regime writes an introduction that a rough draft of an article of his predecessor Maulivi M. Asuraf Hussain who retired in 1953 was found amongst sundry papers in his office with a note that it might be published after revision by his successor. Consequently, he claims, that he has published these inscriptions with translation after extensive revision and editing, but nowhere has he mentioned that which portions of the reading of these inscriptions are his own revision and editing and on what ground these revisions have been made. About inscriptions at Ayodhya he writes that there are three inscriptions in the Babari Mosque out of which the two were completely destroyed by the Hindu rioters in 1934 A.D. However, he managed to secure an ink-stampage of one of them from Sayyid Badru'l - Hasan of Fyzabad. He writes that the present inscription restored by the Muslims Community "is also slightly different from the original owing perhaps to the incompetence of restorers in deciphering it properly." When Dr. Desai himself admits that the restored inscription is slightly different from the original, then his claim that the restored

inscription fixed on Baburi mosque in or after 1934 is the dextrously rebuilt of the original one alleged to be fixed on since the days of Babur becomes meaningless and un-trustworthy. In fact, none of the Inscriptions was fixed on the Disputed Structure which has all along been sacred place of the Hindus known as Sri Ramajanmasthan Temple.

19. Dr. Desai informs that he has based his translation on the inscription of Fuhrer, although he says that Fuhrer must have been misinformed to affirm that; "few corrections of the second and the whole third line completely defaced". Even if it is supposed that some words in the 2nd line and the whole third line are defaced, there is not much impact in the meaning of the text of the inscription. But here we do find that Dr. Desai has extensively changed the meaning of the translated passage. It is quite different from what Fuhrer had translated. Fuhrer had written that it is in ten lines, above the entrance door of the Masjid. He has made its translation in ten separate lines. Dr. Desai has considerably changed the meaning of the text without pinpointing how Fuhrer's translation was wrong. Since beginning and the end of the text are the same and the inscription is said to be the same and there is no major variance in Fuhrer's English translation from the Persian text, Dr. Desai's translation appears to be arbitrary. He has changed the date of the inscription 930 H. (1523 A.D.) to 935A.H. Without assigning any reason. In Dr. Desai's translation the name of Mir Baqi the second Asfaq appears where as in the original Persian text Mir Baqi's name does not appear at all. Then Babar is called a Qalandar in this inscription which is not found in Fuhrer's translation. After 4th line Dr. Desai does not follow the line system and at the end he mentions Fathu'llah Muhammad Ghori as the humble writer of this inscription. His name figures in the Fuhrer's translation too. He goes on expanding how Babar was called Qalandar but he does not explain how the changes have taken place in the inscription which was not in the text read by Fuhrer.

1655. Sri P.N.Mishra has also requested this Court to take judicial notice of the fact that almost in all the inscriptions, which have been recovered by ASI said to be of the period of Babar mentions his name with much honour and deference. This he has demonstrated from various inscriptions referred to in "Epigraphia Indica Arabic & Persian Supplement 1964-65" (Supra). He has summarized this part of argument in para 20 of written argument as under:

"In the above mentioned Inscriptions the Emperor's name Zahiru'd-Din Muhammad Babur Badshah Ghazi which has been recorded almost in all other available Inscription of his period, is missing from which it appears that the forgers of later days were not familiar with the correct name of the said Emperor.

In the Inscription, dated A.H. 933 i.e. 1526-27 A.D. found on the wall of a well from Fatehpur Sikri being Plate No. XV(a) in its 1st line his name has been recorded as follows:

www.vadaprativada.com

In the Inscription of A.H. 934 i.e. 1527-28 A.D. found on a mosque from Panipat being Plate No. XVI(b) in its 1st line his name has been recorded as follows:

In the Inscription dated A.H. 934 i.e. 1527-28 A.D. found on a mosque from Rohatak being Plate No. XVI(a) in its 2nd line his name has been recorded as follows:

In the Inscription dated A.H. 934 i.e. 1528 A.D. found on a mosque from Rohtak being Plate No. XVII(a) in its 1st line his name has been recorded as follows:

In the Inscription of A.H. 935 i.e. 1528-29 A.D. found on a mosque from Palam(Delhi) being Plate No. XVIII(a) in its 1st and 2nd lines his name has been recorded as follows:

(Ibid.p. 62)

In the Inscription of A.H. 935 i.e. 1528-29 A.D. found on a mosque from Pilakhna being Plate No. XVIII(c) in its 3rd line his name has been recorded as follows:

"Zahiru'd-Din Muhammad Babur Ghazi"

(Ibid.p. 64)

In the Inscription dated A.H. 936 i.e. 1529 A.D. found on a mosque from Maham being Plate No. XIX(a) in its 1st and 2nd lines his name has been recorded as follows:

"Zahiru'd-Din Muhammad Badshah Ghazi"

1656. Regarding transportation of inscription from one place to another and affixing the same to raise the claim with respect to building on the basis of certain facts, which actually did not exist, he pointed out that this kind of practice has been noticed on various occasions. He sought to fortify it by referring to certain incidents mentioned in para 21 and 22 of his written argument:

> 21. It is not uncommon for ruffians to fix old Inscriptions on newly built and / or converted mosques. 'Epigraphia Indica Arabic & Persian Supplement 1964 and 1965' at its pages 55 and 56 records that two Inscriptions dated 1934 fixed on two mosques at Rohtak did not belong to those mosques but have been fixed thereon. relevant extracts from said book read as follows:
>
> "Among the historical buildings, two mosques, viz., Masjid-i-Khurd in the Fort2 and Rajputon-ki-Masjid, a new mosque in the city area, bear inscriptions of the time of Babar. The one on the Masjid-i-Khurd consists of three lines inscribed on a tablet measuring 53 by 23cm. Which is fixed over the central archway outside3. The slab is badly damaged and considerable portion of the text has peeled off. It is, therefore, not possible to decipher it completely, but this much is certain that it refers to the construction of a mosque in the reign of ahiru'd-Din Muhammad Babur by one Qadi Hammad. If the Tughluq inscription occurring on the outer archway is in situ, this epigraph may not belong to this mosque." (Ibid.p.56)
> "The other epigraph of Babur in Rohtak is from the Rajputon-ki-Masjid. Fixed over its central arch, the tablet, measuring 1.1 m. By 21 cm., does not belong to the mosque, but it was rather intended as the tombstone of Masnad-i-'Ali Firuz Khan. It is inscribed with two lines of Persian which are slightly affected by the weathering of the stone. The text records A.H. 934 (1528 A.D.) as the date of the construction of the tomb of Masnad-i-Ali Firuz Khan, son of Masnad-i-Ali Ahmed Khan and grandson of Masnad- i-Ali Jamal Khan and refers itself to the reign of Babur. The style of writing is ordinary Naskh. I have read it as follows:-

22. In 'Epigraphia Indica Arabic & Persian Supplement 1964 and 1965' at its pages 19 and 20 S.A. Rahim reports that at Fathabad near Chanderi in Guna district of Madhya Pradesh, stands the partially ruined palace known as Kushk-Mahal and Inscrption fixed thereon are not dated back to its construction but have been affixed thereon from time to time either by the visitors or by the Governors thereof. Relevant extracts from his said reprt read as follows:

"It would not be, however, wholly correct to say that the Kushk-Mahal does not bear any inscription. There are about a score of places on the walls enclosing the stair-cases, referred to above, which bear short inscriptions. The rubbings of some of these were found in the bundles of old estampages which werer transferred to our office, from the Office of the Government Epigraphist for India, Ootacamund, South India, who in his turn seems to have received them quite some time back from the Archaeological Department of the erstwhile Gwalior state. I prepared fresh rubbings of these records when I toured some places in Madhya Pradesh, including Chanderi, in November 1962. Of these, some are mere repetitions of the same text and as such have been excluded from this purview. The remaining four inscriptions are edited here for the first time.

These inscriptions raise an important question, as to whether they are contemporary with the building or not. They do not appear to be so, because they are not inscribed on tablets set up on the walls, nor are they found incised on prominent places on the monument. A building of such magnificence would have had, if at all it was so planned, an inscription of proportionate prominence. This does not rule out the possibility, however, of the existence of an epigraph on the monument, for it is possible that it had one and may have disappeared since. Moreover, the texts of the inscriptions under study are also vague on this point, for they do not make any explicit reference to the palace-building or its construction. In view of these facts, it appears more likely that these records are either visitors' etchings or some sort of mementos which the governors, the palace-guards or some other officials might have desired to leave on the stone.

Fortunately, one of these four records is dated, and since the same penmanship is employed in the other three records, they can also be safely taken as having been inscribed at about the same time or at short intervals. Their language is Persian and style of writing cursive Naskh. The wear and tear of time has affected the stone, resulting into partial obliteration of some of the letters, particularly in the first inscription.

The contents of these four epigraphs classify them into two groups: one, of the first inscription, and the other of the remaining three. The first refers itself to the governorship(amal) of Khan-i-A'zam Sharaf Khan Sultani and the superintendence (shahnagi) of one person whose name is not very legible; it seems to be Raja, (son of) Shams, (son of) Fath. The name of the writer which is also not clear, appears to be Shiv Sing(?) Gulhar. This inscription is dated 1489-90. The three records of the other group refer, between themselves, to the governorship of Malik Mallu Sultani and superintendence of Sarkhail Shariqi Mulki and quote Gulhar Jit(?) Dev, as the scribe. They are undated and hence, it is difficult to state positively if they are earlier

1657. We may place on record that on this aspect of the matter the learned counsels appearing on behalf of the Muslim parties in their rejoinder arguments could not give any substantial reply. They said that the matter involves historical facts. The inscriptions, their text, have been noticed in various history books. They have no other material to support the plea that the building in dispute was constructed by Babar in 1528 AD or at his command by his commander or his agent Mir Baki. They also submit that since this historical event has not been doubted for the last more than one and a half century, this Court may not be justified in recording a finding disturbing the historically admitted and believed fact as the Court is not expert in the matter of history and therefore, there should not be any venture on the part of the Court on this aspect.

1658. The later part of the argument that for the last more than one and a half century, the documents, which are available to us, do not show that the Historians doubted about the building in dispute was constructed during the reign of Babar. But simultaneously this is also proved that all have proceeded mechanically and without properly scrutinizing the texts of the inscriptions, as reported from time to time. The things have been taken as granted. It is also true that the incident of destruction of the temple and construction of a mosque at the disputed place was first noticed by Tieffenthaler in the second half of 18th Century. By that time Aurungzebe's rule was much nearer than Babar's reign. The local belief in respect to recent event normally is more reliable then much older one. This belief was so strong that it continued thereafter for the last 50 years and around 1810 AD, when Dr. Buchanan visited Ayodhya he also

found the same. It is he, who for the fist time sought to controvert the local belief by bringing into picture Babar as the person responsible for the demolition of the temple and construction of mosque at that site. Subsequent writers were mostly petty employees of East India Company i.e. Robert Montgommery Martin or the British Government i.e. H.H.Wilson etc.

1659. During the reign of British Government, names of Aurangzebe and Babar, both were taken for Ayodhya, but tried to be a justified in respect to different buildings. The Indian Historians basically have followed what was written as per the observations of Buchanan. Nobody made any detailed investigation whatsoever. At least none tried to find out the actual events which took place and the correct historical facts.

1660. Normally, this Court would be justified in following the opinion of Expert Historians particularly when it covers a sufficiently long time, but when directly a historical issue is raised before it and this Court, as a matter of necessity, has no option but to find out the correct historical events to the extent of accuracy as much as possible, we cannot proceed blindly to follow what has been written by earlier Historians ignoring all other aspects, some of which we have already discussed. In fact, it is for this reason that the biographical details of some of the alleged history writers, we have mentioned in the early part of this judgment. Had there been two views possible we would not have hesitated in following the view which has prevailed for such a long time but where we find, considering all the relevant material, that the view, which has prevailed for such a long time apparently unbelievable and unsubstantiable, followed by the concerned authors and Historians without a minute scientific investigation, we cannot shut our eyes to such glaring errors and record a finding for which we ourselves are not satisfied at all.

1661. In fact the doubts created otherwise are so strong and duly fortified with relevant material that we have no hesitation in observing that they surpass the required test to become cogent evidence to prove a fact otherwise.

1662. Before concluding we may also deal with one aspect which has been raised though with caution from both the sites, i.e., the legal status and evidentiary value of the White Paper published by Government of India as well as various gazetteers.

1663. First we come to the White Paper issued in February, 1993 by the Government of India with the title "White Paper on Ayodhya".

1664. In Chapter I "Overview" paras 1.1 and 1.2 read as under:

www.vadaprativada.com

> "1.1. Ayodhya situated in the north of India is a township in District Faizabad of Uttar Pradesh . It has long been a place of holy pilgrimage because of its mention in the epic Ramayana as the place of birth of Shri Ram. The structure commonly known as Ram Janma Bhoomi-Babri Masjid was erected as a mosque by one Mir Baqi in Ayodhya in 1528 AD. It is claimed by some sections that it was built at the site believed to be the birth-spot of Shri Ram where a temple had stood earlier. This resulted in a long-standing dispute."
>
> "1.2. The controversy entered a new phase with the placing of idols in the disputed structure in December, 1949. The premises were attached under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Civil suits were filed shortly thereafter. Interim orders in these civil suits restrained the

www.vadaprativada.com

parties from removing the idols or interfering with their worship. In effect, therefore, from December, 1949 till December 6, 1992 the structure had not been used as a mosque."

1665. In Chapter II "Background" para 2.13 and 2.15 read as under:

"2.13. As has been mentioned above, Hindu structures of worship already existed in the outer courtyard of the RJB-BM structure. On the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949, however, Hindu idols were placed under the central dome of the main structure. Worship of these idols was started on a big scale from the next morning. As this was likely to disturb the public peace, the civil administration attached the premises under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. This was the starting point of a whole chain of events which ultimately led to the demolition of the structure. The main events of this chain have been summarised in Appendix-1."

"2.15. The Hindu idols thus continued inside the disputed structure since 1949. Worship of these idols by Hindus also continued without interruption since 1949 and the structure was not used by the Muslims for offering prayers since then. The controversy remained at a low ebb till 1986 when the District Court of Faizabad ordered opening of the lock placed on a grill leading to the sanctum-sanctorum of the shrine. An organisation called the Babri Masjid Action Committee (BMAC), seeking restoration of the disputed shrine to the Muslims came into being and launched a protest movement. The Hindu organisations, on the other hand, stepped up their activities to mobilise public opinion

1666. Similarly Chapter I para 1.14 refers to the excavations conducted by Prof. B.B. Lal at Ayodhya and Chapter II paras 2.6, 2.7, 2.8, 2.9 and 2.10 refers to certain more facts as under:

"1.14. The other controversy related to the excavations conducted by Prof. B.B. Lal at Ayodhya. His discovery of some pillar bases close to the disputed structure was cited by VHP to support its case. The authenticity of this finding was, however, disputed by AIBMAC which alleged that its historians had been denied the opportunity to examine the original record relating to this excavation. This was settled by making available material relating to Prof. Lal's excavations to the experts of both sides."

"2.6. There was a minor battle in this part of Ayodhya (Kot Ram Chandra) in 1855 in which a large number of casualties had taken place. A 3-man inquiry report of this incident is available on the records of the East India Company (and a copy is in the National Archives)."

"2.7. At some stage during the history of the RJB-BM structure a portion of its compound was occupied by Hindu structures of worship, viz Ram Chabutra and Kaushalya Rasoi. The presence of these structures is marked in court documents relating to a suit filed by Mahant Raghuvar Dass in 1885. These structures were in existence till December 6, 1992. There are indications that these structures were considerably older but the evidence on this point is not conclusive. Some Survey records of 1807-14 have come to notice in which the disputed site has been marked as 'Yanmasthan', i.e. Janmashtan."

"2.8. It is also established that the dispute between Hindus and Muslims over this structure led to communal riots in 1934 in which the structure suffered some damage which was later repaired."

"2.9. The structure and its appurtenant land were notified as a Sunni Muslim Wakf in 1944. The validity of this notification has been called into question in court proceedings."

"2.10. The Ram Janma Bhoomi-Babri Masjid structure contained some architectural elements, particularly fourteen black stone pillars that were said to be part of a non-Islamic religious structure of 11th -12th century AD. The VHP argued that this constituted evidence that the disputed structure was built after destruction of a temple. The AIBMAC, however, argued that there was nothing to suggest that all these architectural elements belonged to a single structure standing at this very site. These could have belonged to different structures in other areas."

1667. Sri P.R. Ganpathi Ayer and Sri K.N. Bhat, Senior Advocates sought to rely on the above report to show the structures already existing in the disputed area and some other historical events.

1668. Similarly, the factum of construction of the disputed building in 1528 AD mentioned in para 1.1 of the said paper is referred by the other side. The question is, what is the legal status of the document, how far the contents thereof can be relied on by the parties in a Court of Law in respect to certain facts which are to be adjudicated and whether a historical or otherwise facts mentioned in a White Paper published by Government of India are binding and conclusive so far as that fact(s) relating to occurrence or non-occurrence of an event etc. is/are concerned.

1669. No provision has been shown to us which cover a White Paper issued by the Government.

1670. The word "White Paper" has been defined in "Words and Phrases" Permanent Edition, Vol. 45, published by St. Paul, Minn. West Publishing Co., at page 127 as under:

> "White Paper: Ballots upon paper tinged with blue, which has ruled lines not placed there as marks to distinguish the ballots, are upon "white paper," within the meaning of Act 1849, p. 74, § 15, providing that no ballot shall be received or counted unless the same is written or printed upon white paper without any marks thereon intended to distinguish one ballot from another. People v. Kilduff, 15 III. 492, 501, 60 Am. Dec. 769."

1671. In "DK Illustrated Oxford Dictionary" published by Oxford University Press, at page 952:

> "White Paper- Government report giving information or proposals on an issue."*

1672. In "The New Lexicon Webster's Dictionary of the English Language" (1987), published by Lexicon Publications, Inc. at page 1122:

> "White paper-an informative government report issued on a matter which has received official investigation."*

1673. In "The Layman's Dictionary of English Law" by Gavin McFarlane" (1984), published by Waterlow Publishers Limited at page 314:

> "White Paper-A governmental publication giving details of some topic which is to be laid before*

www.vadaprativada.com

Parliament."

1674. On the one hand it is a public document issued by the Government of India and, therefore, no doubt it is true, that, it can be looked into by a Court of Law. Even if the parties have not referred to it, judicial cognizance of such a document can be taken. A Full Bench of Punjab High Court in Sukhdev Singh Vs. Union Territory, Chandigarh, AIR 1987 Punjab and Haryana 5 has said:

> "15. What the White Paper describes can judicially be taken note of on which there can be no two opinions...."

1675. However, there is no authority to show that the facts as given in White Paper are to be treated as correct in a Court of Law where those facts or related facts are disputed in a pending adjudication. No provision has been shown whereunder anything contained in a White Paper published by a Government may be taken to be a proved fact. We are not apprised of any authority whatsoever showing the legal status of a White Paper except that it is a public document under Section 74 of the Evidence Act. About the value of the facts or factual statements contained therein, to our mind, the things would depend on the nature of the facts stated in a White Paper and the context. Something concerning the governmental activities, if are mentioned in a White Paper which has been issued by that very Government, a presumption may lie that the facts relating to that body must have been correctly mentioned therein. This presumption also, however, is rebuttable and it is always open to anyone to contradict such a statement of fact and lead evidence to disprove it. Then there may be facts relating to history or historical events, the geographical position of the territories etc. as also the condition of the subject/people etc. The well known

historical facts which are duly supported with other history books may be taken to be correct. Similarly in respect to the geographical position of the State the concerned government is more competent to tell about its accuracy than any individual. However, the facts historical or otherwise in respect to individual or group of individuals, and/or about the property matters of the subject, we have no manner of doubt that in such cases, at the best, the Court will presume that the government has mentioned those facts based on the record available to it but in case of dispute such statement would have no relevance and shall not be used for the advantage/disadvantage to any party. The dispute has to be considered by the appropriate judicial authority in the light of the evidence led before it. The facts mentioned in White Paper, depending upon the nature, at the best, may be used as a corroborating evidence but not otherwise.

1676. Then comes the gazetteers in respect whereto some of the authorities we have already discussed and noticed above. At this stage suffice it to mention that the facts contained in a gazetteer do not represent the conclusive status and correctness of those facts but again they have to be looked into and decide by a Court of Law based on the evidence available before it. The gazetteer may be considered as a relevant evidence but the historical, cultural and other facts, which may have some reflection on the rights, privileges etc. of individual or group of individuals, there the matter has to be considered by a Court of Law in the light of the evidence made available to it and if corroborated by other reliable evidence, the facts of history etc. contained in a gazetteer may be looked into. Gazetteers, published under the authority of the Government, we have no hesitation in treating the same to be a "public document" under

Section 74 of the Evidence Act but then the contents thereof cannot be taken on their face value and cannot be relied to prove a particular aspect of the matter unless it is corroborated.

1677. Sri Ayer has relied on Section 87 of the Evidence Act to contend that the facts stated in a gazetteer may be presumed to be correct unless proved otherwise since the gazetteers are relevant for the purpose of Section 13 of the Evidence Act having noticed the faith of the people and the historical facts therein. To the extent that the gazetteer may be treated to be relevant and one of the piece of evidence, we may not have any objection but to suggest that the facts stated in a gazetteer may presume to be correct unless proved otherwise by applying Section 87 of the Evidence Act, we find it difficult to accept. Where the rights of the individuals or group of individuals pertaining to property dispute are under challenge, the facts mentioned in a gazetteer may be considered to be a relevant piece of evidence but not beyond that.

1678. In the light of the above we do not find that either the Government of India's White Paper published in 1993 or various gazetteers, merely for mentioning one or the other facts, can be taken to be correct on its face value unless corroborated with cogent evidence.

1679. In the above facts and circumstance, it is difficult to record a finding that the building in dispute was constructed in 1528 AD by or at the command of Babar since no reliable material is available for coming to the said conclusion. On the contrary the preponderance of probability shows that the building in dispute was constructed at some later point of time and the inscriptions thereon were fixed further later but exact period of the two is difficult to ascertain.

1680. The onus to prove lies upon the party who has pleaded these facts. We have no hesitation in saying that these parties have miserably failed to discharge this burden.

1681. In the absence of any concrete material to show the exact period and the reign of the concerned Mughal emperor or anyone else during which the above construction took place, we are refraining from recording any positive finding on this aspect except that the building in dispute, to our mind, may have been constructed much later than the reign of Emperor Babar and the inscriptions were fixed further thereafter and that is why there have occurred certain discrepancies about the name of the person concerned as also the period. The possibility of change, alteration or manipulation in the inscriptions cannot be ruled out.

1682. It is a matter of further probe by Historians and others to find out other details after making an honest and independent inquiry into the matter. The three issues, therefore, are answered as under:

(A) Issue no.6 (Suit-1) and Issue No.5 (Suit-3) are answered in negative. The defendants have failed to prove that the property in dispute was constructed by Shanshah/Emperor Babar in 1528 AD. Accordingly, the question as to whether Babar constructed the property in dispute as a 'mosque' does not arise and needs no answer.

(B) Issue No.1(a) (Suit-4) is answered in negative. The plaintiffs have failed to prove that the building in dispute was built by Babar. Similarly defendant no.13 has also failed to prove that the same was built by Mir Baqi. The further question as to when it was built and by whom cannot be replied with certainty since neither there is any

pleading nor any evidence has been led nor any material has been placed before us to arrive at a concrete finding on this aspect. However, applying the principle of informed guess, we are of the view that the building in dispute may have been constructed, probably, between 1659 to 1707 AD i.e. during the regime of Aurangzeb.

(G) Issues relating to Deities, their status, rights etc.:

1683. In this category comes issues no. 12 and 21 (Suit-4); and, 1, 2, 3(a), 6 and 21 (Suit-5).

1684. Issues no. 12 (Suit-4) and 3(a) (Suit-5) involves common facts and consideration. Similarly issues no. 1 and 21 (Suit-5) and issues no. 2 and 6 (Suit-5) are common:

"Issue No. 1 (Suit-5):-

Whether the plaintiffs 1 and 2 are juridical persons?

Issue No. 21 (Suit-5):-

Whether the idols in question cannot be treated as Deities as alleged in paragraphs 1,11,12,21,22, 27 and 41 of the written statement of defendant no.4 and in paragraph 1 of the written statement of defendant no.5?

Issue No. 2 (Suit-5):-

Whether the suit in the name of Deities described in the plaint as plaintiffs 1 and 2 is not maintainable through plaintiff no.3 as next friend?

Issue No. 6 (Suit-5):-

Is the plaintiff no.3 not entitled to represent the plaintiffs 1 and 2 as their next friend and is the suit not competent on this account?

Issue No. 21 (Suit-4):-

Whether the suit is bad for non-joinder of alleged Deities?

www.vadaprativada.com

Issue No. 12 (Suit-4):-

Whether idols and objects of worship were placed inside the building in the night intervening 22nd and 23rd December 1949 as alleged in paragraph 11 of the plaint or they have been in existence there since before? In either case, effect?

Issue No. 3 (Suit-5):-

(a) Whether the idol in question was installed under the central dome of the disputed building (since demolished) in the early hours of December 23, 1949 as alleged by the plaintiff in paragraph 27 of the plaint as clarified in their statement under Order 10 Rule 2 C.P.C."

1685. Pleadings in this respect are in para 11 of the plaint (Suit-4) and para 26 of the written statement dated 24th December, 1989 of defendant no. 13/1 (Suit-4); paras 1, 20 and 27 of the plaint (Suit-5) and paras 1, 11, 12, 21, 22, 27 and 41 of the written statement dated 26/29.08.1989 of defendant no. 4 (Suit-5) which read as under:

"11. That the Muslims have been in peaceful possession of the aforesaid mosque and used to recite prayer in it, till 23.12.1949 when a large crowd of Hindus, with the mischievous intention of destroying, damaging or defiling the said mosque and thereby insulting the Muslim religion and the religious feelings of the Muslims, entered the mosque and desecrated the mosque by placing idols inside the mosque. The conduct of Hindus amounted to an offence punishable under sections 147, 295 and 448 of the Indian Penal Code." (Plaint, Suit-4)

Para 26 of Written statement of defendant no. 13/1 (Suit-4):

26. That it is manifestly established by public records and relevant books of authority that the premises in dispute is the place where, BHAGWAN SRI RAMA Manifested HIMSELF in human form as an incarnation of BHAGWAN VISHNU, according to the tradition and faith of the Hindus. Again according to the Hindu faith, GANGA originates from the nail of the tee of BHAGWAN VISHNU, and cleanses and purifies whatever is washed by or dipped into its waters. And BHAGWAN VISHNU having Manifested himself in the human form of Maryada Purushottam Sri Ramchandra Ji Maharaj at Sri Rama Janma Bhumi, those who touch the Earth or the footprints of BHAGWAN SRI RAMA symbolised by the CHARANS at that place, are cleansed of their sins and purified. The Earth at Sri Rama Janma Bhumi could not have acted differently towards the Muslims who went there*. They were also cleansed and purified of the evil in them by the touch of BHAGWAN SRI RAMA'S footprints, which like the waters of the GANGA purify all without any discrimination. The place, like the waters of the GANGA, remains unsullied, and has been an object of worship, with a juridical personality of its own as a Deity, distinct from the juridical personality of the presiding Deity of BHAGWAN SRI RAMA installed in the Temple thereat, and has existed since ever even before the construction of the first temple thereat and installation of the Idol therein. Indeed, it is the VIDINE SPIRIT which is worshipped. An Idol is not indispensable. There are Hindu Temples without any Idol.* The ASTHAN SRI RAMA JANMA BHUMI has existed immovable through the ages, and

has ever been a juridical person. The actual and continuous performance of Puja at Sri Rama Janma Bhumi was not essential for the continued existence or Presence of the Deities at that place. They have continued to remain Present, and shall continue to remain Present, so long as the place lasts, which, being land, is indestructible, for any one to come and invoke them by prayer. The Deities are Immortal, being the Divine Spirit or the ATMAN, and may take different shapes and forms as Idols or other symbols of worship according to the faith and aspiration of their devotees.

Paras 1, 20 and 27 of plaint (Suit-5):

"1. That the Plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2, namely, Bhagwan Sri Rama Virajman at Sri Rama Janma Bhumi, Ayodhya, also called Sri Rama Lala Virajman, and the Asthan Sri Rama Janma Bhumi, Ayodhya, with the other Idols and places of worship situate thereat, are juridical persons with Bhagwan Sri Rama as the presiding Deity of the place. The Plaintiffs No. 3 is a Vaishnava Hindu, and seeks to represent the Deity and the Asthan as a next friend."

"20. That the Place itself*, or the Asthan SRI RAMA JANMA BHUMI, as it has come to be known,* has been an object of worship as a Deity by the devotees of Bhagwan Sri Rama, as IT personifies the spirit of the Divine worshipped in the form of SRI Rama LALA or Lord Rama the child. The Asthan was thus Deified and has had a juridical personality of its own even before the construction of a Temple building or the installation of the Idol of Bhagwan Sri Rama thereat."

27. That after independence from the British Rule, the Vairagis and the Sadhus and the Hindu public, dug up and levelled whatever graves had been left in the area surrounding Sri Rama Janma Bhumi Asthan and purified the place by Aknand Patha and Japa by thousand and thousands of persons all over the area. Ultimately, on the night between the 22nd 23rd December, 1949, the Idol of Bhagwan Sri Rama was installed with due ceremony under the central dome of the building also*.*

Paras 1, 11, 12, 21, 22, 27 and 41 of Written statement of defendant no. 4 (Suit-5):

"1. That the contents of para 1 of the plaint are incorrect and hence denied as stated. Neither the plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 are the juridical persons and nor there is any Presiding Deity of Sri Ram Chandraji at the place in dispute and nor the plaintiff no. 3 has any locus standi or right to represent the co-called and alleged deity and Asthan as next friend. It is further submitted that the plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 are not at all legal personalities (and as such they have no right to file the instant suit). As a matter of fact there has never been any installation of deity within the premises of the disputed place of worship known as Babri Masjid and the idol in question was stealthily and surreptitiously kept inside the mosque in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949 by some mischief-mongers against whom an F.I.R. had also been lodged at the Police Station Ayodhya on 23rd December, 1949.

11. That the contents of para 11 of the plaint are denied as stated and in reply thereto it is submitted that the plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 cannot be treated as deities and also there arises no question of their Sewa and Pooja. Rest of the contents of the para under reply may be verified from the record.

12. That the contents of para 12 of the plaint are also denied as stated and in reply thereto it is submitted that there arises no question of Sewa and Pooja of the said alleged deities as no such deities exist in the building in question and the idols kept therein could not be treated as deities. It is further submitted that the restricted Pooja as carried on on 16th January, 1950 could not be treated as Sewa and Pooja of the alleged deity. It is also incorrect to say that there has ever been any likelihood of the suits being decided in such a manner that any closer Darshan of the idols could be possible.

21. That the contents of para 21 of the plaint are also denied as stated and in reply thereto it is submitted that the mythological concept of incarnation etc. is not at all relevant for the purposes of the instant case. (However, the averments of the para under reply are not correct and consistent with Hindu Law and the same being a matter of legal nature it will be dealt at the appropriate stage.) It is, however, relevant to mention here that neither there has been any installation of any deity within the premises in dispute and nor the ritual of Pranpratishtha in respect of any idol surreptitiously and stealthily kept inside the mosque in question was ever performed or observed*; as such there arises no question of divine spirit having been created or manifested in the idol forcibly kept in the mosque in question in the night of 22nd-23rd December, 1949 about which an F.I.R. was lodged at the Police Station Ayodhya in the morning of 23.12.1949 by a Hindu*

Officer of the Police Station himself who had mentioned in the said F.I.R. that some mischievous element had kept the said idol in the preceding night in a stealthy and surreptitious manner by sheer use of force and on the basis of the said F.I.R. a Criminal case had also been registered against those persons who had kept the said idol and subsequently proceedings under section 145 Cr. Proc. Code had been drawn by the Magistrate and as a result of the communal tension arising and developing on account of the aforesaid incident of keeping the idol in the mosque, the said building had been attached on 29.12.1949 and Suprudgar/Receiver for the care and custody of the said building had also been appointed who had drawn up a Scheme of Management and the same was submitted on 5.1.1950.

22. That the contents of para 22 of the plaint are also incorrect and hence denied as stated and in reply thereto it is submitted that the spirit of Sri Ramj Chandraji as the divine child cannot be said to reside at any place or in any idol kept inside the said mosque and as such no idol or place of the said mosque can be said to be deity. It is further submitted that there is no comparison of Kedranath or Vishnupad temple of Gaya with the Babri Masjid. It is also relevant to mention here that there is no Charan or Sita Rasoee within the premises of Babri Masjid and the place known as Sita Rasoee is situated outside the premises of the said mosque*. It is also incorrect to say that Pooja in any form was ever performed inside the mosque in question at any time prior to 23.12.1949.*

27.That the contents of para 27 of the plaint are also

incorrect and hence denied as stated. The graves existing near the Babri Masjid were dug up and levelled mainly after 1949 and not just after Independence and in the night of 22nd-23rd December, 1949 some Bairagees had forcibly and illegally entered into the mosque and had kept the idol below the middle dome of the mosque about which an F.I.R. was lodged at the Police Station Ayodhya in the morning of 23rd December, 1949 and some of the culprits were even named in the FIR. It is absolutely incorrect to say that the idol of Bhagwan Sri Ram Chandraji was installed with due ceremony in the Central dome of the building in the 'aforesaid' night. It is also incorrect to say that any purification of the alleged Asthan was done by Akhand Ramyan and Jap by thousands of persons all over the area.

41. That the instant suit is not at all maintainable and the plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 are neither deities and nor they can be treated as juristic persons and the plaintiff no. 3 cannot claim himself to be the next friend of Bhagwan Sri Ram. As such none of the plaintiffs have any right to file the instant Suit."

1686. The defendant no. 5 (Suit-5) also in para 1 of his written statement has said:

"1. That the contents of para 1 of plaint are denied. Neither the plaintiff no. 1 nor plaintiff no. 2 are the deities within the meaning of Hindu Law nor they are juristic person to file the suit. Remaining contents of para are also denied. Kindly see additional pleas."

1687. We may mention at this stage that para 11 of the plaint (Suit-4) has also been denied by the defendants no. 1 and 2 in

para 11 of their written statement dated 12.03.1962 and thereafter in the additional pleas in paras 25, 28 and 29 they have pleaded that Hindu Pooja is going on in the said temple since 1934, i.e., for about last 28 years and Muslims have never offered any prayer since 1934 therein. It is also said that the plaintiffs (Suit-4) have falsely described the temple as Babari mosque. Same thing has been repeated in the written statement dated 25.01.1963 filed on behalf of defendant no. 2 in para 25.

1688. On behalf of Nirmohi Akhara defendants no. 3 and 4 also written statement has been filed wherein they have disputed the very assertion of construction of any building, i.e., Babari mosque by Emperor Babar 460 years ago as alleged in para 1 and it is also said that Babar did not make any conquest or occupation of any territory in India at that time. Similarly, any damage to the building in 1934 has been denied and consequently its rebuilding and reconstruction also denied. We may notice at this stage, in particular, para 13(C) of the written statement dated 22/24.08.1962 of defendants no. 3 and 4 which says:

> "The said Temple Ram Chabutra has a history of Judicial scanning since 1885 A.D. and it existence and possession over temple Ram Chabutra was ever since in possession of Nirmohi Akhara and no other but Hindus allowed to enter and worship there and put offering in form of money, sweets, fruits, flowers etc....."

1689. Similarly in para 38 of their additional written statement dated 28/29.01.1963 the defendants no. 3 and 4 have categorically denied that Emperor Babar ever built a mosque as alleged by the plaintiffs or that the Muslims were ever in possession of the building in question. Therefore, the case of the defendants no. 3 and 4 has all through been that the temple of Lord Rama at the disputed site exist from time immemorial and thereat neither any construction was made by Babar in 1528 AD nor any damage etc. caused in 1934 in the said temple and accordingly they also deny the allegation of placement of any idol in the disputed building on 22/23.12.1949. Para 11 of the plaint (Suit-4) has been denied alleging it to be false and concocted and in para 12 of the written statement it is said that no such incident ever took place. The report, if any, lodged by the constable is mischievous and in connivance of the plaintiffs.

1690. The arguments advanced by Sri Jilani, and as adopted by counsel appearing for other Muslim parties are, that, neither a place can be said to be a 'Deity' nor a Juristic person, nor every 'idol' will attain the status of a 'Deity' and thereby become a juristic person, unless it is installed by Shastric procedure i.e., by observing process of "Pran Pratishtha" (vivification). Neither idols in question placed at the disputed site are 'Deity' nor the place itself comes within the said notion recognised in law. The suit filed by plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 (Suit-5) is not maintainable. Non impleadment of Deity, i.e., idol and place makes Suit-4 untenable. Further submission is, the plaintiff 3 (Suit-5) is neither competent nor otherwise can represent plaintiffs 1 and 2 (Suit-5), he is not a proper person who can represent the plaintiffs 1 and 2, and even otherwise as a next friend. Therefore, Suit-5 is liable to be dismissed. Besides, plaintiffs 1 and 2 not being juridical person, Suit 5 is not maintainable in law.

1691. Sri Siddiqui also argued that Pran Pratishtha is necessary to make an idol 'deity' as held in Jogendra Nath

www.vadaprativada.com

Naskar Vs. Commissioner of Income Tax, Calcutta AIR 1969 SC 1089. He said that neither in 1949 nor thereafter, at any point of time, Pran Pratishtha of the idols, placed in the inner courtyard of the disputed structure, took place and, therefore, no right of worship of the idols placed therein is vested in or acquired by any Hindu. He said that plaintiff no. 2 is only a fictional deity and not a real deity. After construction of building more than 500 years ago, the deity cannot be said to have continued since then till date.

1692. With respect to Suit-3, contention of all the learned counsels appearing on behalf of various Hindu parties, [except Sri R.L. Verma who is counsel for plaintiff (Suit-3)] is that the Deities being juristic personalities having not been impleaded as defendants in Suit-3, though they are necessary parties, hence in their absence suit cannot proceed.

1693. Responding to the objections of Sri Jilani, Sri Siddiqui and Sri Irfan Ahmad, Advocates, the other side, represented through Sri Ravi Shankar Prasad, Sri P.R. Ganesh Ayer and Sri K.N. Bhatt, Senior Advocates, Sri P.N. Mishra, Sri M.M. Pandey and other Advocates submit that in Hindu religious scriptures the concept of 'Deity' extremely vary. It includes a place or object, i.e. natural things like river, tree, stone, mountain, mound or even a part of earth connected with divine activities. Sri Ravi Shankar Prasad submitted that this aspect of the matter is also crucial and relevant to adjudicate issues no. 14 (Suit-4), 22 and 24 (Suit-5).

1694. Sri P.N.Mishra, Advocate, besides his oral submission, has also submitted written argument. In respect to the juridical personality of plaintiffs no.1 and 2 (Suit-5) and consecration etc., he has said:

"A. According to Shastric (Scriptural) injunctions Sri Ramajanmasthan Sthandil, a Svayambhu Linga (Symbol) brought into existence and established by the Lord of Universe Sri Vishnu Himself. As such inspite of being decayed, or damaged, or destroyed it shall forever remain sacred place of Worship as it does not need purification or consecration or change. Pratistha is required only in respect of manmade Images/Idols/Symbols of Deities that can be done by chanting single Mantra XXXI.1 or II.13 of the Holy Divine Sri Yajurved (Vagasaneyee Samhita also known as "Sri Shukla Yajurved"). A deity needs to be worshipped by providing all things which are required for leading a healthy and excellent life.

B. Svayambhu i.e. Self-built or Self existent or Self-revealed Lingas (symbols) of Devatas (Gods) or the Lingas (Symbols) established by Gods, or by those versed in the highest religious truths, or by Asuras, or by sages, or by remote ancestors, or by those versed in the tantras need not be removed though decayed or even broken. Only decayed or broken Pratisthita Images/Idols require to be replaced with new one. In respect of renewal of the images, "Treatise on Hindu Law" by Golapchandra Sarkar, (Sastri) reproduces the Shastric injunction (Scriptural law) as follows:

>
> "8. Now (it is stated) the prescribed mode of Renewal of Decayed Images. Bhagwan says – 'I shall tell you briefly the holy ordinance for renewing Decayed Images * * *'
>
> "Whatever is the material and whatever size of the image

www.vadaprativada.com

of Hari (or the God, the protector) that is to be renewed; of the same material and of the same size, and image is to be caused to be made; of the same size of the same form (and of the same material), should be (the new image) placed there; either on the second or on the third day (the image of) Hari should be established; if, (it be) established after that, even in the prescribed mode, there would be blame or censure or sin; in this very mode the linga or phallic symbol and the like (image) should be thrown away; (and) another should be established, of the same size (&c.) as already described, - Haya-Sirsha".

"9. God said, -

'I shall speak of the renewal in the prescribed mode of lingas or phallic symbols decayed and the like &c * * *. (Allinga) established by Asuras, or by sages or by remote ancestors or by those versed in the tantras should not be removed even in the prescribed form, though decayed or even broken.'

(Agnipuranam Chapter 103 Poona Edition of 1900 AD. p.143)

[There is a different reading of a part of this sloke noted in the foot-note of the Poona Edition of this Puran as one of the Anandashram series of sacred books: according to which instead of – " or by remote ancestors or by those versed in the tantras" – the following should be substituted, namely:

"Or by Gods or by those versed in the highest religious truths."]

"10. Now Renewal of Decayed (images is considered); that is to be performed when a linga and the like are burnt

www.vadaprativada.com

or broken or removed (from its proper place). But this is not to be performed with respect but a linga or the like which is established by a Siddha or one who has become successful in the highest religious practice, or which is anadi i.e. of which the commencement is not known, or which has no commencement. But their Mahabhisheka or the ceremony of great anointment should be performed:- this is said by "Tri- Vikrama" – Nirnaya – Sindhu – Kamalakar Bhatta, Bombay Edition of 1900 p.264.

The author of the Dharma-Sindhu says as above in almost the same words – see Bombay Edition of 1988 p.234 of that work."

[Treatise on Hindu Law by Golapchandra Sarkar, Sastri (6th Edition, published by Easter Law House (1927) at p.745-748]

www.vadaprativada.com

C. Alberuni who compiled his book "India in or about 1030 A.D." on page 121 has written that the Hindus honour their Idols on account of those who erected them, not on account of the material of which they are, best example whereof is Linga of sand erected by Rama. In his book on pages 117, 209, 306-07 and 380 he has also narrated about the Lord of Universe Sri Rama. Relevant extract from page 121 of "Alberuni's India" Translated by Dr. Edward C. Sachau (Reprint 2007 of the 1st Edn. 1910) published Low Price Publications, Delhi reads as follows:

"The Hindus honour their idols on account of those who erected them, not on account of the material of which they are made. We have already mentioned that the idol of Multan was of wood, e.g. the linga which Rama erected when he had finished the war with the demons was of

sand. Which he had heaped up with his own hand. But then it became petrified all at once, since the astrologically correct moment for the erecting of the monument fell before the moment when the workmen had finished the cutting of the stone monument which Rama originally had ordered." (ibid page 121)

D. According to the Hindus' Divine Holy & Sacred Scriptures there are two types of images one Svayambhu (self-existent or self-revealed or self-built) and other Pratisthita (established or consecrated). Where the Self-possessed Lord of Universe Sri Vishnu has placed himself on earth for the benefit of mankind, that is styled Svayambhu. It does not require Pratistha. At Ramajanamasthan the Lord of Universe Sri Vishnu appeared and placed Himself on the said sacred place which itself became Svayambhu for the reason that invisible power of the Almighty remained there which confers merit and salvation to the devotees. Consecrated artificial manmade Lepya images i.e. moulded figures of metal or clay; and Lekhyas i.e. all kinds of pictorial images including chiselled figures of wood or stone not made by moulds are called Pratisthita. Sri Mishra then quoted para 4.5 of "Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts' of B. K. Mukherjea 5th Edition, Published by Eastern Law House at page 154.

E. According to the Holy Scripture "Sri Narsingh Puranam" (62.7-14 ½) Pratistha of the Lord of Universe Sri Vishnu should be done by chanting 1st Richa of the Purush Sukta of Shukla Yajurved [I.e Vagasaneyee Samhita Chapter XXXI] and be worshipped dedicating prescribed offerings by chanting 2nd to 15th Richas of the Purush

Sukta. And if worshipper so wish after completion of worship he may by chanting 16th Richas of the Purush Sukta pray to Sri Vishnu for going to his His own abode. Above-mentioned verses of Sri Narsingh Puranam and Hindi translation thereof reads as follows:

''तस्य सर्वमयत्वाच्च स्थण्डिले प्रतिमासु च।

अब पूजनका मन्त्र बताते हैं। शुक्ल यजुर्वेदीय रुद्राष्टायायीमें जो पुरुषसूक्त है, उसका उच्चारण करते छन्द है, जगत्के कारणभूत परम पुरुष भगवान् विष्णु देवता हैं, नारायण ऋषि हैं और भगवत्पूजन में उसका विनियोग है। जो पुरुषसूक्त से भगवान को फूल और जल अर्पण करता है, उसके द्वारा सम्पूर्ण चराचर जगत् पूजित हो जाता है। पुरुषसूक्त की पहली ऋचासे भगवान् पुरुषोत्तमका आवाहन करना चाहिये। दूसरी ऋचासे आसन और तीसरी से पाद्य अर्पण करे। चौथी ऋचा से अर्घ्य और पॉचवी से आचमनीय निवेदित करें। छठी ऋचा से स्नान कराये और सातवीं से वस्त्र अर्पण करें। आठवीं से यज्ञोपवीत और नवमी ऋचासे गन्ध निवेदन करें। दसवीं से फूल चढ़ाये और ग्यारहवीं ऋचासे धूप दे। बारहवीं से दीप और तेरहवीं ऋचासे

(Sri Narsingh Puranam 62.7-14 ½)

Be it mentioned herein that in the above Sri Narsingh Puranam 62.13 Sloke enumerates Pradakshina i. e. Parikrama (circumbulation) as 14th means of reverential treatment of the Deity and thereby makes it integral part of the religious customs and rituals of service and worship of a Deity.

F. 1st Holy Spell of Purush Sukta of the Holy Devine Shukla Yajurved [i.e Vagasaneyee Samhita Chapter XXXI] prescribed by the Holy Sri Narsingh Puranam for Pratistha of the Lord of Universe Sri Vishnu reads as follows:

''सहस्रशीर्षा पुरुषः सहस्राक्षः सहस्रपात्।
स भूमि सर्वतः स्पृत्वाऽत्यतिष्ठाद्दशाङ्.गुलम्।।1।।

मन्त्रार्थ–सभी लोकों में व्याप्त महानारायण सर्वात्मक होने से अनन्त शिर वाले, अनन्त नेत्र वाले और अनन्त चरण (पैर) वाले हैं। ये पांच तत्वों से बने इस गोलकरूप समस्त व्यक्ति और समष्टि ब्रह्माण्ड को तिरछा, ऊपर, नीचे सब तरफ से व्याप्त कर नाभि से दस अंगुल परिमित देश, हृदय का अतिक्रमण कर अन्तर्यामी रूप से स्थित हुए थे।''

(ibid as translated by Swami Karpatriji and published by Sri Radhakrishna Dhanuka Prakasan Samsthanam, Edn. Vikram samvat 2048)

Simple English translation thereof reads:

'The Almighty God who hath infinite heads, infinite eyes;

infinite feet pervading the Earth on every side and transgressing the universe installed Him in sanctum as knower of inner region of hearts'.

Be it mentioned herein in the Mimamsa Darshan as commented in Sanskrit by Sri Sabar Swami and in Hindi by Sri Yudhisthir Mimamsak and Mahabhasya, meaning of "Sahasra" has also been given "infinite" as also "one" apart from "thousand" and according to context one or other meaning is adopted.

G. "Nitya Karma Puja Prakash" has prescribed a Mantra of Yajurved [i.e Vagasaneyee Samhita Chapter II.13] for Pratistha of Lord Ganesh. Relevant portion of the said book reads as follows:

''अनन्तर सर्वप्रथम गणेशजी का पूजन करे। गणेश–पूजनसे पूर्व उस नूतन प्रतिमाकी निम्न–रीतिसे प्राण–प्रतिष्ठा कर लें–

ऊँ मनो जूतिर्जुषतामाज्यस्य बृहस्पतिर्यज्ञमिमं तनोत्वरिष्टं यज्ञा समिमं दधातु। विश्वे देवास इह मादयन्तामो3 म्प्रतिष्ठ।

ऊँ अस्यै प्राणाः प्रतिष्ठन्तु अस्यै प्राणाः क्षरन्तु च।

अस्यै देवत्वमर्चायै मामहेति च कश्चन।।

इस प्रकार प्रतिष्ठा कर भगवान् गणेशका षोडशोपचार पूजनं (पृ0सं0 174–185 के अनुसार) करे। तदनन्तर नवग्रह (पृ0सं0 210), षोडशमातृका (पृ0सं0 205) तथा कलश–पूजन (पृ0सं0 186) के अनुसार करें।''

H. The Holy "Sri Satpath-Brahman" interpreting said Mantra II.13 of the Holy Sri Shukla Yajurved [i.e. Vagasaneyee Samhita] says that Pratistha of all Gods should be done by said Mantra. Be it mentioned herein that the Holy Sri Satpath-Brahman being Brahman part of

Divine Sri Shukla Yajurved, interpreting Mantras of said Vagasaneyee Samhita tells about application of those Mantras in Yajnas (Holy Sacrifices). Said Mantra II.13 of the Divine Sri Shukla Yajurved (Vagasaneyee Samhita) as well as Sri Satpath-Brahman (I.7.4.22) with original texts and translations thereof read as follows:

मनों जूतिर्जुषतामाज्यस्य वृहस्पतिर्यज्ञमिमं तनोत्वरिटं यज्ञं समिमं दधातु।
विश्वे दे्वास इह र्मादयन्तामो3म्प्रतिष्ठ।।13।।

> 22. [He continues, Vag. S. II, 13]: 'May his mind delight in the gushing (of the) butter!' By the mind, assuredly, all this (universe) is obtained (or pervaded, aptam)): hence he thereby obtains this All by the mind.-'May Brhaspati spread (carry through) this sacrifice! May he restore the sacrifice uninjured!' - he thereby restores what was torn asunder.-'May all the gods rejoice here!'. 'all the gods,' doubtless, means the All : hence he thereby restores (the sacrifice) by means of the All. He may add, 'Step forward!' if he choose; or, if he choose, he may omit it. I. 19th Holy Spell of Naradiya Sukta of the Holy Divine Shukla Yajurved [i.e. Vagasaneyee Samhita Chapter XXIII] is also widely applied by the Knower of the Scriptures to invoke and establish a deity. Said Mantra reads as follows:

> ''गणांनां त्वां गणपति हवामहे प्रियाणां स्वा प्रियपति हवामहे निधीनां त्वा निधिपति हवामहे वसो मम। > आहमजानि गर्भधमा त्वमजासि गर्भधम।।''

English Translation of this Mantra based on Hindi Translation of Padmbhushan Sripad Damodar Satvalekar,1989 Edn. Published by Swayadhyay Mandal pardi reads as follows:

> "O, Lord of all beings we invoke Thee. O, Lord of beloved one we invoke Thee. O, Lord of Wealth we invoke Thee. O abode of all beings Thou are mine. O,

www.vadaprativada.com

Sustainer of Nature let me know Thee well because Thee the sustainer of Universe as embryo are Creator of All."

[Shukla Yajurved Chapter XXIII Mantra 19]

J. The vivified image is regained with necessaries and luxuries of life in due succession. Change of clothes, offering of water, sweets as well as cooked and uncooked food, making to sleep, sweeping of the temple, process of smearing, removal of the previous day's offerings of flowers, presentation of fresh flowers and other practices are integral part of Idol-worship. In public temple, in olden days these were being performed by Brahmins, learned in Vedas & Agamas. (Para 4.7 Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts of B. K. Mukherjea 5th Edition, Published by Eastern Law House at page 156.)

1695. Sri Ravi Shankar Prasad, Senior Advocate elaborated the concept of "Deity" as per the notions of ancient Hindu scriptures and, that, how can it be ascertained as to whether the place of worship of Hindus is "Deity" within the term and understanding in Hindu Law, how the properties held by "Deity" is alienable and also the development of Hindu Law. He placed, in extentio, certain excerpts from B.K.Mukherjea's "The Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts" (Tagore Law Lectures Fifth Edition revised by Sri A.C. Sen published by Eastern Law House in 1983 reprinted in 2003) pages 25, 26, 27, 38, 39, 40, 152 to 154, 156 to 163 besides several authorities of the Apex Court, this Court, Privy Council and various High Courts. The concept of deity, a very distinguishing feature of Hindu faith is one that, i.e., eternal, permanent and omnipresent wherein the deity is the image of the Supreme Being. The temple is the house of the deity and to constitute a temple it is enough if the people believe in its religious efficacy, i.e., there is some supreme super power existing there whom they need to worship and invoke its blessings.

1696. It is contended that religious purpose under the Hindu law must be determined according to Hindu notions. In support of his submission, he placed reliance on para 2.27 on page 75 of "The Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts" by B.K. Mukherjea (supra), which says:

> "These observations, if I may say so, apply with full force to trusts created by Hindus for religious purposes. Undoubtedly the court and not the donor is the judge, of whether an object is charitable or not, but the court cannot enter into the merits of particular religious doctrine, and therefore must remain neutral. The divine service of a particular religion is defined by the doctrines of the religion itself and no court can appreciate their spiritual efficacy, unless it knows these doctrines and hypothetically admits them to be true. In controversial matters the court cannot possibly decide whether the doctrines are beneficial to the community or not. It has got to act upon the belief of the members of the community concerned, and unless these beliefs are per se immoral or opposed to public policy, it cannot exclude those who profess any lawful creed from the benefit of charitable gifts..."

1697. It is said that the right of a deity of being worshipped by its followers ought not be compared with a secular law relating to management of deities for they are fundamentally distinct. The present case relates to the site/place of birth of Lord Rama, i.e., Ramjanambhumi which itself is a deity for the reason of the belief and faith of Hindu public since time

immemorial that the Lord of Universe, the Supreme Being Vishnu manifested thereat as an incarnation in human form making that place sacred and pious and mere visit and Darshan thereof would be sufficient to shower blessing, happiness and salvation to the worshippers. By the very nature, the deity in question is not only inalienable but cannot be possessed or owned by any individual, legal or natural. This deity, i.e., the place itself is a legal person, i.e. a juridical person possessing all the facets of a legal person as recognized in law.

1698. Sri Prasad submitted that a self created Deity i.e. Sayambhu, need not be in a particular shape or form and even a place can be said to be a Deity. It is extra commercium, non-destructible, inalienable, and even if there is no structure, it is a temple if has the sanctity of pious place being worshipped by the believers with a faith that the religious merits shall be gained by them on offering prayer or worship thereat.

1699. Sri Prasad relied on Ram Jankijee Deities & Ors. Vs. State of Bihar & Ors. (1999) 5 SCC 50=AIR 1999 SC 2131 (para 13 to 28) and Saraswathi Ammal & Anr. Vs. Rajagopal Ammal AIR 1953 SC 491 (para 6) to demonstrate as to what is the concept of deity in Hinduism. He submits that the religious issues pertaining to Hindu religion are to be considered and decided according to Hindu notions and referred to Shiromani Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee, Amritsar Vs. The meaning; definition and concept of Temple in general as well in legislative enactments must be read and understood in the light of the Shastrik Law, otherwise it would be ultra vires of the Constitution. 1703. Sri Prasad refers to State of West Bengal Vs. Anwar Ali Sarkar & Anr. AIR (39) 1952 SC 75 (para 85) and read the observations how Hindu Law has developed. He relied on the History of Dharmashastra by P.V. Kane Vol. 2, Part-2, Chapter XXVI page 911 and Vol. 3 page 327 and 328 and also Bumper Development Corp. Ltd. Vs. 1705. Sri R.L.Verma, learned counsel appearing on behalf of

Nirmohi Akhara defendant No.3 raised objection about the maintainability of suits through next friend and contended that there is no averment in the entire plaint (Suit-5) as to why the plaintiff no.3 be allowed to file suit on behalf of plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 as their next friend. He submits that neither there is any averment that the already working Shebait is not looking after the Deity faithfully and religiously nor there is any averment that there is no Shebait at all of the Deities, plaintiffs no.1 and 2, nor there is any averment that plaintiff no.3 himself is a worshipper of the Deities (plaintiffs no.1 and 2) and therefore, is interested in the welfare and proper management of the property and daily care of Deities themselves. Sri Verma submits that Order XXXII, Rule 1 in terms has no application to Suit-5. The suit, as framed, is not maintainable through the next friend, hence, is liable to be rejected on this ground alone.

1706. Sri Verma further submits that O.P.W.-2 i.e. late D.N.Agarwal in his own statement under Order X, Rule 2 recorded on 20.4.1992 has admitted that the idols kept at Ram Chabutara, in the outer courtyard was shifted to the inner courtyard and kept under the central dome in the disputed building in the night of 22/23rd December, 1949. Further that it is also an admitted position that the idols while kept on Ram Chabutara in the outer courtyard were being looked after and managed by the priest of Nirmohi Akhara and the outer courtyard was in possession of Nirmohi Akhara. It means that the idols belong to Nirmohi Akhara, shifted from Ram Chabutara to the central dome of the disputed building and that being so, the idols cannot be held independent legal entity outside the religious endowment i.e. "Nirmohi Akhara".

1707. Sri M.M. Pandey, learned counsel for the plaintiffs

(Suit-5), in respect to Issues No. 1 and 21 (Suit-5) has submitted as under:

A. Existence of a Supreme Being which controls everything and possesses the capacity of conferring good on human beings, is admitted alike by Islam (Allah), Christianity (God) and Hindu Dharma (Bramhan or Onkar). This Supreme Being is outside the realm of Courts, hence is not a Juristic entity. According to Islam, a Messenger (Prophet Mohammad) pronounced the commands of Allah in the form of Quran and other spiritual edicts; according to Christianity too, a Messenger came earlier (Christ – Son of God) to deliver the Gospel of God. According to Hindus, Bramha manifests Himself in human form by 'Reincarnation' (Avatar) with all the powers of the Supreme Being subject to self-imposed human limitations. William Finch recorded this popular perception about Ram in early 17th Century. Bramha too is seen in many Forms: Bramha (the Creator), Vishnu (the Preserver), Mahesh (the Destroyer), Shakti (the Universal Energy) etc. Ram and Krishna are Reincarnations of Vishnu; In Shrimad Bhagwat Gita Chapter X, verse 31, Shri Krishna declared: "Among warriors, I am Ram."

B. This self-manifestation of the Supreme Being is known as SWYAMBHU reincarnation, and the place of reincarnation is treated to be sacred just as Islam holds Mecca (birthplace of Prophet Mohammad) or Christianity holds Bethlehem/Jerusalem (birthplace of Christ) as sacred. While Islam and Christianity do not have a concept of Deity, Hindu Dharma has elevated the concept of Sacredness into an object of Divinity fit for Worship and recognises it as a Deity in a physical form too with a Faith that its worship has the capacity of conferring well. At the same time, "a Hindu does not worship the 'Idol or the material body made of clay or gold or other substance' as a mere glance of the mantras or prayers will show. They worship the eternal Spirit of the Deity, or certain attributes of the same, in a suggestive form, which is used for the convenience of contemplation as a mere symbol or emblem. It is the incantation of the mantras peculiar to a particular Deity that causes the manifestation or presence of the Deity or, according to some, the gratification of the Deity.

C. A mere birthplace without a physical outward shape may be a Deity. There is no question of consecration of Swyambhu Deity. (See Addangi Nageswara Rao (supra)

D. In addition to Swyambhu Deities, Idols/Images are made of any material and are CONSECRATED with the Spirit of Supreme Being through certain Vedic rites, known as Pran-Pratishtha whereby they become fit receptacles of Divinity; such Idols/Images too are recognised as Deities. In these Suits, the Plaintiffs of OOS 4 of 1989, Sunni Board & others, admitted in paras 11 and 23 of their plaint that on 23.12.1949, "a large crowd of Hindus……entered the mosque and desecrated the mosque by placing Idols inside the mosque". This implies an admission that the Idols were Deities as known to Hindu law, otherwise mere images (like printed pictures) could not desecrate the mosque; Sunni Board and others are barred/estopped, by this admission, from urging that the Idols were not consecrated.

E. 'Images/Idols' are symbols of Supreme Being; in worshipping the Image, the Hindu purports to worship the Supreme Deity and none else. It is for the benefit of the worshippers that there is a concept of Images of Supreme Being which is bodiless, has no attribute, is pure Spirit and has got no second (B.K. Mukharjea, 1983 Edn. p.26). The 'Self-revealed' Images are called SWYAMBHU where the Self-possessed Vishnu has placed himself on earth in stone or wood for the benefit of mankind. Thus 'Asthan Ram Janmabhumi', Plaintiff No. 2 in OOS 5 of 1989 is a Swyambhu Deity – the place where Lord Vishnu manifested Himself and was born as RAM, son of Kaushalya/King Dashrath.

F. The decisions of Indian Courts as well as Privy Council have held uniformly that Hindu Idol is a Juristic Person. Hindu Idol is according to long established authority founded upon the religious Customs of Hindus and recognition thereof by Courts of Law, a juristic entity. 'Deity has a juridical status with power of suing and being sued. Its interests are attended to by the person who has the Deity in his charge and who in law is his manager with all the powers which would in these circumstances, on analogy, be given to an infant heir. This doctrine is firmly established.

G. As a Juristic Person, the 'Hindu Deity' is a Class by Himself with no exact parallel. The Deity in short is conceived of as a living being and is treated in the same way as the master of the house would be treated by his humble servant. The daily routine of life is gone through with minute accuracy, the vivified Image is regaled with necessities and luxuries of life in due succession even to the changing of clothes, the offering of cooked and uncooked food and retirement to rest.

H. Endowment in favour of Deity is a perpetual estate; it

is capable of receiving and holding property, but it does not possess a power of alienation, hence endowment in favour of Deity is necessarily a tied up or perpetual estate; absolute gifts of lands or money perpetually to an Idol or for other religious purposes have been held to be valid in Hindu Law from early times. A religious endowment does not create title in respect of the dedicated property in any body's favour, and property dedicated for religious charitable purpose for which the owner of the property or donor has indicated no administrator or manager, a property dedicated for general public use is itself raised to the category of a Juristic Person and such a property vests in the property itself as a Juristic Person. This special legal status squarely applies to Asthan Ram Janma Bhumi, Plaintiff No.2 in OOS 5 of 1989; the spot where Ram was born, and all properties appurtenant thereto belong to and vest in the spot itself as juristic person. No body else, not even the Shabait can become owner of the Deity or property of Deity.

I. Since such vesting of the property is a perpetual estate and the Deity itself does not possess the power of its alienation, it follows that no law can divest the Deity of its property under any circumstance whatsoever. A Temple is the 'house' of the Deity. By destroying the house, neither the Deity nor Deity's property, on which the house stood, could cease to belong to Deity. Section 18 of Transfer of Property Act recognises that the rule against perpetuity under that Act, does not apply to transfer of property for the benefit of public; such exclusion is in-built in Hindu Law itself.

J. Vide, page 19-20 of Mulla's "Principles of Hindu

www.vadaprativada.com

Law, 1958 Edn, some of the important recognised Dharmashastras are known as Smritis of Manu (200 BC), Yajnavalkya (1st Century AD –p. 24)), Narad (200 AD –p. 26)), Parashara, Brihaspati, Katyayana (4th-5th Century AD – p.32) etc; they are of universal application, not in substitution for another but all treated as supplementary to each other (-p.20).

K. At page 33, Mulla records: "Katyayana maintains unimpaired the distinctive qualities of Smriti of Brahaspati to which he freely refers. His exposition is authoritative and remarkable for its freshness of style and vigorous approach. There can be little doubt that this Smriti must have been brought into line with the current law. It must have commanded a wide appeal as may readily be gathered from the profuse manner in which it has been quoted in all leading commentaries. The arduous task of collecting all the available texts of Katyayana from numerous commentaries and digests was accomplished by Mahamahopadhyaya Kane who collated and published in 1933 about one thousand verses of the Smrtiti on Vyavahara (Procedure) with an English translation".

L. Statement of law in Katyayana Smriti is of special significance in these suits. The force, sanctity and King's duty relating to Temples has been strongly emphasised in the Hindu Law from ancient times. Apararka [held to be an Authority under Hindu Law by PC in Buddha Singh Vs. Laltu Singh, 42 I.A. 208 = ILR (1915) 37 All 604) (Mulla p.51-52 acknowledged by Banares School] says that King should not deprive Temples of their properties (History of Dharam Shastra – Government Oriental Series - by P.V.

Kane, Volume II Part II page 913). At page 911 Kane quotes Yagnavalkya that it is part of King's duty to prosecute and fine persons interfering with or destroying the property of Temples; he cites Manu (IX/280) requiring the King to pronounce death sentence on who breaks a Temple, and him who breaks an image to repair the whole damage and pay a fine of 500 pannas. The Deity and Temple not only served the object of Worship of Divine, but also served social purpose.

M. A significant recent decision of English Courts has recognised the concept of Hindu Idol's disability and representation by 'next friend', namely Bumper Development Corporation Ltd Vs. Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis & Others (supra) (including Union of India and other Indian Parties); a decision rendered by the Trial Court was upheld by Court of Appeal and House of Lords refused Leave to Appeal against CA decision, popularly known as Nataraj Case. In Tamil Nadu, near a 12th Century Temple which had laid in ruins since 13th Century, (called Pathur Temple), and remained un-worshipped since centuries (at pages 643 & 640), a bronze Hindu Idol, known as Siva Nataraj, was found by a labourer, Ramamoorthi, in 1976 during excavation of the ruins. The Nataraj Idol was sold through several hands and ultimately reached London market; criminal investigation for offence of theft of Idol was started and London Metropolitan Police seized it. Bumper Development Corporation laid claim to it as purchaser and sued for its possession and damages. Several other Claimants were impleaded to the suit: these included Union of India, State of Tamil Nadu, Thiru

Sadagopan (Claimant No 3) as "the fit person" of the Temple and Temple itself (Claimant No. 4) through Claimant No3. (The concept of "fit person" is same as "Next Friend" at page 643). During pendency of the proceedings, a Sivalingam (which too was found buried in the ruins of the Temple) was reinstated as an object of worship at the site of the Temple. The Trial Judge, relying upon B.K.Mukherjea's Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts (page 646 of Report) held that Claimant No4 (Temple) suing through Claimant No. 3 as 'fit person, or custodian or next friend' (page 643 of Report) had proved his title superior to that of Bumper and 'the pious intention of 12th Century notable who gave the land and built the Pathur Temple remained in being and was personified by the Sivalingam of the Temple which itself had a title superior to that of Bumper'. The Court of Appeal upheld the finding of the Trial Court Judge that under Hindu Law, the Temple was a juristic entity and Claimant No. 3 (next friend Thiru Sadagopan) had the right to sue and be sued on behalf of the Temple. The right of the Temple through the Next Friend to possess the Nataraj Idol was upheld (page 648 of Report); House of Lords refused Leave to Appeal (page 649 of Report). This 20th Century decision of English Courts has striking similarity with the present Ram Janmabhumi case: 12th Century Temple remained in ruins & un-worshipped through centuries (in our case it was 11th-12th Century Vishnu-Hari Temple which was demolished in 1528 and Babri Mosque, DS was erected at its place, so that the Temple/Deity 'remained in ruins with existing foundations'). During the pendency of Bumper Development Corporation case, a Shivalingam, found buried in the ruins of the Temple was 'reinstated'. In our case, ASI found an ancient 'Circular Shrine' embedded in disputed area, DS was destroyed on 6.12.1992, and at its place a make-shift Temple was erected at Ram Janma Bhumi with Bhagwan Shri Ramlala installed in it; so both Deities Plffs 1 & 2 of OOS 5 of 1989 got into position. In Bumper case, the 'pious intention of 12th Century' dedication was held by the Trial Court 'to remain in being' as personified by the Sivalingam of the Temple, a juristic entity, which was represented by 'Next Friend. The same concept is laid down in the case of Adangi Nageswara Rao Vs. Sri Ankamma Devatha Temple (supra) (paras 6 & 8 – see para 36 of these Arguments). So also, in our case, Vishnu-Hari Temple of 11th-12th Century must be deemed 'to remain in being' on erection of make-shift Temple coupled with Circular Shrine and the Deity/Temple – Plaintiffs 1 & 2 must be held to be duly represented through Plaintiff No. 3 in OOS 5 of 1989 as Next Friend.

N. As mentioned earlier, a Hindu Deity is a Class by itself (See Para 40), there is no exact analogy or parallel. Its affairs are managed by a Shebait, but the Shebait is neither owner nor trustee of the Deity or its property as known to Indian Trusts Act (Section 1). 'Beneficiary' of the dedication (actual or assumed) is the Deity and every Worshipper/Devotee; the latter has interest enough to force the Shebait to perform his functions duly even through a Court action, if necessary. Supreme Court has held in the case of Bishwanath Vs. Sri Thakur Radha Ballabhji (AIR 1967 SC 1044) that worshippers of an Idol are its beneficiaries, though only in a spiritual sense, and persons who go in only for the purpose of devotion have, according to Hindu Law and religion, a greater and deeper interest in temples than mere servants who serve there for some pecuniary advantage; it goes on to say: "That is why decisions have permitted a worshipper in such circumstances to represent the Idol and to recover the property for the Idol". It is the duty of the State (King) to protect the Deity and its property – a shade of this duty is found in Section 92 CPC. [In para 40 of Guruvayur Devasom Managing Committee Vs. C.K. Rajan, AIR 2004 SC 561, the Supreme Court has held, "In any event, as a Hindu Temple is a juristic person, the very fact that S. 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure, seeks to protect the same, for the self-same purpose, Arts. 226 and 32 could also be taken recourse to."] Shebait cannot alienate the property of the Deity.

O. A religious endowment does not create title in respect of the dedicated property in any body's favour, and property dedicated for religious charitable purpose for which the owner of the property or donor has indicated no administrator or manager, a property dedicated for general public use is itself raised to the category of a Juristic Person and such a property vests in the property itself as a Juristic Person. This special legal status squarely applies to Asthan Ram Janma Bhumi, Plaintiff No.2 in OOS 5 of 1989; the spot where Ram was born, and all properties appurtenant thereto belong to and vest in the spot itself as juristic person.

P. An idol is in the position of a minor and when the person representing it leaves it in a lurch, a person interested in the worship of the idol can certainly be clothed with an ad hoc power of representation to protect its interest. [See

Bishwanath Vs. Shri Thakur Radha Ballabhji (supra)].

Q. Temples are sancrosanct and there cannot be alienation of a public temple under any circumstance being res extra commercium. In this regard he placed reliance on Mukundji Mahraj Vs. Persotam Lalji Mahraj (supra) (Para 28-29); Manohar Ganesh Tambekar Vs. Lakhmiram Govindram (supra) (Para 88); Kali Kinkor Ganguli Vs. Panna Banerji (supra) (Paras 24-25, Page 1936); and, Kasi Mangalath Nath Illath Vishnu Namboodiri (supra) (Para 2).

R. Smt. Panna Banerjee Vs. Kali Kinkar (supra) (Para 65-66) cited to show that the deity cannot be sold. It is not a property and none can be its owner not even its founder.

S. Khetter Chunder Ghosh Vs. Hari Das Bandopadhyay (supra) (para 66, p. 559) is an authority for the proposition that the deity is not a property. None can own it. Idol is not a transferable property.

T. The fact is that the "disputed area" has always been considered to be the " Deity" . The deity in the present case is "Sri Ram Janmasthan", being the place where "Sri Ram Lalla" is Virajman that is resident. The said "disputed area" has always been considered sacred by the Hindus before and even after the construction of the disputed structure. The extensive archaeological evidence found by excavation by the Archaeological Survey of India clearly shows that before the construction of the structure known as the "Babri Masjid" in 1528 , there was an existent Hindu temple underneath it.

U. "The Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts" by B.K. Mukherjea also states at Page 160-162:

> "Para 4.13. ..... The Smriti writers have laid down that if an image is broken or lost another may be substituted in its place; when so substituted it is not a new personality but the same deity, and properties vested in the lost or mutilated thakur become vested in the substituted thakur. Thus, a dedication to an idol is really a dedication to the deity who is ever-present and ever-existent, the idol being no more than the visible image through which the deity is supposed specially to manifest itself by reason of the ceremony of consecration."

V. Presence of an idol is not the only consideration to determine whether the place is a temple or not; what is important is whether a certain group of Hindus consider it sacred or whether a certain group can feel "divine presence" in the place.

W. An Idol is not a precondition. If the public goes for worship and consider that there is a divine presence, then it is a temple. He relied on Ram Janki Deity Vs. State of Bihar, 1999 (5) SCC 50 (Paras 13 to 19); P.V. Durrairajulu Vs. Commissioner of Hindu Religious Trusts, AIR 1989 Madras 60 (Para 18).

X. Referring to Poohari Fakir Sadavarthy of Bondilipuram (supra) (Para 8) Sri Pandey contended that the institution will be a temple if two conditions are satisfied – one – it is a place of public religious worship – and the other – it is used as of right by the Hindu community or any section thereof as a place of worship.

Y. Existence of idol not necessary if the public which go there consider that there is a divine presence in a particular place and by offering worship at that place they are likely to be the recipient of the bounty or blessings of God, then you have got the essential feature of a temple. The test is not the installation of an idol but the mode of its worship. Here Sri Pandey refers T.R.K. Ramaswamy Servai and Anr. Vs. The Board of Commissioners (supra) (Para 47); Board of Commissioners of Hindu Endowment Vs. P. Narasimha (supra) (Para 5 page 135); and Gedela Satchidanand Murti (supra) (Para 16, pages 684 and 685).

Z. The nature of Hindu religion is monism. It believes in one supreme-being who manifests himself in many forms. This is the reason why Hindus start adoring any deity either handed down by tradition or brought by a Guru, Swayambhu and seek to attain the ultimate supreme as held in Sri Adi Vishweshara of Kashi Vishwanath Temple (supra) (Para 30 page 631).

AA. According to Hindu notion what is worshipped in a temple is not the stone image or image made of wood. It is the God behind the image which is the object of worship. The real owner of the property dedicated to a temple is deemed to be God himself represented through a particular idol or deity which is merely a symbol. Property worshipped for more than 300 years, there can be no direct evidence of consecration. After the length of time it is impossible to prove by affirmative evidence that there was consecration. However, the idol was duly recognized by all who believed. [See Gokul Nath Ji Maharaj Vs. Nathji Bhogilal (supra) (para 4 and 5)].

AB. Not only the area where Sri Ram Lalla is Virajman and is believed to be his place of birth as a deity but the entire complex is elevated to the status of a deity because the

dedicated property gets imbued with a sacred character.

AC. Mahant Ram Saroop Dasji Vs. S.P. Sahi (supra) (Pages 958-959, Paras 10 & 12) was cited and it is submitted that it is difficult to visualize that a Hindu private Debuttar will fail for a deity is immortal. Even if the idol gets broken or lost or stolen another image may be consecrated and it cannot be said that the original object has ceased to exist. An idol which is a juridical person is not subject to death because the Hindu concept is that the idol lives for ever and placed reliance on Idol of Thakur Sri Govind Dev Ji Maharaj (supra) (Page 908, Para 6).

AD. Deity is a living being to be treated like a master. It is not a moving chattel. Hindu idol is not property. Custodian cannot destroy or cause injury. Pramatha Nath Mullick Vs. Pradhyumna Kumar Mullick (supra) (Para 9).

AE. Referring to Full Bench decision of Calcutta High Court in Bhupati Nath Smrititirth Bhattacharjee (supra) (Para 73) Sri Pandey contended that as per Shastric Hindu Law if the image is broken or lost another may be substituted in its place and when so substituted it is not a new personality but the same deity with properties previously vested in the lost or mutilated Thakur.

AF. The question as to what "portion" of the property is sacred is irrelevant since Hindus consider the entire area being the place of birth of Sri Ram as a deity in itself being the " Sri Ram Janmasthan / Sri Ram Janmabhoomi", being the Plaintiff No.2 .The presence of Sri Ram Lalla Virajman, being the Plaintiff No.1 on the said Sri Ram Janmasthan (being the Plaintiff No.2)does not detract from the fact that the entire disputed area is the place of birth of Sri Ram and

therefore a deity in itself to the Hindus. The witnesses including foreign travelers have repeatedly confirmed that the entire premises has been worshipped, "parikrama" was undertaken by the devotees, even after the construction of the disputed structure. He submitted that there has been no denial of the above statement by any of the parties . He referred to paras 20 and 22 of the plaint and pointed out that the same have not been denied.

AG. Any worshipper is entitled to act on behalf of the Idol if the idol is undefended by a Shebait and cannot look after itself. This view finds support in Bishwanath Vs. Shri Thakur Radha Ballabhji, (supra) (para 10 and 11) and Veruareddi Ramaraghava Reddy Vs. Konduru Seshu Reddy, 1966 Supp SCR 270.

AH. In the present case since the deities of Sri Ram Janmabhumi and Sri Ram Lalla Virajman were not being able to look after themselves and no one was acting to protect their interests and their premises were being occupied or was being attempted to be occupied by those who were intending to extinguish the very right to be worshipped of the deities and repeated attempts were being made to interfere with the possession and the right of being worshipped by the devotees , hence concerned worshippers compromising of eminent and spiritual men of the Hindu community being represented by the Plaintiff No.3 were forced to approach the Court to protect the right of the deities (being the Plaintiffs No.1 and 2) to be worshipped .

AI. In support of the contention that the place of worship itself and the Deities seated at the disputed site are juridical persons Sri M.M. Pandey relied on Guruvayur Devaswom

no. 1 and 2 (Suit-5), contended that Bhagwan Sri Ram of Ayodhya is undoubtedly a deity as such a juristic person with capacity to sue and being sued. Referring to B.K. Mukherjea's Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts (supra) in his written arguments he says:

> A. "A Hindu idol", the Judicial Committee observed in one of its recent pronouncements, "is according to long established authority founded upon the religious customs of the Hindus and the recognition there of by Courts of Law, a juristic entity. It has a juridical status with the power of suing and being sued." You should remember, however, that the juridical person in the idol is not the material image, and it is an exploded theory that the image itself develops into a legal person as soon as it is consecrated and vivified by the Pran Pratistha ceremony. It is not also correct that the Supreme Being of which the idol is a symbol or image is the recipient and owner of the dedicated property. (p.38.)
> B. From the spiritual standpoint the idol might be to the devotee the very embodiment of Supreme God but that is a matter beyond the reach of law altogether. (p.39.)
> C. The early Vedic hymns make no allusion to idol worship, and Max Muller held that idolatry did not exist among them. 'The religion of the Vedas,' he declared, 'knows no idols.' The Jabala Upanishad says, 'Images are meant only as aids to meditation for the ignorant'. (p.149)
> D. The image simply gives a name and form to the formless God and the orthodox Hindu idea is that conception of form is only for the benefit of the worshipper and nothing else. (p.153.)

www.vadaprativada.com

E. "The idol, deity or religious object," observed West and Buhler in their Digest on Hindu Law, "is looked upon as a kind of human entity." It is a sacred entity and ideal personality possessing proprietary rights. The Judicial Committee has pointed out on more occasions than one that it is only an ideal sense that property can be said to belong to an idol and the possession and management of it must, in the nature of things, be entrusted to some person as Shebait or manager. The legal principle has thus been summed up in one of the pronouncements of the Judicial Committee:

F. "A Hindu idol is, according to long-established authority, founded upon the religious customs of the Hindus, and the recognition thereof by courts of law, a 'juristic entity.' It has a juridical status, with the power of suing and being sued. Its interests are attended to by the person who has the deity in his charge and who in law is its manager, with all the powers which would, in such circumstances, on analogy, be given to the manager of the estate of an infant heir. It is unnecessary to quote the authorities; for this doctrine, thus simply stated, is firmly established."(pp.158)

G. Existence of idol is not necessary for temple.- While usually an idol is instituted in a temple, it does not appear to be an essential condition of a temple as such. In an Andhra case, it was held that to constitute a temple, it is enough if it is a place of public religious worship and if the people believe in its religious efficacy, irrespective of the fact whether there is an idol or a structure or other paraphernalia. It is enough if the devotees or the

pilgrims feel that there is one superhuman power which they should worship and invoke its blessings. (pp.158-159.)

H. Moreover, - and this was pointed out by Chatterjee, J., who was a member of the Full Bench – the conception of Hindu jurists was not that the image of clay or stone constituted the juristic person. The Smriti writers have laid down that if an image is broken or lost another may be substituted in its place; when so substituted it is not a new personality but the same deity, and properties vested in the lost or mutilated thakur become vested in the substituted thakur. Thus, a dedication to an idol is really a dedication to the deity who is ever-present and ever-existent, the idol being no more than the visible image through which the deity is supposed specially to manifest itself by reason of the ceremony of consecreation. The decision in Bhupati Smritititirtha v. Ramlal has been followed by other High Courts in India, and it has been held by the Allahabad High Court in Mohor Singh v. Het Singh that a bequest to complete the building of a temple which was commenced by the testator and to install and maintain an idol therein was a valid bequest under the Hindu law.(pp.162-163)

I. A donor can certainly create a trust for the worship of an idol which is to be consecreated and established in future. The same principle applies if the deity is such as is worshipped periodically like Durga, and has no permanent image. The dedication of property for carrying on such periodical worship is perfectly valid, although every year a new clay image is prepared which is thrown into the river after the Puja is over. (p.163)

J. Where there is no deed, no question of construction arises, and the validity or otherwise of the endowment would have to be determined entirely on circumstantial evidence. In Ram Ratan Lal v. Kashnath Tewari, the Patna High Court has discussed the relevant considerations and the evidence needed for deciding the question how far the endowment is illusory. (p.167)

K. Reference may also be made to the judgments of the Supreme Court in Idol of Thakurji Shri Govind Deoji Maharaj (supra); Bishwanath and Anr. Vs. Shri Thakur Radhaballabhji (supra); Jogendra Nath Naskar (supra); Kalanka Devi Sansthan Vs. Maharashtra Revenue Tribunal (supra); Official Trustee of West Bengal Vs. C.I.T., West Bengal (supra); Dr M. Ismail Faruqui (supra); and Ram Jankijee Deities (supra).

L. Plaintiffs in paragraphs 19, 20 and 21 have specifically pleaded and given the reasons why the place believed to be the birth place of Lord Sri Rama itself is a deity. That a 'place' can be an object of worship is now beyond doubt on account of the decisions of the Supreme Court in Faruqi's case and in Ram Janki's case – (1999) 5 SCC p.50 also Mukherjea pp 158-9 quoted supra.

M. The extracts quoted above from Mukherjea's treatise clearly brings out the distinction between a physical object, namely, an idol and a deity, though the two are used occasionally as inter-changeable expressions. What emerges is that it is a mistake to consider that there must be a physical object, namely, an idol before there can be a deity.

N. There can be no doubt now that a deity is a juristic person and can sue through a next friend appointed by courts - see AIR 1967 SC 1044 . The present plaintiff 3 Sri.Trilokinath Pandey was appointed by the order of the Hon'ble Supreme Court.

O. Issues Nos. 21 and 22 are also closely connected and stand answered. It is made clear that the plaintiffs are not claiming that the idols alleged to have been placed under the dome in December, 1949 are the plaintiff deities– the idols are for the benefit of the devotees.

1709. The case of defendant no.3 (Suit-4), i.e., Nirmohi Akhara has been/is that the temple at Ram Chabutara belong to Nirmohi Akhara since long, was its property including the idols. It is not in dispute that Hindu idol, after its due consecration, becomes a legal personality but in the case in hand, Nirmohi Akhara, a religious endowment was managing the said temple and worshipping the idol hence in any case it stood in the capacity of Shebait of the said idol. The said status of Nirmohi Akhara was never terminated at any point of time and therefore, no suit on behalf of such an idol could have been filed by ignoring defendant no.3 and that too in the absence of any allegation of inaction or mal-action on the part of the Shebait i.e. Nirmohi Akhara. In support Sri Verma also placed reliance on Commissioner, Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras Vs. Sri Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar of Sri Shirur Mutt (supra) and Kunwar Singh Vs. Sri Thakurji Mahraj, Birajman Mandir Gauntia Majra Dhamipur, Pargana and Tahsil Nawabganj, District Bareilly, 1992 (2) AWC 890.

1710. The pleadings, argument etc. over these issues require us to consider the matter from two different angles:

www.vadaprativada.com

(i) Whether plaintiff no.1 is a Deity in terms of Hindu Law. Its effect,

(ii) Plaintiff no.2 is a place and therefore, first of all it has to be seen whether a place by itself can be a Deity and be conferred status of legal person in the light of principles of Hindu Law.

1711. If both these aspects about the Deities are decided in affirmance only then we will have to consider whether there was any Shebait of the said two plaintiffs and whether the plaintiff no.3 has rightly filed the suit in question as their next friend.

1712. First we first propose to consider, though in brief, as to how the idol worship came to exist, the concept form and the foundation etc., in the light of available ancient Hindu scriptures as also the judicial precedence.

1713. One of the oldest Aryan scripture i.e. the Rigveda refers to the worship of natural powers like sun, water, air etc. but according to Max Muller, "the religion of the Vedas knows of no idol". He (Muller) says that the worship of idols in India is a secondary formation, a later degradation of the more primitive worship of ideal gods. B.K.Mukherjea in Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts (supra) on page 13 has said:

> "There is a difference of opinion amongst scholars as to whether the religion that is embodied in the Vedas was at all polytheistic. A number of gods indeed are named, but there are various passages in the Rigveda which expressly declare that the various gods are only different names of that "which is one". Max Muller calls the religion, "henotheism". The gods to whom the hymns of the Rigveda are addressed are idealised beings, who represent the beneficient and radiant powers of nature, e.g., sun, air,

earth, sky, dawn, etc. But the Vedic seers had, from the beginning, a glimpse of the infinity behind these finite forces, as is shown by the conception of 'Aditi' the mother of the gods which, as Max Muller says, was the earliest name invented to express the infinite*." (emphasis added)*

1714. Similarly, about the existence of 'temple' or 'monastic institution' in Vedic age, B.K. Mukherjea in Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts (supra), on page 13 and 15 has said :

"It is difficult to say to what extent the charitable and religious endowments as we see in modern times existed in the early Vedic period. The earliest Vedic literature which is known by the name of Samhitas throws very little light on this point. It seems fairly certain that at this period there were no temples for worship of idols as we find in subsequent time, and an institution like the mutt or monastery of later days was also unknown."

"There is also no mention of monastic institution in the Vedic literature. According to the Vedic Grihya Sutras, which regulated the life of man, there were the institutions of four Asramas prescribed for all persons belonging to the twice born castes. Man's life was divided according to this scheme into four Asramas or stages. The first stage was of Brahmachari or student who was to live in the house of hi preceptor and study the Vedas living a life of utmost austerity and discipline. In the second stage he married and became a householder or Grihastha and his duty was to perform the religious and secular works that were prescribed for this stage of life. In the third which was the Banaprastha stage, he was to live the life of a recluse, and

in the last stage he became a Jati or ascetic." (emphasis added)*

1715. Sri B.K. Mukherjea's above observation has come after his concurrence with the views of some historians at that time and particularly Europeans that Aryans migrated to India from elsewhere and Vedic literature is the scripture of Aryan culture. This is evident from what the learned author in para 1.11, page 10, has observed with respect to Rigveda; "In the Rigveda, which is the earliest record of Aryun culture...."

1716. In 'Development of Hindu Iconography' by Jitendra Nath Banerjea (First Edition in 1941 and 5th Edition in 2002 published by Munshiram Manoharlal Publishers Pvt. Ltd.), the learned author opines:

> "The nature of the prehistoric remains just discussed cannot be determined with certainty on account of the absence of any literary data throwing clear light on them ; but with the help of certain passages occurring in the Rgveda, the earliest extant literature of the Indo-Aryans, it is possible to offer a tentative explanation about some of them. It may be observed, however, that in India, prior to the advent of the Aryans, image-worship might have been practised by her original settlers. But it is still a matter of doubt and controversy when this was first introduced among the Aryans who migrated into India. From the beginning of the scientific method of Vedic studies in India this question engaged the attention of scholars." (Page 42) (emphasis added)

1717. Thereafter, the learned author referred to the views of Max Muller, who said that the Vedic religion knew of no idols and it was a secondary formation. This has been reiterated by

www.vadaprativada.com

H.H. Wilson and Macdonell. Banerjea, then has also referred to a contrary view expressed by Bollensen.

1718. Sri S.V. Venkateswara, after considering rival opinions of several authorities on the subject, expressed his opinion that Vedic evidence was not at all sufficient for deciding whether gods were iconically represented in earlier Vedic period or not. His later observations have been quoted by J.N. Banerjea in The Development of Hindu Iconography (supra) as under :

> *"In a later contribution (Rupam, Nos.42-4, 1930), he was more definite, and he collected numerous additional passages from the Rgveda and other Vedas in support of his view ; he even used the term iconography in relation to the representation of the Vedic deities. He assigned the foremost place to the well-known verse in the Rgveda, IV. 24, 10, which was also noticed by Macdonell and others. The latter thought that it was a late passage probably containing an allusion to some concrete symbol of Indra. It is : Ka imam dasabhirmamendram krinati dhenubhih I Yada vrtrani jamghanadathainam me punardadat ('Who will buy this my Indra for ten cows? When he has slam his foes, he may give himback to me'). Venkateswara remarks about the passage thus : "The context shows that there were permanent images of Indra made and hired for what was in probability an Indra festival, and there were apparently images of Vrtra made for each occasion, whence the plural Vrtrani to be slain by Indra." With regard to R.V., V. 52, 15, noticed above, Venkateswara makes this significant observation, " this passage is also interesting in that it shows that there was no idol worship,

but that images were used as concrete representations of gods whose real form and existence were conceived as different*." The existence of two forms of each god, one the concrete and finite and the other the abstract and infinite, is clear according to him in a Yajurveda passage (T.S., I. 7. 12; also A.V., VII. 31) which reads svaya tanva tanumairayata ('with your own, i.e., real, body enter this concrete body'). In his opinion,* the image is regarded in the Rgveda merely as a physical tenement of the real form of the god*, while in these texts we have two forms of the god mentioned- that* in the image being only an apparent and evanescent form, and that in the universe being the real and permanent form (sva tanuh). He finds reference to the relationship of these forms, finite and infinite, of the god even in the Rgveda (VII. 100, 6) which speaks of Visnu's assumption of another, the finite form in the battle with Vrtra, where he was a worthy companion of Indra (yadanyarupah samithe babhutha) ; Indra, who used Visnu as his vehicle (Visnvanusthitah), asked him to expand into the infinite space (sakhe Visno vitaram vikramasva) elbowing Vrtra out of existence till the latter begged to be received into the body of Indra himself. From this Venkateswara concluded that the belief was that the finite cabined in a particular form was not cribbed or confined by this fact but was capable of infinite expansion. He finds distinct references to the fashioning of images in such passages as R. V., VI. 28, 6 (asriram cit krnutha supratikam i.e., 'make that which was an ugly mass a beautiful image'); R.V., IV. 17, 4 (Indrasya karta svapastamo bhut, i.e., 'the maker of Indra was a most stalwart being, a most skilful workman'); casting of metal images is also referred to in the Rgveda and other Vedas in such passages as R.V., VIII. 69, 12 (surmyam susiramiva, i.e., 'like a hollow tube'), R.V., X. 184, 1 (Visnuryonim kalpayatu tvasta rupani pimsatu 1 A sincatu prajapatirdhata garbham dadhatu te, i.e., 'May Visnu make the female organ fit ; may Tvasta fix the limbs ; may Prajapati sprinkle ; may Dhata hold your embryo'), R.V., I. 32, 2 (Tvastasmai vajram svaryam tataksa, i.e., 'Tvasta made the thunderbolt for Indra, which could be far flung'), etc. He further finds references to temples (devagrhas) in such passages as R.V., VII. 56, 14 (Sahasriyam damyam bhagametam grhamedhiyam maruto jusadhvam, i.e., 'Oh! Maruts accept this your portion offered at the temple*'), R.V., VII. 59, 10 (Grhamedhasa, i.e., the Maruts in the houses are munificent), etc. Venkateswara thinks that this inference from the passages is supported by the* finds of images of the storm gods in Babylonia*. He even finds allusion to processions of images in R.V., I. 10, 1 and III. 53, 5-6. "In the latest (Khila) Vedic texts, the goddess Sri is represented as a golden antelope adorned with garlands of silver and gold" (he obviously refers to the Sri Sukta in this statement)." (Pages 45 – 47) (emphasis added)*

1719. B.K. Mukherjea in Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts (supra) refers to "Gautama's Dharmasuttra" and says that there is some reference to idols but the age of the work is unknown, and it does not specify any particular idol or idols. It says that the gods that are popularly worshipped by the Hindus at the present day are, for the most part, Pouranic deities, descriptions of which occur in various Puranas. The

"Puranas" literally mean ancient legends constitute a class of epic literature, didactic in character, which deal with various matters including cosmogony, the genealogies and exploits of gods, sages and kings, accounts of the different Avatars or incarnations of Vishnu, as well as the rites of worshipping gods by prayers, fasting, votive offerings, pilgrimages, etc. On page 25 B.K. Mukherjea further says :

> " The Purans are sectarian, in the sense that some of them extol the merits of worshiping Vishnu, while many prefer Siva worship. The Upanishads which embody the philosophical concept of the Vedas describe Brahman or the Supreme Being as "that from which all things are born, that by which when born they live and into which they enter at death." These creative, preservative and destructive functions or aspects of the divinity constitute the Trinity of the Puranas and are symbolised respectively by Brahma, Vishnu and Siva. The Puranas say expressly that Brahma, Vishnu and Siva though three in form really constitute one entity and there is no difference amongst them except that of attributes. The reason is that each of the functions of creation, preservation and destruction implies the others and contains the others in a latent form. The worship of Brahma is not very popular, and I am not aware of any temple being dedicated to this creative deity except one at Pushkar, seven miles to the north-west of Ajmer in Rajasthan. The images that are worshipped are generally those of Siva or vishnu in their various forms or manifestations. The worship of Sakti or the female principle which is described as the consort of Siva in the different forms of Durga, Kali etc. is also popular and is the special feature of the Tantric system. Besides Siva, Vishnu and Durga, the other deities, who are generally adored by the Hindus, are Ganesh and Surya (Sun), and the numerous temples that adorn the various sacred places of the Hindus are dedicated for the most part to one or other of these five gods or Pancha Devata as they are called."

1720. It is said that the Vedic mythology was merely elaborated in Puranas. In this regard, B.K. Mukherjea, on pages 152 and 153 Para 4.3B has observed "

"This is not wholly or even substantially true. The sources of some of the legendary stories occurring in the Puranas can, no doubt, be traced in the Vedas but it would not be correct to say that the Pouranic gods were mere reproductions of the Vedic gods*. There is nothing in the Vedas corresponding to the Pouranic Trinity of Brahma, Vishnu and Siva. Brahma in the Vedic text signified the Sun, or was a synonym of prayer. Vishnu in the Rigveda occupied a rather subordinate position. He was also identified with the Sun, and his three strides encompassing the three spheres of existence, as suggestive of all pervasiveness constituted the foundation of the Pouranic legend of the three steps of Vishnu in his incarnation of the "Dwarf." Siva hardly appears as the name of any deity in Vedic time. The expression "Siva" means propitious or benignant. Rudra, one of the Vedic deities, was in all probability, another name of Agni or fire, and the Puranas identified Siva with Rudra. We hear very little of Ganapati or Kartikeya in the Vedas. Kali, who is described in the Puranas as a consort of Siva, was spoken of in*

Mandukopanishad as one of the seven tongues of fire, while the name of "Uma" occurs in the Kenopanishad, where she is described as a resplendent lady who gave lessons in divine knowledge to the gods. Sri Krishna, who looms so large in the Pouranic literature, is mentioned only as a scholar and not as a deity in the Vedas, though many of the legendary stories attributed to him in the Purans are traceable to similar legends associated with Indra in the Vedic literature.

It is not necessary for our present purpose to pursue these discussions any further. Though the Puranas are by no means uniform, the legends associated with the various gods are fairly well known and have been the basis of a considerable mass of poetic literature in later times. One cardinal principle underlying idol worship you would always bear in mind- and this has some bearing on the law relating to gift of property to idols- that whichever god the devotee might choose for purposes of worship and whatever image he might set up and consecrate with that object, the image represents the Supreme God and none else. There is no superiority or inferiority amongst the different gods*. Siva, Vishnu, Ganapati or Surya is extolled, each in its turn as the creator, preserver and supreme lord of the universe.* The image simply gives a name and form to the formless God and the orthodox Hindu idea is that conception of form is only for the benefit of the worshipper and nothing else*." (emphasis added)*

1721. Para 1.33 (page 26) of B.K. Mukherjea's Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts (supra) says that different images do not represent separate divinities; they are really

symbols of the one Supreme Being, and in whichever name and form the deity might be invoked, he is to the devotee the Supreme god to whom all the functions of creation, preservation and destruction are attributed. In worshipping the image the Hindu purports to worship the Supreme Deity and none else. The rationale of image worship is thus given in a verse which is quoted by "Raghunandan":

"चिन्मयस्याद्वितीयस्य निस्कलस्याशरीरिण साधकानां हिनाथयि ब्रहम्णी रुपकल्पना ।"

"It is for the benefit of the worshippers that there is conception of images of Supreme Being which is bodiless, has no attribute, which consists of pure spirit and has got no second."

1722. Some of the aspects of image worship have been referred to by Sri P.N. Mishra, Advocate which we have already quoted in extentio in para 1695 (A-J) which are also based on the Hindu scriptures against which nothing has been placed by the learned counsels appearing for pro-mosque parties and, therefore, we have no reason to doubt correctness thereof.

1723. The next step is the building and consecration of temples along with the establishment of idols worshipped in Hindu religion, elaborate rites and ceremonies. It appears to have been introduced by Brahminical writers. They have elaborated the procedure, steps regarding building of temples, consecration and purification of idols etc.

1724. A temple is the house of the deity and many of the rules of construction of a temple are practically the same as are prescribed for construction of a dwelling house, the additional rules being laid down to ensure greater sanctity of the structure that is meant for the abode of a deity. One who wants to built a

temple has got to select proper time for building with reference to astrological calculations. There are detailed rules relating to selection of the site which include examination of the nature and colour of the soil, its odour, taste, solidity, etc. After the site is selected, it is ploughed up and seeds are sown in it. As soon as the seeds germinate, the crop is allowed to be grazed over by cows. The cardinal points are then to be ascertained for giving this structure an auspicious aspect and there are rules to be observed regarding the materials to be used and the location of doors, windows, etc. The important religious ceremony is the "Vastu Jaga" in honour of "Vastu Purusha" or "Vastu Debata" who presides over dwelling house, with oblation of milk, rice and sugar.

1725. A temple, in the original sense of the Latin word 'templum', meant a rectangular place marked out by the augur for the purpose of his observations which were taken within a rectangular tent and gave it meaning of a consecrated place or building of rectangular shape 'inaugurated' by an augur. It may be applied in this sense to the house of a God. In its primitive sense 'templum' means a place marked of as a road to God. In ancient Hindu Religious Texts, the word 'प्रासाद' has been taken to mean and denote 'temple'. In Matsya Purana, it is written:

''एवमेव पुराणेषु तड़ागविधिरूच्यते,
कूपवापीसु सर्वासु तथा पुष्परिणीषु च।
एषएव विधिदृष्टः प्रतिष्ठासु तथैव च, मन्त्रतस्तु विशेषः स्यात प्रसादोद्यानभूमिषु।।

(The rules which are recognised for pratishtha and utsarga of tanks, water reservoirs, etc., should be observed in the case of garden and temples but with necessary variation in mantras.)

1726. The foundation of temples and consecration of an

image in the temple are two different subjects. In Hindu system of worship, temple is not merely a place of idol, but is also a place of worship. In 'Hindu temple' by Cramerish, it is said :

> "The surface of the Earth, in traditional Indian Cosmology, is regarded as demarcated by sunrise and sunset, by the points where the sun apparently emerges above and sinks below the horizon; by the East and West and also by the North and South points. It is therefore, represented by the ideogram or mandala of a square (F.N. 44- The square does not refer to the outline of the Earth). It connects the four points established by the primary pairs of opposites, the apparent sunrise and sunset points East and West; South and North. The Earth is therefore called 'Caturbhrsti' four cornered (Rv. X. 58. 3) and is symbolically shown as Prithvi-Mandala, whereas considered in itself, the shape of the Earth is circular. (Rv. X. 89. 4; S.B. VII. I. I. 37). The identification of the square with the vedi is in shape only and not in size and belongs to the symbolism of the Hindu temple. The vedi represents and is levelled Earth, a place of sacrifice or worship: 'No part of the ground should rise above it: for it was from there that the God ascended to heaven' (S.B. III. I.I.I-2). The site, the Earth should be even and firm for it is the starting place of the ascent (S.B. VIII 5.2.16). The link between the Earth and the end of the ascent stretches upwards into space. The intermediate region (antriksa) from it also leads downward and rests on Earth. In it the temple has its elevation. The Vastupurusamandala, the temple diagram and metaphysical plan is laid out on the firm and level ground; it is the intellectual foundation of the building, a forecast of its ascent and its projection on Earth."

1727. About the construction of the temple, it has been said:

''कृत्वा प्रभूवं सीललभराभन्विनिवेश्य च।
देवातयतनं कुर्याद्यशेधर्माभिवृद्धये।।
इष्टापूर्तेन लभ्यन्तेये लोकास्तान् बुभूषता।

(On the land where, sufficient source of water is available, beautiful gardens of flowers and fruits are also available only there a founder should build a temple for the sake of religion and fame. From building a temple one gets benefit of both ishta and purta.)

1728. The Sanskrit word 'प्रासाद' 'Prasad's origin is said as:

प्रकष्रेण सदनं सादनं वायस्मिन् सः प्रसादः

(A building made of stones with mantras and other.)

1729. It was the ancient Indian tradition that ordinary people's houses had no walls or pillars made of stones, or puckka bricks. It was said:

www.vadaprativada.com

शिलाकुड् य शिला स्तम्भं नरावासेनयोजयेत नयोजयेत – (कामिकागम)

1730. Stone-made structures were reserved for worship and were known as mandir. With the lapse of time this restriction was given up. There is a separate branch of Temple Architecture for building temples. The shape of a temple must be like a man. It is said:

प्रसादं पुरुषं मत्वा पूजयेत मंत्रवित्तम।

1731. A Book said to have been written by Maharajadhiraj Bhoj Deo, i.e., "Samrangan Sutradhar" is considered to be classic book of architecture on temples. The Mareechi Samhita provides the Code for the construction of a temple:

"The Garbagruha (Sanctum) is so constructed as to resemble a human body in its vertical form. The entire structure from the base to the top (called Vasstu Purusha)

is divided into six units, corresponding to six parts to the human body. Mareechi Samhita classifies the types of vimanas according to rituals, forms and materials used. Interestingly, the ritual-classification is based on the builder's mental attitude, health, success (pushti, shanthi, jayadam, adbhutam).

There are four types of temple architecture, the Nagara (North Indian), the Dravida (South Indian), the Vesara (a combination of both) and Kadamba Nagara (Pattadakal temples . . . . . Chalukyan style). There is no difference between Saiva and Vaishnava temples either in style or plan or form. All temples consist of the following integral parts, arranged in various forms, depending upon the era to which they belong to.

The principal part, the actual temple, is called Vimana and it includes the shrine and the spire. The mantapas or porches precede the door leading to the inner shrine. Mahadwara or main gateway is the principal feature at he entrance to the quadrangular enclosures that surround the temples."

1732. In "Law of Hindu Religious Endowments" by Ghosh, he stressed on the origin of temple:

"He has stated that during the Vedic times, offering were made to various deities by placing them on the fire which was named Hutaraha or the conveyor of offerings. The Rig Veda speaks of the fire as carrying the Homa articles after making them fragrant to the Gods. He has also pointed out that this type of worship was common among Semitic races and also in Rome.

This was in the primitive stages of civilization. At

later stages elaborate and complicated divination, propitiation, sacrifice, prayer and other rites and ceremonies developed in Hinduism. This was not confined to Hinduism only. Parallel situations obtained in Shintoism, Confucianism, Roman, Greek slavic and German religions also. Different orders of priestly functionaries to perform different cultic acts came into existence. Words, formulae and rites had to be punctiliously pronounced and executed. Rituals in all their varieties and with all their paraphernalia had to be meticulously executed. The temple priests had to dedicate their lives to the service of God by solemn vows. This was the method of evolution of temple worship.

Out of the rituals for the establishment of endowments for Hindu temples, two stand out prominently. They are Pratishta and Sankalpa."

1733. It has also been observed that the temples are also of two kinds. Ganapathi Iyer in his "Law of Hindu Religious Endowments" at page 214 said:

"Temples being the chief examples of Hindu religious endowments, they are of two kinds. Svayambhua Sthalams are temples in which the idol or deity is said to have self-revealed, i.e. not established by man. The other is Pratishta Sthalams*, namely, temples in which the deity is established newly by observing certain set of rules (page 206). The images are of kinds; Lekhya consisting of pictures, paintings on walls, canvas or vessels and (2) chiselled figures of wood or stone. Lepya may be of two kinds (1) moulded figures of clay, (2) metallic figures cast in moulds (page 210). The place in which temples have to* be built and the directions in which the images are to be placed are also mentioned in the book."

1734. About the description and kinds of images, B.K. Mukherjea's Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts (supra), page 154 para 4.5 says:

"4.5. Images-their descriptions.- Image, according to Hindu autho-rities, are of two kinds: the first is known as Sayambhu or self-existent or self-revealed*, while the other is* Pratisthita or established*. The Padma Puran says :"The* image of Hari (God) prepared of stone, earth*, wood, metal or the like and established according to the rites laid down in the Vedas, Smritis and Tantras is called the established; .....where the* self possessed Vishnu has placed himself on earth in stone or wood for the benefit of mankind, that is styled the self-revealed*." A Sayambhu or self-revealed image is a product of nature, it is Anadi or without any beginning and the worshippers simply discover its existence. Such image does not require consecration of Pratistha. All artificial or man-made images require consecration. An image according to matsya Purana may properly be made of gold, silver, copper, iron, brass or bell metal or any kind of gem, stone or wood, conch shell, crystal or even earth.*

Some persons worship images painted on wall or canvas, says the Brihata Purana and some worship the spheroidical stones known as Salgram. Generally speaking, the Pouranic writers classify artificial images under two heads; viz. (1) Lepya and (2) Lekhya. Lepya images are moulded figures of metal or clay, while Lekhyas denote all kinds of pictorial images including chiselled figures of wood or stone not made by moulds. In the case of Goswami Geeridhariji v Ramanlalji which went up to the Privy Council, the subject matter of dispute was the pictorial image of the head of the Ballavacharya Sect and not of any deity. Images again may be permanent or temporary. Temporary images which are set up for periodical Pujas like Durga, Saraswati, etc. are generally made of clay and are immersed in a river or tank after the Puja is over."

1735. Worship of idol i.e., the procedure aspect, has been discussed in para 4.7 (page 156) of B.K. Mukherjea's Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts (supra) as under :

"4.7. Worship of the idol.- After a deity is installed, it should be worshipped daily according to Hindu Sastra. The person founding a deity becomes morally responsible for the worship of the deity even if no property is dedicated to it. This responsibility is always carried out by a pious Hindu ..... The daily worship of a consecrated image includes the sweeping of the temple, the process of smearing, the removal of the previous day's offerings of flowers, the presentation of fresh flowers, the respectful oblation of rice with sweets and water and other practices. "The deity in short is conceived of as a living being and is treated in the same way as the master of the house would be treated by his humble servant. The daily routine of life is gone through, with minute accuracy, the vivified image is regaled with necessaries and luxuries of life in due succession even to the changing of clothes, the offering of cooked and uncooked food and the retirement to rest."

1736. Existence of idol is not a necessary condition

precedent for a temple. Para 4.10A [page 158] of B.K. Mukherjea's Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts (supra) says:

> "While usually an idol is instituted in a temple, it does not appear to be an essential condition of a temple as such. In an Andhra case, it was held that to constitute a temple, it is enough if it is a place of public religious worship and if the people believe in its religious efficacy, irrespective of the fact whether there is an idol or a structure or other paraphernalia*. It is enough if the devotees or the pilgrims feel that there is one superhuman power which they should worship and invoke its blessings. However, in almost all cases the temple does possess an idol."(emphasis added)*

1737. We may notice at this stage that in Mulla's Hindu Law, 15th Edn., page 527, it is said that a temple is not a juridical person, so no suit relating to the temple property can be instituted in the name of the temple. It refers to a decision of Lahore High Court in Thakardwara Sheru Mal Vs. Ishar Das AIR 1928 Lah. 375 questioning if the temple has no idol in whom the property shall vest.

1738. We, however, do not find that the above wide proposition can be said to be a correct law in presenti. A temple answering the requisites of Hindu religious endowment may be a juridical person and if that being so not only it can sue or being sued but is also entitled to hold property. It would be suffice to mention at this stage that a detailed discussion in the light of judicial precedents would follow hereafter and, therefore, we are not straightway giving any authority on this aspect just now as the matter would be clear from our

subsequent discussion.

1739. The Apex Court in Guruvayur Devasom Managing Committee Vs. C.K. Rajan (Supra) in para 40 said, "As a Hindu temple is a juristic person ....". It also refers to Section 92 C.P.C. observing that it seeks to protect such juristic person and therefore power under Article 226 or 32 could also be taken recourse to.

1740. In T.R.K. Ramaswami Servai Vs. H.R.E. Madras (supra), it was observed:

> "The presence of an idol though an invariable feature of Hindu temples is not a legal requisite. If the public or a section of the public consider that there is Divine presence in a particular place, they are likely to be recipients of the bounty or blessings of God, then they are essential features of a temple."

www.vadaprativada.com

1741. In Venkataramana Moorthy Vs. Sri Rama Mandhiram (1964) 2 An.WR 457, it was held that to constitute a temple, it is enough if it is a place of public religious worship and the people believe in its religious efficacy, irrespective of the fact there is no idol or structure or other paraphernalia. The Madras High Court reiterated the above view in T.V. Durairajulu Naidu Vs. Commissioner (supra) observing that for an institution to be a temple, it is not necessary that there should be Dhwajasthambam, prakaram, hundi or collection of Kanikkai, utsava idols and utsavams. A place which creates a sense of reverence in the belief that God resides there or an edifice devoted to divine worship is a temple. It was also held that the presence of idol is not a necessary ingredient to make an institution a temple.

1742. Relying upon several precedents, including a Supreme

www.vadaprativada.com

Court decision, it has however been held in Adangi Nageswara Rao Vs. Sri Ankamma Devatha Temple (supra) in para 6: "To constitute a temple, it is enough if it is a place of public religious worship and if the people believe in its religious efficacy irrespective of the fact whether there is an Idol or a structure or other paraphernalia"; it was further observed in para 8 (last passage) that the fact that the temple has ceased to exist or ceased to be used as a place of religious worship either before or after the commencement of the Act under consideration, is absolutely of no consequence.

1743. Even when an image is broken or lost and is substituted by another, it is not a new personality but the same 'Deity' and in this regard reference may be had to page 162 which says :

> "the Smriti writers have laid down that if an image is broken or lost another may be substituted in its place; when so substituted it is not a new personality but the same deity, and properties vested in the lost or mutilated thakur become vested in the substituted thakur. Thus, a dedication to an idol is really a dedication to the deity who is ever-present and ever-existent, the idol being no more than the visible image through which the deity is supposed specially to manifest itself by reason of the ceremony of consecration."

1744. Then there are temporary images, i.e., the images and deities prepared and destroyed periodically after worship, for example, Ganesha's image is prepared during Ganesh Chaturthi and after the festivities are over, the image is drowned in a holy river or in places like Maharashtra (Bombay) in the sea. Similarly, the images of Durga, Kali and other Devatas are also

worshipped as temporary images during certain periods.

1745. A question arose as to whether there can be dedication of property to such deity, an image whereof has been created temporarily. The Calcutta High Court in Purnachandra Chakrabarty Vs. Kaliopada Roy AIR 1942 Cal. 386 and Asita Mohan Vs. Nivode Mohan AIR 1917 Cal 292 held that bequest made for worship of a deity by the name of Sarat Kali, which is the name of Goddess Durga and worshipped only once in a year and for whom there is no permanent image was valid. In fact a Full Bench of Calcutta High Court earlier took the view in Bhupati Nath Vs. Ram Lal (supra) that if a gift in favour of the deity whose image has to be prepared and destroyed periodically is valid, there is no reason why a gift in favour of a deity whose image is to be prepared once for all, except for any reason for reconstruction coming to pass, should be invalid. According to Hindu scriptures, the God, by whatever name adored, is ever existent and whether a particular image did or not did not exist at a particular time was not material. Temporary images are normally not consecrated images though Ganapathi Iyer in his "Hindu Law of Endowment" has said that even in the case of temporary images, consecration is observed but normally consecration or Pratishta is done according to the texts only for images in temples. But that does not make the unconsecrated temporary images less sacred.

1746. There is another aspect. When there is a defilement, Punah-pratishthan (re-consecration of images in temples) has to be observed. The Brahmapurana says that “when a image is broken into two or is reduced to particles, is burnt, is removed from its pedestal, is insulted, had ceased to be worshipped, is touched by beasts like donkeys or falls on impure ground or is worshipped with mantras of other deities or is rendered impure by the touch of outcasts and the like-in these then contingencies, God ceases to dwell therein.

1747. Then comes Chala and Sthira Vigrah. There are two forms of installation of idols in temples. The movable form is called Chala and the stationary form is called Sthira. In most of the consecrated temples, idols are found in both the forms. The Sthira idol should not be moved while Chala idol which is also called Utsava is to be taken out in procession etc. In the context of forms of idols besides the man made images which consist of pictures, paintings and chiselled figures of wood, stone etc., the another form of such idols, which is natural, are stones found in hills, river-beds or streams. One of such black stone is known as Saaligram and another as Lingam. They are not ordinary stones. The black Saaligraam stone symbolises Vishnu. Lingam represents Siva. There is another kind of Lingam, i.e., Spatika Linga, a white tiny crystal made of pure quartz. It is considered to be best representation of the Nirguna Brahman, attributeless all-pervading Paramatma. Then there are Panchamukha Lingas which are found in Nepal and Jambukeswaram in Tamil Nadu and Aihole in Western India. These stones etc. are a form of Chal Vigraha.

1748. In the context of the above, the concept of 'Deity' and 'juristic personality' in Hindu Law has to be considered to find out whether plaintiffs no.1 and 2 are "juridical persons".

1749. In legal terminology, the term 'person' normally signifies a human being. It is Human Being's personality which may possess the characteristics belong particularly to mankind, i.e., power of thought, speech and choice. In legal terminology, however, the concept of person or personality is not confined

with the ordinary concept. Law is concerned basically with rights and duties, both of which involve the notion of choice. They will naturally, under any system of law, be held to inhere primarily in those Being which enjoy the ability to choose, i.e., Human Beings. In law, the persons, who are not man are also sometimes treated as person. Well renowned Jurist 'Salmond' has sought to describe the word 'person' as: “persons are the substances of which rights and duties are the attributes.

1750. In legal theory a person is any Being whom law regards as capable of rights or duties. The persons, so defined, may be placed in two categories; (a) natural person, and (b) legal person. Obviously a natural person is a human being. Legal person means Beings, real or imaginary, who for the purpose of legal reasoning are treated in greater or lessor degree in the same way as Human Beings. Legal persons commonalty and loosely are also sometimes termed as fictitious person, juristic person, artificial person or moral person. In this category, we may place a joint stock company, a statutory or local body and in Hindu law, an 'Idol'.

1751. For our purposes, we need not to discuss in detail the concept of “natural person”, but confine ourselves to the term “legal person”. A legal person is any subject-matter other than a human being to which the law attributes personality. This extension, for good and sufficient reasons, of the conception of personality beyond the class of human being is one of the most noteworthy feat of the legal imagination. The law, in creating legal persons, always does so by personifying some real thing. The thing personified may be termed the corpus of the legal person so created, it is the body into which the law infuses the animus of a fictitious personality. “Salmond on

Jurisprudence" Twelfth Edition by F.J. Fitzgerald, on page 306, says:

> "Although all legal personality involves personification, the converse is not true. Legal personality is a definite legal conception; personification, as such, is a mere artifice of speech devised for compendious expression."

1752. Serious objection has been raised with the concept of juristic personality though not in the context of idol but in the context of place, inasmuch as, it is contended that everything, as believed by any person, may not be given a legal status in order to confer certain rights and privileges upon him. It is said that like a human being it is conceived in Hindu Shastras that a Deity shall be taken care of in the same manner as that a natural person, for example arrangement of food, cloth, sleep etc. As a matter of fact, however it does not actually and cannot actually happen for the reason that an idol, made of some kind of substance or material, cannot infuse life for all the said purpose. It is only the perception and religious belief. Like a natural person, a Deity cannot claim citizenship under the Constitution of India, cannot participate in election either by contesting or by exercising the right of vote and so on.

1753. The above concept obviously is well embedded in the concept of Hindu Dharma. The form of observance of Dharma vide Hindu scriptures also provides the procedure of worship in the form of Yagya. The Hindu scriptures also contain the procedure of worship in the form of "Yagya", sacrifices by chanting Mantras etc. and for the said purpose the existence of idol or temple may or may not be necessary.

1754. The Apex Court recognised the Hindu belief that

worship consists of four forms of which idol worship is one such form. In A.S. Narayana Deekshitulu Vs. State of Andhra Pradesh (supra), the Court observed that mode of worship varies among persons of different faith. It is an assimilation of the individual soul with the infinite. For its attainment diverse views and theories have been propounded and one of them is idol worship. In fact, the word "Dharma", which is normally read and misunderstood identifying the word "religion", has a different concept in Hindu vedic literature. According to "Chhandogyopanishad":

> ''त्रयो धर्म स्कन्धायज्ञजध्ययनं दानमिति प्रथमस्तप एवेति द्वितीयों ब्रह्माचार्याचार्य कुलवासी तृतीयों त्यन्तमात्मामाचार्यकुलवसादयन्। > सर्व एते पुण्यलोका भवन्ति ब्रह्मसंस्थो मतत्वमेति।''
> There are three branches of Dharma 1. Yagna, study and donation (गृहस्थधर्म) 2. Tapsaya (तापसधर्म) 3. Brihcharitya (living in the company of Acharya)."

However, according to "Vaisheshik":

> ''अथातो धर्म व्याख्यास्मयामरू।
> यतोयुदयनिरू श्रेयरू ससिद्धिरू सधर्मरू।।''
> (Dharma is that from which enjoyment (आनन्द) and Nishreyas is achieved.)

The "Manusmriti", defines "Dharma" as under:

> ''वेदरू स्मृतिरू सदाचाररू स्वस्थ च प्रियमात्मनरू।
> एतच्चतुर्विधं प्राह्वरू साक्षद्धर्मस्य नक्षणम्।।''
> (Shruti, Smriti, Sadachar and satisfaction of one's soul are the four features of Dharma.)

1755. In A. S. Narayana Deekshitulu (supra), the Apex Court observed that the basis of Hindu Dharma is two fold, first is the Vedas and the second are Agamas. Vedas, in turn, consist of four texts, namely, Samhitas, Brahmanas, Aranyakas and Upanishads. Samhitas are the collections of mantras. Brahmans

www.vadaprativada.com

explain the practical aspects of the rituals as well as their meanings. They explain the application of the mantras and the deeper meanings of the rituals. Aranyakas go deeper into the mystic meaning of the rituals, and Upanishads present the philosophy of Vedas. In paras 95 to 100 of the judgment the Court said:

> "95. The basis of Hindu Dharma is two-fold. The first is the Vedas and the second are the Agamas. Vedas, in turn, consist of four texts, namely Samhitas, Bramhanas, Aranyakas and Upnishads.
>
> 96. Samhitas are the collections of mantras, bramhans explain the practical aspects of the rituals as well as their meanings. They explain the application of the mantras and the deeper meanings of the rituals. Aranyakas go deeper into the mystic meanings of the rituals, and Upnishads present the philosophy of the Vedas.
>
> 97. From the point of view of content, they are viewed as Karma Kanda (sacrificial portion) and Jnana Kanda which explain in the philosophical portion. The major portion of the Vedic literature enunciates the Vedic sacrifices or the rituals which inevitably culminate in the philosophy of the Upanishads. That is why the Upanishads are called Vedantha or culmination of the Vedas.
>
> 98. The essence of the Vedic religion lies in Vedic sacrifices which not only purify the mind and the heart of those participate in the sacrifices but also reveal the true and unfragmented nature of the Karman (Action). Erroneously, Western, scholars explained the Vedic sacrifice in terms of either sympathetic magic or an act of offering the fire to God emulating the mundane act of

offering gifts. Thus, for them Vedic religion is a primitive religion and Vedic Gods are simply representing insentient departments of Nature; but it is not so. On the contrary, the term used for Vedic Gods is "Deva" which literally means "the shining ones." The adorable ones-bestowing grace on the worshippers. The root Div also means that Devas are the embodiment of unfragmented consciousness, which is ultimately one and non dual. Likewise, the Vedic sacrifice is an act of re-enactment of the cosmic creation; in our mundane life, our life of action is simply a life of fragmented acts. This is because of Raga Dvesha whereby the perception is limited. The fragmented acts emanate from our deep rooted attraction and hatefulness. The Vedic sacrifice moves towards "Poorna", i.e., plenitude and thus overcoming the problems of fragmented action in our lives. Onwards, the seeker moves towards the knowledge of self or the Brahaman. So many Upasanas are taught in the Vedas but not elaborated. The Agams have elaborated these Upasanas such as Madhu Vidya and Dahra Vidya.

99. Upanishads speak of Para Vidya and Apara Vidya. Apara Vidya deals with Jnana through various methods. Agams explain these Para Vidyas. The agamic texts contain four parts, namely, Vidya Pada, Kriya Pada, Charya Pada and Yoga Pada.

100. Each text of the Agams has the first portion, called 'Samhita' which contains the four parts namely the Vidya Pada, Kriya Pada, Charya Pada and Yoga Pada. Vidya Pada offers an elaborate enunciation of the philosophy, whereas Kriya Pada deals elaborately with act of worship. Worship is viewed as Samurta Archana. In other words, the God are endowed with from and this form of worship culminates into Amurta or Nishkala Archana by which one worships and realises the formless. These are the steps to be treated upon one after another."

1756. In Acharya Jagadishwarananda Avadhuta Vs. Commissioner of Police AIR 1990 Cal. 336, the Court observed that according to Hindu concept, the idea of religion is relating to God and form of His worship which in short is called as religion. Swami Vivekananda in "Complete Works", Vol. 2, page 396 said:

"Religion is realization; not talk, nor doctrine, nor theories... It is being and becoming, not hearing and acknowledging; it is the whole soul becoming changed into what it believes. That is religion."

1757. Religion, therefore, is a process which has two sides; from one point of view, it is a state of belief and feeling, and in a word "spiritual disposition"; from another point of view it is an expression of the subjective disposition in appropriate acts. Both aspects are essential to the nature of religion and they act and react on one another in the process of spiritual experience. The expression of belief and faith forms the worship and for this purpose it may take several aspects. Idol, deity, temple, religious endowments etc. are some of those objects through which the divine presence is felt, experienced, believed and enjoyed for fulfilment of one's wishes.

1758. God is omnipotent and omniscient. His presence is felt not by reason of a particular form or image but by reason of the presence of the omnipotent. He is formless and shapeless. According to Hindu belief, it is for the benefit of the worshippers that there is manifestation in the images of the

Supreme Being. It is the human vision of the Lord of the Lords. One can say that it is the human concept of the Lord of Lords. That is how a image and idol comes into picture. It may be anything in the form of metal, like gold, silver, copper, etc. or a simple piece of wood or stone may or may not be given a shape by artisan so as to become an image or idol and divinity is attributed to it.

1759. There are two forms of idols, one "Svayambhu" and another "Pratishta". "Svayambhu" or self-revealed idol are referred in Padma Purana (Uttara Khand) where the self possessed Vishnu has placed himself on earth in stone or wood for the benefit of mankind, that is styled as self-revealed. A Svayambhu image does not require consecration. In this category comes Saaligraam, certain stone forming Lingam, Earth (places) etc. In respect to the idols, i.e., image formed of wood, stone, metal etc., a procedure of securing divine spirit in the image is normally followed as provided in the Hindu scriptures that is called "consecration".

1760. In Ram Jankijee Deities (supra), the Court observed that it is customary that the image is first carried to the Snan Mandap and thereafter the founder utters the Sankalpa mantra and upon completion thereof the images is given a bath with holy water, ghee, dahi, honey and rose water. Thereafter, the oblation to the sacred fire by which the pran pratistha takes places and eternal spirit is infused in that particular idol and the image is then taken to the temple itself and the same is thereafter formally dedicated to the deity.

1761. In Sri Venkataramana Devaru Vs. State of Mysore (supra), Agamas are described as the ceremonial law dealing with matters like construction of the temples, installation of idols and conduct of worship. There are separate Agamas for the Saiva temples and Vaishanava temples. The important Saiva Agamas are Kamikagama, Karnagama and Suprabathagama. The principal Vaishanava Agamas are Vaikanasa and Pancharathra. The purpose of this ritual came of be noticed by the Apex Court in Seshammal Vs. State of T.N. AIR 1972 SC 1586. It is said that the rituals have twofold object; one is to attract the lay worshippers to participate in the worship carried on by the Priest or Archaka. It is believed when a congregation of worshippers participate in the worship of a particular attitude, aspiration and devotion is developed and confers great spiritual merit. The second object is to preserve the image from pollution, defilement and desecration. Regarding a dispute arising as to whether Prana Pratishta of an idol installed in a temple was properly performed, the Court held that when an idol is installed, the presumption is that such ceremonies have properly been performed.

1762. In Deoki Nandan (supra), the Court observed that no particular kind of ceremony and its performance is necessary to be shown to constitute or to demonstrate that there is a valid dedication or Prana Pratishta.

1763. The question of asking of evidence relating to Prana Pratishta ceremony is relevant only in the context of judging whether a temple is a public temple or a private temple. An idol gets conferred the spiritual and divine spirit if the believers or the worshippers visit for its Darshan, Pooja as a matter of right believing the existence of such divine presence and nothing more is required. Senior Sankaracharya of Kanchi Kamakoti Peeta in "Aspects of our Religion, Bhavan's Book University" has made observations on the manner and effect of the consecration as follows:

"Before an idol or image is worshipped, a process of divinising it is gone through. The image is made instinct with God. This is known as the process of Prana-pratishta. Every human being is a compendious expression of the cosmos. Man is a microcosm of the universe. He is made of the five physical elements, the pancha bhootas, which are also the substance of the universe. God in His cosmic form, inheres in the Pancha boothas, which are crystallised in the human body and expressed as the five sense organs each functioning in terms of those elements. Before an idol or image is worshipped, it has to be consecrated. The process of consecration is called as stated earlier Prana-pratishta. The devotee first performs aatma pooja; that is, he meditates on his inner aatman encased in his body. By appropriate mantras he first purifies his body including his pranas and his sense organs. The vital airs and the organs of perception and activity animating him as the microcosm of the universe which is the macrocosm are transferred by gestures to the accompaniment of mantras on to the idol or the image wherein the manifestation of the Supreme (the ishta devata) is devoutly invoked. The following prayer is uttered before the prana pratishta:

svaatmasamsttham ajam suddham tvaamadya paramesvara aranyaamiva havyaasam moortau aavaahayaam-yaham

'O Lord of the Worlds, you are unborn and pure. You are in my heart. I invoke You in this moorti. Make yourself visible to me in my concentration even as the agni comes out by friction.'

Thereupon it becomes instinct with divinity and becomes fit for worship. After this is done the worshipper does not consider it any longer as a material object. It becomes God Himself. Then follow the sixteen items of ritualistic worship which are offered with fervour and devotion."

1764. "Bhagavadgita" says "whatever may be the form in which each devotee seeks to worship with faith, I make their faith steadfast in that form alone."

1765. It is believed by Hindus that worship consists of four forms of which idol worship is one of such form. Mode of worship varies amongst persons of different faith. It is an assimilation of the individual soul with the infinite. For its attainment diverse views and theories have been propounded and one of them is idol worship. Hindus believe that the Supreme Being manifests himself with three aspects as Brahma, the Creator, Vishnu, the Preserver and Shiva, the Destroyer. Those who believe and are devoted to the worship of Vishnu are called "Vaishnavas" and those who worship Shiva are called "Shaivites". Vaishnavas believe that God manifest himself in different incarnations. In other words, manifesting himself in the flesh which is also termed by Hindus as avatara, something which is expressive, absolute and immaculate. Vaishnavas believe in Deity 'Vishnu' who has manifested himself in 10 avatars. Further, according to Hindu belief, Vishnu as preserver exists in five forms, viz., Para, Vyuha, Vibhava, Arca and Antaryamin. Para is the transcendental form. Vibhav includes the ten divine descends (avatars) and also thirty nine forms which he takes from time to time. Arca represents God in the form of idol, which though formless, takes this finite form to show favour of His devotees. The form of Antaryamin is to remain within the self and control it by directing it to lead a virtuous way of life in accordance with the residues of the deeds done by it.

1766. The purpose of religious experience is to integrate human life, socially, materially and morally. Worship is certainly specifically religious and it is an attitude of mind which is not compatible with science. Science does not worship. It enquires, analyses, classifies and does sums. Religion is not merely worship of God but knowledge of God, for if it does not know its God then God is a figment of imagination and it worships it knows not what. All honest religions necessarily involve a strenuous effort to know the supreme reality and the knowledge of God must involve all knowledge in its scope. It can thus be said that religious experience is an internal experience and the deity in Temple is supposed to provoke the inner experience. Temple, therefore, forms an integral part of Hindu religion and idol installed therein forms the main symbol of religious worship manifesting the dignity of God. The Image of Lord in a Temple after Pran Pratishtha is a centre of reference, a symbol of the Great Consciousness whose attainment is ultimately the pinnacle of religious experiences. According to Hindu belief, worship of God is of four kinds, viz., Japa-chanting of Mantras; Home- giving oblation into fire; Archana-worship of God in form of idol in temple; and Dhyana-concentration of God alone. Of these four, Archana gained an established form of worship in temple.

1767. The concept of conferring legal personality upon a Hindu idol/Deity has undoubtedly been developed and in fact established for the first time by the Courts of British India in

19th Century. With the expansion of East India Company towards ruling this country, it followed the policy of non-interference with the personal laws of inhabitants and therefore the subject within the reigning territory of East India Company was allowed to be governed by their personal laws so long as the same were not inconsistent with the enacted statutes governing the East India Company and the subject under its reigning arena. The British Parliament also followed the same policy while enacting laws for Indian subcontinent under the reign of East India Company by laying down that a dispute between the parties belong to one particular religion may be decided according to their personal laws. For example where both the parties are Hindu, by the principles of Hindu Law and where both the parties are Muslim according to the principles of Muslim Law. No clear cut or uniform law was existing in a matter where both the parties belong to different religions and there the matter was left to be decided according to equity and good conscience by the concerned Courts. To the extent the matter was governed by statutory laws there was no problem as the same was followed over and above the personal laws. It is this policy which made it necessary for the judicial officers to learn the personal laws of the inhabitants i.e. Hindu Law and Muslim Law. No doubt, for better administration and to lay down their policies which may enable the Britishers to continue to rule for long, they studied and made several surveys etc. about the local administration, customs, traditions etc. but due to the requirement of knowledge of personal laws for deciding the disputes, it became utmost necessary for the Judges of the Courts to acquaint themselves with the two kinds of personal laws of this country. It is in this context we find the foremost name of Sir William Jones, the founder of Asiatic Society of Bengal who ventured in translation of several Hindu ancient scriptures written in Sanskrit, into English. He was a Judge appointed to the Supreme Court of Fort William, Calcutta and came to India in the later part of 18th Century. The another well known name in this regard is F.E.Pargitor who was also a Judge of Calcutta High Court.

1768. The Britishers knew well and were fond of the system of Roman Laws. According to them, Roman Law was the most ancient, well drafted and planned system of law and therefore, they could not conceive of existence of any earlier ancient culture with well planned system of law having its own separate identity and principles. With this frame of mind, they studied ancient Hindu Law comparing it with Roman Law on each and every aspect thereof, even if the two were distinct and dissimilar, wherever possible, they compared it with Christianity and the rules of Church followed in England. Some such work was done by Col. Brook, West and Buhler and Sir Henry Maine. One of such earliest identification of Hindu Religious Endowment i.e. temple and idols with the corporate bodies as known in England and the legal personality i.e. juridical persons was made by West and Buhlor in their work "Hindu Law".

1769. In Vidyapurna Tirtha Swami Vs. Vidyanidhi Tirtha Swami and others (supra) Honble Justice Subrahmania Ayyar of Madras High Court said:

> "It is to give due effect to such a sentiment, widespread and deep-rooted as it has always been, with reference to something not capable of holding property as a natural person, that the laws of most countries have sanctioned the creation of a fictitious person in the matter

as is implied in the felicitous observation made in the work already cited "Perhaps the oldest of all juristic persons is the God, hero or the saint" (Pollock and Maitland's History of English Law, Volume 1, 481).”

1770. One of the earlier cases in this regard came before the Bombay High Court in Manohar Ganesh Tambekar & Ors. Vs. Lakhmiram Govindram (supra). The question arose about the title and use of the offerings made at the shrine or the temple of Shri Ranchhod Raiji at Dakor. The defendants frequently acted in contravention of the rules, set up a proprietary title to the offerings made at the shrine, appropriated part of the offerings to their own use, and refused to render an account of the property held as trustee for the idol. The suit was filed with the consent of the Advocate General under Section 539 CPC (Act X of 1877). The High Court dealt with the relationship of idol with such trustees and on pages 263-265 held:

“The Hindu law, like the roman law and those derived from it*, recognizes, not only corporate bodies with rights of property vested in the corporation apart from its individual members, but also the juridical persons or subjects called foundations (West and Buhler, H.L.., 201, 185, 553, 555). A Hindu, who wishes to establish a religious or charitable institution, may, according to his law, express his purpose and endow it (West and Buhler, H.L., 99, 197, 216), and the ruler will give effect to the bounty, or at least protect it so far, at any rate, as it is consistent with his own dharma or conceptions of morality (West and Buhler, H.L., 33; Manu VIII, 41 ; Coleb, Dig., B.III, Ch. II, T.28). A trust is not required for this purpose: the necessity of a trust in such a case is indeed a* peculiarity and a modern peculiarity of the English law (Spence Eq. Juris., 440 ; Sav. Syst., s. 88). In early times a gift placed, as it was expressed, " on the altar of God" sufficed to convey to the church the lands thus dedicated (See Elton's Ten. of Kent, 17, 18). Under the Roman law of pre-Christian ages such dedications were allowed only to specified national deities [W. & B., H.L., 185 (b) ; Ulpain Fr. XXII, s. 6. They were thus placed extra commercium. Sav. Syst., sec. 88 (c c)]. After Christianity had become the religion of the empire, dedications to particular churches or for the foundation of churches and of religious and charitable institutions were much encouraged (Sav. Syst., sec. 88 ; comp. W. & B., 197). The officials of the church were empowered specially to watch over the administration of the funds and estates thus dedicated to pious uses (Sav. Syst., sec.88), but the immediate beneficiary was conceived as a personified realization of the church hospital or fund for ransoming prisoners from captivity (Sav. Syst., sec. 88). Such a practical realism is not confined to the sphere of law; it is made use of even by merchants in their accounts, and by furnishing an ideal centre for an institution to which the necessary human attributes are ascribed- Dhadphale v. Gurav (I.L.R., 6 Bom., 122)- it makes the application of the ordinary rules of law easy as in the case of an infant or a lunatic (Sav. Syst., sec. 90 ; comp. Kinlock v. Secretary of State for India in Council, L.R., 15 Ch. Div., at p. 8). Property dedicated to a pious purpose is, by the Hindu as by the Roman law, placed extra commercium*, (W & B., H.L., 185, 197) with similar practical savings as to sales of superfluous articles*

for the payment of debts and plainly necessary purposes (See Cod. Lib. I, Tit. 2, Fr. 21 ; W. & B., H.L., 555, 557. See also Rupa Jagset v. Krishnaji Govind, I.L.R., 9 Bom., p. 169). Mr. Macpherson admitted for the defendants in this case that they could not sell the lands bestowed on the idol Shri Ranchhod Raiji*. This restriction is like the one by which the Emperor forbade the alienation of dedicated lands under any circumstances (Vyav. May., Chap. IV, S. VII, p.23 ; Nov. 120, cap., 10). It is consistent with the grants having been made to the juridical person symbolized or personified in the idol at Dakor. It is not consistent with this juridical person's being conceived as a mere slave or property of the shevaks whose very title implied not ownership, but service of the god. It is indeed a strange, if not wilful, confusion of thought by which the defendants set up the Shri Ranchhod Raiji as a deity for the purpose of inviting gifts and vouchsafing blessings, but, as a mere block of stone, their property for the purpose of their appropriating every gift laid at its feet. But if there is a juridical person, the ideal embodiment of a pious or benevolent idea as the centre of the foundation, this artificial subject of rights is as capable of taking offerings of cash and jewels as of land. Those who take physical possession of the one as of the other kind of property incur thereby a responsibility for its due application to the purposes of the foundation-compare Griffin v. Griffin (1 Such. & Lef., 352); Mulhallen v. Marum (3 Dr. & War., 317) ; Aberdeen Town Council v. Aberdeen University (L.R., 2 Ap. Cas., 544). They are answerable as trustees even though they have not* consciously accepted a trust, and a remedy may be sought against them for mal-administration (comp. Ind. Trusts Act II of 1882, ss. 88, 95) by a suit open to any one interested, as under the Roman system in a like case by means of a popularis actio." (emphasis added)

1771. In Jogendra Nath Naskar (supra) the Apex Court referred to both the aforesaid judgements of Bombay and Madras High Court and also observed in para 6 that same view has been expressed by the judicial committee in Maharanee Shibessoureea Debia Vs. Mathooranath Acharjo, 13 MIA 270 and Prosanna Kumari Debya Vs. Golab Chand Baboo, LR 2 IA 145.

1772. In Prosanna Kumari Debya (supra) the judicial committee observed:

"It is only in an ideal sense that property can be said to belong to an idol and the possession and management must in the nature of things be entrusted with some person as shebait or manager. It would seem to follow that the person so entrusted must of necessity be empowered to do whatever may be required for the service of the idol and for the benefit and preservation of its property at least to as great a degree as the manager of an infant heir"-words which seem to be almost on echo of what was said in relation to a church in a judgment of the days of Edward I: "A church is always under age and is to be treated as an infant and it is not according to law that infants should be disinherited by the negligence of their guardians or be barred of an action in case they would complain of things wrongfully done by their guardians while they are under age' (Pollock and Maitland's 'History of English Law',

www.vadaprativada.com

Volume 1, 483".

1773. In Khetter Chunder Ghose Vs. Hari Das Bundopadhya (supra) it was found that the household idol was made over to relatives, owing to the family, whose idol it was, being unable to carry on the worship on account of the paucity of profits of the endowed lands, and it was held that the transfer was justified in the interests of the idol. It was a proper and a pious act. The Shebait being charged fundamentally with the duty of seeing to the worship being carried on, and, having the concurrence of the entire family to the transaction, did have power to carry through the transaction "for the purpose of performing its worship regularly through generation to generation. The members of the family were thereby deprived of no right of worship. The interests of worshippers and idol were conserved. Their Lordships do not think that such cases form any ground for the proposition that Hindu family idols are property in the crude sense maintained, or that their destruction, degradation or injury are within the power of their custodian for the time being. Such ideas appear to be in violation of the sanctity attached to the idol, whose legal entity and rights as such the law of India has long recognised." (emphasis added)

www.vadaprativada.com

1774. In Khetter Chunder Ghose (supra) the Court also held that sale of an idol is prohibited in Hindu Law though in certain circumstances, gift of an idol is not prohibited. The Court on page 559 observed as under:

> "It is true that the Hindu law prohibits the sale of an idol (see the Padma Purana, Patalakhanda, Chapter 79), and also the partition of it (see Dayabhaga, Chapter VI, s. II, 26), though when there are several idols, partition is recognised by custom (see West and Buhler's Digest of Hindu Law, 2nd edition, page 396). But there is no absolute prohibition against the gift of an idol*. An idol is not mentioned as an unfit subject of gift by Hindu lawyers in their enumeration of what are, and what are not, fit subjects of gift (see Colebrooke's Digest, Book II, Chapter IV); but on the contrary the gift of an idol under certain circumstances is considered a laudable act (see the Varaha Purana, Chapter 185; see also Hemadris, Chaturvarga Chintamani, Danakhanda, Chapter II).*

1775. In Avadh Kishore Dass v. Ram Gopal (supra), Plaintiffs instituted a suit for replacement of the Mahants of a temple. The suit was contested by the then Mahants on the ground that the suit property was the personal property of the Mahants, and not that of the temple. The suit was decreed by the District Judge, and his decree was substantially affirmed by High Court. Supreme Court accepted the findings, on the basis of certain exhibits, that the suit property belonged to the temple as a juristic person:

> *"Properly constructed, this Wajibularz shows that the entire revenue estate of village Bhawalpura vests in the Temple or the Math as a juristic person."; and "that the entire property in suit is the absolute property of the God, Thakurji as a juristic person"; and the result "No extract from the revenue records to show that Bhumidhari rights were granted not to the idol or the Temple as a juristic person, but to the appellant personally."*

1776. The right of a Shebait to institute a suit in his own name to recover property belonging to the deity was recognised in Jagadindra Nath Vs. Hemanta Kumari, 31 Ind App 203 at

1777. In Bhupati Nath Smrititir the Bhattacharjee (supra) in concurring judgment of Full Bench, Justice Mookerjee observed that "The Hindu Law recognises dedications for the establishment of the image of a deity and for the maintenance and worship thereof. The property so dedicated to a pious purpose is placed extra commercium .....It is immaterial that the image of the deity has not been established before the death of the testator or is periodically set up and destroyed in the course of the year."

1778. Justice Chatterjee also in the concurring judgment (above) observed: "Shastri's Hindu Law page 420 : shews the Hindu idea of the forms attributed to God for the convenience of worship : a particular image may be insentient until consecrated but the deity is not*. If the image is broken or lost, another may be substituted in its place and when so substituted it is not a new personality but the same deity and properties previously vested in the lost or mutilated Thacoor become vested in the substituted Thacoor.* A Hindu does not worship the "idol" or the material body made of clay or gold or other substance, as a mere glance at the mantras and prayers will show. They will have the eternal spirit of the deity or certain attributes of the same in a suggestive form which is used for the convenience of contemplation as a mere symbol or emblem*. It is the incantation of the mantras peculiar to a particular deity that causes the manifestation or presence of the deity or, according to some, the gratification of the deity." (emphasis added)*

1779. However, we find from the judgment of Hon'ble Jenkins, C.J. in Bhupati Nath (supra) that he noticed a slightly different view based on Saraswati's Hindu Law of Endowment on page 647 of the report but His Lordship declined to make any final comment thereon. The report says :

> " In favour of this view we have the doctrine of Medhatithi cited to us in the course of the argument that the primary meaning of property and ownership is not applicable to God, and the train of reasoning that is suggested by the teaching of the Aditya Purana that the gods cease to reside in images which are multilated, broken, burnt and so forth (Sarswati's Hindu Law of Endowment, page 129).
>
> But whatever may be the true view on this obscure and complex question, this at least seems clear that the rule which requires relinquishment should be to a sentient person does not forbid the gift of property to trustees for a religious purpose though that purpose cannot in strictness be called a sentient person."

www.vadaprativada.com

1780. The real question considered by the Full Bench in Bhupati Nath (supra) and decided unanimously was as under:

> "The principle of Hindu Law, which invalidates a gift other than to a sentient being capable of accepting it, does not apply to a bequest to trustees for the establishment of an image and the worship of a Hindu deity after the testator's death, and does not make such a bequest void"

1781. In Rambrahma Chatterjee Vs. Kedar Nath Banerjee AIR 1923 Cal 60 it was observed that a Hindu deity is treated in many respects certainly individual.

1782. In Ananda Chandra Chakrabarti vs. Broja Lal Singha and others 1923 Calcutta 142 it was held:

> " It is well-settled that dedication vests the property in the idol, only when the founder has title. The ceremony

www.vadaprativada.com

divests the proprietorship of the temple from the builder and vests it in the image*, which* by process of vivification has acquired existence as a juridical personage*."*

1783. Observing that Hindu deity is a living being and is treated in the same way in Rambrahama Chatterji Vs. Kedar Nath Banerji (supra) the Court said:

"We need not describe here in detail the normal type of continued worship of a consecrated image—the sweeping of the temple, the process of smearing, the removal of the previous day's offering of flowers, the presentation of fresh flowers the respectful oblation of rice with flowers and water, and other like practices. It is sufficient to state that the deity is, in short, conceived as a living being and is treated in the same way as the master of the house would be treated by his humble servant. The daily routine of like is gone through with minute accuracy: the vivified image is regaled with the necessaries and luxuries of life in due succession even to the changing of clothes, the offering of cooked and uncooked food, and the retirement to rest."

1784. In Pramath Nath Vs. Pradyumna Kumar (supra) the above observation of Hon'ble Mukherji J in Rambrahma Chatterjee (supra) were approvingly quoted.

1785. In Tarit Bhusan Vs. Sri Iswar Sridhar Salagram Shila Thakur AIR 1942 Cal 99 a Division Bench of Calcutta High Court said that a Hindu idol although a juristic person but this juristic person is of a peculiar type. It is conceived by Hindus as a living being with its own interests apart from the interests of its worshippers, and it is recognised as a juristic person capable of being the subject of legal rights and duties but only in an ideal sense. Pal J. at page 532 observed:

www.vadaprativada.com

"Though an idol is thus recognised as a juristic person capable of suing and being sued, strictly speaking it has no material interest of its own. The efficient subject of the rights ascribed to an Idol must ultimately be some human beings. It must be they who enjoy such rights and, if law protects such rights, it is because of the existence of such ultimate human concern. The Idol, as the juridical person only affords the technical means of developing the juristic relations between those ultimately interested in the endowed property and the strangers. The so-called interest of the Idol is merely an ideal interest very different from the interest which an infant has in his property*. The introduction of the Idol and its* recognition as a juristic person are more a matter for the procedure and the procedure in India recognises the Idol as having a locus standi in judicio."

www.vadaprativada.com

1786. In Parmanand Vs. Nihal Chand AIR 1938 PC 195 it was held that where a property is dedicated to an idol for the object of performing its puja and other necessary ceremonies the person managing such property is only a shebait, idol being a juristic person in Hindu Law capable of holding such property. This decision has been followed by the Apex Court in The Bihar State Board of Religious Trust Vs. Mahanth Sri Biseshwar Das AIR 1971 SC 2057.

1787. In Mahant Ram Saroop Dasji Vs. S.P. Sahi (supra), the effect of damage to the idol was considered and in para 10 of the judgment, the Court observed:

"Further, it is difficult to visualise that a Hindu private debutter will fail, for a deity is immortal. Even if the idol gets broken or is lost or stolen, another image may be

www.vadaprativada.com

consecrated and it cannot be said that the original object has ceased to exist." (Para 10)

1788. In Narayan Bhagwantrao Gosavi Balajiwale (supra) regarding the removal of the idol from one place to another, the Court held:

"The case is an authority for the proposition that the idol cannot be removed permanently to another place*, because that would be* tantamount to establishing a new temple*. However, if the public agreed to a temporary removal, it could be done for a valid reason."* (para 36)

1789. Holding Hindu idol as juristic entity the Apex Court in Jogendra Nath Naskar (supra) in para 5 the Court said:

"5. It is well established by high authorities that a Hindu idol is a juristic person in whom the dedicated property vests."

www.vadaprativada.com

1790. In the context of above authorities the Apex Court in Jogendra Nath Naskar (supra) explained that any Hindu idol has a legal personality and is not the material image but it is like to be treated as a "natural person" and said:

"Such ascription of legal personality to an idol must however be incomplete unless it be linked to a natural person with reference to the preservation and management of the property and the provision of human guardians for them variously designated in different parts of the country." (para 6)

"It should however be remembered that the juristic person in the idol is not the material image, and it is an exploded theory that the image itself develops into a legal person as soon as it is consecrated and vivified by the Pran Pratishta ceremony. It is not also correct that the supreme

being of which the idol is A symbol or image is the recipient and owner of the dedicated property. This is clearly laid down in authoritative Sanskrit Texts. Thus, in his Bhashya on the Purva Mimamsa, Adhyaya 9, Pada 1, Sabara Swami states :

''देवग्रामों, देवक्षेत्रमिति, उपचारमात्रम् । यो यदभिप्रेतं विनियोक्तर्महति,तत्तस्य स्वम् । न च ग्रामं क्षेत्रं वा यथाभिप्रायं विनियुक्तडे। तस्मान्न संप्रच्दातीति। देवपरिचार काणां तु ततो भूतिर्भवति, दवतामुद्दिश्प यत् त्यक्तम् ।''

"Words such as 'Village of the Gods', 'land of the Gods' are used in a figurative sense. That is property which can be said to belong to a person, which he can make use of as he desires. God however, does not make use of the, village or lands, according to its desires". Likewise, Medhathithi in commenting on the expression 'Devaswam' in Manu, Chapter XI, Verse 26, writes:

''देवानुछिश्य, यागादि क्रियार्थ धनं यदुत्सृश्टं, तछेवस्वम् मुख्यस्य स्वस्वामिसबंन्धस्य, देवाना असंभवात् ।''

www.vadaprativada.com

"Property of the Gods, Devaswam, means whatever is abandoned for Gods, for purposes of sacrifice and the like, because ownership in the primary sense, as showing the relationship between the owner and the property owned, is impossible of application, to Gods". Thus, according to the texts, the Gods have no beneficial enjoyment of the properties, and they can be described as their owners only in a figurative sense (Gaunartha). The correct legal position is that the idol as representing and embodying the spiritual purpose of the donor is the juristic person recognised by law and in this juristic person the dedicated property vests. As observed by Mr. Justice B. K. Mukherjea:

"With regard to Debutter, the position seems to

be somewhat different. What is personified here, is not the entire property which is dedicated to the deity but the deity itself which is the central part of the foundation and stands as the material symbol and embodiment of the pious purpose which the dedicator has in view. "The dedication to deity", said Sir Lawrence Jenkins in Bhupati v. Ramlal, 10 CLJ 355 at 369, "is nothing but a compendious expression of the pious purpose for which the dedication is designed". It is not only a compendious expression but a material embodiment of the pious purpose and though there is difficulty in holding that property can reside in the aim or purpose itself, it would be quite consistent with sound principles of Jurisprudence to say that a material object which represents or symbolises a particular purpose can be given the status of a legal person, and regarded as owner of the property which is dedicated to it."

www.vadaprativada.com

The legal position is comparable in many respects to the, development in Roman Law. So far as charitable endowment is concerned Roman Law-as later developed recognised two kinds of juristic persons. One was a corporation or aggregate of persons which owed its juristic personality to State sanction. A private person might make over property by way of gift or legacy to a corporation already in existence and might at the same time prescribe the particular purpose for which the property was to be employed e.g. feeding the poor, or giving relief to the poor distressed. The recipient corporation would be in a position of a trustee and would be legally bound to spend the funds for the particular purpose. The other alternative was for the donor to create an institution or foundation himself. This would be a new juristic person which depended for its origin upon nothing else but the will of the founder, provided it was directed to a charitable purpose. The foundation would be the owner of the dedicated property in the eye of law and the administrators would be in the position of trustees bound to carry out the object of the foundation. As observed by Sohm:

> "During the later Empire--from the fifth century onwards-foundations created by private individuals came to be recognised as foundations in the true legal sense, but only if they took the form of a ipia cause' ('piumcorpus') i.e. were devoted to 'pious uses', only in short, if they were charitable institutions. Wherever a person dedicated property-whether by gift inter vivos or by will--in favour of the poor, or the sick, or prisoners, orphans, or aged people, he thereby created ipso facto a new subject of legal rights-the poor-house, the hospital, and so forth-and the dedicated property became the sole property of this new subject; it became the sole property of the new juristic person whom the founder had called into being. Roman law, however, took the view that the endowments of charitable foundations were a species of Church property. Piae causas were subjected to the control of the Church, that is, of the bishop or the ecclesiastical administrator, as the case might be. A pia causa was regarded as an ecclesiastical, and consequently, as a public

institution, and as such it shared that corporate capacity which belonged to all ecclesiastical institutions by virtue of a general rule of law. A pia causa did not require to have a juristic personality expressly conferred upon it. According to Roman law the act-whether a gift inter vivos or a testamentary disposition-whereby the founder dedicated property to charitable uses was sufficient, without more, to constitute the pia cause a foundation in the legal sense, to make it, in other words, a new subject of legal rights".

We should, in this context, make a distinction between the spiritual and the legal aspect of the Hindu idol which is installed and worshipped. From the spiritual standpoint the idol may be to the worshipper a symbol (pratika) of the Supreme God-head intended to invoke a sense of the vast and intimate reality, and suggesting the essential truth of the Real that is beyond all name or form. It is basic postulate of Hindu religion that different images do not represent different divinities, they are really symbols of One Supreme Spirit and in whichever name or form the deity is invoked, the Hindu worshipper purports to worship the Supreme Spirit and nothing else.

''इन्द्र मित्रं बरुणम् अग्निम् आहर्–
एकं सद् विप्रा वहुधा वदन्ति। '' (Rig Veda I-164)

(They have spoken of Him as Agni, Mitra, Varuna, Indra; the one Existence the sages speak of in many ways). The Bhagavad Gita echoes this verse when it says:

''वायुर यमोअ ग्बिर वरुणः शशांक प्रजापतिस् त्वं प्रपितामहश्च।'' (Chap. XI-39)

www.vadaprativada.com

(Thou art Vayu and Yama, Agni, Varuna and Moon; Lord of creation art Thou, and Grandsire).

Samkara, the great philosopher, refers to the one Reality, who, owing to the diversity or intellects (matibheda) is conventionally spoken of (parikalpya) in various ways as Brahma, Visnu and Mahesvara. It is however possible that the founder of the endowment or the worshipper may not conceive on this highest spiritual plane but hold that the idol is the very embodiment of a personal God, but that is not a matter with which the law is concerned. Neither God nor any supernatural being could be a person in law. But so far as the deity stands as the representative and symbol of the particular purpose which is indicated by the donor, it can figure as a legal person. The true legal view is that in that capacity alone the dedicated property vests in it." (pages 558-560)

www.vadaprativada.com

1791. It is thus well established by high authorities that a Hindu idol is a "juristic person" in whom the dedicated property vests. In Manohar Ganesh vs. Lakshmiram (supra) called the Dakor temple case. West and Birdwood, JJ., state:

"The Hindu Law, like the Roman Law and those derived from it, recognises not only incorporate bodies with rights of property vested in the corporation part form its individuals members but also juridical persons called foundations. A Hindu who wishes to establish a religious or charitable institution may according to his law express his purpose and endow it and the ruler will give effect to the bounty or at least, protect it so far at any rate as is consistent with his own Dharma or conception of morality. A trust is not required for the purpose; the necessity of a trust in such a case is indeed a peculiarity and a modern peculiarity of the English Law. In early law a gift placed as it was expressed on the alter of God, sufficed it to convey to the Church the lands thus dedicated. It is consistent with the grants having been made to the juridical person symbolised or personified in the idol". The same view has been expressed by the Madras High Court in Vidyapurna Tirtha Swami Vs. Vidyanidhi Tirtha Swami, (1904) ILR 27 Mad 435, in which Mr. Justice Subramania Ayyar stated.

> "It is to give due effect to such a sentiment, widespread and deep-rooted as it has always been with reference to something not capable of holding property as a natural person, that the laws of most countries have sanctioned the creation of a fictitious person in the matter, as is implied in the felicitous observation made in the work already cited "Perhaps the oldest of all juristic persons is the God, hero or the saint" (Pollock and Maitland's History of English Law, Volume I, p.481.)

That the consecrated idol in a Hindu temple is a juridical person has been expressly laid down in Manohar Ganesh's case (supra), Which Mr. Prannath Saraswati, the author of the Tagore Lectures on Endowments" rightly enough speaks of as one ranking as the leading case on the subject, and in which West J., discusses the whole matter with much erudition. And in more than one case, the decision of the Judicial Committee proceeds on precisely the same footing (Maharancee Shibessouree Debia vs. Mothooranath Acharjo, (1869-70) 13 Moo Ind App 270 (PC), and Prosunno Kumari Debya vs. Golab Chand Baboo, (1874-

75) 2 Ind App 145 (PC). Such ascription of legal personality to an idol must however be incomplete unless it be liked to a natural person with references to the preservation and management of the property and the provision of human guardians for them variously designated in different parts of the country. In (1874-75) Ind App 145 (PC) the judicial Committee observed thus: "It is only in an ideal sense that property can e said to belong to an idol and the possession and management must in the nature of things be entrusted with some person as shebait or manger. It would seem to follow that the person so entrusted must of necessity be empowered to do whatever may be require for the service of the idol and for the benefit and preservation of its property at least to as great a degree as the manager of an infant heir" - words which seem to be almost on echo of what was said in relation to a church in a judgment of the days of Edward I: "A church is always under age and is to be treated as an infant and it is not according to law that infants should be disinherited by the negligence of their guardians or be barred of an action in case they would complain of things wrongfully done by their guardians while they are under age" (Pollock and Maitlands's 'History of English Law'. Volume I, p. 463)".

www.vadaprativada.com

1792. It should however be remembered that the juristic person in the idol is not the material image, and it is an exploded theory that the image itself develops into a legal person as soon as it is consecrated and vivified by the Pran Pratishta ceremony. It is not also correct that the supreme being of which the idol is a symbol or image is the recipient and owner of the dedicated

www.vadaprativada.com

property. This is clearly laid down in authoritative Sanskrit Texts. Thus, in his Bhashya on the Purva Mimamasa, Adhyaya 9, para 1, Sabara Swami states:

दैवग्रामो, दैवक्षैत्रमिति, उपचारमित्रम्, यो पदमभिप्रैतम् विनयोक्तमहति, तत्रस्य स्वम् ।

न च ग्रामम् क्षत्रम् वा यथाभिप्रायम् विनियुक्त दैवता, तस्मान्न सम्प्रयच्छतोति ।

देवपरिचारकाणाम् तु ततो भतिर्भवति, देवतामुधिश्च यत् त्यक्तम् ।

"Words such as 'village of the Gods,' 'land of the Gods' are used in a figurative sense. That is property which can be said to belong to a person, which he can make use of as he desires. God however does not make use of the village of lands, according to its desires".

1793. The legal position is comparable in many respects to the development in Roman Law. So far as charitable endowment is concerned, Roman Law, as later developed recognised two kinds of juristic persons. Once was a corporation or aggregate of persons which owed its juristic personality to State sanction. A private person might make over property by way of gift or legacy to a corporation already in existence and might at the same time prescribe the particular purpose for which the property was to be employed e.g. feeding the poor, or giving relief to the poor or distressed/. The recipient corporation would be in a position of a trustee and would be legally bound to spend the funds for the particular purpose. The other alternative was for the donor to create an institution or foundation himself. This would be a new juristic person which depended for its origin upon nothing else but the will of the founder provided it was directed to a charitable purpose. The foundation would be the owner of the dedicated property in the eye of law and the administrators would be in the position of trustees bound to carry out the object of the foundation. As observed by Sohm:

> "During the later Empire - from the fifth centre onwards - foundations created by private individuals came to be recognised as foundations in the true legal sense, but only if they took the form of a 'pia causa' ('Pium corpus') i.e., were devoted to 'pious uses', only in short, if they were charitable institutions. Wherever a person dedicated property - whether by gift inter vivos or by will - in favour of the poor, or the sick, or prisoners, orphans, or aged the dedicated property became the sole property of this new subject: it became the sole property of the new juristic person whom the founder had called into being. Roman law, however, took the view that the endowments of charitable foundations were a species of Church property, Piae causac were subjected to the control of the Church, that is, of the bishop or the ecclesiastical administrator, as the case might be. A poa causa was regarded as an ecclesiastical, and consequently, as a public institution, and as such it shared that corporate capacity which belonged to all ecclesiastical institutions by virtue of a general rule of law. A pia causa did not require to have a juristic personality expressly conferred upon it. According to Roman law the act - whether a gift inter vivos or a testamentary disposition - Whereby the founder dedicated property to charitable uses was sufficient, without more to constitute the pia causa a foundation in the legal sense, to make it, in other words, a new subject of legal rights"

1794. We should in this context, make a distinction between the spiritual and the legal aspect of the Hindu idol which is installed and worshipped. From the spiritual stand point the idol may be to the worshipper a symbol (Pratika) of the Supreme God-head intended to invoke a sense of the vast and intimate reality and suggesting the essential truth of the Reaj that is beyond all name of form, It is a basic postulate of Hindu religion that different images do not represent different divinities, they are really symbols of One Supreme Spirit and in which ever name or from the deity is invoked, the Hindu worshipper purports to worship the Supreme Spirit and nothing else.

(Rig Veda I. 164)

They have spoken of Him as Agni, Mitra, Varuna, Indra, the one Existence the sages speak of in many ways*). The Bhagavad Gita echoes this verse when it says:*

(Thou art Vayu and Yama, Agni, Varuna and Moon: Lord of Creation art Thou, and Grandsire). Sankara - the great philosopher – refers to the one Reality, who, owing to the diversity of intellects (Matibheda) is conventionally spoken of (Parikalpya) in various ways as Brahman*, Visnu and Mahesvara. It is however possible that the founder of the endowment or the worshipper may not conceive on this highest spiritual plane but hold that the idol is the very embodiment of a personal God, but that is not a matter with which the law is concerned.* Neither God nor any supernatural being could be a person in law. But so far as the deity stands as the representative and symbols of the particular purpose which is indicated by the

> donor, it can figure as a legal person. The true legal view is that in that capacity alone the dedicated property vets in it. There is no principle why a deity as such a legal person should not be taxed if such a legal person is allowed in law to own property even though in the ideal sense and to sue for the property, to realise rent and to defend such property in a Court of law again in the ideal sense... Our conclusion is that the Hindu idol is a juristic entity.. capacity of holding property and of being taxed through its shebaits who are constructed with the possession and management of its property.

1795. In Kalanka Devi Sansthan (supra) reiterating that a Hindu idol is a juristic person, with respect to the vesting of property, it held:

> "The distinction between a manager or a Shebait of an idol and a trustee where a trust has been created is well recognised. The properties of the trust in law vest in the trustee whereas in the case of an idol or a Sansthan they do not vest in the manager or the Shebait. It is the deity or the Sansthan which owns and holds the properties. It is only the possession and the management which vest in the manager" (Para 5)

1796. When property is given absolutely for the worship of an idol it vests in the idol itself as a juristic person. However, the idol cannot take advantage of the provision contained in the Act by which possession can be claimed from the tenant on the ground that it is required for personal cultivation. The position of idol is not the same as minor and the idol does not fall within Explanation 1 to S.2 (12).

1797. Physical or mental disability as defined by Section 2 (22) lays emphasis on the words "personal labour of supervision". The dominating idea of anything done personally or by a person is that the thing must be done by the person himself and not by or through some one else. It is true that the idol is capable of holding property in the same way as a natural person. It has a juridical status with the power of suing and being sued. Its interests are attended to by the person who has the deity in his charge and who is in law its manager with all the powers which would. In such circumstances, on analogy, be given to the manager of the estate of an infant heir. But the requirement of personal supervision under the third category of personal cultivation provided for in the definition under S. 2 (12) does not admit of an intermediary between the landlord and the laborers, who can act as agent of landlord, it cannot be said that it is possible in the case of another landlord merely because the landlord in the latter case is a juristic person. The cultivation of the land concerned must be by natural persons and not by legal persons. The provisions of the Berar Regulation of Agricultural Leases Act (C.P. Act 2 of 1951) which is already repealed, are of no help in deciding whether idol can cultivate personally within meaning of Explanation 1 to Section 2 (12) of the Bombay Act.

1798. In Official Trustee of West Bengal Vs. Commissioner of Income-tax (supra) the Hon'ble Apex Court referring number of decisions reached to a conclusion that "a Hindu Deity is a juristic person is a well-established proposition and has been so for a long time."

1799. In Smt. Panna Banerjee and Ors. Vs. Kali Kinkor Ganguli (supra) the Court held against sale of deity and in

paras 65 and 66 held:

> "65. Moreover the alleged custom, if any, as to the sale of these deities is wholly void. An idol can never be the subject matter of commerce. The sale of an idol is prohibited by Hindu Law, (See Khettar Chunder Ghose v. Haridas Bundopadhyay, (1890) I.L.R.17 Cal. 557 at p. 559). A deity is not a chattel but a juridical person. No custom can ever validate a sale of any deity*. The legal necessity of the deity cannot destroy the very existence of the deity by selling it in the open market. The very thought of it is opposed to the fundamental concept of the Hindu Jurisprudence. It is against public policy. It is wholly unreasonable. It is absolutely repugnant to the Hindu Law. It is so repulsive to the judicial mind that every Court is bound to strike it down in limine.*
> 66. No one has ever heard that a deity can be served or be sold by bits and bits. The deity is indivisible. It is the supreme Being. The deity is not a property and no one can be its owner not even its founder*. The shebaits are the managers of the deities though in reality they are its glorified servants.* No shebait can ever be the owner of any deity*. He is the custodian of the idol but this custody does not nor can it ever confer any right on him to sell the deity." (emphasis added)*

1800. The Calcutta judgment went in appeal to the Apex Court. Affirming the judgment of the High Court, in Kali Kinkor Ganguly Vs. Panna Banerjee (supra), the Apex Court in paras 24 and 25 said:

> "24. Dr. B.K. Mukherjea in his Tagore Law Lectures has pointed out that the decision in Prasanna Kumari's case

www.vadaprativada.com

(supra) was that the rule of necessity extended only to an alienation of the temporality of the idol and it does not and cannot apply to alienation to the spiritual rights and duties. Dr. Mukherjea illustrated this with reference to the decision in Nagendra Nath v. Rabindra I.L.R. 53 Cal. 132=(AIR 1926 Cal 490) and an earlier decision in Rajeswar v. Gopeswar (supra). The doctrine of alienation of shebaitship on the ground of necessity or benefit to the deity is said by Dr. Mukherjea to be of doubtful authority and based upon a misconception of certain pronouncements of the Judicial Committee.

25. In the present case, the appellant cannot invoke the doctrine of transfer of shebaiti right for the benefit of the deity because the transfer by Pramila Debi to Upendra Nath Ganguli is illegal for the principal reason that neither the temple nor the deities nor the shebaiti right can be transferred by sale for pecuniary consideration. The transfer by sale is void in its inception." (emphasis added)

www.vadaprativada.com

The Apex Court, however, expressed its disagreement with the reasons contained in the concurring judgment of the High Court.

1801. In Ram Jankijee Deities Vs. State of Bihar (supra) the concept of "idol" or "deity" in Hindu Law was considered and in paras 11, 13 and 14 the Court observed :

"11. "Hindu Law recognizes Hindu idol as a juridical subject being capable in law of holding property by reason of the Hindu Shastras following the status of a legal person in the same way as that of a natural person. It is not a particular image which is a juridical person but it is a particular bent of mind which consecrate the image. How one sees the Deity : how one feels the deity and recognizes the deity and then establishes the same in the temple upon however performance of the consecration ceremony…"

13. Divergent are the views on the theme of images or idols in Hindu Law. One school propagates God having Swayambhu images or consecrated images: the other school lays down God as omnipotent and omniscient and the people only worship the eternal spirit of the deity and it is only the manifestation or the presence of the deity by reason of the charm of the mantras.

14. Images according to Hindu authorities, are of two kinds: the first is known as Swayambhu or self-existent or self-revealed*, while the other is* Pratisthita or established*. The Padma Purana says: "the image of Hari (God) prepared of stone earth, wood, metal or the like and established according to the rites laid down in the Vedas, Smritis and Tantras is called the established images.....where the self- possessed Vishnu has placed himself on earth in stone or wood for the benefit of mankind, that is styled the self-revealed." (B.K. Mukherjea - Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts: 5th Edn.) A Swayambhu or self-revealed image is a product of nature and it is Anadi or without any beginning and the worshippers simply discover its existence and such images do not require consecration or Pratistha but a manmade image requires consecration. This manmade image may be painted on a wall or canvas. The Salgram Shila depicts Narayana being the Lord of the Lords and represents Vishnu Bhagwan. It is a Shila - the shalagram form*

partaking the form of Lord of the Lords Narayana and Vishnu." (emphasis added)

1802. The concept of image and deity in Hindu Law has been told in para 16 to 19 of Ram Jankijee Deities (supra):

"16. The observations of the Division Bench has been in our view true to the Shastras and we do lend our concurrence to the same. If the people believe in the temples' religious efficacy no other requirement exists as regards other areas and the learned Judge it seems has completely overlooked this aspect of Hindu Shastras-In any event, Hindus have in Shastras "Agni" Devta; "Vayu" Devta-these deities are shapeless and formless but for every ritual Hindus offer their oblations before the deity. The Ahuti to the deity is the ultimate - the learned Single Judge however was pleased not to put any reliance thereon. It is not a particular image which is a juridical person but it is a particular bent of mind which consecrate the image.

17.One cardinal principle underlying idol worship ought to be borne in mind:

> "that whichever god the devotee might choose for purposes of worship and whatever image he might set up and consecrate with that object, the image represents the Supreme God and none else. There is no superiority or inferiority amongst the different gods. Siva, Vishnu, Ganapati or Surya is extolled, each in its turn as the creator, preserver and supreme lord of the universe. The image simply gives a name and form to the formless God and the orthodox Hindu idea is that conception of form is only for the benefit of the worshipper and nothing else." (B.K. Mukherjea - on Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts-5th Edn.).

www.vadaprativada.com

18. In this context reference may also be made to an earlier decision of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Bhupati Nath Smritititirtha v. Ram Lal Maitra, wherein Chatterjee, J. (at page 167) observed:-

> "A Hindu does not worship the "idol" or the material body made of clay or gold or other substance, as a mere glance at the mantras and prayers will show. They worship the eternal spirit of the deity or certain attributes of the same, in a suggestive form, which is used for the convenience of contemplation as a mere symbol or emblem. It is the incantation of the mantras peculiar to a particular deity that causes the manifestation or presence of the deity or according to some, the gratification of the deity." (emphasis added)*

"19. God is Omnipotent and Omniscient and its presence is felt not by reason of a particular form or image but by reason of the presence of the omnipotent: It is formless, it is shapeless and it is for the benefit of the worshippers that there is manifestation in images of the Supreme Being. 'The Supreme Being has no attribute, which consists of pure spirit and which is without a second being, i.e. God is the only Being existing in reality, there is no other being in real existence excepting Him - (see in this context Golap Chandra Sarkar, Sastri's Hindu Law: 8th Edn.). It is the human concept of the Lord of the Lords - it is the human vision of the Lord of the Lords: How one sees the deity:

how one feels the deity and recognises the deity and then establishes the same in the temple (sic depends) upon however performance of the consecration ceremony. The Shastras do provide as to how to consecrate and the usual ceremonies of Sankalpa and Utsarga shall have to be performed for proper and effective dedication of the property to a deity and in order to be termed as a juristic person. In the conception of Debutter, two essential ideas are required to be performed: In the first place, the property which is dedicated to the deity vests in an ideal sense in the deity itself as a juristic person and in the second place, the personality of the idol being linked up with natural personality of the shebait, being the manager or being the Dharam karta and who is entrusted with the custody of the idol and who is responsible otherwise for preservation of the property of the idol. The Deva Pratistha Tatwa of Raghunandan and Matsya and Devi Puranas though may not be uniform in their description as to how Pratistha or consecration of image does take place but it is customary that the image is first carried to the Snan Mandap and thereafter the founder utters the Sankalpa Mantra and upon completion thereof, the image is given bath with Holy water, Ghee, Dahi, Honey and Rose water and thereafter the oblation to the sacred fire by which the Pran Pratistha takes place and the eternal spirit is infused in that particular idol and the image is then taken to the temple itself and the same is thereafter formally dedicated to the deity. A simple piece of wood or stone may become the image or idol and divinity is attributed to the same. As noticed above, it is formless, shapeless but it is the human

concept of a particular divine existence which gives it the shape, the size and the colour. While it is true that the learned Single Judge has quoted some eminent authors but in our view the same does not however, lend any assistance to the matter in issue and the Principles of Hindu Law seems to have been totally misread by the learned Single Judge." (emphasis added)

1803. In Shiromani Gurudwara Prabandhak Committee Amritsar Vs. Shri Som Nath Dass (supra), the question before the Hon'ble Apex Court was whether Guru Granth Sahib was a juristic person or not. While dealing with the issue, the Court observed that certain places of worship which were endowed and recognized by public, like a Gurudwara, a church etc. can also be juristic persons:

"Thus, it is well settled and confirmed by the authorities on jurisprudence and Courts of various countries that for a bigger thrust of socio-political-scientific development evolution of a fictional personality to be a juristic person became inevitable. This may be any entity, living, inanimate, objects or things. It may be a religious institution or any such useful unit which may impel the Courts to recognise it. .... Similarly, where there is any endowment for charitable purpose it can create institutions like a church, hospital, gurudwara, etc. The entrustment of an endowed fund for a purpose can only be used by the person so entrusted for that purpose in as much as he receives it for that purpose alone in trust. When the donor endows for an idol or for a mosque or for any institution, it necessitates the creation of a juristic person. The law also circumscribes the rights of any person receiving such entrustment to use it only for the purpose of such a juristic person. The endowment may be given for various purposes, may be for a church, idol, gurdwara or such other things that the human faculty may conceive of, out of faith and conscience but it gains the status of juristic person when it is recognised by the society as such."

1804. In the above case the Apex Court in para 30 and 35, also held:

"30. An idol is a "juristic person" because it is adored after its consecration, in a temple*. The offering are made to an idol. The followers recognise an idol to be symbol for God. Without the idol, the temple is only a building of mortar, cement and bricks which has no sacredness or sanctity for adoration. Once recognised as a "juristic person", the idol can hold property and gainfully enlarge its coffers to maintain itself and use it for the benefit of its followers. On the other hand in the case of mosque there can be no idol or any images of worship, yet the mosque itself is conferred with the same sacredness as temples with idol, based on faith and belief of its followers. Thus the case of a temple without idol may be only brick, mortar and cement but not the mosque. Similar is the case with the church. As we have said,* each religion have different nuclei, as per their faith and belief for treating any entity as a unit*."* (Para 30)

"In our view, no endowment or a juristic person depends on the appointment of a manager*. It may be proper or advisable to appoint such a manager while making any endowment but in its absence, it may be done either by the trustees or courts in accordance with law. Mere absence of*

a manager (sic. does not) negative the existence of a juristic person. As pointed out in Manohar Ganesh Vs. Lakhmiram (approved in Jogendra Nath Naskars case) referred to above, if no manager is appointed by the founder, the ruler would give effect to the bounty. (Para 35)

1805. The Court in Shiromani Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee, Amritsar Vs. Som Nath Dass & Ors. (supra) held ultimately Guru Granth Sahib a legal person and rules that a juristic person may be entity, living being, object or thing.

1806. The status of Hindu idol, therefore, as juridical person cannot be disputed in view of the aforementioned authority/ pronouncement on this aspect. It is true that the initial verdict of Privy Council in Vidya Varuthi Thirtha Vs. Baluswami Ayyar (supra) and Pramatha Nath Mullick (supra) did attract some otherwise opinion from certain jurist like Dr.S.C. Bagchi in his Ashutosh Mookerjee Lectures, 1931 on Juristic Personality of Hindu Deities, has illustrated in Lecture III, pp. 51-78 and Sir Frederick Pollock in 41 Law Quarterly Review at page 421 but it is too late in the day. Now answer to admit of any exception in the matter in the case of an idol, therefore, is quite easy though in the context of requirement of consecration, as argued by the learned counsels for Muslim parties, it is yet to be seen as to when and in what circumstances an idol can be said to be a Deity having conferred with the juridical personality. It is no doubt true that every idol is not treated to be a Deity. Some Shastric procedure is provided for the said purpose but what is that procedure, how it is to be observed and in what manner the rules travel in much wider plane.

1807. In Damodar Das Vs. Adhikari Lakhan Das (1909-10) 37 IA 147, debuttar property vested in an idol and managed by

Mahant. On his death, his two Chelas, represented by plaintiff and defendant settled a disputed right to succession by an ikrarnama in 1874 under which each chela obtained possession of the share of debottar properties allotted to him. The suit brought in 1901 to eject the defendant from the property allotted to him was held barred by limitation, treating his possession adverse to the idol and also to the plaintiff. It is a short judgment. The report of the judgment shows that it was not contested by the respondents before the Judicial Committee. The Privy Council though held that the property prior to the execution of Ikrarnama vested in idol, the legal entity and Mahant was only his representative and manager but then proceeded to hold that on execution of Ikrarnama the possession of junior Chela pursuant to the Ikrarnama became adverse to the right of the idol and of the senior chela, representing that idol and therefore, the suit was barred by limitation. (Subsequently the Apex Court in Bishwanath Vs. Sri Thakur Radha Ballabhi (supra) has held that an idol is a minor and that being so, it could not have filed a suit by itself.) In a case where two Chelas executed Ikrarnama themselves, it was unexpected that one of them would have filed suit for restoration of the possession of the property of the idol. Moreover, if both the chelas could have been treated to be co-shebaits of the idol's property, the possession of the property would be permissive and in case there was any trespass, the property being that of minor, the question of adverse possession would not come. The limitation would not commence as held subsequently by the Apex Court. It is well settled now that the judgments of the Privy Council are binding on the High Courts only if there is no otherwise judgments or authority of the Apex Court but where there is

authority of the Apex Court otherwise, it being the law of the land under the Constitution of India, the judgment of the Privy Council has not a binding precedent.

1808. A Full Bench of Bombay High Court in State of Bombay Vs. Chhaganlal Gangaram Lavar, AIR 1955 Bom. 1 considered the question of binding nature of decisions of the Privy Council after independence and enforcement of Constitution on 26.01.1950 and held:

> "So long as the Supreme Court does not take a different view from the view taken by the Privy Council, the decisions of the Privy Council are still binding upon us, and when we say that the decisions of the Privy Council are binding upon us, what is binding is not merely the point actually decided but an opinion expressed by the Privy Council, which opinion is expressed after careful consideration of all the arguments and which is deliberately and advisedly given."

www.vadaprativada.com

1809. This decision has been referred to with approval by the Apex Court in Pandurang Kalu Patil and another Vs. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2002 SC 733. It is thus clear that it is only an opinion expressed by the Privy Council after careful consideration of all the arguments which is deliberated and advisedly given, which is binding and not merely a point actually decided. We, however, propose to consider the above judgment in Damodar Das Vs. Adhikari Lakhan Das (supra) in detail to show as to what actually was held therein while discussing issue no. 13 pertaining to limitation in Suit-5 and leave this as it is at this stage.

1810. A Full Bench in Jodhi Rai Vs. Basdeo Prasad, 8 ALJ 817=(1911) ILR 33 Allahabad 735 held that a suit on behalf of

an idol must be carried on by some person who represents the idol usually as manager of the temple, in which the idol is installed.

1811. In Darshan Lal and others Vs. Shibji Maharaj Birajman, AIR 1923 All. 120, the question arose as to whether Swami Lachhmi Nand, priest of the temple was entitled to file a suit as a next friend of the idol. He said that he looked after the management of the temple which the Court understood as if he conducted the worship and dispensed such charities, if any, as were customary at the said shrine and held that Sri Lachhmi Nand was entitled to bring suit as a next friend of the idol. It said:

> " The fact that he is not the manager or trustee under the particular deed of endowment which he desires to set up for the benefit of the aforesaid idol would not prevent him from having a right to act on behalf of the idol in this litigation, if he occupied a position of manager or trustee qua the performance of these ceremonies of worship or charities for the benefit of which the trust monies were directed to be applied."

1812. However, the Court further held that a person claiming a mere benevolent interest in the fortunes of an idol cannot be permitted to sue in the name and as next friend of the idol.

1813. In Sheo Ramji Vs. Ridhnath Mahadeo Ji AIR 1923 All. 160 the Court permitted a suit brought by the idol through Sri Vivekanand as next friend to recover possession of the property said to be wrongly sold by a relative of one Ajudhia Puri who was the original manager of the temple property. The Court found that Ajudhia Puri was the original manager of the temple property and had died. His Chela and successor was a minor. Amongst others one Ram Kishna Das was appointed to supervise the management who in his turn appointed one Sri Vivekanand as guardian of the property of the idol on behalf of the minor. Some property of the idol was sold by a relative of Ajudhia Puri and to recover its possession Vivekanand filed the suit. The Court held that Vivekanand had sufficient interest in the subject matter of the suit to bring the same in the name and on behalf of the idol.

1814. In Pramatha Nath Mullick (surpa), on page 143, held that an idol is a juristic person and the Shebait is its representative. It is not movable property and cannot be willed away by the Shebait and observed:

> "There may be, in the nature of things, difficulties in adjusting the legal status of the idol to the circumstances and requirements of its protection and location and there may no doubt also be a variety of other contracts of such a persona with mundane ideas. But an argument which would reduce a family idol to the position of a mere moveable chattel is one to which the Board can give no support. They think that such an argument is neither in accord with a true conception of the authorities, nor with principle*. The Board does not find itself at variance with the views upon this subject taken in the Appellate Court or with the analysis of the authorities there contained.*

1815. In Pramatha Nath Mullick vs. Pradyumna Kumar Mullick (supra) the Could also said that an idol may appear by its interested next friend. The Judicial Committee observed:

> "One of the questions emerging at this point, is as to the nature of such an idol and the services due thereto. A

www.vadaprativada.com

Hindu idol is, according to long established authority, founded upon the religious customs of the Hindus, and the recognition thereof by Courts of Law, a "juristic entity." It has a juridical status with the power of suing and being sued. Its into rests are attended to by the person who has the deity in his charge and who is in law its manager with all the powers which would, in such circumstances, on analogy, be given to the manager of the estate of an infant heir. It is unnecessary to quote the authorities; for this doctrine, thus simply stated, is firmly established." (page 140)

"The person founding a deity and becoming responsible for those duties is de facto and in common parlance called shebait. This responsibility is, of course, maintained by a pious Hindu, either by the personal performance of the religious rites or—as in the case of Sudras, to which caste the parties belonged—by the employment of a Brahmin priest to do so on his behalf. Or the founder, any time before his death or his successor likewise may confer the office of shebait on another." (page 141)

"It must be remembered in regard to this branch of the law that the duties of piety from the time of the consecration of the idol are duties to something existing which, though symbolising the Divinity, has in the eye of the law a status as a separate persona. The position and rights of the deity must in order to work this out both in regard to its preservation, its maintenance and the services to be performed, be in the charge of a human being." (page 141)

> 9. "A fortiori it is open to an idol acting through his guardian the Shebait to conduct its own worship in its own way at its own place always on the assumption that the acts of the Shebait expressing its will are not inconsistent with the reverent and proper conduct of its worship by those members of the family who render service and pay homage to it." (page 145)

1816. It shows that a Hindu deity though treated as an individual but not an ordinary individual in all sense in all respects. A Deity is not only an individual but individual plus something else.

1817. In Administrator General of Bengal Vs. Balkissen, ILR 51 Cal 953=AIR 1925 Cal 140 the Court held that after the appointment of Shebait the right to sue for possession of the property with which the idol is endowed, belongs to the Shebait and not to the idol. With great respect, we find that the observation that the right to sue belongs to Shebait and not the idol has to be read in the context of the dispute before the Court. It cannot be read that even though the property is debutter property, that belong to an idol yet idol itself has no right to sue or being sued but this would belong to Shebait. Such an understanding and interpretation of the judgement would reduce the status of idol qua Shebait who otherwise is not held to be the owner of the debutter property since idol being a juristic person is the owner. As usually happen, since a juristic person cannot act on its own, for the purpose of procedure the action on behalf of juristic person is initiated and taken by its manager, and, in the case of an idol by the Shebait, if any, otherwise the next friend but that does not mean that the idol itself is denuded of its right to protect its property by filing a suit at all.

1818. The case of Gopalji Maharaj Vs. Krishna Sunder Nath Kaviraj AIR 1929 All. 887 was decided by an Hon'ble Single Judge of this Court in the peculiar facts of that case. A suit was filed by Sri Swami Keshwanandji in the name of Sri Gopalji Maharaj, an idol of a Hindu temple claiming himself as a Manager of the shrine. As a matter of fact, the Court found that the shrine was founded by one Jagdish Pandit and successors to him in his family were Madho Sudan Das Goswami, Narhari Das Goswami, Naudip Chand Goswami and then Brij Gopal Goswami. Shebaitship or Mutwalliship vests in the family of Jagdish Pandit the founder and Sri Brij Gopal Goswami, the sole surviving member of the founder's family and Swami Keshwanand had no right in the matter. He claimed himself to be the manager of the plaintiff idol through one Mt. Basant Kumari and the Court found that she had no right to appoint Swami Keshwanand as manager of the shrine. In these circumstances, the question arose whether the suit was properly framed having been filed on behalf of the plaintiff idol by a person who was neither Mutwalli nor Shebait of the temple nor was appointed Shebait or manager of the temple by or on behalf of Brij Gopal Goswami who was the sole surviving member of the founder's family. This question was answered against Swami Keshwanand and the suit was held not maintainable. This Court recorded a finding of fact that it was not shown what interest Swami Keshwanand had in the idol or in the property belonging to the idol.

1819. In Manohar Mukherji Vs. Bhupendra Nath AIR 1932 Cal 791 a Full Bench observed:

> "But this analogy of a human transfer need not be carried too far, for the deity is not in need of property, nor

www.vadaprativada.com

does it hold any; what is given to the deity becomes available to all.

The deity is the recipient of the gift only in an ideal sense; the dedicated property belongs to the deity in a similar sense; in reality the property dedicated is in the nature of an ownerless thing. In ancient times, except in cases of property dedicated to a brotherhood of sanyasis, all endowments ordinarily were administered by the founder himself and after him his heirs. The idea of appointing a shebait is of more modern growth*. When a Hindu creats an endowment, its management is primarily in him and his heirs,and unless he appoints a shebait he himself fills that office and in him rests that limited ownership, - notwithstanding that, on the one hand, he is the donor and, on the other, the recipient on behalf of the deity, the juridical person, - which has to be exercised until the property offered to the deity has been suitably disposed of. The true principle of Hindu Law is what is mentioned in the Chhandogya Upanishada, namely, that the* offerings to the gods are offerings for the benefit of all beings (Chap. 5, p. 24 K. 2-5). And Raghunandan has quoted a text of Matsya Sukta which says:

Having made offerings to a God, the sacrificial fee also should be given to the God. The whole of that should be given to a Brahmin otherwise it is fruitless."

1820. In Deoki Nandan Vs. Murlidhar (supra) the Apex Court considered the question as to who are beneficiaries when the temple is built and idol installed therein and the property endowed therefor. In paragraph no.6 of the judgment the Court held that under the Hindu law an idol is a juristic person capable of holding property and the property endowed for the institution vests in it but it is only in an ideal sense that the idol is the owner of the endowed property and it cannot itself make use of them; it cannot enjoy them or dispose of them, or even protect them. In short, the idol can have no beneficial interest in the endowment. In para 7 the Court held that the true beneficiaries of religious endowments are not the idols but the worshippers, and that the purpose of the endowment is the maintenance of that worship for the benefit of the worshippers. It held:

> "(7) When once it is understood that the true beneficiaries of religious endowments are not the idols but the worshipers, and that the purpose of the endowment is the maintenance of that worship for the benefit of the worshipers, the question whether an endowment is private or public presents no difficulty. The cardinal point to be decided is whether it was the intention of the founder that specified individuals are to have the right of worship at the shrine, or the general public or any specified portion thereof. In accordance with this theory, it has been held that when property is dedicated for the worship of a family idol, it is a private and not a public endowment, as the persons who are entitled to worship at the shrine of the deity can only be the members of the family, and that is an ascertained group of individuals. But where the beneficiaries are not members of a family or a specified individual, then the endowment can only be regarded as public, intended to benefit the general body of worshippers."

1821. In Angurbala Mullick v. Debabrata Mullick (supra), while examining the nature of Sevayatship as a property,

www.vadaprativada.com

Hon'ble Supreme Court distinguished between the English trust and Hindu religious endowment as:

> "It is settled by the pronouncement of the Judicial Committee in Vidya Varuti v. Balusami, 48 I.A. 302 that the relation of a Shebait in regard to debutter property is not that of a trustee to trust property under the English law. In English law the legal estate in the trust property vests in the trustee who holds it for the benefit of cestui que trust. In a Hindu religious endowment on the other hand the entire ownership of the dedicated property is transferred to the deity or the institution itself as a juristic person and the Shebait or Mahant is a mere manager."

1822. Distinction between right of the idol to file a suit itself or a suit filed by Shebait for the benefit of an idol has been noticed by a Division Bench of Bombay High Court in Shree Mahadoba Devasthan Vs. Mahadba Romaji Bidkar & Others AIR 1953 Bombay 38. There Jagadindra Nath Vs. Hemanta Kumar Devi (supra) was relied on to argue that the right to sue vested in the Shebait and not in the idol. This aspect has been dealt with in a lucid manner in paras 2 and 3 of the judgment, which says:

> "2. ...The contention, however, which was urged by the defendants and which found favour with the learned trial Judge was that even though the image of Shree Mahadoba was a juridical person the whole management of the properties belonging to the image could be and was carried on by its shebait or its vahivatdar and the right to sue for the protection of the properties belonging to the image of Shree Mahadoba was vested in the shebait and not in the image or the idol. Reliance was placed in support

of this contention on the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Jagadindra Nath v. Hemanta Kumari Debi, 32 cal. 129 P.C*. where Sir Arthur Wilson observed (p. 141) :*

> "But assuming the religions dedications to have been of the strictest character, it still remains that the possession and management of the dedicated property belongs to the shebait. And this carries with it the right to bring whatever suits are necessary for the protection of the property. Every such right of suit is vested in the shebait, not in the idol, and in the present case the right to sue accrued to the plaintiff when he was under age. The case therefore falls within the clear language of S.7, Limitation Act..."

These observations were particularly relied on for the purpose of shewing that the suit for setting aside the alienations complained of could not be filed in the name of Shree Mahadoba Devasthhan at all but could only be filed in the name of the shebait for the time being who was Waman Chimnaji Waghule, original defendant 3. These observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council were, however, made in a suit which was a suit for recovering possession of the property belonging to the idol against the persons who had dispossessed the idol of the same. The shebait of the idol was then a minor. The idol was no doubt a juridical person and capable of suing or being sued, but even there the suit could be brought in the name of the idol by the shebait and the shebait was a minor with the result that their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the right of possession and management of the dedicated property

having belonged to the shebait whatever suits were necessary for the protection of the property could also be brought by the shebait. There is no doubt that the words "not in the idol" are a part of the sentence which was used by their Lordships: "Every such right is vested in the shebait, not in the idol." Their Lordships of the Privy Council were, however, concerned with a case where even if the idol being a juridical person capable of holding the property could have filed the suit for recovering possession of the property of which it was dispossessed, that suit could only have been filed though in the name of the idol by its shebait and the shebait being a minor, they had got to consider what the position would be if the shebait was the person who could and should have filed the suit in the name of the idol for recovering possession of the property. We are of the opinion that their Lordships had not their attention focussed on this aspect of the question, namely, whether a suit could have been filed in the name of the idol by the shebait apart from the shebait vindicating his right of possession and management of the dedicated property and filing a suit for the protection of the same. This dictum of their Lordships of the Privy Council was considered by a Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Jyoti Prosad v. Jahor Lal, AIR 1945 Cal 268*. In the course of the judgment Biswas J. observed as follows (p. 277) :*

> "On the first point, the appellants' sheet anchor is the dictum of Sir Arthur Wilson in the Privy Council case in Jagadindra Nath Soy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi, 81

www.vadaprativada.com

Ind. App. 203, that the right of suit is vested in the shebait, and not in the idol, but as has been explained in various decisions this does not and cannot mean that a Hindu idol is incapable of suing. The power of suing (as also being sued) undoubtedly resides in the idol, though ex necessitate rei the power must be exercised by and through a sentient being representing the idol. As was pointed out by Pal J. In. Tarit Bhusan v. Sri Iswaar Sridhar Salagram Shila Thakur, I.L.R. (1941) 2 Cal. 477 at page 531 where this question is discussed, the suit in Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi, 31 Ind. App. 203 (P.C.), was not by the idol represented by its shebait but by the shebait himself as such to enforce the proprietary right of the idol in certain properties. The High Court had dismissed the suit as barred by limitation on the ground that as the interest was admitted to be in the idol, there was nothing to prevent a suit being brought on behalf of the idol by the plaintiff's mother during his minority, but the Judicial Committee reversed the decision, holding that as the possession and management of the dedicated property belonged to the shebait and this carried with it the right to bring whatever suits were necessary for the protection of the property, the right to sue accrued to the plaintiff, and as he was a minor at the time, he could bring the suit within three years after he attained majority under Section 7 of Act 15 of 1877 (corresponding to S. 6 of the present Limitation Act). It is in this connection that Sir Arthur Wilson made the observation on which the appellants rely."

The learned Judge then proceeded to quote the observations of Lord Shaw in Pramatha Nath Mullick v. Pradhyumna Kumar Mullick, 52 Ind. App. 245 where their Lordships of the Privy Council dwelling on the nature of a Hindu idol expressly recognised it as a juristic entity and observed that it has a juridical status with the power of suing and being sued; and also the observations of the Judicial Committee in Radha Benode Mandal v. Gopal Jiu Thakur, 54 Ind. App. 238 P.C*., where a clear distinction was drawn between a suit in which the idol itself was the plaintiff and the suit in which the plaintiffs wore shebaits of the idol. The learned Judge then observed (p. 277):*

> "It is quite true that a Hindu idol is a juridical person capable of holding legal rights only in an ideal sense, and it may also be, as was indicated by Sir George Rankin in the Privy Council decision in Masjid Shahid Ganj v. Shiromani Gurudwira Parbandhak Committee, Amritsar, 67 Ind. App. 251 at p.264 (P.C.), that the procedure of our Courts only allows for a suit in the name of an idol, but nevertheless the position remains incontestable that a Hindu idol may be a competent plaintiff in a suit in respect of property held or claimed by it, and that this is a right quite distinct from that which belongs to its shebait or shebaits to sue on its behalf*."*

(3) Normally speaking, a manager or an agent would not be competent to file a suit in his own name in regard to the affairs of his principal and such a suit even if brought by the manager would have to be in the name of the principal.

The principal in the case of an image or idol is not an entity capable of acting on its own, with the result that it has of necessity got to act through its manager or an accredited agent, who under the circumstances is the only person capable of performing these functions in the name of the idol, The shebait is in possession and management of the property belonging to the image or idol, and laving such possession and management vested in him, it is only an extension of the principle of responsibility from the image or idol to the manager, or to use the other words, from the principal to the agent to vest the right of protection of the property which is incidental to the right of possession and management thereof by way of filing a suit in connection with the same, in the shebait. The extension of the right in the shebait however does not mean that the right which the image or the idol as a juridical person has by virtue of its holding the property to file a suit in regard thereto is by any process eliminated. Both these rights can exist simultaneously, so that if the suit is filed in the name of the image or idol, the image or the idol would be a proper plaintiff, though, as observed before, of necessity it would have to be represented in the suit by its manager or shebait. If the manager or the shebait on the other hand chooses in vindication of his right to sue for the protection of the properties to file a suit in his own name, he may just as well do so. But that would be no bar to the right of the image or the idol to file such a suit if it had chosen to do so. Of course these rights either by the image or the idol or by the manager or by the shebait could be exercised only by the one or the other and not by both; so that if the cause of action was prosecuted to judgment, it would be merged in a decree properly passed in favour of the plaintiff and the defendant could not be proceeded against any more in respect of that very cause of action." (emphasis supplied)

1823. In Sri Iswar Radha Kanta Jew Thakur and others V. Gopinath Das and others AIR 1960 Cal. 741 Hon'ble P.C. Mallick, J. in para 18 said:

" .....According to Hindu Law, sebait represents the deity and he alone is competent to institute a suit in the name of the deity. In exceptional circumstances, however, where the sebait does not, or by his own act deprives himself of the power of representing the deity, a third party is competent to institute a suit in the name of the deity to protect the debutter property. Dr. Das contends that such a party must be a member of the family or a worshipper and that a total stranger, in law, is not competent to institute a suit in the name of the deity. I do not, however, consider this to be the correct view in law. A worshipper or a member of the family has no doubt his own right to institute a suit to protect his right to worship and for that purpose to protect the debutter property. That is, however, a suit by the member of the family or worshipper in his personal capacity and not a suit by the deity. The deity has also a right of its own to have a suit instituted by a next friend*. As I understand the law,* the person entitled to act as next friend is not limited to the members of the family or worshipper. Anybody can act as such next friend*, but the law requires that* anybody other than sebait instituting a suit in the name of the deity must be appointed as such by an order of the Court*."*

(Para 18)

1824. In Bishwanath & others Vs. Sri Thakur Radha Ballabhi (supra) the Apex Court upheld the right of a deity to file a suit for declaration of its title and possession thereof. It also held that an idol of Hindu temple is a juridical person and when Shebait acts adversely to its interest, the idol being in the position of a minor, any person interested in the worship of idol can represent as its next friend to file a suit. The Court said :

> "(9) Three legal concepts are well settled: (1) An idol of a Hindu temple is a juridical person; (2) when there is a Shebait, ordinarily no person other than Shebait can represent the idol; and (3) worshippers of an idol are its beneficiaries, though only in a spiritual sense....."
>
> "An idol is in the position of a minor and when the person representing it leaves it in a lurch, a person interested in the worship of the idol can certainly be clothed with an ad hoc power of representation to protect its interest. It is a pragmatic, yet a legal solution to a difficult situation. Should it be held that a Shebait, who transferred the property, can only bring a suit for recovery, in most of the cases it will be an indirect approval of the dereliction of the Shebait's duty, for more often than not he will not admit his default and take steps to recover the property, apart from other technical pleas that may be open to the transfer in a suit.....That is why decisions have permitted a worshipper in such circumstances to represent the idol and to recover the property for the idol." (Para 10)

1825. A Single Judge in Kishore Joo Vs. Guman Behari Joo Deo, AIR 1978 All.-1 also followed the ratio and in para 9 of the judgment observed:

"It is settled law that normally it is the Shebait alone who can file a suit on behalf of the Idol, but it is also equally well settled that in exceptional circumstances persons other than a Shebait can institute a suit on behalf of an Idol."

1826. Now we come to some precedents about temple. In N.C. Ramanatha Iyer Vs. Board of Commissioners for Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras AIR 1954 Madras 492 the Court observed:

"...The essential requirements of a temple are that it should be a place dedicated to, or founded for, the benefit of the Hindu community, or a section of it, and should be used as a place of worship. ..."

1827. The Apex Court in Poohari Fakir Sadavarthy Vs. Commissioner (supra) has laid down the requisite conditions for a religious institution to be a "temple" and observed as under:

"A religious institution will be a temple if two conditions are satisfied. One is that it is a place of public religious worship and the other is that it is dedicated to or is for the benefit of, or is used as of right by the Hindu Community, or any section thereof, as a place of religious worship*."*

To constitute a temple it is enough if it is a place of public religious worship and if the people believe in its religious efficacy irrespective of the fact whether there is an idol or a structure or other paraphernalia*. It is enough if the devotees or the pilgrims feel that there is some super human power which they should worship and invoke its blessings." (Para 15) (emphasis added)*

1828. In the above case the Court also considered Clause 12,

Section 9 of Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act, 1927 which defines 'temple' and held:

> "The institution in suit will be a temple if two conditions are satisfied. One is that is a place of public religious worship and the other is that it is dedicated to or is for the benefit of, or is used as of right by, the Hindu community, or any section thereof, as a place of religious worship. We are of opinion that the oral and documentary evidence fully establish the appellants' case that it is not a temple as defined in the Act." (Para 8)

1829. In Tilkayat Shri Govindlalji Maharaj Vs. State of Rajasthan AIR 1963 SC 1638 the question when the existence of a public temple can be conceived, was considered and in para 23, it says:

> "23. . . . Where evidence in regard to the foundation of the temple is not clearly available, sometimes, judicial decisions rely on certain other facts which are treated as relevant. Is the temple built in such an imposing manner that it may prima facie appear to be a public temple? The appearance of the temple of course cannot be a decisive factor; at best it may be a relevant factor. Are the members of the public entitled to an entry in the temple? Are they entitled to take part in offering service and taking Darshan in the temple,? Are the members of the public entitled to the take part in the festivals and ceremonies arranged in the temple? Are their offerings accepted as a matter of right? The participation of the member of the public in the Darshan in the temple and in the daily acts of worship or in the celebrations of festival occasions. may be a very important factor to consider in determining, the character of the temple."

1830. Various authorities have held that public institutions can be treated as juristic person. Relationship between a temple and an institution was discussed in Commissioner for Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments, Mysore v. Ratnavarma Heggade (supra), wherein the Hon'ble Supreme Court was to decide whether the temple in dispute was a "temple" as well as a "religious endowment" under the T.N. Hindu Religious Endowments Act, 1927. While deciding the matter, Hon'ble Court observed in paragraph 45:

> "If the temple as a place of worship, is an integral part of an Institution, so that it is not separable as an institution, in itself ... In such a case the "institution" is not the temple, although a temple can, by itself, be an institution*."*

1831. Construing the definition of "temple" under Section 6(20) of Tamil Nadu Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, 1959, Hon'ble Mohan, J. (as his Lordship then was) in T.V. Durairajulu Naidu Vs. Commissioner, (supra), in para 18 of the judgment, observed:

> "18. . . . If a sense of reverence is created by the place in the belief that God resides there or if an edifice devoted to divine worship, that would be enough to attract the definition of "Temple" under S. 6(20) of the Act. In other words, it is a sense of reverence that is very important. .....Nowhere the requirements as are ordinarily expected of a temple are insisted upon. It is a faith that it is the abode of God that matters. It is that compelling faith, that by offering prayers, one will be the object of bounty, that is important*." (emphasis added)*

1832. In Bala Shankar Maha Shankar Bhattjee and others

www.vadaprativada.com

Vs. Charity Commissioner 1995 Suppl. (1) SCC 485 while laying down certain principles of law, after considering the earlier decision in respect to private and public temple, it was held as under:

> "18. From the aforesaid discussion the following principles of law would emerge.
> 19. A place in order to be a temple, must be a place for public religious worship used as such place and must be either dedicated to the Community at large or any section thereof as a place of public religious worship. The distinction between a private temple and public temple is now well settled*. In the case of former the beneficiaries are specific individuals; in the latter they are indeterminate or fluctuating general public or a class thereof. Burden of proof would mean that a party has to prove an allegation before he is entitled to a judgment in his favour. The one or the other of the contending parties has to introduce evidence on a contested issue. The question of onus is material only where the party on which it is placed would eventually lose if he failed to discharge the same. Where, however, parties joined the issue, led evidence, such evidence can be weighed in order to determine the issue. The question of burden becomes academic.*

consciousness of the manager of the temple or the devotees as to the public character of the temple; gift of properties by the public or grant by the ruler or Govt.; and long use by the public as of right to worship in the temple are relevant facts drawing a presumption strongly in favour of the view that the temple is a public temple. The true character of the temple may be decided by taking into consideration diverse circumstances. Though the management of a temple by the members of the family for a long time, is a factor in favour of the view that the temple is a private temple it is not conclusive. It requires to be considered in the light of other facts or circumstances. Internal management of the temple is a mode of orderly discipline or the devotees are allowed to enter into the temple to worship at particular time or after some duration or after the head man leaves, the temple are not conclusive. The nature of the temple and its location are also relevant facts. The right of the public to worship in the temple is a matter of inference.

21. Dedication to the public may be proved by evidence or by circumstances obtainable in given facts and circumstances. In given set of facts, it is not possible to prove actual dedication which may be inferred on the proved facts that place of public religious worship has been used as of right by the general public or a section thereof as such place without let or hindrance*. management has been in the hands of the members of the family itself is not a circumstance to a conclude that the temple is a private trust. In a given case management by the members of the family may give rise to an inference that the temple is impressed with the character of a private temple and assumes importance in the absence of an express dedication through a document. As stated earlier, consciousness of the manager or the devotees in the user by the public must be as of right. If the general public have always made use of the temple for the public worship and devotion in the same way as they do in other temples, it is a strong circumstance in favour of the conclusiveness of public temple*. 1833. In A.S. Narayana (supra), dealing this aspect the Court has observed:

"101. *The temples are taken to be sanctified space where entire unfragmented Space and Time, in other words, the entire 'Universe' are deposited and the image of the Deity is worshipped symbolising the "Supreme." centre of activities-religious, cultural and social-among the people, in particular rural India. Temple is conceived in the likeness of human body. Parts of the temple are named accordingly, by which the organic unity of the temple is emphasised. Obviously, therefore, religious people endow their property for upkeep of temples or propagation of religion. Majority people in India are dedicated to Vishnu, Shiva, Shakti, Ganpathi and Hanuman of Hindu Gods. The cardinal principle underlying idol worship is for one of four modes for self-realisation. Daily routine life in performing rituals to Deity will be gone through with minute accuracy of Abishek (bathing), changing of clothes, offerings of food and the retirement (rest). Religion, therefore, has occupied a significant place and role in the public life in our country. Hindus, therefore, believe that religion is an essential and powerful factor in raising humanity to higher level of thought and being. The priest (archaka or by whatever name called) would conduct rituals to the Deity as per prescribed Agamas, forms, practices and sampradayams."

1834. In Pritam Dass Mahant Vs. Shiromani Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee, AIR 1984 SC 858 the distinction between temple of Hindus and that of Sikhs came to be considered and the Apex Court held that temples are found almost in every religion but there are some differences between the sikh temples and those of other religions. The Apex Court thereafter pin pointed the distinctive features of Sikh Gurdwaras qua Hindu temples and held:

"(1) Sikh temples are not the place of idol worship as the Hindu temples are. There is no place for idol worship in a

www.vadaprativada.com

Gurdwara. The central object of worship in a Gurdwara is Sri Guru Granth Sahib, the holy book. The pattern of worship consists of two main items: reading of the holy hymns followed by their explanation by some learned man, not necessarily a particular Granthi and then singing of some passages from the Holy Granth. The former is called Katha and the second is called Kirtan. A Sikh thus worships the Holy Words that are written in the Granth Sahib, the Words or Shabada about the Eternal Truth of God. No idol or painting of any Guru can be worshipped.

(2) Sikh worship in the Gurdwara is a congregational worship, whereas Hindu temples are meant for individual worship. A Sikh does the individual worship at home when he recites Gurbani daily. Some scriptures meant for this purpose are Japji, Jaap, Rahras, Kirtan Sohila. Sangat is the collective body of Sikhs who meet very day in the Gurdwara."

1835. The above dictum was followed in Shiromani Gurdwara Parbandhak Committee Vs. Mahant Harnam Singh and others (supra) (para 13 of the judgement) and after referring to the above mentioned observations in para 14 the Court said:

"14. The sine qua non for an institution, to be treated as Sikh Gurdwara, as observed in the said case, is that there should be established Guru Granth Sahib, and the worship of the same by congregation, and a Nishan Sahib. There may be other rooms of the institution made for other purposes but the crucial test is the existence of Guru Granth Sahib and the worshippers thereof by the congregation and Nishan Sahib."

1836. In Mukundji Mahraj Vs. Persotam Lalji Mahraj (supra), holding that alienation of temple is not permissible, a Division Bench of High Court held in para 28 as under:

> "28. Whatever may be said about a permanent alienation of endowed property other than a temple, in the very nature of things, having regard to the duties of a Manager or a Shebhait towards the idol or institution, there can be no necessity of alienating the temple or any portion of it in which the idol is installed. The maintenance of the entire building is the prime concern of the Manager or the Shebait.
> The temple has a special sanctity distinct from other endowed property. To alienate the temple itself is to cut at the root of the very existence of the idol in the habitation intended by the founder Hindu Sentiment views the alienation of a temple as a sacrilege. Not until the idol has been removed from the temple in accordance with shastric rites and has assumed a new habitation and the temple abandoned as a place of worship may the temple be alienated or sold in execution of a decree."

1837. On pointing out to Sri Ravi Shankar that in some of the judgments like that of Madras High Court, the observations are with reference to the particular statute and the definition of temple therein, Sri Prasad replied that the definition of temple in the above Acts has to be read in the light of Shastric Laws of Hindus and if any other view is taken or the definition of temple is taken otherwise then it would be illegal, ultra vires and violative of Article 25 of the Constitution which confers fundamental right of religious customs etc. according to the religious scriptures.

1838. In Kasi Mangalath Illath Vishnu Nambudiri (supra) the Court held that a public temple is "res extra commercium" and says :

> ".....Being a public temple and therefore res extra commercium it is not open to a private individual to acquire by prescription any private ownership in regard thereto. The character of the temple as a public temple cannot be taken away by any assertion of private right ....."

1839. In Hari Raghunath Patvardhan Vs. Antaji Bhikaji Patvardhan & Others 1919 (XLIV) ILR Bombay 466 a dispute arose about removal of image from its position and to install it in a new building. The Court said :

> "Taking the most liberal view of the powers of the manager, I do not think that as the manager of a public temple he can do what he claims the power to do, viz., to remove the image from its present position and to instal it in the new building. The image is consecrated in its present position for a number of years and there is the existing temple. To remove the image from that temple and to instal it in another building would be practically putting up a new temple in place of the existing temple. Whatever may be the occasions on which the installation of a new image as a substitute for the old may be allowable according to the Hindu law, it is not shown on behalf of the defendant that the ruinous condition of the existing building is a ground for practically removing the image from its present place to a new place permanently. We are not concerned in this suit with the question of the temporary removal which may be necessary when the existing building is repaired. The defendant claims the right to instal it in the new building permanently, and I do not think that as a manager he could do so, particularly when he is not supported by all the worshippers of the temple in taking that step"

1840. In Kalikanta Chatterjee & Ors. Vs. Surendra Nath Chakravarty & Ors. AIR 1925 Calcutta 648 an interesting question came to be considered. There was an old temple having the image of deity Tara. The image was broken about 40 years ago by some ruffians, fragments of which were subsequently recovered from a tank. The temple also fell down at that time. Thereafter the worship of the deity was carried out with a ghot (earthen pot) on an an adjoining piece of land. With the passage of time, the shrine lost its popularity. The defendant no.2 thereafter with an idea of restoring the glory of shrine, made efforts, as a result whereof a new temple was erected, and a new image was brought and installed therein. A question was raised whether there is restoration of old image by substituting a new one. The Calcutta High Court referred to a passage in a Nirnaya Sindhu and also said:

"With regard to the second contention viz., that there could be no restoration of the old image in the present case according to the Shastras, it is urged that the image is admitted in the plaint to be (Self-revealed) and reliance is placed upon a passage in the Nirnaya Sindhu (see also Dharma Sindhu) which runs as follows:

अथ जीर्णोद्धारः। स च लिंगादौ दग्धे भग्रे अलिते वा

10. Now renewal of Decayed (Image is considered) that is to be performed when a Linga and the like are burnt or broken removed (from its proper place). But this is not to be performed with respect to a Linga or like which is established by a Sadhu or one who has become successful in the highest religious practices, or which is Anadi i.e., of which the commencement is not known or which has no commencement. But there Mahabhishika or the ceremony of great appointment should be performed. This is said by Tre-Vikrama:-Nirnaya Sindhu of Kamala-kara Bhatta, Bombay Edition of 1900, age 264 (See Golap Chandra sarkar's Hindu Law, 4th Edition 473). But according to the plaintiff the image was installed by some remote ancestor of his, while according to the defendants it was installed by one Jantridhar. The image therefore does not appear to be Anadi. It is then urged even if the image bad a commencement, the restoration had not been made within the time prescribed. But the text from Haya Sirsha upon which reliance is placed, while laying down that the restoration after the prescribed period is blameworthy does not say that it is altogether invalid."

www.vadaprativada.com

1841. The Court also held that it should be seen as to how the people concerned treat and if they believe and proceed that it is a restoration of old image and continue with the worship, nothing more is required.

1842. In Purna Chandra Bysack Vs. Gopal Lal Sett & Ors. 1908 (VIII) Calcutta Law Journal 369, Special bench of Calcutta High Court observed:

1843. In Idol of Thakurji Shri Govind Deoji Maharaj, Jaipur (supra) the Apex Court observed in para 6 as under:

> "It is obvious that in the case of a grant to the Idol or temple as such there would be no question about the death of the grantee and, therefore, no question about its successor. An Idol which is a juridical person is not subject to death, because the Hindu concept is that the Idol lives for ever, and so, it is plainly impossible to predicate about the Idol which is the grantee in the present case that it has died at a certain time and the claims of a successor fall to be determined." (Para 6)

www.vadaprativada.com

1844. In para 15 of the judgment in Ram Jankijee Deities (supra) it was held, while usually an idol is consecrated in a temple, it does not appear to be an essential condition. The Apex Court affirmed the Division Bench decision of Madras High Court in Board of Commissioners for H.R.E. Vs. Pidugu Narasimham (supra) and T.R.K. Ramaswami Servai (supra) reiterated:

> "The test is not whether it conforms to any particular school of Agama Shastras. The question must be decided with reference to the view of the class of people who take part in the worship. If they believe in its religious efficacy, in the sense that by such worship they are making themselves the object of the bounty of some super-human power, it must be regarded as "religious worship"..... If the public or that section of the public who go for worship consider that there is a divine presence in a particular place and that by offering worship there they are likely to be the recipients of the blessings of God, then we have the essential features of a temple as defined in the Act." (Para 15)

1845. A Division Bench of Andhra Pradesh High Court in Venkataramana Murthi Vs. Sri Rama Mandhiram (supra) observed that the existence of an idol and a dhwajasthambham are not absolutely essential for making an institution a temple and so long as the test of public religious worship at that place is satisfied, it answers the definition of a temple. This decision is also referred and approved in Ram Jankijee Deities (supra).

1846. A Division Bench of Madras High Court in Board of Commissioners for H.R.E. Vs. Pidugu Narasimham (supra) on page 135 held :

"we think that the question must be decided with reference to the view of the class of people who take part in the worship. If they believe in its religious efficacy, in the sense that by such worship they are making themselves the object of the bounty of some super-human power, it must be regarded as "religious worship." (Page135)

1847. In T.R.K. Ramaswami Servai Vs. Board of Commissioners (supra) with reference to Section 9 (12) of Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act, 1927, the Court in para 47 observed as under:

"Consecration, according to the ceremonial rites prescribed by the Agama Sastras, is not a legal requisite, though it is a sacredotal necessity according to the views of the orthodox. The test is not whether the installation of an idol and the mode of its worship conform to any particular school of Agama Sastras. If the public or that section of the public who go for worship consider that there is a divine presence in a particular place and by offering worship at that place, they are likely to be the recipients of the bounty or blessings of God, then, you have got the essential features of a temple as defined in S. 9, cl. (12) of the Act. The presence of an idol*, though an invariable feature of Hindu temples,* is not a legal requisite under the definition of a temple in S. 9, cl. (12) of the Act. The word "institution" which is used in S. 84(1) of the Act is a term of very wide import, capable of different meanings according to the context in which it is used. It means, among other things, a foundation, a system, a constitution, an establishment, or organisation, a place designed for the promotion of some religious, charitable or other object of public utility and so on." (para 47) (emphasis added)

1848. In Saraswathi Ammal Vs. Rajagopal Ammal (supra), the Court while holding that, a "religious purpose" under Hindu Law must be determined according to Hindu notions, observed:

"(6) It was held in the Madras decisions above noticed that the building of a samadhi or a tomb over the remains of a person and the making of provision for the purpose of Gurupooja and other ceremonies in connection with the same cannot be recognised as charitable or religious purpose according to Hindu law. This is not on the ground that such a dedication is for a superstitious use and hence invalid. Indeed the law of superstitious uses as such has no

application to India. The ground of the Madras decisions is that a trust of the kind can claim exemption from the rule against perpetuity only if it is for a religious and charitable purpose recognised as such by Hindu law and that Hindu law does not recognise dedication for a tomb as a religious or charitable purpose. It is, however, strenuously argued by the learned counsel for the appellants that the perpetual dedication of property in the present case, as in the Madras cases above referred to, must be taken to have been made under the belief that it is productive of spiritual benefit to the deceased and as being some what analogous to worship of ancestors at a sradh.

It is urged, therefore, that they are for religious purposes and hence valid. The following passage in Mayne's Hindu Law, 11th Edition, at page 192, is relied on to show that

> "What are purely religious purposes and what religious purposes will be charitable must be entirely decided according to Hindu law and Hindu notions."

It is urged that whether or not such worship was originally part of Hindu religion, this practice has now grown up and with it the belief in the spiritual efficacy thereof and that courts cannot refuse to accord recognition to the same or embark on an enquiry as to the truth of any such religious belief, provided it is not contrary to law or morality*. It is further urged that unlike in English law, the element of actual or assumed public benefit is not the determining factor as to what is a religious purpose under the Hindu law.*

Now, it is correct to say that what is a religious purpose under the Hindu law must be determined according to Hindu notions*. This has been recognised by courts from very early times. Vide- 'Fatma Bibi v. Advocate-General of Bombay' , 6 Bom 42 (D). It cannot also be disputed that under the Hindu law religious or charitable purposes are not confined to purposes which are productive of actual or assumed public benefit. The acquisition of religious merit is also an important criterion. This is illustrated by the series of cases which recognise the validity of perpetual endowment for the maintenance and worship of family idols or for the continued performance of annual sradhs of an individual and his ancestors. See- 'Dwarkanath Bysack v. Burroda Persaud Bysack', 4 Cal 443 (E) and 'Rupa Jagashet v. Krishnaji', 9 Bom 169 (F). So far as the textual Hindu law is concerned what acts conduce to religious merit and justify a perpetual dedication of property therefor is fairly definite. As stated by the learned author Prananath Saraswathi on the Hindu Law of Endowments at page 18-*

> "From very ancient times the sacred writings of the Hindus divided work productive of religious merit into two divisions named 'ishta' and 'purtta', a classification which has come down to our own times. So much so that the entire object of Hindu endowments will be found included within the enumeration of 'ishta' and 'purtta'."

The learned author enumerates what are 'ishta' works at pages 20 and 21 and what are 'purtta' works at page 27. This has been adopted, by later learned authors

on the law of Hindu Religious Endowments and accepted by Subrahmania Ayyar J., in his judgment in- 'Parthasarthy Pillai v. Thiruvengada Pillai'. 30 Mad 340 at p. 342 (G). These lists are no doubt not exhaustive but they indicate that what conduces to religious merit in Hindu law is primarily a matter of Shastraic injunction. To the extent, therefore, that any purpose is claimed to be a valid one for perpetual dedication on the ground of religious merit though lacking in public benefit,it must be shown to have a Shastraic basis so far as Hindus are concerned. No doubt since then other religious practices and beliefs may have grown up and obtained recognition from certain classes, as constituting purposes Conducive to religious merit. If such beliefs are to be accepted by courts as being sufficient for valid perpetual dedication of property therefore without the element of actual or presumed public benefit it must at least be shown that they have obtained wide recognition and constitute the religious practice of a substantial and large class of persons. That is a question which does not arise for direct decision in this case. But it cannot be maintained that the belief in this behalf of one or more individuals is sufficient to enable them to make a valid settlement permanently tying up property. The heads of religious purposes determined by belief in acquisition of religious merit cannot be allowed to be widely enlarged consistently with public policy and needs of modern society."

1849. The concept of idol, juristic personality and its co-relation with consecration came to be considered before a Division Bench of this Court in Gokul Nathji Maharaj and

another Vs. Nathji Bhogi Lal (supra). The Court observed in para 4 of the judgement:

> "According to the traditions these idols that were handed over by Ballabhacharyaji to his seven grandsons were self-revealed idols of Lord Krishna and it is on that account that the learned Judge came to the conclusion that there could not have been due consecration according to law and it could not be said that the spirit of God ever came to reside in them. As it was pointed out by the learned Munsif in his very careful judgment that according to true Hindu belief the idol is not worshipped as such but it is the God behind the idol which is the object or worship.
>
> The learned Munsif has pointed out that there are elaborate provisions in Hindu Law which enable a stone image or an image made of wood to be changed and replaced by another. It cannot be said that the stone image or image made of wood or of gold or other materials is the real object of worship or the real person owning the property. The real owner of the property is deemed to be God Himself represented through a particular idol or deity which is merely a symbol.
>
> From the evidence it is clear that plaintiff 1 as such a symbol has been the object of worship by a large sect of people known as 'Nimar Yas' for over three hundred years and extensive properties are owned by and are in the possession of the said idol. In the circumstances, we think it was unreasonable for the learned Judge to expect that there would be any direct evidence of consecration, nor is it reasonable after such a length of time to require the plaintiffs to prove affirmatively that such ceremonies were

www.vadaprativada.com

performed as would entitle the plaintiff to claim to be a juristic personality." (para 4)

1850. Further with respect to consecration the Court said:

"5. From the fact that the idol was said to be self-revealed that learned Judge assumed that there could have been no consecration of it. It is impossible after this length of time to prove by affirmative evidence whether there was or there was no consecration and we have not been referred to any book of authority or any evidence which would go to show that in the cases of idols which were deemed by their followers to be self-revealed no consecration takes place. From the fact and circumstances, however, it is abundantly clear that the idol was duly recognised by all those who believed in it as an idol of Lord Krishna and was worshipped as such. Properties were dedicated to it and properties have been brought to its use through centuries that it has existed.

After all the question whether a particular idol is or is not duly consecrated must depend upon the religious faith and belief of its followers and we have no doubt that all that was necessary to deify it must have been done by those who believed in the said idol."

1851. In Ganpat Vs. Returning Officer (1975) 1 SCC 589, the Court noticed varied religious practices of Hindus and observed that Hindu is inclined to believe the divine in every manifestation, whatever it may be, and is doctrinally tolerant. The Hindu is deposed to think synthetically. To regard other forms of worship of strange Gods and divergent doctrines as inadequate rather than wrong or objectionable; he (Hindu) tends to believe that the highest divine powers co-complement each other for the well-being of the world and mankind. Religion, therefore, is one of the personal beliefs, is more a cultural attitude towards a physical thinking in that way of life and is worship of the image of God in different manifestation.

1852. In Sri Adi Visheshwara of Kashi Vishwanath Temple, Varanasi (supra), in para 30 of the judgment, it was held:

> "30. Hinduism cannot be defined in terms of Polytheism or Henotheism or Monotheism. The nature of Hindu religion ultimately is Monism/Advaita. This is in contradistinction to Monotheism which means only one God to the exclusion of all others, Polytheism is a belief of multiplicity of Gods: On the contrary, Monism is a spiritual belief of one Ultimate Supreme and manifests Himself as many. This multiplicity is not contrary to on-dualism. This is the reason why Hindus stall adoring any Deity either handed down by tradition or brought by a Guru or Swambhuru and seek to attain the Ultimate Supreme*."*

1853. In Shastri Yagnapurushdasji & others Vs. Muldas Bhundardas Vaishya and another AIR 1966 SC 1119, the Court considered the question as to whether Swaminarayan sect is a religion distinct and separate from Hindu religion or not:

> "26. That takes us to the main controversy between the parties. Are the appellants justified in contending that the Swaminarayan sect is a religion distinct and separate from the Hindu religion, and consequently, the temples belonging to the said sect do no fall within the ambit of s. 3 of the Act ? In attempting to answer this question, we must inevitably enquire what are the distinctive features of

www.vadaprativada.com

Hindu religion? The consideration of this question, prima facie, appears to be somewhat inappropriate within the limits of judicial enquiry in a court of law. It is true that the appellants seek for reliefs in the present litigation on the ground that their civil rights to manage their temples according to their religious tenets are contravened; and so, the Court is bound to deal with the controversy as best as it can. The issue raised between the parties is undoubtedly justiciable and has to be considered as such; but in doing so, we cannot ignore the fact that the problem posed by the issue, though secular in character, is very complex to determine; its decision would depend on social, sociological, historical, religious and philosophical considerations; and when it is remembered that the development and growth of Hindu religion spreads over a large period nearly 4,000 years, the complexity of the problem would at once become patent.

27. Who are Hindus and what are the broad features of Hindu religion, that must be the first part of our enquiry in dealing with the present controversy between the parties. The historical and etymological genesis of the word "Hindu" has given rise to a controversy amongst indologists; but the view generally accepted by scholars appears to be that the word "Hindu" is derived from the river Sindhu otherwise known as Indus which flows from the Punjab. "That part of the great Aryan race", says Monier Williams, "which immigrated from Central Asia, through the mountain passes into India, settled first in the districts near the river Sindhu (now called the Indus). The Persians pronounced this word Hindu and named their

Aryan brethren Hindus. The Greeks, who probably gained their first ideas of India from the Persians, dropped the hard aspirate, and called the Hindus "Indoi". ("Hinduism" by Monier Williams, p.1.)"

28. The Encyclopaedia of Religion and Ethics, Vol. VI, has described "Hinduism" as the title applied to that form of religion which prevails among the vast majority of the present population of the Indian Empire (p. 686). As Dr. Radhakrishnan has observed; "The Hindu civilization is so called, since its original founders or earliest followers occupied the territory drained by the Sindhu (the Indus) river system corresponding to the North-West Frontier Province and the Punjab. This is recorded in the Rig Veda, the oldest of the Vedas, the Hindu scriptures which give their name to this period of Indian history. The people on the Indian side of the Sindhu were called Hindu by the Persian and the later western invaders". ("The Hindu View of Life" by Dr. Radhakrishnan, p. 12.) That is the genesis of the word "Hindu".

29. When we think of the Hindu religion, we find it difficult, if not impossible, to define Hindu religion or even adequately describe it. Unlike other religions in the world, the Hindu religion does not claim any one prophet; it does not worship any one God; it does not subscribe to any one dogma; it does not believe in any one philosophic concept; it does not follow any one set of religious rites or performances; in fact, it does not appear to satisfy the narrow traditional features of any religion or creed. It may broadly be described as a way of life and nothing more.

30. Confronted by this difficulty, Dr. Radhakrishnan

realised that "to many Hinduism seems to be a name without any content. Is it a museum of beliefs, a medley of rites, or a mere map, a geographical expression?" ("The Hindu View of Life" by Dr. Radhakrishnan, p. 11.) Having posed these questions which disturbed foreigners when they think of Hinduism, Dr. Radhakrishnan has explained how Hinduism has steadily absorbed the customs and ideas of peoples with whom it has come into contact and has thus been able to maintain its supremacy and its youth. The term 'Hindu', according to Dr. Radhakrishnan, had originally a territorial and not a credal significance. It implied residence in a well-defined geographical area. Aboriginal tribes, savage and half-civilized people, the cultured Dravidians and the Vedic Aryans were all Hindus as they were the sons of the same mother. The Hindu thinkers reckoned with the striking fact that the men and women dwelling in India belonged to different communities, worshipped different gods, and practiced different rites ("The Hindu View of Life" by Dr. Radhakrishnan, p. 12) (Kurma Purana)

31. Monier Williams has observed that "it must be borne in mind that Hinduism is far more than a mere form of theism resting on Brahmanism. It presents for our investigation a complex congeries of creeds and doctrines which in its gradual accumulation may be compared to the gathering together of the mighty volume of the Ganges, swollen by a continual influx of tributary rivers and rivulets, spreading itself over an ever-increasing area of country and finally resolving itself into an intricate Delta of tortuous steams and jungly marshes ..... The Hindu

religion is a reflection of the composite character of the Hindus, who are not one people but many. It is based on the idea of universal receptivity. It has ever aimed at accommodating itself to circumstances, and has carried on the process of adaptation through more than three thousand years. It has first borne with and then, so to speak, swallowed, digested, and assimilated something from all creeds." ("Religious Thought & Life in India" by Monier Williams, P. 57.)

32. We have already indicated that the usual tests which can be applied in relation to any recognised religion or religious creed in the world turn out to be inadequate in dealing with the problem of Hindu religion. Normally, any recognised religion or religious creed subscribes to a body of set philosophic concepts and theological beliefs. Does this test apply to the Hindu religion? In answering this question, we would base ourselves mainly on the exposition of the problem by Dr. Radhakrishnan in his work on Indian Philosophy. ("Indian Philosophy" by Dr. Radhakrishnan, Vol. I, pp. 22-23.) Unlike other countries, India can claim that philosophy in ancient India was not an auxiliary to any other science or art, but always held a prominent position of independence. The Mundaka Upanisad speaks of Brahma-vidya or the science of the eternal as the basis of all sciences, 'sarva-vidya -pratishtha'. According to Kautilya, "Philosophy" is the lamp of all the sciences, the means of performing all the works, and the support of all the duties. "In all the fleeting centuries of history", says Dr. Radhakrishnan, "in all the vicissitudes through which India has passed, a certain marked identity is visible. It has held

fast to certain psychological traits which constitute its special heritage, and they will be the characteristic marks of the Indian people so long as they are privileged to have a separate existence." The history of Indian thought emphatically brings out the fact that the development of Hindu religion has always been inspired by an endless quest of the mind for truth based on the consciousness that truth has many facets. Truth is one, but wise men describe it differently. The Indian mind has, consistently through the ages, been exercised over the problem of the nature of godhead the problem that faces the spirit at the end of life, and the inter-relation between the individual an the universal soul. "If we can abstract from the variety of opinion", says Dr. Radhakrishnan, "and observe the general spirit of Indian thought, we shall find that it has a disposition to interpret life and nature in the way of monistic idealism, though this tendency is so plastic, living and manifold that it takes many forms and expresses itself in even mutually hostile teachings". (Ibid, p.32.)

33. The monistic idealism which can be said to be the general distinguishing feature of Hindu Philosophy has been expressed in four different forms : (1) Non-dualism or Advitism; (2) Pure monism; (3) Modified monism; and (4) Implicit monism. It is remarkable that these different forms of monistic idealism purport to derive support from the same vedic and Upanishadic texts. Shankar, Ramanuja, Vallabha and Madhva all based their philosophic concepts on what they regarded to be the synthesis between the Upanishads, the Brahmasutras and the Bhagavad Gita. Though philosophic concepts and principles evolved by different Hindu thinkers and philosophers varied in many ways and even appeared to conflict with each other in some particulars, they all had reverence for the past and accepted the Vedas as the sole foundation of the Hindu philosophy. Naturally enough, it was realised by Hindu religion from the very beginning of its career that truth was many-sided and different views contained different aspects of truth which no one could fully express. This knowledge inevitably bred a spirit of tolerance and willingness to understand and appreciate the opponents point of view. That is how "the several views set forth in India in regard to the vital philosophic concepts are considered to be the branches of the self-same tree. The short cuts and blind alleys are somehow reconciled with the main road of advance to the truth." (Ibid p. 48.) When we consider this broad sweep of the Hindu philosophic concepts, it would be realised that under Hindu philosophy, there is no scope for ex-communicating any notion or principle as heretical and rejecting it as such.

34. Max Muller who was a great oriental scholar of his time was impressed by this comprehensive and all-pervasive aspect of the sweep of Hindu philosophy. Referring to the six systems known to Hindu philosophy, Max Muller observed : "The longer I have studied the various systems, the more have I become impressed with the truth of the view taken by Vijnanabhiksu and others that there is behind the variety of the six systems a common fund of what may be called national or popular philosophy, a large manasa (lake) of philosophical thought and language far away in the distant North and in the distant past, from which each thinker was allowed to draw for his own purposes". ("Six Systems of Indian Philosophy" by Max Muller, p. xvii.)

35. Beneath the diversity of philosophic thoughts, concepts and ideas expressed by Hindu philosophers who started different philosophic schools, lie certain broad concepts which can be treated as basic. The first amongst these basic concepts is the acceptance of the Veda as the highest authority in religious and philosophic matters. This concept necessarily implies that all the systems claimed to have drawn their principles from a common reservoir of thought enshrined in the Veda. The Hindu teachers were thus obliged to use the heritage they received from the past in order to make their views readily understood. The other basic concept which is common to the six systems of Hindu philosophy is that "all of them accept the view of the great world rhythm. Vast periods of creation, maintenance and dissolution follow each other in endless succession. This theory is not inconsistent with belief in progress; for it is not a question of the movement of the world reaching its goal times without number, and being again forced back to its starting point..... It means that the race of man enters upon and retravals its ascending path of realisation. This interminable succession of world ages has no beginning". ("Indian Philosophy" by Dr. Radhakrishnan, Vol. II., p. 26) It may also be said that all the systems of Hindu philosophy believe in rebirth and pre-existence. "Our life is a step on a road, the direction and goal of which are lost in the infinite. On this road, death is never an end of an obstacle but at most the beginning of new steps". (‘‘Indian Philosophy by Dr. Radhakrishnan, Vol. II, p. 27) Thus, it is clear that unlike other religions and religious creeds, Hindu religion is not tied to any definite set of philosophic concepts as such.

36. Do the Hindus worship at their temples the same set or number of gods ? That is another question which can be asked in this connection; and the answer to this question again has to be in the negative. Indeed, there are certain sections of the Hindu community which do not believe in the worship of idols; and as regards those sections of the Hindu community which believe in the worship of idols their idols differ from community to community and it cannot be said that one definite idol or a definite number of idols are worshipped by all the Hindus in general. In the Hindu Pantheon the first goods that were worshipped in Vedic times were mainly Indra, Varuna, Vayu and Agni. Later, Brahma, Vishnu and Mahesh came to be worshipped. In course of time, Rama and Krishna secured a place of pride in the Hindu Pantheon, and gradually as different philosophic concepts held sway in different sects and in different sections of the Hindu community, a large number of gods were added, with the result that today, the Hindu Pantheon presents the spectacle of a very large number of gods who ar worshipped by different sections of the Hindus.

37. The development of Hindu religion and philosophy shows that from time to time saints and religious reformers attempted to remove from the Hindu thought and practices elements of corruption and superstition and that led to the formation of different sects.

Buddha started Buddhism; Mahavir founded Jainism; Basava became the founder of Lingayat religion, Dnyaneshwar and Tukaram initiated the Varakari cult; Guru Nanak inspired Sikhism; Dayananda founded Arya Samaj, and Chaitanya began Bhakti cult; and as a result of the teachings of Ramakrishna and Vivekananda, Hindu religion flowered into its most attractive, progressive and dynamic form. If we study the teachings of these saints and religious reformers, we would notice an amount of divergence in their respective views; but underneath that divergence, there is a kind of subtle indescribable unity which keeps them within the sweep of the broad and progressive Hindu religion.

38. There are some remarkable features of the teachings of these saints and religious reformers. All of them revolted against the dominance of rituals and the power of the priestly class with which it came to be associated; and all of them proclaimed their teachings not in Sanskrit which was the monopoly of the priestly class, but in the languages spoken by the ordinary mass of people in their respective regions."

1854. Thereafter, the Court considered the teachings and followings of the Swaminarayan sect and upheld the decision of the High Court that it is not a sect distinct and separate from Hindu religion.

1855. Construing the right protected under Articles 25 and 26 of the Constitution, the Apex Court in para 31 Sri Adi Visheshwara of Kashi Vishwanath Temple (supra) said*:*

31. The protection of Articles 25 and 26 of the Constitution is not limited to matters of doctrine. They

www.vadaprativada.com

extend also to acts done in furtherance of religion and, therefore, they contain a guarantee for rituals and observances, ceremonies and modes of worship which are integral parts of the religion*. . . . Religion undoubtedly has its basis in a system of beliefs which are regarded by those who profess religion to be conducive to the future well-being. It is not merely a doctrine. It has outward expression in acts as well. It is not every aspect of the religion that requires protection of Articles 25 and 26 nor has the Constitution provided that every religious activity would not be interfered with. Every mundane and human activity is not intended to be protected under the Constitution in the grab of religion. Articles 25 and 26 must be viewed with pragmatism. ..... The right to observe and practice rituals and right to manage in matters of religion are protected under these Articles. But right to manage the Temple or endowment is not integral to religion or religious practice or religion as such which is amenable to statutory control. These secular activities are subject to State regulation but the religion and religious practices which are integral part of religion are protected. It is well settled law that administration, management and governance of the religious institution or endowment are secular activities and the State could regulate them by appropriate legislation. . . .”*

1856. In Sri Venkataramana Devaru Vs. State of Mysore (supra) in reference to Article 26 (b) the Court said that practices which are regarded by the community as part of its religion and under the ceremonial law pertaining to temples, who are entitled to enter into them for worship and were they are entitled to stand for worship and how the worship is to be conducted are all matter of religion.

1857. Construing the scope of Article 25 and 26 insofar as it confers fundamental right protecting religious freedom, the Apex Court in A.S. Narayana (supra) said that religion as used in these Articles must be construed in its strict and etymological sense. Religion is that which binds a man with his Cosmos, his creator or super force. It is different and rather impossible to define or delimit the expressions "religion" or "matters of religion" used in Article 25 and 26. Essentially, religion is a matter of personal faith and belief of personal relations of an individual with what he regards as Cosmos, his Maker or his Creator which, he believes, regulates the existence of insentient beings and the forces of the universe. Religion is not necessarily theistic and in fact there are well-known religions in India itself like Budhism and Jainism which do not believe in the existence of God. In India. Muslims believe in Allah and have faith in Islam; Christians in Christ and Christianity; Parsis in Zorastianism; Sikhs in Gurugranth Sahib and teachings of Gurunanak Devji, its founder, which is a facet of Hinduism like Brahamos, Aryasamaj etc. The Court in para 89 of the judgment further observed :

> "89. A religion undoubtedly has its basis in a system of beliefs and doctrine which are regarded by those who profess religion to be conducive to their spiritual well-being. A religion is not merely an opinion, doctrine or belief. It has outward expression in acts as well. It is not every aspect of religion that has been safeguarded by Articles 25 and 26 nor has the Constitution provided that every religious activity cannot be interfered with. Religion,

therefore, be construed in the context of Articles 25 and 26 in its strict and etymological sense. Every religion must believe in a conscience and ethical and moral precepts. Therefore, whatever binds a man to his own conscience and whatever moral or ethical principle regulate the lives of men believing in that theistic, conscience or religious belief that alone can constitute religion as understood in the Constitution which fosters feeling of brotherhood, amenity, fraternity and equality of all persons which find their foot-hold in secular aspect of the Constitution. Secular activities and aspects do not constitute religion which brings under its own cloak every human activity. There is nothing which a man can do. Whether in the way of wearing clothes or food or drink, which is not considered a religious activity. Every mundane or human activity was not intended to be protected by the Constitution under the guise of religion. The approach to construe the protection of religion or matters of religion or religious practices guaranteed by Articles 25 and 26 must be viewed with pragmatism since by the very nature of things, it would be extremely difficult, if not impossible to define the expression religion of matters or religion or religious belief or practice."

1858. Again in para 90, the Court observed :

"Therefore, the right to religion guaranteed under Article 25 or 26 is not an absolute or unfettered right to propagating religion which is subject to legislation by the State limiting or regulating any activity-economic, financial, political or secular which are associated with religious belief, faith, practice or custom. They are subject to reform on social welfare by appropriate legislation by the State. Though religious practices and performances of acts pursuance of religious belief are as much a part of religion as faith or belief in a particular doctrine, that by itself is not conclusive or decisive. What are essential parts of religion or religious belief or matters of religion and religious practice is essentially a question of fact to be considered in the context in which the question has arisen and the evidence- factual or legislative or historic- presented in that context is required to be considered and a decision reached."

www.vadaprativada.com

1859. It would also be useful to refer the observations made in para 91 of the judgment :

"91. The Court, therefore, while interpreting Articles 25 and 26 strikes a careful balance between the freedom of the individual or the group in regard to religion, matters of religion, religious belief, faith or worship, religious practice or custom which are essential and integral part and those which are not essential and integral and the need for the State to regulate or control in the interest of the community."

1860. In Durgah Committee, Ajmer Vs. Syed Hussain Ali AIR 1961 SC 1402, the Constitution Bench said :

"While we are dealing with this point it may not be out of place incidentally to strike a note of caution and observe that in order that the practices in question should be treated as a part of religion they must be regarded by the said religion as its essential and integral part; otherwise even purely secular practices which are not an essential or an integral part of religion are apt to be

www.vadaprativada.com

clothed with a religious form and may make a claim for being treated as religious practices within the meaning of Art. 26. Similarly, even practices though religious may have sprung from merely superstitious beliefs and may in that sense be extraneous and unessential accretions to religion itself. Unless such practices are found to constitute an essential and integral part of a religion their claim for the protection under Art. 26 may have to be carefully scrutinised; in other words, the protection must be confined to such religious practices as are an essential and an integral part of it and no other."

1861. In the above judgement, the Court also held:

"If the right to administer the properties never vested in the denomination or had been validly surrendered by it or has otherwise been effectively and irretrievably lost to it, Art. 26 cannot be successfully invoked."

www.vadaprativada.com

1862. The Court further held:

"It is obvious that Art. 26 (c) and (d) do not create rights in any denomination or its section which it never had; they merely safeguard and guarantee the continuance of rights which such denomination or its section had. In other words, if the denomination never had the right to manage the, properties endowed in favour of a denominational institution as for instance by reason of the terms on which the endowment was created it cannot be heard to say that it has acquired the, said rights as a result of Art. 26(c) and (d), and that the practice and custom prevailing in that behalf which obviously is consistent with the terms of the endowment should be ignored or treated as invalid and the administration and management should now be given to the denomination. Such a claim is plainly inconsistent with the provisions of Art. 26."

"If the practice in question is purely secular or the affairs which is controlled by the statute is essentially and absolutely secular in Character, it cannot be urged that Art. 25(1) or Art. 26(b) has been contravened. The protection is given to the practice of religion and to the denomination's right to manage its own affairs in matters of religion."

"Art. 26(b) relates to affairs 754 in matters of religion such as the performance of the religious rites or ceremonies or the observance of religious festivals and the like; it does not refer to the administration of the property at all. Article 26(d), therefore, justifies the enactment of a law to regulate the administration of the denomination's property and that is precisely what the Act has purported to do in the present case. If the clause "affairs in matters of religion" were to include affairs in regard to all matters, whether religious or not the provisions under Art. 26(d) for legislative regulation of the administration of the denomination's property would be rendered illusory."

1863. Following the above decision in State of Rajasthan Vs. Sajjanlal Panjawat and others, 1974 SCC (1) 500 the Court held:

"Bearing in mind the scope of clauses (b) and (d) of Art. 26 as expounded in the decisions of this Court, if, as we have held, the right of management of Rikhabdevji temple is lost as it is vested in the State. The respondents cannot complain of any infringement of their fundamental rights to manage and administer its affairs, and as such the High Court was in error in giving the impugned directions."

1864. Considering as to what "practices" would constitute part of "religion" in Durgah Committee, Ajmer Vs. Syed Hussain Ali (supra) a Constitution Bench of the Apex Court in para 33 of the judgment held:

> *" .....in order that the practices in question should be treated as a part of religion they must be regarded by the said religion as its essential and integral part; otherwise even purely secular practices which are not an essential or an integral part of religion are apt to be clothed with a religious form and may make a claim for being treated as religious practices within the meaning of Art. 26. 1865. In para 37 with reference to the scope of Article 26 (c) and (d), the Court said:

> "It is obvious that Art. 26(c) and (d) do not create rights in any denomination or its section which it never had; they merely safeguard and guarantee the continuance of rights which such denomination or its section had. In other words, if the denomination never had the right to manage the properties endowed in favour of a denominational institution as for instance by reason of the terms on which the endowment was created it cannot be heard to say that it has acquired the said rights as a result of Art. 26(c) and (d), and that the practice and custom prevailing in that behalf which obviously is consistent with the terms of the endowment should be ignored or treated as invalid and the administration and management should now be given to the denomination. Such a claim is plainly inconsistent with the provisions of Art. 26. If the right to administer the properties never vested in the denomination or had been validly surrendered by it or has otherwise been effectively and irretrievably lost to it Art. 26 cannot be successfully invoked.

1866. Next comes Gedela Satchidananda Murthy (supra) where the Court reproduced the quotation from Madras High Court's judgment in Pidugu Narasimham (supra) in para 16. Further in para 17, the Apex Court held:

www.vadaprativada.com

"Religious practices vary from State to State, region to region, place to place and sect to sect. When the legislature makes a legislation, the existing state of affairs and the basis on which such legislation has been made would be presumed to have been known to it. Whereas the property for construction of a samadhi or tomb by itself may not amount to a permanent dedication involving public character of such institution, a distinction must be borne in mind about a tomb constructed on the samadhi of an ordinary man and a saintly person. In a case falling within the latter category, the answer to the question, in our opinion, should be rendered in the affirmative."

1867. In Raja Muttu Ramalinga Setupati Vs. Perianayagum Pillai, 1 IA 209 (p. 234) the Privy Council held:

www.vadaprativada.com

"The important principle to be observed by Courts in dealing with constitution and rules of religious brotherhoods attached to Hindu Temples is to ascertain, if possible, the special laws and usages governing the particular community whose affairs have become subject of litigation."

1868. It further observed: "The subject of devastanum lands is of a great importance to the happiness of the people, and the attention paid to the interest of the pagodas ……. has been attended with most beneficial consequences to the people in different parts of peninsula" (i.e India).

1869. In Sarangadeva Periya Matam v. Ramaswami Goundar (supra), relying on Pramatha Nath Mullick v. Pradhyumna Kumar Mullick (supra), Counsel for the Respondents therein submitted that a math, like an idol, has a juridical status with the power of suing and being sued. Hon'ble Supreme Court accepted this contention and held:

> *"*Like an idol, the math is a juristic person having the power of acquiring, owning and possessing properties and having the capacity of suing and being sued. Being an ideal person, it must of necessity act in relation to its temporal affairs through human agency." See Babajirao v. Luxmandas, (1904) ILR 28 Bom 215 (223). It may acquire property by prescription and may likewise lose property by adverse possession*."*

1870. In Kamaraju Venkata Krishna Rao (supra), the controversy before the Hon'ble Apex Court was whether a tank can be considered as a charitable institution under Section 2 (E) of the Andhra Inams (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari Act) 1956. Hon'ble Court quoted from a DB judgment of the Mysore High Court, V. Mariyappa Vs. B.K. Puttaramayya,

ILR (1957) Mys 291:AIR 1958 Mys 93:

> "The maintenance of Sadavartas, tanks, seats of learning and homes for the disabled or the destitute and similar institutions is recognized by and well known to Hindu Law, and when maintained as public institutions they must be taken to have a legal personality as a Matha or the deity in a temple has, and the persons in charge of the Management would occupy a position of trust."

1871. There Court also held, when maintained as public institutions, then, not only temples and mutts, but also sadavartas and tanks etc take up a legal personality. An excerpt:

> "It has been held that though Mutts and temples are the most common forms of Hindu religious institutions, dedication for religious or charitable purposes need not necessarily take one of these forms and that the maintenance of Sadavartas, tanks, seats of learning and homes for the disabled or the destitutes and similar institutions are recognised by and well known to Hindu Law and when maintained as public institutions, they must be taken to have a legal personality as a Matha or the deity in a temple has, and the persons in charge of the management would occupy a position of trust."

www.vadaprativada.com

1872. In the above holding, there is a presumption that Mutts and temples, when maintained as public institutions, take up a legal personality - and this proposition is extended to the case of sadavartas and tanks etc.

1873. In Pooranchand Vs. The Idol Shri Radhakrishnaji & another AIR 1979 MP 10, a Division Bench considered and explained meaning of the term "religious endowment" and said that dedication of the property for religious purposes such as

establishment and worship of an idol is a religious endowment and consequently a trust. Regarding the capacity of filing suit by an idol through a next friend, it observed in para 8 of the judgment:

> "In our opinion, the proposition, that an idol or deity is a juristic person and can sue as such admits of no doubt, as it has been established by a series of authorities that an idol as a juristic person, can sue through a next friend."

1874. Considering the nature of property dedicated for use as "Dharamchatra", resting place for the travellers and pilgrims, in Thayarammal Vs. Kanakammal (supra), the Court in para 16 of the judgment said:

> "16. A religious endowment does not create title in respect of the property dedicated in anybody's favour. A property dedicated for religious or charitable purpose for which the owner of the property or the donor has indicated no administrator or manager becomes res nullius which the learned author in the book (supra) explains as property belonging to nobody. Such a property dedicated for general public use is itself raised to the category of a juristic person*. Learned author at p. 35 of his commentary explains how such a property vests in the property itself as a juristic persons. In Manohar Ganesh Tambekar v. Lakhmiram Govindram it is held that: (ILR p. 263)*
>
> > "The Hindu law, like the roman law and those derived from it, recognises, not only corporate bodies with rights of property vested in the corporation apart from its individual members, but also the juridical persons or subjects called foundations."

www.vadaprativada.com

(emphasis supplied)

The religious institutions like mutts and other establishments obviously answer to the description of foundations in Roman law. The idea is the same, namely, when property is dedicated for a particular purpose, the property itself upon which the purpose is impressed, is raised to the category of a juristic persons so that the property which is dedicated would vest in the persons so created. And so it has been held in Krishna Singh v. Mathura Ahir that a mutt is under the Hindu law a juristic person in the same manner as a temple where an idol is installed." (emphasis added)

1875. In Sri Iswar Dashabhuja Thakurani & others Vs. Sm. Kanchanbala Dutta & others AIR 1977 Cal. 473, a Single Judge of Calcutta High Court in para 17 and 18 held:

www.vadaprativada.com

"17. A Hindu deity is a juristic person and has the right to sue or be sued. There are preponderance of decisions to the effect that a shebait has a right on his own to institute and proceed with the suit on behalf of the deities making other shebaits as parties to the suit. On the death of Hari Mohan Roy, Rash Behari Roy became one of the shebaits jointly with other defendants. So on his own right Rash Behari Roy can, not only bring a suit but also proceed with the suit on behalf of the plaintiff deities as a prospective shebait in case of family endowment even though not appointed by Court as guardian, can maintain a suit on behalf of the deity. This is more so when a prospective shebait brings a suit on behalf of the idol making all other shebaits as parties to the suit. (AIR 1966 Pat 235, Ram Ratanlal v. Kashinath Tewari). In a case

reported in AIR 1931 Cal 776 (Girih Chandra v. Upendra Nath) it has been held that a person interested in a private trust as a member of the family and who has further the prospect of holding the office of shebait, can maintain a suit challenging the alienation of debutter properties by a shebait. A future shebait can maintain a suit to have it declared that alienation made by a shebait is unauthorised and does not affect the deity.

18. Rash Behari Roy is not only a shebait but also a member of the settlor's family. In Nirmal Chandra v. Jyoti Prosad reported in 45 Cal WN 709: (AIR 1941 Cal 562) it has been held that a shebait as a party interested in the endowment can bring an action. In the first place a co-shebait can bring a suit on the principle that a suit on behalf of the deity can be brought by some of the co-shebaits that the rest are unwilling to join the plaintiff or have done acts precluding them from doing so. In the second place it can be justified on the ground that the deity can sue through a next friend who has no interest adverse to it and it is immaterial that such next friend happens to be one of the shebaits.

"In respect of a debutter in this country a founder or his heirs may invoke the assistance of a judicial Tribunal for the proper administration thereof on the allegation that the Trusts are not properly performed."

1876. In Profulla Chorone Requitte Vs. Satya Choron Requitte AIR 1979 SC 1682 the Court said :

"Property dedicated to an idol vests in it in an ideal sense only; ex necessitas, the possession and management has to be entrusted to some human agent*. Such an agent of*

www.vadaprativada.com

the idol is known as Shebait in Northern India. The legal character of a Shebait cannot be defined with precision and exactitude. Broadly described, he is the human ministrant and custodian of the idol, its earthly spokesman, its authorised representative entitled to deal with all its temporal affairs and to manage its property."

1877. Hon'ble Bose J in State of West Bengal Vs. Anwar Ali Sarkar (supra), about development of Hindu Law, observed in para 84:

"Much of the existing Hindu law has grown up in that way from instance to instance, the threads being gathered now from the rishis, now from custom, now from tradition. In the same way, the laws of liberty, of freedom and of protection under the Constitution will also slowly assume recognisable shape as decision is added to decision. They cannot, in my judgment, be enunciated in static form by hidebound rules and arbitrarily applied standards or tests." (para 84)

www.vadaprativada.com

1878. It was also observed that dedication in Hindu Law does not require acceptance of property dedicated for a religious or a public purpose.

1879. Learned counsels for the Muslim parties, however, submit that in view of plethora of legal authorities it is now beyond doubt that a Hindu idol, duly consecrated is a legal person, but they further submit that same thing would not apply to a place which has no such definite concept. The question raised obviously is not only interesting but important and has far reaching consequences. It has to be considered very cautiously and carefully.

1880. So the question now is, whether a place can be a Deity

or not. Some of the authorities already referred, in our view, answer this question. In Ram Jankijee Deities & Ors. (supra) the Apex Court in para 14 of the judgment referred to Padam Puran and observed that a Swayambhu or self-revealed image is a product of nature and it is Anadi or without any beginning and the worshippers simply discover its existence and it does not require consecration or Pratistha.

1881. Sri R.L.Verma, learned counsel for the defendant no.3 however submitted that a Swayambhu Deity is only one i.e. the Salgram Shila which depicts Lord Narayana i.e. Vishnu Bhagwan and nonelse. He could not dispute that Hindu worship several places like Kedarnath (State of Uttarakhand); Vishnupad temple at Gaya; rivers like "Sangam" at Allahabad (U.P.); natural formation of snow as "Linga" at Amarnath (State of Jammu and Kashmir); Fire Hills (Jawala Ji) in Himachal Pradesh Goverdhan (Mathura (U.P.); etc. as Swayambhu Deity.

1882. How and in what manner the people should believe a place or an image having supreme power to cherish the wishes of worshipper has to be considered from the belief of the worshippers and cannot be placed in a straight jacket formula. In para 15 of the judgment in Ram Jankijee Deities & Ors. (supra), the Apex Court said that the question must be decided with reference to the view of the class of people who take part in the worship. If they believe in its religious efficacy, in the sense that by such worship they are making themselves the object of the bounty of some super-human power, it must be regarded as "religious worship". It further says that if the public or that section of the public who go for worship consider that there is a divine presence in a particular place and that by offering worship there, they are likely to be recipients of the blessings of

God, it has the essential features of a temple. In para 16 of the judgment the Apex Court further observed that if the people believe in the temples' religious efficacy no other requirement exists as regards other aspects. The Court observed that it is not a particular image which is a juridical person but it is a particular bent of mind which consecrate the image. There is no apparent reason to deny the status of Deity to a place which is worshipped by a large section of people as sacred and pious being the birthplace or the place of manifestation which normally is the term used when according to Hindu belief the Lord of Universe takes natural form i.e. human being or otherwise for the benefit of the people at large. It is in this context ten incarnations of Lord Vishnu are treated.

1883. The above discussion and the authorities show the concept of idol, Deity, religious endowment, their legal status, manner in which they are worshipped as also the concept of temple etc., as it is written, preached and practised by Hindus as per their ancient scriptures, and also as considered and simplified by various Courts from time to time. This is how plethora of authorities are there, some of which, on various aspects, we have referred hereinabove. Various terms like "idol", "deity", "temples", "Math", "religious endowments" etc., though in one or the other manner have interconnection and sometimes integrally woven also but still they have different context, concept, meaning etc. altogether. Hindu law comprehends various notions of all the above concepts and much more. There are several shades and nuances of these terms. They are not mere terms of art but are living concept and a huge mass actually live and virtually has merged and absorbed itself therein. These terms are their identity, perception, source of life, inspiration and zeal to live and what not. It is really very difficult to concise them in a few words or norms. While discussing Issue No. 17 (Suit-3), we have already dealt with the terms "religion" and "Math" but to some extent, it is true that confining the word "religion" in a definition is one of the most arduous and complicated task.

1884. One of the basic thing in religious experience is a unique feeling, a solemn reverend attitude. It denotes the insight conviction of human being that there is something entirely transcending everything human. Core of the religion is "belief", and, the manner of expressing that belief, i.e. overt performances, sometimes called "acts of worship". The acts of worship do vary. This variance is denoted sometimes in terms of different religions or faith like Hindu, Muslim, Christian etc. and sometimes different sects within the same group of religion.

1885. There is no certainty in the ancient Hindu scriptures as to whether the concept of worship in the religion commenced with the natural forces, like sun, air, water, sky etc. or it was contemporary with the image worship. One of the set of scholars believe that there was no idol worship in Vedic days, but there is another set of scholars who have their own reservations about the said opinion. We have referred to certain Brahmin literature which contain references of idols and temples even in Vedic days. This, however, is a tentative opinion and need not be taken as a final adjudication. We leave it for further research by scholars and geniuses to go in further details and find out correct version. For the present case, we do not find that this aspect will make any impact on issues concerned. For our purpose suffice it to hold that image (idol) worship exist since before Christ and sufficient evidence exist therefor.

1886. We do not find any parallel to the dispute before us where a particular 'Place' is claimed to be a deity, a juridical personality in the shape of an undefined idol, by itself a temple, for the reason of belief of Hindu public that Lord Rama, incarnation of Lord Vishnu, was born thereat and this divine manifestation of the Supreme Lord at a particular place make it sacred and due to belief of Hindu people that God resides there and the 'Place' possesses all such divine and supreme power so as to cherish the wishes of the people and salvation to those who come to worship and Darshan of such place. It is stressed that this itself is sufficient to make the 'Place' a deity and satisfy the requirement of the legal personality. The proposition appears to be quite simple but if we put on tests with the precedents, religious and legal, it become difficult to be answered simplicitor.

1887. What would be the meaning of word "Place" and what shall be its extent? Whether it would be a small place which normally is required for birth of a human being or whether it will cover an area of the entire room, house, locality, city or sometimes one can say even more than that. We know that Hindus worship rivers and lakes like, Ganga, Yamuna, Narmada, Mansarovar etc. They are very sacred and pious. At several places a number of temples etc. on the bank or near the said rivers have been constructed. The very origin of such sacred rivers is also a place of worship for Hindus like, Gangotri, Yamunotri (State of Uttaranchal) and Amarkantak (for river Narmada). Can it be said that the entire length these rivers cover would constitute and satisfy the requirement of a "juristic personality". It is not out of place that at several places, the temples of Ganga, Narmada, Yamuna etc. have been constructed and they are religious endowments in their own rights, enjoy all such legal rights and obligations etc. as are available to such Endowments. Similarly certain hills or mountain or hilly terrains as such are treated to be the places of worship like, Kailash, Gobardhan, Kamathgiri etc.

1888. When asked theses questions, learned counsels for Hindu parties also felt difficult to reply. Sri M.M.Pandey submitted that in the present dispute, it is the belief of the Hindu people that the fort of King Dashrath situated at Ayodhya included the part of the building wherein Lord Rama was born according to Hindu belief and the disputed area covered that house. It is believed that it is this place which is so pious and sacred for Hindu people being the birthplace of Lord Rama and, therefore, in this particular case, it is not necessary to go into larger question since it is not the claim of the Hindu parties that the entire city of Ayodhya or the entire locality is birthplace of Lord Rama. He was born at Ayodhya is a well known fact. In Ayodhya, it is the disputed place where the Lord of Lords was manifested in the form of natural person and, therefore, it is believed to be the birthplace of Lord Rama by Hindus for time immemorial and they visit it to worship and Darshan. This satisfies the requirement of a "deity". He submits that "deity" in the name of birthplace of Lord Rama is a legal person considering the concept of legal personality of Hindu deity as discussed above. It is evident that it is a place where the public visit it as a matter of right, offer Darshan, Pooja etc. continuously and from time immemorial.

1889. The submission is not wholly without substance. The relevant evidence need be analyzed in the light of the principles in general which discern from the discussions above, which in brief may be culled out as follows.

1890. There exist a Supreme Being which controls everything and fulfills the wishes and salvation to the human beings. Hindus believe that the Supreme Being manifests himself in human form (incarnation) with all the powers of Supreme Being subject to self imposed human limitations. This reincarnation or manifestation is known as "Swayambhu". The place of reincarnation is treated sacred. This kind of belief that the place becomes sacred which relates to birth or some other activities of a Holy sole is common in other religions also like, Mekka in Islam, Bethlehem/Jerusalem in Christianity.

1891. The concept of deity is deeply embedded amongst Hindus. The Hindu Dharma has elevated the concept of sacredness into an object of divinity fit for worship. However, this is only symbolic. A Hindu does not worship the idol or the material body but it is the eternal spirit of the deity and the image is a mere symbol. The incarnation of Mantras peculiar to a particular deity causes manifestation of a deity. The idols or images which are man made are consecrated with the spirit of Supreme Being through Vedic rights. The process is known as "Pran Pratistha". The Supreme Being is bodyless, shapeless and, therefore, through the concept of images it is visualized and worshipped.

1892. The deity, i.e., the consecrated image or the Swayambhu deity has a juridical status. Law recognises its power of suing and being sued. This power can be exercised by the person who is entrusted with its care and management normally called "Shebait". In the context of Shebait the deity is treated to be an "infant heir" or "with the status of a minor" since it cannot act on its own.

1893. The deity is a class by itself conceived of a living being and is treated like a master of the house. The property dedicated to a deity belongs to it and not to Shebait though is managed by Shebait as a trustee or its manager who has no otherwise right into property except that it can be managed for the benefit of the deity.

1894. A temple is the house of the deity. Even if the image is broken or otherwise get damaged, the Supreme Being continued to exist and by replacement of the image that continuity is maintained symbolically. A temple and deity is res extra commercium. Presence of idol is not decisive to ascertain the status of a temple.

1895. The worshippers are the beneficiaries though in a spiritual sense.

1896. If the public goes for worship considering that there is a divine presence and offer worship thereat believing that they are likely to be the recipient of the bounty of God then it satisfies the test of a temple. Installation of an idol or the mode of worship are not the relevant and conclusive test.

1897. It leaves no doubt in our mind that according to the well recognised and accepted concepts of Hindu Law in regard to deity and idol, it cannot be disputed now that an idol is a juridical person, can sue and be sued, can acquire property and deal with it in a manner it likes though obviously this user is through a Shebait or the person who takes care of the idol since it cannot act on its own not being a natural person.

1898. Besides, to constitute an idol, a deity, the concept of Pran Pratishtha and that too in a particular manner is not always conclusive and is not the only test. In the case of a "Swayambhu deity", the Shastrik procedure of Pran Pratishtha as such is not at all required. A deity can be in the form of an idol or even in natural form like stone, wood, earth, river, mountain etc. The only requirement in our view would be that in case of place, it must be ascertainable as to what place is believed to be sacred and pious by the worshippers.

1899. The pivotal requirement is that the Hindus must believe the existence of supreme power therein, must be worshipping it with the belief of getting attainment and fulfillment of wishes due to the divine powers existing thereat and this belief must have continued for time immemorial and may be in the form of a continued custom, tradition etc.

1900. The learned counsels appearing for various Hindu parties unanimously contended that the place in dispute has always been believed to be the birthplace of Lord Rama where Lord Vishnu manifested himself in human form as incarnation and, therefore, it is a place which possesses the supreme and divine powers capable of fulfilling wishes of the worshippers by mere Darshan thereof and visit the place. They submit that since the place being the birthplace of Lord Rama is most pious and with full of divinities to Hindus, this has always been visited by Hindus for Darshan and worship as such, hence the requirement of any idol etc. thereat of Lord Rama cannot be insisted upon. Mere placement of an idol thereat is nothing but a symbolic act of Hindus to provide more concentration for worship etc. but the absence of an idol shall not destroy the status of deity to the "Place" being divine and holy to Hindus. The Place is a deity and it does not require observance of Shastrik procedure of 'Pran Pratishtha' since this divinity of 'Place' makes it a "Swayambhu deity" capable of worship by the believers. This status is non destructible, permanent, and can neither be altered nor otherwise be damaged or diminished or extinguished by an act of human being. It is a perennial and continued status of the Place concerned.

1901. The evidence to show that the Hindu people used to visit the fort of Lord Rama and its nearby area believing it to be the birthplace of Lord Rama finds mention in a number of books of authorities, some of which we have already discussed in the course of discussing issues pertaining to "date of construction" etc. Much more we shall discuss while considering issue pertaining to birth place, existence of temple etc. But here some evidence necessary for the issues in question has to be seen.

1902. Goswami Tulsi Das in his "Ramcharitmanas" has referred the observance of a grand festival on the day of birth of Lord Rama at Ayodhya. The worship by Hindus in the place called fort of Lord Rama has been referred in the Travellers Account of William Finch.

www.vadaprativada.com

1903. Tieffinthaler has specifically observed the manner in which the Hindu people used to worship at the place in dispute, i.e., by laying prostrate and making 'Parikrama' (circumambulation) around the building. This is a unique feature of this case. At the time of Tieffinthaler admittedly the disputed building had come into existence and was standing thereat. It was known as a mosque having been built by a muslim ruler. Tieffinthaler has termed it as "a muslim temple with triple domes". However, there existed a Bedi, i.e., the cradle for which the Hindus' believe that there was a house where Lord Vishnu manifested and reincarnated in the form of Ramlala. Then he mentioned, "however, there still exists some superstitious cult in some place or other. For example, in the place where the native house of Ram existed, they go around 3 times and prostrate on the floor." After about hundred years by which time the premises in dispute was divided by an iron grilled wall with an indication that the muslims may worship in the inner courtyard and the Hindus may continue to worship in the outer courtyard, in actuality the Hindus continue with their practice of entering the inner courtyard and worshipping thereat in one or the other manner. This is evident from some documents which we are discussing hereinbelow. There is no evidence on record to show that from 1856 to 1949, at any point of time there was a restriction effected in such a manner that only the people of one faith would enter the inner courtyard and not all. It is the admitted case of muslims and their several witnesses had also admitted that till 22nd December, 1949 the doors of the iron grilled dividing wall were never locked. There is nothing on record to show that by posting a guard or otherwise the entry of Hindus was restricted in the inner courtyard. Even with respect to the contention of offering of Namaz, the evidence, which we will be discussing later on, will show that from 1855 till 1934 atleast there is no evidence whatsoever that Namaz was actually offered in the inner courtyard of the disputed site. So far as the outer courtyard is concerned, it is virtually admitted by the muslim parties that there existed atleast three non Islamic structures which were visited by Hindus and they also offered worship thereat. Tieffinthaler has specifically referred to the place in dispute observing the visit of Hindus thereat. Various gazetteers, survey reports etc. which we have referred earlier while discussing the issues pertaining to date of construction also are similarly worded.

1904. Let us proceed to ponder over some other evidence. One of the document is an application dated 30.11.1858, Exhibit

www.vadaprativada.com

20 (Suit-1), submitted by Syed Mohammad, claiming himself to be Khatib of Janamsthan mosque, i.e., the disputed building. It says as under:

بمقام جنم استھان کا صدہا برس کے نشان پڑا رہتا تھا و اہل ہنود پوجا کرتے تھے

''मुक़ाम जनम स्थान का सदहा बरस के निशान पड़ा रहता था व अहले हुनूद पूजा करते थे'' (Hindi Transliteration by the Parties)

"Previously the symbol of Janam had been there for hundreds of years and Hindus did puja." (E.T.C)

1905. This document refers the above creation in the premises inside the dividing wall. The existence of divided premises is clearly mentioned and one Chabutara in outer Courtyard was already there. The context shows that it talks of creation of a Chabutra under/near the dome structure and open land in its front. This document is admitted to plaintiffs (Suit-4) also. This is the oldest individual and private document which throws light on the spot situation as prevailed in November 1858 and prior thereto of the disputed site and building. There is nothing to contradict it. It is thus clear that even the inner courtyard had some Hindu religious signs/symbols therein and used to be worshipped by Hindus for last several hundreds years.

1906. As already said, P.Carnegy in his report published in 1870 has observed that both worshipped in the disputed building. This also fortify the fact that Hindus not only used to go inside but were also worshipping in the disputed premises.

1907. The dispute pertaining to this place amongst the two communities is centuries old. Record, prior to 1860 AD, atleast fortify, continuance of such dispute. In fact, it could not have been disputed. Several witnesses of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) had admitted that the Hindus used to come to the disputed place for worship believing it the birthplace of Lord Rama.

1908. Record of Suit-1885 shows that the defendant no. 2 therein, i.e., Mohd. Asghar, who contested the said suit in his capacity as Mutawalli of the disputed building (alleged waqf), in his own written statement admitted that the Chabutara constructed in the outer courtyard on south east side of the disputed building was used to be attended by Hindus for worshipping, believing it to be the birthplace of Lord Rama. No doubt, he also pleaded simultaneously that the said construction was unauthorised and impermissible but the fact remains that existence of Chabutara, according to the pleadings, had continued at least since about 1855 and this position remained undisturbed till 6th December, 1992. The premises of Mosque, as depicted by letters ABCD in Suit-4, thus had a structure, non-Islamic which has been worshipped by Hindus for the last atleast one and half century.

1909. A place if identified by a name given to the deity by its worshippers/believers and if it can be shown that it relates to a divine or otherwise important phenomena related with religious matters making it a pious and important religious place, it can be held 'deity' and thereby satisfy the requirements of being a 'juridical person'. Whether such a place reflected by the known name of the deity is smaller one or larger one, or, what is its extent, is a different matter but a deity can be known by its name which its followers/worshippers have given to it. In the present case the plaintiff no. 2 (Suit-5) is known as "Asthan Sri Rama Janam Bhumi, Ayodhya". The Hindu believers and worshippers who go and worship the said place identify it by the name of Lord Rama's birthplace and this identity ascertain and admits no doubt in the mind of those who believe, follow and worship. That being so, we find no reason in denying the status of deity to the said place and the consequential juridical personality upon it. It cannot be disputed that property can be dedicated in the name of the plaintiff no. 2 which can be utilized for the benefit of the said deity. This of course is subject to the issues decided in favour of Hindu parties which pertain to the site in dispute whether is or believed to be the birthplace of Lord Ram for time immemorial and is being worshipped accordingly.

1910. Whether the idol or deity, worshipped by Hindus, was consecrated or not, has to be seen from the point of view and belief of those who worship the idol and not others who had no such belief. If an idol is faithfully recognised by all those who believe the idol of a particular deity, it is a deity. In the present case idol of Lord Rama, and its worship as such satisfy the requirement of a validly consecrated deity. No further inquiry need be gone into. We agree with the views expressed by the Division Bench in Gokul Nath Ji Maharaj (supra) that the question whether a particular idol is or is not duly consecrated must depend upon the religious faith and belief of its followers. We are also fortified in taking the above view from the Apex Court's decision in Ram Jankijee Deities (supra) where in para 15 it has observed, while quoting and approving the two decisions of Madras High Court, that the test is not whether it conforms to any particular school of Agama Shastras. The question must be decided with reference to the view of the class of people who take part in the worship. If they believe in its religious efficacy, in the sense that by such worship they are making themselves the object of the bounty of some superhuman power, it fulfill the requirement. If the public or that section of the public who go for worship consider that there is a divine presence in a particular place and that by offering worship thereat they are likely to be the recipients of the blessings of God, it satisfy the requirement of a deity. In fact the Apex Court in para 16 of the judgment in Ram Jankijee Deities (supra) went to observe that the people, if believe in the religious efficacy, no other requirement exists as regards other areas. It is not a particular image which is a juridical person but it is a particular bent of mind which consecrate the image.

1911. In Shiromani Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee, Amritsar Vs. Som Nath Dass (supra) the Court virtually set out easier guidelines as to how an untangible image or institution or otherwise can be decided whether it is a juristic person or not particularly in religious matters. The Court observed that the very words "juristic person" cannot get recognition of an entity to be in law a person which otherwise it is not. In other words it is not an individual natural person but an artificially created person which is to be recognised to be in law as such. When a person is ordinarily understood to be a natural person, it only means a human person. Essentially every human person is a person but in the history of the world the concept of different notions had different times. In sub-countries even human beings were not treated person in law. Under the Ancient Roman Law a slave was not a person. He had no right to a family. He was treated like an animal or chattel. In French colonies also, before slavery was abolished, the slaves were not treated to be legal persons. They were later given recognition as legal persons. The recognition was given later on through an statute. In United States also African-Americans had no legal rights though they were not treated as chattel. The Court also quoted the following passage from Roscoe Pounde's Jurisprudence, Part, IV, 1959 Edition, page 192-93:

> "In civilized lands even in the modern world it has happened that all human beings were not legal persons. In Roman law down to the constitution of Antoninus Pius the slave was not a person. 'He enjoyed neither rights of family nor rights of patrimony. He was a thing, and as such like animals, could be the object of rights of property.' ... In the French colonies, before slavery was there abolished, slaves were 'put in the class of legal persons by the statute of April 23, 1833' and obtained a 'somewhat extended juridical capacity' by a statute of 1845. In the United States down to the Civil War, the free Negroes in many of the States were free human beings with no legal rights."

www.vadaprativada.com

1912. The evolutionary development of a socio-political-scientific system made it necessary to consider certain non-human beings as person which were termed as legal person or juristic person etc. Having said so, the Apex Court in above case further observed that a juristic person like any other natural person is in law also conferred with rights and obligations and is dealt with in accordance with law. The entity acts like a natural person but only through a designated person, whose acts are processed within the ambit of law. When an idol was recognised as a juristic person it was known that by itself it cannot act. Like the case of a minor where a guardian has been appointed, so in the case of an idol, a Shebait or manager is appointed to act on its behalf. In that sense, relation between an idol and Shebait is akin to that of a minor and a guardian. As a minor cannot express himself, so the idol, but like a guardian, the Shebait and

manager have limitations under which they have to act. The Court observed that an idol is a juristic person because it is adored after its consecration in a temple. The offerings are made to an idol. The followers recognised an idol to be symbol of God. Without the idol the temple is only a building of mortar, cement and bricks which had no sacredness or sanctity for adoration.

1913. Let us apply these tests in respect to the plaintiffs 1 and 2 in the case in hand. Sri Ramjanambhumi, the place in dispute is visited by Hindus under the faith and belief that Lord of Universe Sri Vishnu appeared in his Chaturbhuj Roop before Queen Kaushalya one of the wife of King Dashratha at a particular date and time mentioned in Balmiki Ramayan as well as Ramcharitmanas of Goswami Tulsi Das. On the prayer made by Kaushalyaji Sri Vishnu took the form of Sri Ramlala and manifested himself in human form. The place, therefore, bears the spirit and power of Lord of Lords and it is believed that by visiting the place having its Darshan, i.e., adoration and worship one will get all happiness and fulfilment of his wishes. It will confer upon him all merits as well as salvation. The visit to birthplace itself has been said to be sufficient to confer all the merits and salvation upon the believer. It is with this faith and belief it is said that the Hindus are visiting the birthplace of Lord Rama at Ayodhya since time immemorial and despite several adverse situation the belief and worship has continued unrelented.

1914. It is well settled that faith and belief cannot be judged through any judicial scrutiny, it is a fact accomplished and accepted by its followers. In fact this faith necessitated the creation of a unique to be recognised as a juristic person. The

juristic person, in view of the above discussion, it is evident, cannot be roped in a defined circle. With the changing thoughts, changing needs of the society fresh juristic personalties were/are created from time to time. In the context of Guru Granth Sahib whether it is a juristic person or not an argument was raised though an idol can be recognised to be a juristic person but not a temple and on the same parity neither a Gurudwara can be treated to be a juristic person nor Guru Granth Sahib which is only a sacred book. Repelling this argument the Apex Court in Shiromani Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee, Amritsar Vs. Som Nath Dass (supra) said that Gurudwara or Guru Granth Sahib cannot be equated with an idol. Sikhism does not believe in worshipping any idol but that does not mean that Guru Granth Sahib in order to treat to be a juristic person should be equated with an idol. When belief and faith of two different religions are different there is no question of equating one with the other. If Guru Granth Sahib by itself could stand the test of its being declared as such, it can be declared to be so. The Court peeped into the fundamentals of Sikh religion though as a matter of caution observed that to comprehend any religion fully may indeed be beyond the comprehension of anyone and also beyond any judicial scrutiny for it has its own limitations. But then it is added with that silver lining could easily be picked up from the tenets and dictates of the concerned religion. In the Sikh religion the Guru is revered as the highest reverential person. The first of such most revered Guru was Guru Nanak Dev followed by the succeeding Gurus and the 10th being the last living Guru Gobind Singh Ji. It is believed that Adi Granth or Guru Granth Sahib was compiled by the fifth Guru Arjun and it is this book that is worshipped in all the Gurudwaras. Besides being read, people

go down on their knees to make reverential obeisance and place their offerings of cash and kind on it, as it is treated and equated to a living Guru. The composition of Gurus were always considered sacred by their followers. Guru Nanak said that in his hymns the true Guru manifested himself, because they were composed at His orders and heard by Him. The fourth Guru, Ram Das said, "look upon the words of the true Gurus as the supreme truth, for God and the Creator hath made him utter the words." When Guru Arjun formally installed the Granth in the Hari Mandir, he ordered his followers to treat it with the same reverence as they treated their Gurus. By the time of Guru Gobind Singh, copies of the Granth had been installed in most gurdwaras. He asked his followers to turn to the Granth for guidance and look upon it as the symbolic representation of the ten Gurus. The Granth Sahib is the central object of worship in all gurdwaras. It is with this faith that it is worshipped like a living Guru. This faith and conviction results, when installed in a Gurudwara to turn in a sacred place of worship. Sacredness of Gurudwara is only because of placement of Guru Grath Sahib in it. It also held that a restrictive meaning to the words juristic person ought not be given otherwise it would erase the very jurisprudence which gave birth to it.

1915. Applying all these observations to the two plaintiffs we find no hesitation to observe that every condition or ingredient is fully satisfied so as to confer legal personality upon the two. In respect to the plaintiff no. 1 the defendants, pro-mosque parties, have no dispute that an idol duly consecrated would constitute a legal person and, therefore, their only objection is that the idol in question being not consecrated in accordance with the Shastrik laws is not a deity constituting a

legal person. With respect to the plaintiff no. 2 their objection is much stronger and virtually travels on the same causes as were argued in Shiromani Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee, Amritsar Vs. Som Nath Dass (supra) to outclass Guru Granth Sahib from the status of juristic person. We have already observed much with respect to the plaintiff no. 1 which in our view suffice to constitute it a legal person capable of maintaining a suit through a Shebait or a next friend as the case may be. The procedure of filing the suit we shall discuss later on in detail. So far as the place is concerned, it is almost admitted by most of the witnesses of pro-mosque parties, i.e., of plaintiff (Suit-4) that Hindus regularly visit Ayodhya for worshipping the birthplace of Lord Rama and several fairs are also held thereat periodically wherein a very large number of people across the country and even abroad come and participate. It is also admitted by some of the pro-mosque parties witnesses that the disputed place was used to be visited by Hindus believing it to be the birthplace of Lord Rama. The manner of worship and Darshan has been explained by the witnesses produced by Nirmohi Akhara as well as the plaintiff (Suit-5) in one or the other ways. It is true that most of the part of the evidence of most of the witnesses is either irrelevant hence inadmissible or otherwise is not creditworthy which we have pointed out or shall be referring later as the case may be but that does not mean that the entire statement of a witness for this reason can be rejected. It is always permissible to a Court to take out the part of the statement of a witness which is believable and also sometimes when the statement amounts to an admission on behalf of party who has produced that witness, i.e., the part of the evidence of a witness which is against the party in whose

www.vadaprativada.com

favour the witness is deposing.

1916. As long back as in 18th century even Tieffenthaler in

www.vadaprativada.com

his work "Description : Historique Et Geographique : Del'Inde" (supra), Exhibit 133 (Suit-5) (Register 21, pages 273-289) has recognised the belief of Hindus with respect to the place on which they continue to worship despite its being razed as is evident from the following:

> "The Hindus call it Bedi i.e. 'the cradle. The reason for this is that once upon a time, here was a house where Beschan was born in the form of Ram. . . . . Subsequently, Aurengzebe or Babor, . . . got this place razed in order to deny the noble people, the opportunity of practising their superstitions. However, there still exists some superstitious cult in some place or other. For example, in the place where the native house of Ram existed, they go around 3 times and prostrate on the floor. . . . ."

1917. He also recognised the celebration of the birthplace of Rama on 24th of the month of Chaitra.

1918. In view of the above, we find force in the submissions of the learned counsels that the plaintiffs 1 and 2 are juridical person and considering the fact that they are being visited as a matter of right by Hindus for Darshan and worship believing the Place as birthplace of Lord Rama, and the idols being the image of Supreme Being having divine powers which may cherish their wishes, provide happiness and salvation. This faith and belief cannot be negatived on the challenge made by those who have no such belief or faith. How it was created, who created, what procedure of Shastrik law was followed are not the questions which need be gone at their instance. We find that such faith and belief is writ large by a long standing practice of Hindus of visiting the place for Darshan and worship.

1919. Now the question is what should be the procedure

where an idol is to be sued or sue. The suit in the name of the idol can be filed by Shebait. Similarly, idol can be made a defendant through Shebait. In certain circumstances, however, a suit can be allowed to be filed or defended through next friend.

1920. The term 'next friend' has been used in Order 32 Rule 1 CPC. This brings into picture Order 32 Rule 1 CPC which reads as under:

> "1. Minor to sue by next friend.- Every suit by a minor shall be instituted in his name by a person who in such suit shall be called the next friend of the minor.
>
> Explanation.- In this Order, "minor" means a person who has not attained his majority within the meaning of section 3 of the Indian Majority Act, 1875 (9 of 1875), where the suit relates to any of the matters mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of section 2 of that Act or to any other matter."

www.vadaprativada.com

1921. Meaning of the expression "a next friend" in Order 32 Rule 1 CPC came to be considered in Amar Chand Vs. Nem Chand AIR (29) 1942 All.150 where an Hon'ble Single Judge (Hon'ble Braund J.) observed :

> "The expression "a next friend" originally denoted the person through whom an infant acts without any necessary reference to litigation but in modern times it has come to assume a technical meaning of the person by whom a minor or an infant, as the case may be, is represented as a plaintiff in litigation. The real object of having a next friend is that there may be somebody to whom the defendant or the opposite party may be able to look for costs. The next friend himself does not actually become a party to the litigation. It is the minor who is the

party and the next friend is a person- so to speak in the background- who can act on the minor's behalf and to whom the opposite party can look for costs.

1922. The Court also considered the difference between "guardian" and "a next friend" and said:

"As every one knows, a minor who is a defendant to a suit is represented by a guardian ad litem. There is this difference between a guardian ad litem and a next friend that, whereas a guardian ad litem is constituted by an order of the Court, a next friend automatically constitutes himself by taking steps in the suit."

1923. About the procedure of filing a suit under Order 32 Rule 1 C.P.C. the Court said:

"Now, O. 32, R. 1 provides for the manner in which a suit is to be instituted by a minor. It says that every suit by a minor shall be instituted in his name by a person who in that suit shall be called his next friend. From that it is quite clear that a person who does, in fact, institute a suit in the name of a minor becomes his next friend and, according to the Code, that would apparently happen at the instant a plaint is presented on a minor's behalf."

1924. In Annapurna Devi Vs. Shiva Sundari Dasi, AIR 1945 Cal 376 a different view was taken holding that the appointment of next friend by the Court was not necessary.

1925. For the purpose of procedure, recourse was taken to Order 32 CPC but not accepted by this Court in Doongarsee Shyamji vs. Tribhuvan Das, AIR 1947 All 375 observing where the Shebait of a temple has done something which is obviously adverse to the interest of the institution, the Court may allow a disinterested third party to file a suit, but such a suit must be filed in the interest of the foundation or the deity, as the case may be. This proposition was expanded and enlarged by a Division Bench of this Court in Bihari Lal Vs. Thakur Radha Ballabh Ji and another AIR 1961 Allahabad 73 holding that the person who has beneficial interest in the temple property can take steps to see that the temple property is preserved to the idol and may file a suit for that purpose as the next friend of the deity, bringing the suit in the name of the deity himself.

1926. This Court in Dongarsee Syamji Joshi (supra) held :

> "The analogy of a deity being treated as a minor is a very imperfect analogy and we cannot carry it far enough to make O. 32, Civil P.C. applicable. In cases where the sebaits of a temple have done something which is obviously adverse to the interest of the institution it may be that the Courts would allow a disinterested third party to file a suit, but such suits must be filed in the interest of the foundation or the deity, as the case may be. the cases relied on by learned counsel where a sebait transferred property belonging to the deity and a stranger was allowed to file a suit as next friend can be distinguished on that ground." (para 8)
>
> "The result of accepting the argument of learned counsel would be that any person can constitute himself as the next friend of a deity and file a suit in the name of the deity for possession of the property by the dispossession of a de facto sebait who may be managing the property and looking after the deity to the satisfaction of everybody and get hold of the property in the name of the idol till such time as he is dispossessed again by somebody else. We are not prepared to hold that such is the law that any third

person can constitute himself as next friend and file a suit and claim an absolute right to possession of the property simply because he has filed the suit in the name of the deity." (para 12)

"An idol, though it is a juristic person, is in charge of its sebait who, for all practical purposes, represents it. But there maybe cases where the right of the sebait and the right of the idol are at conflict and in such a case it may be that the idol may bring a suit for the vindication of its rights through a disinterested third party as its next friend. We do not think we can accept the contention of learned counsel for the respondent that an idol has no right of suit at all, though we agree with him that a suit in the name of the idol can be filed only in the interest of the idol and not with the object of getting hold of its property by the person purporting to act as next friend." (para 13)

"There is really no such thing as an idol which is the private property of an individual or a family or which belongs to the public. According to Hindu philosophy, an idol, when it is installed in a temple is the physical personification of the deity and after consecration the stone image gets its soul breathed into it. Before an idol can be installed in a temple, the temple must be dedicated to it and it becomes its private property. The books of ritual contain a direction that before removing the image into the temple the building itself should be formally given away to God for whom it is intended. The sankalpa, or the formulae of resolve, makes the deity himself the recipient of the gift which, as in the case of other gifts has to be made by the donor taking in his hands water sesamum, the sacred kush

grass and the like. It is this ceremony which divests the proprietorship of the temple from those who had built it and vests it in the image which by the process of vivification has acquired existence as a juridical personage. A temple building, therefore, under the strict Hindu law is the property of God and the idol and cannot be the private property of an individual or a family or a section the public. The property dedicated to an idol in an ideal sense vests in the deity, though no Hindu professes to give the property to God. He only dedicates it to the worship of God and under the strict Hindu law the King, who is the servant and the protector of the deity, is the custodian of the property." (para 15)

1927. In Sri Nitai Gour Radheshyam Vs. Harekrishna Adhikari and others AIR 1957 Cal. 77 it was held that non-filing of application seeking permission to prosecute a suit on behalf of an idol as Shebait is only an irregularity and such application if filed later on and allowed by the trial court, the suit cannot be held to be filed wrongly or not maintainable for this reason alone.

1928. When a suit can be filed by an idol through a next friend was considered by a Single Judge in Angoubi Kabuini and another Vs. Imjao Lairema and others AIR 1959 Manipur 42 wherein it was held:

"Similarly, there is no force in the contention that such a next friend must be appointed as the next friend by the Court before he can institute a suit on behalf of the idol. No provision of law was shown in support of it, rather the provisions in this respect in the Civil Procedure Code do not make such a course necessary. It is a different

matter that the defendants can question that suitability of the next friend after the suit is instituted and then the Court will have to decide that point, but that is no authority for the proposition that a next friend must be appointed by the Court before the suit can be instituted by him. This point was dealt with in Sri Annapurna Debi v. Shiva Sundari, AIR 1945 Cal 376 at some length and I am in respectful agreement with the view taken by the learned Judge in that case. The case reported in Kalimata Debi v. Narendra Nath, 99 Ind Cas 917: (AIR 1927 Cal 244) which was relied upon on the side of the petitioners also does not support their contention. What was stated in that case was that the Shebait alone can maintain a suit on behalf of an idol except perhaps in a case where the Shebait has refused to institute a suit. The observations in Sri Sri Sridhar Jew v. Manindra K. Mitter, AIR 1941 Cal 272 were also to the same effect, namely, that when the interests of the Shebait are adverse to that of the idol then the idol should be represented through a disinterested next friend. It will be thus clear that in a case like the present one it is permissible for a person who is not the Shebait to bring such a suit." (Para 4)

www.vadaprativada.com

1929. It was contended in Bhagauti Prasad Khetan Vs. Laxminathji Maharaj etc. AIR 1985 All. 228 that no suit through next friend is maintainable unless an application is filed seeking leave of the Court to sue as a next friend of the idol. The Court found that no such procedure is prescribed in Order 32. It also concurred with a similar view that no such application is necessary, expressed in Ram Ratan Lal Vs. Kashi Nath Tewari, AIR 1966 Patna 235 and Angoubi Kabuini vs. Imjao

www.vadaprativada.com

Lairema (supra). It is true that the two decisions of the Calcutta High Court in Smt. Sushma Roy Vs. Atul Krishna Roy AIR 1955 Cal 624 and Iswar Radha Kanta Jew Thakur V. Gopinath Das (supra) in which it was held that if anybody else other than Shebait has filed suit on behalf of of the idol, he must be appointed as next friend by the Court on filing of such an application by him, have been dissented by this Court and it pointed out contradictory authorities of the Calcutta High Court in Annapurna Devi (supra).

1930. Dealing with the right of deity to file suit, the Division Bench of this Court in Bhagauti Prasad Khetan (supra) in para 18 and 19 of the judgment said :

> "18. The third point argued by the learned counsel for the appellants in connection with the maintainability of the suit is that in the present case Atma Ram did not apply for leave of the Court to sue as a next friend of the idol and as such the suit filed by him was not maintainable. In support of this argument he placed reliance upon Smt. Sushma Roy v. Atul Krishna Roy, AIR 1955 Cal 624 and Iswar Radha Kanta Jew Thakur v. Gopinath Das, AIR 1960 Cal 741. It was held in these cases that anybody other than Shebait suing on behalf of the idol must be appointed as next friend by the Court on application by him to that effect. After having carefully gone through these cases we find ourselves unable to agree with these observations. A glance on the judgment reported in AIR 1955 Cal 624, shows that the decisions of Calcutta High Court are not uniform on the appointment of the next friend by the Court. It has been held in Annapurna Devi v. Shiva Sundari Dasi, AIR 1945 Cal 376 that appointment of the next friend by the Court is not necessary. Moreover in AIR 1960 Cal 741 it was observed at page 748 that :

> "A worshipper or a member of the family has no doubt his own right to institute a suit to protect his right to worship and for that purpose to protect the debutter property. That is, however, a suit by the member of the family or worshipper in his personal capacity and not a suit by the deity. The deity has also a right of its own to have a suit instituted by a next friend ....Anybody can act as such next friend, but the law requires that anybody other than Shebait instituting the suit in the name of deity must be appointed as such by an order of the Court."

19. It indicates that no appointment is necessary, if the suit is filed by a worshipper. Here Atma Ram has joined the suit as worshipper also. Thus the maintainability of the suit remains unaffected. Apart from this, in Ram Ratan Lal v. Kashi Nath Tewari, AIR 1966 Pat 235 and Angoubi Kabuini v. Imjao Lairema, AIR 1959 Manipur 42 it was held that such an appointment is not necessary. The Supreme Court has clearly held in Bishwanath vs. Sri Thakur Radha Ballabhji, AIR 1967 SC 1044 that the worshipper has an ad hoc power of representation of the deity when the Shebait acts adversely. It follows from this the worshipper having right to represent the deity can represent the deity without any specific order from the Court about his appointment. There is no definite procedure laid down in the Civil P.C. relating to suits on behalf of idol. The provisions of order 32 C.P.C. which relate to minor do not specifically provide for the appointment of the next friend. It may also be added in this connection that the defendants, appellants did not raise any objection before the trial Court that Atma Ram should first make an application for his appointment as next friend of the deity and then the suit can proceed. Atma Ram clearly alleged in para 1 of the plaint that he is representing the deity as its next friend. The manner in which he was allowed to continue the suit indicates that he should be deemed to have been accepted as next friend of the deity. Thus the suit cannot be held not maintainable because Atma Ram did not make an application and was not appointed as next friend of the idol plaintiff 1 in the trial Court."

1931. As a proposition of law we are inclined to express our respectful agreement with the above view taken in Bhagauti Prasad Khetan (supra) and learned counsel for the parties could not place before us any binding authority or otherwise material to pursue us to take a different view.

1932. In Sri Thakur Kirshna Chandramajju vs. Kanhayalal and others AIR 1961 Allahabad 206 another Division Bench followed the view of this Court in Bihari Lal Vs. Radha Ballabh Ji (supra) by observing in paragraph 39 of the judgment, where the acts of the alleged Shebait are being impugned, then the idol may sue through a next friend who has beneficial interest in the property.

1933. In Sri Sri Gopal Jew Vs. Baldeo Narain Singh and others, 51 CWN 383 the question of maintainability of suit of a deity through a person who was not a Shebait came to be considered in detail. Initially, the suit was filed in the name of deity alone through one Sri Rajendra as its next friend.

Subsequently, Rajendra was also impleaded as second plaintiff. The Court referred to general rule enunciated by James, L.J. in Sharpe Vs. San Paulo Railway Co., L.R. 8 Ch. App. 597 at pp.609 and 610 (1873) observing :

> "..... a person interested in an estate or trust fund could not sue a debtor to that trust fund, merely on the allegation that the trustee would not sue; but that if there was any difficulty of that kind, if the trustee would not take the proper steps to enforce the claim, the remedy of the cestui que trust was to file his bill against the trustee for the execution of the trust or for the realisation of the trust fund and then to obtain the proper order for using the trustee's name, or for obtaining a Receiver to use the trustee's name, who would, on behalf of the whole estate, institute the proper action, or the proper suit in this Court."

1934. Hon'ble Das J. in Gopal Jew (Supra) however, proceeded to hold at page 390 of the judgment as under:

> "In special circumstances, however, e.g., where the trustee is unwilling or refuses to sue or has precluded himself, by any act, omission or conduct, from suing, a cestui que trust may himself institute the action adding as Defendants every trustee and every other cestui que trust as the cases cited in the notes in Halsbury's Laws of England, 2nd Edn., Vol.33, paragraph 505 at pages 288 and 289 will show."
>
> ".....Can it be expected, in the circumstances, that the trustees, who perpetrated the fraud on the deity, will themselves come forward to take proceedings to get the consent decree set aside on the ground of their own fraud ? It may be that in law there is nothing to prevent the

www.vadaprativada.com

defaulting trustees from filing a suit as Plaintiffs, but from a practical point of view will not their presence in the category of Plaintiffs seriously jeopardise the chances of success of such a suit? Will it not be said that the solicitude now shown by them for the beneficiaries including a deity whose interest they had not thought of for all these years is a mere pretence. One of the major beneficiaries is a deity of whom after the death of the daughter and grand daughter of Sreegopal the trustees and their brothers and/or their sons will be the shebaits. Will not the trustees, if they themselves bring a suit lay themselves open to a double charge of fraud, fraud on the deity in the first instance and fraud on the purchasers now? Is there no risk of there being personally made liable for costs? The trustees may be penitent, as both Bonwari and Madho say or pretend they are, or they may be unrepentant sinners as the Defendants maintain they are; but will not the considerations mentioned above weigh with them equally in either case? However genuinely repentant they may be, they may yet be not willing to face the Court as Plaintiffs for fear of being made to pay the costs or of prejudicing the deity. They may be willing or even anxious to render assistance to the beneficiaries, yet they may be reluctant to figure as Plaintiffs. On the other hand, if they are unrepentant and their sole object is to benefit themselves they will out of policy keep themselves behind the scenes. In either case they cannot for a moment be expected to take proceedings in their own name. Is the deity who is one of the beneficiaries to suffer? The law recognises the deity as a juridical entity capable of having legal rights. If a fraud

has been perpetrated on the deity and its right, such as is alleged in this suit, the deity is entitled to be reinstated in its original rights. Such reinstatement may indirectly benefit the very persons who perpetrated the fraud on the deity. It may be – indeed, I am strongly inclined to think it is – that the defaulting trustees are behind this litigation and have set up a son of one of them to file this suit for their own ends but their evil motive or rascality cannot effect our extinguish the deity's rights. As long as the deity is recognised as a legal entity capable of holding properties, its right must necessarily be recognised on its own merits. The Court cannot ignore the deity's rights or deny protection to the deity merely because of the misconduct of its unmeritorious trustees or shebaits or of the possibility of those very unmeritorious persons indirectly reaping the benefit of such protection. The fact that the deity may be again defrauded can be no ground for declining to remedy the fraud that has already been perpetrated on its rights. In my judgement, in the exceptional circumstances of the present case and in view of the allegations in the plaint it must be held that the trustees are unwilling or have refused or at any rate by their act or conduct rendered themselves incompetent to maintain a suit for setting aside the decree in 1926 and the beneficiaries themselves must be allowed to take legal proceedings.

1935. The Court held in Gopal Jew (Supra) that the suit is maintainable but it chose to rely on Order 32 Rule 4(1) of the Code of Civil Procedure for the said purpose.

1936. Considering Order XXXII Rule 1 C.P.C., a Single

www.vadaprativada.com

Judge of Andhra Pradesh High Court in Duvvuri Papi Reddi and others Vs. Duvvuri Rami Reddi AIR 1969 AP 362, held in para 14:

> "It must however, be remembered that Order XXXII deals only with procedure. It does not confer on minors or persons of unsound mind any right of any sort. Under Rule 1 of Order XXXII, every suit by a minor shall be instituted in his name by a person who in such suit shall be called the next friend of the minor. Where the suit is instituted without the next friend, according to Rule 2, the defendant is entitled to apply to have the plaint taken off the file, with costs to be paid by the pleader or other persons by whom it was presented. After hearing the objections, the Court is empowered to pass such order as it thinks fit under Rule 2. Order XXXII, Rule 1 states that along with such a suit an application by the next friend should be filed for the purpose of appointing him as the next friend it is necessarily implied"

www.vadaprativada.com

1937. Some of the judgments, which we have already referred, show that the same were given by holding that a Deity does not suffer any disability as it is not minor, in order to argue that Order XXXII, Rule 1 has no application, drawing a parallel with Section 6 of the Limitation Act. An attempt was made that the Deity having been held not a minor for the purpose of Section 6 of the Limitation Act and therefore for the purpose of Order XXXII, Rule 1 C.P.C. also it cannot be treated to be a minor and that provision will have no application.

1938. Relying on Privy Council's decision in Damodar Das Vs. Adhikari Lakhan Das (supra) and a Division Bench decision of Patna High Court in Naurangi Lal Ram Charan

www.vadaprativada.com

Das AIR 1930 Patna 455 an attempt was made to argue that a Hindu idol/deity cannot be included within the term "minor". In the context of Section 6 of the Limitation Act this view was taken by the Patna High Court in Naurangi Lal (supra), hence it was argued that on the same principle Order 32 Rule 1 has no application in this case and an idol cannot be allowed to be sued through next friend treating it to be a minor but with great respect we find that the issue is already concluded by the decision of the Apex Court in Bishwanath vs. Sri Thakur Radha Ballabhji (supra). We also find that the Patna High Court referred to an earlier decision of this Court in Chitar Mal Vs. Panchu Lal AIR 1926 All.392 and the Oudh Chief Court in Prakash Das Vs. Janki Ballabha Saran AIR 1926 Oudh 444 holding that property can be acquired as against an idol by adverse possession which will run from the date of the alienation inasmuch as an idol does not suffer from any disability under the Limitation Act and in reference thereof it was held that the idol cannot be treated to be a 'minor' so as to suffer a disability under Section 6 of the Limitation Act.

1939. To the same effect is a Division Bench decision of Orissa High Court in Radhakrishna Das Vs. Radha Ramana Swami & others AIR (36) 1949 Orissa 1. In that case also there was a family idol of Thakur Radharamna Swami. It belonged to the family of Ranganath Deb Goswami whose father executed a deed on 21st November 1909, transferring his Shebait right as inam lands endowed for the service of the deity and the idol itself to Mahant of the Gangamatha Math at Puri and put him in possession of the plaintiff deity. The Government of Madras resumed the inam grant on 4th November 1921 on the ground it has been alienated. Hence, the purpose of grant has failed.

Ranganath Deb Goswami requested the Government to hand over the net assessment of the village so that Seva Pooja of the deity may be continued. The Mahant of Gangamatha Math at Puri raised an objection. The Government left the parties to establish their rights in a Civil Court and collection from village were kept in the treasury subject to final adjudication of the title. Ranganath Deb Goswami filed a suit against the Mahant of Gangamatha Math at Puri praying for a declaration that the plaintiff idol has not been removed from the Goswami Math to Gangamatha Math, as falsely stated in the deed executed on 21st November 1909. The suit was decided against Goswami Math as a result whereof the inam village was re-granted to Gantamatha Math. Thereafter, a suit was filed by zamindars of Takkali as next friend of the idol seeking a declaration that the retention of idol at Gangamatha Math by its Mahant is wrongful and a continuing wrong, the idol be restored to its original place, i.e., Goswami Math. The next frient of the idol claimed to be the successor of the original founder of the endowment, i.e., Goswami Math and as such interested in the location of the idol at proper place and claimed that it is the will of the idol to be returned at the original place and to be worshipped thereat. The cause of action was claimed to be a continuing one. The Trial Court formulated several issues and with respect to the validity of the transfer from Goswami Math to Gangamatha Math observed that the said transfer is not illegal and cannot be questioned by the next friend of the idol. He held the retention not illegal and the suit was held barred by limitation. The judgment was reversed in appeal. The High Court allowed the appeal and restored the judgment of the Trial Court in the background of the above facts. High Court found that there was

no difference in the customary mode of worship in Goswami Math and Gangamatha Math. The plea of different of customary mode of worship was found a pure myth and unsubstantiated. Secondly, it held that the lower Appellate Court erred in observing that the Mahant of Goswami Math being a married person was capable of conducting worship though the Mahant of Gangamatha Math, Sanyasi, could not have been capable thereof. The Court observed that this finding is erroneous and the lower Appellate Court has proceeded on some unfortunate confusion between an "ascetic" and a 'Sanyasi. The aforesaid words have been explained by the Court as under:

> "There has been an unfortunate confusion in the lower Courts between an "ascetic" and a 'Sanyasi.' The only difference that I can find between defendants 1 and 2 is that the former is a perpetual Brahmachari or Virakta of the Vaishnab sect while the latter is a Gruhi or married man. Both worship deities, both perform the annual ceremonies of their Gurus or ancestors, and also perform other Vaidio Karmas. Sanyasi should have no Gods or temple. Their only vocation is the contemplation of the absolute truth and not the worship of any God. A Brahmachari or student, according to Golap Chandra Sarkar is of two descriptions, namely, Upakarvana or ordinary student and Naishtika or life long student. The former became a house-holder in due course, while the latter was a student for life, devoted to the study of science and theology, felt no inclination for marriage, did not like to become a house-holder, and chose to life, as a perpetual student, the austere life of celibacy. There are persons belonging to certain religious sects of modern origin such as the Vaishnabs that do in some respect resemble lifelong students and itinerant ascetics. They are connected with the well-known Maths or Mahants.... Most of the Vaishnabite Maths of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa were founded by Bengalee Brahmins and Kayasthas who were the disciples and followers of Chaitanya and they were not merely founded by celibates but by house-holders. The three Peabhus who are the chief spiritual preceptors or masters of this order are Obaitanya, who is believed to be the incarnation of Lord Krishna, Adwaitanand and Nityanand. Adwaitanand's descendants residing at Santipur are now chief spiritual preceptors along with the male and female descendants of Nityananda. Besides these three Prabhus, the Vaishnabs of this order acknowledge six Goaains as their original and chief teachers and founders, in some instances of the families now existing, to whom as well as to the Gokulashta Gosains, hereditary veneration is due. These six are Rupa, Sanatan, Jeeva, Raghunath Bhat, Baghunath Das, and Gopal Bhat. They appear to have settled at Brundaban and Mathura. The post of spiritual Guide is not confined only to the Brahmins: some of the well-known Gosains' belong to the Vaidya caste. Chaitanya, the founder of these cults, nominated Adwaitacharya or Adwaitanand and Nityanand to preside over the Bengal Vaishnabs, and Bupa and Sanatan over those of Mathura: See Wilson's works, vol. I. It is said that defendant 1 claims descent through Gadadhar Prabhu and defendant 2 through Nityanand Prabhu who were both followers of Lord Chaitanya. A reference to Chaityanya Charitamruta and Baishnab Abidhana shows that

Gadadhar who was also known as Pandit Prabhu Gadadhar Pandit and Godai, was the disoiple of Pandarik Bidyanidhi who was himself a disciple of Advaitanand. Gadadhar came to Orissa along with Sri Chaitanya and lived the life of a perpetual Brahmachari till his death in 1533. Gangamudri was an Oriya lady and was a disciple of Gadadhar's branch. Gadadhar was a great scholar and wrote commentaries on the Gita. Besides he was a life-long associate of Lord Chaitanya and is regarded by the Vaishnabs as one of the Pancha Tatva. The appellant's Math is obviously named after Gangamudri, who was a Vaishnab herself and is known as the Gangamatha Math."

1940. Coming to the question of limitation, the Court in Radhakrishna Das Vs. Radha Ramana Swami (supra) has dealt with this issue in paras 13 and 19 at length. Certain propositions which it has accepted as well settled are:

(a) As a general rule according to Hindu law, property given for the maintenance of religious worship is inalienable. (Reliance is placed on Mac Naughton's "Precedents of Hindu Law" Vol. II, p. 305; Sri Sri Ishwar Lakshi Durga Vs. Surendra Nath Sarhar 45 C.W.N. 665 and Surendra Narayan Sarbadhikari Vs. Bholanath Roy Choudhuri AIR (30) 1943 Cal. 613)

(b) The manager of an endowment has the same powers as a guardian of an infant to incur loans for necessary purposes and such loans will bind the idol's estate.

(c)Where the temple is a public temple, the dedication may be such that the family itself could not put an end to it, but in the case of a family idol the consensus of the whole family might give the estate another direction.

www.vadaprativada.com

(Reliance is placed on Kunwar Darganath Vs. Ramchunder 4 I.A. 52 (P.C.) and Tulsidas Vs. Sidahinath (9) I.C. 650)

(d) It is only in an ideal sense that property can be said to belong to an idol, and the possession and management of it must in the nature of things be entrusted to some person as the Shebait or Manager. (Reliance is placed on Prosunno Kumari Debya v. Gulabahand (supra) and Kunwar Darganath Vs. Ramchunder (supra).

(e) Person so entrusted must of necessity be empowered to do whatever may be required for the service of the idol and for the benefit and preservation of its properties, at least to as great a degree as the manager of an infant heir.

(f) A Shebait can borrow for legal necessity and for necessaries of the deity and bind the estate of the deity.

(g) Right to be worshipped at a particular place or by a person may be regarded as intangible property (Reliance is placed on Mahamaya Devi Vs. Hari Das Haldar AIR (2) 1915 Cal. 161)

1941. Having said so, the Court observed that in the eyes of law, idols are property and placed reliance on Subbaraya Gurukkal Vs. Chellappa Mudali 4 Mad. 315. It referred to a Calcutta High Court decision in Bali Panda Vs. Jadumani 7 I.C. 475, wherein it was held that being a juridical person, the idol is not movable property though it is property for which a suit is governed by Article 120 Limitation Act. Having referred to the above two decisions, the Orissa High Court proceeded not to record any final opinion as to whether the idol can be regarded as movable or immovable property as is evident from para 13 of the judgment. However for our purpose, we find that

this question needs some consideration. If an idol can be held to be a property, it will be a judicial proposition to treat it as a juridical person capable of holding the property as a right to sue or be sued or other consequences in law which are available to a legal person. It is inconceivable that a legal person, i.e., idol itself is a property and can also hold property. What appears to us is that the man made idols made of precious metals may have their value in the economic sense, not in the form of image but on account of the preciousness of the metal of which it consists. In modern days, the Hindu religious idols of ancient period have also become precious and antique market internationally though it is a crime under some statutes of this Country. Therefore, beyond India, antique Hindu idols by the persons of other religions may have economic worth for different reasons but for the worshippers it is a matter of faith and belief and not the economic worth. Normally, a Hindu worshipper cannot think of selling an idol being worshipped by all Hindus treating it to be a property consisting of gold, silver or any other metal since it is against the civilized motion of the Hindu society who believe and have faith in the religion. But if the idol has lost its efficacy as deity for one or the other reason and the precious metal of which it was made for one or the other reason has converted into form of that metal itself, obviously it will be a property of the value that metal would be. In short, what we intend to say is that a consecrated man made idol, irrespective of preciousness of the metal of which it is made, is not treated to be property in any manner by the worshippers of that deity and, therefore, it cannot be said to be a property as a matter of legal proposition. But the right to worship the idol and possession of the deity for the purpose of its management, sewa, pooja etc. constitute the rights of Shebait, which is an office, and can be said to be an intangible property right. The High Court further said that Thakur Ji can be the subject of possession and adverse possession. This wide proposition again is difficult to accept. A person, whether legal or natural, by itself can be subject of possession or adverse possession is a bit difficult to understand. The property of an idol or deity may be subject of possession and adverse possession in law if it is so permissible but the deity itself, in our view, cannot be said to be subject of possession and adverse possession in the manner it is being said and here also what we have observed with respect to the concept of idol as property can be read here also.

1942. Then comes the next proposition. The Orissa High Court held, "An idol is no doubt in the position of an infant as it can act only through a sebayat or a manager." Having said so, it proceeded further to observe that there is no authority to show that this infant can be treated to be a perpetual infant so that transaction by or against him will not be governed by Limitatin Act. It further proceed to hold that " The doctrine that an idol is a perpetual minor is an extravagant doctrine as it is open to the sebayat, or any person interested in an endowment, to bring a suit to recover the idol's property for devottar purposes." (Reliance for the said proposition has been placed on Damodar Das Vs. Lakhan Das (supra) and Surendra Krishna Roy Vs. Bhubaneswari Thakurani AIR (2) 1933 Cal. 295). The Court further observed:

(i) An idol can also acquire rights by adverse possession just as much as there can be adverse possession against the idol. [Anand Chandra Vs. Brojalal (supra)]

(ii) A suit by the idol or the manager of the idol on behalf of the idol for recovery of possession must be brought within 12 years from the date of alienation.

(iii) An idol is as much subject to the law of limitation as a natural person and cannot claim exemption on the ground that he is a perpetual infant, nor is a Hindu deity to be regarded as a minor for all purposes. (reliance is placed on Anantakrishna v. Prayag Das I.L.R (1937) 1 Cal. 84

(iv) A idol cannot claim exemption from the law of limitation. (reliance is placed on Surendrakrishna Roy Vs. Ishree Sree Bhubneswari Thakurani (supra) as confirmed by Privy Council Bhubaneswari Thakurani Vs. Brojanath Dey AIR (24) 1937 PC 185)

1943. Reliance is also placed on a Division Bench decision on Orissa High Court in Jagannath vs. Tirthnanda Das AIR 1952 Orissa 312 where following Talluri Venkata Seshayya and others Vs. Thadikonda Kotiswara Rao (supra) the Court expressed its opinion against treating idol as perpetual minor and said in para 11:

".....But it is well-settled that an idol cannot be regarded as a perpetual minor and the special protection given to a minor does not apply to an idol. The protection of a minor against the negligent actings of a guardian is a special one and statutory provision has been made for safeguarding a minor's interest."

1944. In Tarit Bhusan Rai and another Vs. Sri Sri Iswar Sridhar Salagram Shila Thakur (supra) the Court said:

"In view of the religious customs of the Hindus which have been recognised by Courts of law a Hindu idol like a juristic person under the English system has been vested with the capacity of holding properties and with the powers of suing or being sued (Ibid). A juristic person under the English system has no body or soul. It has no rights except those which are attributed to it on behalf of some human beings. The lump of metal, stone, wood or clay forming the image of a Hindu idol is not a mere moveable chattel. It is conceived by the Hindus as a living being having its own interests apart from the interests of its worshippers. It is a juristic person of a peculiar type.

The points of similarity between a minor and a Hindu idol are :(1) Both have the capacity of owning property. (2) Both are incapable of managing their properties and protecting their own interests. (3) The properties of both are managed and protected by another human being. The manager of a minor is his legal guardian and the manager of an idol is its shebait. (4) The powers of their managers are similar. (5) Both have got the right to sue. (6) The bar of S. 11 and Order 9, R. 9, Civil P.C., applies to both of them.

The points of difference between the two are: (1) A Hindu idol is a juristic or artificial person but a minor is a natural person. (2) A Hindu idol exists for its own interest as well as for the interests of its worshippers but a minor does not exist for the interests of anybody else. (3) The Contract Act (Substantive law) has taken away the legal capacity of a minor to contract but the legal capacity of a Hindu idol to contract has not been affected by this Act or by any other statute. (4) The Limitation Act (an adjective law) has exempted a minor from the operation of a bar of limitation but this protection has not been extended to a Hindu idol.

From the above it is clear that there is some analogy between a minor and a Hindu idol but the latter is neither a minor nor a perpetual minor. Although in law an idol has the power of suing it has no physical capacity to sue. This absence of physical capacity is perhaps referred to by the Judicial Committee when they said in 31 I.A. 203 that the right of suit is not vested in the idol. Who is then entitled to exercise the idol's power of suing? This is a matter of substantive law:

Its (idol's) interests are attended to by the person who has the deity in his charge and who is in law its manager with all the powers which would in such circumstances on analogy be given to the manager of the estate of an infant heir: 52 I.A. 245.

"The manager of the estate of an infant heir" apparently means the legal guardian of an infant. The powers of the legal guardian of an infant include the power to sue on behalf of the infant. The shebait of a Hindu idol is its manager in law. On the analogy of the power of the legal guardian of an infant the shebait of a Hindu idol has the right to sue on behalf of the idol, for the protection of its interests. In this sense it may be said as was said by the Judicial Committee in 31 I.A. 203 that the right of suit vests in the shebait." (page 103)

"A Hindu idol as has been already stated is a juristic person having its own interests apart from the interests of its worshippers. 31 I.A. 203 and 52 I.A. 245 are authorities for the proposition that its power of suing for protecting its own interests is to be exercised by it through its de jure or de facto shebait. The worshippers of the idol are interested in the idol and as such are interested in the property dedicated to it for its maintenance. Their right to sue for the protection of the idol's property is founded upon their own interest viz., the right of worship apart from and independent of the idol's right to sue for the protection of its own interests and properties. They have no right to exercise the idol's power of suing." (page 104)

"The introduction of the idol and its recognition as a juristic person are more a matter for the procedure and the procedure in India recognises the idol as having a locus standi in judicio." (page 119)

1945. All these propositions as laid down, wide as they are, we find difficult to subscribe. Once it is held that an idol is in position of an infant, we fail to understand as to how it is infant or minor for one purpose and not for another. In our sense whether a minor is entitled to act, not to act or protect it, that would apply without any distinction to alike minor who is looked after by his/her guardian, may be natural or otherwise and manner in which his property can be dealt with by such guardian all will apply to a deity also. To that extent, deity, once a minor, will continue to be treated as minor for all purposes and we find no authority to show as to how and in what circumstances and why there can be a distinction between the status of deity as minor and natural person as minor. If by nature of thing, a deity is such kind of minor which can never attain majority, this by itself would not deprive it from protections or otherwise which are available to a natural minor. One can have no dispute about the proposition that minor's estate can be encumbrance by a person, who is entitled to manage his affairs, may be a guardian in case of natural minor and Shebait in case of idol so long such encumbrance is necessary for the benefit of the minor or the idol, as the came may be. The proposition that an idol can claim somebody's property under possession adversely and his property also can be subject to same consequences has to be understood in the facts of the things. Obviously, an idol cannot move on its own. If there comes a question of unauthorized possession of some other's property by an idol, this would have to be through some natural person. The benefit may ultimately go to the idol if such unauthorized possession completes the statutory period of limitation to be converted into a title, but that does not mean that it has been done by the idol on its own inasmuch if a suit for eviction is to be filed before expiry of period of limitation, that will be against the idol represented through a Shebait or the natural person who is responsible for such possession. Similarly, the property of an idol, if unauthorizedly possessed by a person there can be two types of cases; where a caretaker, i.e, Shebait or whatever name it is called is available, but does not take any action allowing the unauthorized possession by another person to continue for the period of limitation resulting in extension of rights of the minor to the property,if inaction on the part of Shebait or caretaker, as the case may be, is not found to be collusive, fraudulent or deliberate mismanagement of the property of the minor, one may raise the plea of limitation but we have serious doubt in successful representation of such right for the reason that for claiming adverse possession an open hostile possession to the knowledge of owner is an integral constituent of the plea of adverse possession. Such a knowledge to the owner of the property, i.e., idol cannot be perceived for the reason such a knowledge to the minor's inaction on his part is not recognised

in law. It is this distinction which has been pointed out by the Privy Council in the case of Masjid Shahid Ganj v. Shiromani Gurudwira Parbandhak Committee, Amritsar, 67 Ind. App. 251 at p.264 (P.C.) where the plea of legal person qua a mosque has been turned down by the Privy Council observing that unlike a Hindu idol a mosque cannot be held to be a juristic personality or a legal person in law. The Court held the Mosque as property and, therefore, capable of adverse possession. The property of a juristic personality cannot be said to be inalienable in all circumstances, for example, it can be transferred by Shebait for managing funds for managing the affairs of the idols and so on, but not in all circumstances. This distinction has to be understood in order to appreciate the concept of idol, deity, legal personality etc. of Hindu law as recognised by British India Courts before independence. Regarding the juristic personality of the idol, virtually there was no difference but regarding the statute of idol as a minor or perpetual minor, there appears to be some difference among various Courts. The Apex Court in Bishwanath Vs. Shri Thakur Radhaballabhji (supra) has made it clear that a Hindu idol enjoy status of a minor. There is no restriction in such declaration that such concept of minor of the idol should be understood in a restricted manner and it would be a minor only for certain purposes and not for other purposes. In the light of the above discussion, respectfully we are of the view that the wider observations of the Orissa and Calcutta High Courts cannot be concurred by us.

1946. The matter thus now stand settled by the Apex Court in Bishwanath & another Vs. Sri Thakur Radha Ballabhli & others (supra) holding the Deity a minor, all the judgments which have taken a different view of the High Courts or Privy

Council cannot be treated to be a good law or a binding precedent.

1947. This question that a Deity being minor can be represented by a next friend has been reiterated by the Apex Court in another case i.e. in Vemareddi Ramaraghava Reddi Vs. Kondaru Seshu Reddi (supra) at page 440 the Court said:

> "The legal position is also well-established that the worshipper of a Hindu temple is entitled, in certain circumstances, to bring a suit for declaration that the alienation of the temple properties by the de jure Shebait is invalid and not binding upon the temple. If a Shebait has improperly alienated trust property a suit can be brought by any person interested for a declaration that such alienation is not binding upon the deity but no decree for recovery of possession can be made in such a suit unless the plaintiff in the suit has the present right to the possession. Worshippers of temples are in the position of cestui que trustent (Sic) or beneficiaries in a spiritual sense.
>
> The possession and management of the property with the right to sue in respect thereof are, in the normal course, vested in the Shebait, but where, however, the Shebait is negligent or where the Shebait himself is the guilty party against whom the deity needs relief it is open to the worshippers or other persons interested in the religious endowment to file suits for the protection of the trust properties. It is open, in such a case, to the deity to file a suit through some person as next friend for recovery of possession of the property improperly alienated or for

other relief. Such a next friend may be a person who is a worshipper of the deity or as a prospective Shebait is legally interested in the endowment."

1948. An attempt was made to bring in Section 92 C.P.C. where the interest of Deity is not properly observed but we find that this issue also stands settled by the Apex Court in Bishwanath & another Vs. Sri Thakur Radha Ballabhli & others (supra) holding that Section 92 in such a matter has no application. The Court in para 9, 10, 11 and 12 held as under:

"9. Three legal concepts are well settled : (1) An idol of a Hindu temple is a juridical person; (2) when there is a Shebait, ordinarily no person other than the Shebait can represent the idol; and (3) worshippers of an idol are its beneficiaries, though only in a spiritual sense. It has also been held that persons who go in only for the purpose of devotion have according to Hindu law and religion, a greater and deeper interest in temples than mere servants who serve there for some pecuniary advantage see Kalyana Venkataramana Ayyangar v. Kasturi Ranga Ayyangar, ILR 40 Mad 212 at p. 225: (AIR 1917 Mad 112 at p. 118). In the present case, the plaintiff is not only a mere worshipper but is found to have been assisting the 2nd defendant in the management of the temple.

10. The question is, can such a person represent the idol when the Shebait acts adversely to its interest and fails to take action to safeguard its interest. On principle we do not see any justification for denying such a right to the worshipper. An idol is in the position of a minor and when the person representing it leaves it in a lurch, a person interested in the worship of the idol can certainly be* clothed with an ad hoc power of representation to protect its interest. It is a pragmatic, yet a legal solution to a difficult situation*. Should it be held that a Shebait, who transferred the property, can only bring a suit for recovery, in most of the cases it will be an indirect approval of the dereliction of the Shebait's duty, for more often than not he will not admit his default and take steps to recover the property, apart from other technical pleas that may be open to the transferee in a suit. Should it be held that a worshipper can file only a suit for the removal of a Shebait and for the appointment of another in order to enable him to take steps to recover the property, such a procedure will be rather a prolonged and a complicated one and the interest of the idol may irreparably suffer. That is why decisions have permitted a worshipper in such circumstances to represent the idol and to recover the property for the idol. It has been held in a number of decisions that worshippers may file a suit praying for possession of a property on behalf of an endowment; see Radhabai v. Chimnaji, (1878) ILR 3 Bom 27, Zafaryab Ali v. Bakhtawar Singh, (1883) ILR 5 All 497 Chidambaranatha Thambirarn v. P. S. Nallasiva Mudaliar, 6 Mad LW 666 : (AIR 1918 Mad 464), Dasondhay v. Muhammad Abu Nasar, (1911) ILR 33 All 660 at p. 664: (AIR 1917 Mad 112) (FB), Radha Krishnaji v. Rameshwar Prasad Singh, AIR 1934 Pat 584, Manmohan Haldar v. Dibbendu Prosad Roy, AIR 1949 Cal 199.*

11. There are two decisions of the Privy Council, namely, Pramatha Nath Mullick v. Pradyumna Kumar Mullick, 52 Ind App 245: (AIR 1925 PC 139) and

www.vadaprativada.com

Kanhaiya Lal v. Hamid Ali, 60 Ind App 263: (AIR 1933 PC 198 (1)), wherein the Board remanded the case to the High Court in order that the High Court might appoint a disinterested person to represent the idol. No doubt in both the cases no question of any deity filing a suit for its protection arose, but the decisions are authorities for the position that apart from a Shebait, under certain circumstances, the idol can be represented by disinterested persons. B. K. Mukherjea in his book "The Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trust" 2nd Edn., summarizes the legal position by way of the following propositions, among others, at p. 249 :

> "(1) An idol is a juristic person in whom the title to the properties of the endowment vests. But it is only in an ideal sense that the idol is the owner. It has to act through human agency, and that agent is the Shebait, who is, in law, the person entitled to take proceedings on its behalf. The personality of the idol might, therefore, be said to be merged in that of the Shebait.
>
> (2) Where, however, the Shebait refuses to act for the idol, or where the suit is to challenge the act of the Shebait himself as prejudicial to the interests of the idol, then there must be some other agency which must have the right to act for the idol. The law accordingly recognises a right in persons interested in the endowment to take proceedings on behalf of the idol."
>
> This view is justified by reason as well by decisions.
>
> 12. Two cases have been cited before us which

www.vadaprativada.com

took a contrary view. In Kunj Behari Chandra v. Shyam Chand Jiu, AIR 1938 Pat 384, it was held by Agarwala, J., that in the case of a public endowment, a part of the trust property which had been alienated by the Shebait or lost in consequence of his action could be recovered only in a suit instituted by a Shebait. The only remedy which the members of the public have, where the property had been altenated by a person who was a Shebait for the time being was to secure the removal of the Shebait by proceedings under S. 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure and then to secure the appointment of another Shebait who would then have authority to represent the idol in a suit to recover the idol's properties. So too, a Division Bench of the Orissa High Court in Artatran Alekhagadi Brahma v. Sudersan Mohapatra. AIR 1954 Orissa 11, came to the same conclusion. For the reasons given above, with great respect, we hold that the said two decisions do not represent the correct law on the subject."

1949. We, therefore, answer Issue No. 1 (Suit-5) insofar as it relates to plaintiff no. 2 (Suit-5) that it is juridical persona and can sue or be sued through a next friend. However, this is subject to our further answer to the issues relating to birthplace of Lord Rama at disputed site in affirmance which we shall discuss separately.

1950. We could have answered about plaintiff no. 1 (Suit-5) also at this very stage but we intend first to consider the Issues No. 12 (Suit-4) and 3 (a) (Suit-5) and to find out their effect, if any, on the status of plaintiff 1 (Suit-5) and then shall give our final opinion thereon. The issue whether the idol in question and the object of worship were placed inside the disputed property

or the building in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949 has to be considered in the light of the concept of the "building" or the "mosque" to the parties in the suit concerned.

1951. In para 2 of the plaint (Suit-4) the mosque has been denoted by the letters "A, B, C, D" which covers the entire area of outer and inner courtyard including the building (excluding the extreme south portion which is denoted by the word "Chabutara" on the west-south side and behind Ram Chabutara on east-south side on the map prepared by Sri Shiv Shankar Lal, Commissioner on 25.05.1950). No distinction has been made by the plaintiff (Suit-4) about the disputed building within the inner courtyard and the area and structure comprising the outer courtyard.

1952. This pleading has made the issue slightly complicated for the reason that onus lie initially upon the plaintiffs (Suit-4) to show that no idols whatsoever existed upto or before 22.12.1949 in this entire area A, B, C, D which they claim to be the "area of mosque". In fact to the same effect is their pleading in para 1 of the written statement in Suit-5 where defendant no. 4 (Sunni Board) says that, "As a matter of fact there has never been any installation of the deity within the premises of disputed place of worship known as Babari Mosque and the idol in question was stealthily and surreptitiously kept in the mosque in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949." The defendant no. 4 also deny the very existence of "Charan" or "Sita Rasoi" within the premises of Babari mosque but then in para 22 of the written statement (Suit-5) it says, "there is no Charan or Sita Rasoi within the premises of Babari Mosjid and the place known as Sita Rasoi is situated outer side the premises of the said mosque."

1953. Sri Deoki Nandan Agarwal, who initially filed Suit-5 and was plaintiff no. 3 therein, made a statement under Order X, Rule 2 C.P.C. that the idols were kept under central dome inside the building in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949. He, however, admits his absence at the site on that day and stated that he got this information from Mahant Paramhans Ram Das, OPW-1. Sri Deoki Nandan Agarwal, however, added that the above placement inside the building of the idols was done after due ceremony. The above statement of Sri D.N. Agarwal could not have been controverted by the learned counsel for the plaintiffs (Suit-4). Though the process of Pran Pratishtha was tried to be inquired from OPW-1 during cross examination by learned counsels appearing for the Muslim parties in Suit-5 as is evident from pages 46, 58, 78 and 124, but no question has been asked from OPW-1 as to whether idol in question were placed under the dome with or without ceremony as stated by Sri Deoki Nandan Agarwal, plaintiff no. 3 (Suit-5) in his statement under Order X Rule 2 C.P.C. Therefore, the said statement remained uncontroverted particularly for the reason that none of the witnesses, i.e., PW 1 to 32 has claimed that he was present when the alleged incident of 22nd/23rd December, 1949 took place and none could say anything on this aspect either way.

1954. OPW-1, Mahant Paramhans Ram was also examined. He supported the version of placement of idol under the central dome, inside the disputed building, in the inner courtyard, in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949. OPW-1 has commenced his deposition in December 1999 and at that time his age was 90 years. On page 41 and 42, he stated about the incident of 1934 and said that a dome was damaged at that time:

> "1934 की घटना में शिखर का आधा भाग (मध्य/बीच के शिखर) का टूटा था। बीच वाले शिखर का आधा भाग चारो तरफ से टूटा था। बीच वाले

"In 1934 incident, the half portion of the dome(the middle/ central dome) was broken. The half part of the middle dome was broken from all sides. Except for the central dome, no other part of the construction situated there was broken." (ETC)

1955. On page 42 he said that when central dome was damaged in 1934, no idol of Ram Lala was present thereunder. He also said that people used to worship the place as also the pillars whereunder the images were affixed:

''जिस समय शिखर गिरा उस समय शिखर के नीचे रामलला की कोई मूर्ति नहीं थी शिखर की नीचे की भूमि पर पूजा पाठ होता था शिखर के नीचे जो खम्भे थे उसमें जो मूर्तियां लगी थी उनका लोग पूजा अर्चना करते थे उन खम्भों में देवी –देवताओं की मूर्तियां थीं। मूर्तियों में हनुमान आदि देवों की मूर्तियां थी। मध्य शिखर के नीचे कोई खम्भा नहीं था। मध्य शिखर के नीचे प्रसूति भूमि, जहां पर भगवान राम का जन्म हुआ था वह स्थान था। मध्य शिखर के नीचे का जो भाग गर्भ गृह के रुप में था वह स्थान तथा उसके चारो तरफ उस स्थान को मैं गर्भगृह का स्थान मानता हूँ। तीनों गुम्बजों के नीचे की भूमि तथा परिक्रमा मार्ग की सम्पूर्ण भूमि गर्भगृह के अन्तर्गत थी।''(पेज 42)

''When the dome collapsed, there was no idol of Ram Lala beneath it. 'Pooja-Paath' used to be performed on the land beneath the dome. People used to offer 'Pooja-Archana' to the idols carved out in the pillars beneath the dome; *those pillars had idols of male and female deities engraved in these pillars. 1956. Then, about the placement of idols in 1949, he said:

"The idols were placed probably in the year 1949."(E.T.C)

"The place termed as 'Garbh-grih' (sanctum sanctorum) by me, is the birthplace of Ramchandra according to my belief and all the Hindus. The very place where the idols were placed on 23rd December, 1949, after being removed from the platform, is considered as Janmsthan by me and even before installation of the idols, that place was considered Janmbhumi by me."

"The idols, which were removed from the platform and placed beneath the central dome, had one big and one small idol. Both the idols were of Ramlala." (E.T.C)

1957. The above statement of OPW-1 shows that idols were already there on the Chabutara which was in the outer courtyard prior to 1949 and were only shifted from that Ram Chabutara (outer courtyard) to the building under the central dome (inner courtyard). About the existence of idol on Ram Chabutara, he deposed on page 55 and 75:

> ''अनादि काल से रामचबूतरा इसीप्रकार रामलला की मूर्ति रामचबूतरे पर अनादि काल से स्थापित है।'' (पेज 55)

1958. Further, he claims to be an eye witness of shifting of idol from Chabutara to the inner courtyard, i.e., under the central dome.

1959. Sri D.N. Agrawal, plaintiff no. 3 (Suit-5) in his statement under Order X Rule 2 dated 30.04.1992 has said that the idols were kept under the central dome inside the building in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949 after due ceremonies. There is no evidence produced on behalf of the defendant no. 4 or 5 to disprove the above statement of plaintiff no. 3 or that of OPW No. 1.

1960. In fact none of the witnesses of plaintiffs (Suit-4), i.e., defendant no. 4 (Suit-5) was present in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949 on the disputed site when the alleged incident took place. They had no occasion to say either way as to whether the placement of idol was in accordance with due ceremonies of Hindu scriptures or not, whether the same was shifted from Ram Chabutara to the Central Dome or brought from outside. Though in the written statement of defendant no. 5 (Suit-5), para 28, it is said, "However, Namaj has been offered in the mosque in question after 23rd December 1949 also and Ajan has also been called." This statement, however, has not been supported by any of the witnesses produced by the plaintiffs (Suit-4) and defendant no. 4 (Suit-5). On the contrary, it is an admitted position that since 23rd December, 1949 no muslim person has entered the disputed premises (inner and outer courtyard) as also that the idols placed inside the building under the central dome are being continuously worshipped by Hindus.

1961. With respect to the term "mosque" used in plaint (Suit-4), statement by the counsel for the plaintiffs (Suit-4) was made on 28.08.1963 under Order X Rule 2 CPC that "mosque lies in A B C D as shown in the plaint map (sketch map)."

1962. Another statement dated 20.01.1964 under Order X Rule 2 CPC made by Mohd. Ayub counsel for plaintiff (Suit-4) before the Civil Judge, says:

www.vadaprativada.com

"बाबरी मस्जिद के रेलिंग के बाहर और सदर फाटक के बाउण्ड्रीवाल के अन्दर पूरब दक्खिन की तरफ एक 17 x 21 फीट का चबूतरा है जिस पर लकड़ी के स्ट्रैक्चर का एक वुडन टैम्पल बना है जिसमें कोई भी हिन्दू की मूर्तियां न कभी थी न अब तक है। वह जगह भी मुसलमानों की मास्क का हिस्सा है। . . . . . बाबरी मस्जिद के सदरी फाटक से अन्दर दाखिल होने पर उसके दाहिनी तरफ जो भी तामिरात है वह दिसम्बर 1949 के पहले वहां पर कभी नहीं थी। उन्हें दिसम्बर 1949 के बाद किसी ने तामीर कर लिया होगा। बाबरी मस्जिद के मेन बिल्डिंग के उत्तर तरफ चाहरदीवारी के अन्दर भी दिसम्बर 1949 तक कभी कोई तामीरात वराकम इमारत या चबूतरा वगैरह कभी नहीं रहे। उस जगह पर जो चबूतरा सीता रसोई के नाम से मुद्दालहम कहते हैं उसे दिसम्बर 1949 के बाद ही मुद्दालहम ने या किसी ने बनाया है।''

"on the outer side of railing of Babri mosque and inside the boundary of main gate towards south-east, there is a platform measuring 17/21 feet over which a wooden temple is built in wooden structure. No idols of Hindus ever

existed nor exist inside the same. The place is also a part of mosque of Muslims.. . . .On entering through the main gate of Babri mosque, the construction lying on right side, were never in existence prior to December, 1949. The same must have been constructed by someone after December 1949. Towards north of main building of Babri Mosque inside the boundary wall, upto December 1949 A.D. there was never any construction or building or Chabutara etc. Over that place, the Chabutara termed as Sita Rasoi by the defendants has been constructed either by defendants or some else after December 1949." (E.T.C.)

1963. In para 5 of the plaint (Suit-4), the plaintiffs have tried to make a distinction between mosque and the building by stating that in the mosque but outside the main building of the mosque there was "Chabutara". It is thus evident that the case of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) is that inside the mosque (which they denote as A B C D) which means the inner and outer courtyard of the building, there was no idol prior to 22nd December, 1949 and it was placed surreptitiously in the night of 22nd/23rd December 1949.

1964. Most of the witnesses produced by Hindu parties have clearly stated that idols were kept on Ram Chabutara even before 1885 and that was being continuously worshipped by Hindus. Sita Rasoi and Bhandar in the outer courtyard also existed prior to 1885 and in any case before 22.12.1949.

1965. OPW 1 and OPW 2 have said that the idol of Ram Lala kept on Ram Ram Chabutara in the outer courtyard was placed in the inner courtyard under the central dome on 22nd/23rd December, 1949. This pre-supposes and admits the position that the idols of Ram Lala existed in the mosque denoted by the letters A B C D in Suit-4 since much before 22nd December, 1949 and was not kept in the mosque as denoted by the letters A B C D for the first time in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949. The premises known to the plaintiffs (Suit-4) as mosque already had the idols of Lord Ram Lala and in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949, was shifted from outer courtyard to inner courtyard. In the statement under order Order X Rule 2 CPC the plaintiffs through counsel have tried to dispute even the structures named as "Sita Rasoi" and "Bhandar" in the outer courtyard till 22.12.1949 though many of their witnesses have admitted their existence prior to the said date.

1966. It is an admitted case of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) that in Suit-1885 a map was prepared by the Court's Commissioner which is Exhibit A 25 (Suit-1). There, in the outer courtyard, three structures were shown, one on the north-west side termed as "Sita Rasoi", another on the east side but right to the eastern entry gate termed as "Chappar" or "Bhandar" and third on the east-south side which was called "Ram Chabutara" and which was the subject matter of Suit-1885. This map was never doubted in Suit 1885 by defendant no. 2 therein.

1967. PW 1, on page 24 of his statement, while admitting the said Chabutara measuring about 17x21 feet did not deny presence of idols thereon.

> ''इस चबूतरे पर हिन्दू देवताओं की मूर्ति आने जाने वालों को दिखायी नहीं देती। . . . . . .यह नहीं बता सकते कि चबूतरे पर मूर्तियां किसी लकड़ी के सिंहासन पर थी या नहीं मैं नहीं बता सकता।''
>
> "Idols of Hindu deities on this Chabutara are not visible to the visitors. ..... I cannot tell whether idols were seated on any wooden throne or not." (E.T.C.)

1968. Thus, in the pleadings, they have tried to dispute the very existence of any structure of worship of Hindus even in the outer courtyard since their stand is that the idols were kept for the first time in the Mosque on 22nd/23rd December, 1949 and while saying so, they have treated the Mosque as a whole, i.e. denoted by letters ABCD in the map appended to plaint (Suit-4) which comprised of the entire area of inner courtyard and outer courtyard. This stand, we find, stood contradicted by their witnesses who have admitted not only the existence of certain structures in the outer courtyard but also visit of Hindus to those structures and is palpably wrong.

1969. The extract of relevant statement of some other witnesses of plaintiffs (Suit-4) are as under:

1970. Almost all the witnesses produced on behalf of the Hindu parties, other than those who have appeared as experts, have stated that they were worshipping the idols of Lord Rama at Ram Chabutara since much earlier from 1949 besides Sita Rasoi where there were images of Chakla, Belan, Chulha etc. Only witnesses of Nirmohi Akhara, i.e., DW 1 to DW 3/20 have also added and claimed that they also worshipped the idols inside the building under central dome in the inner courtyard since Nirmohi Akhara is claiming the building as temple throughout and existence of idols therein simultaneously.

1971. Be that as it may, in view of the overwhelming evidence as also the evidence of Muslim side, we have no manner of doubt that in the outer courtyard, there existed at least three structures; (1) A Chabutara, called as 'Ram Chabutara'; (2) A Chhappar, termed as 'Bhandara' on north east side of gate of outer boundary wall and a place called as 'Sita Rasoi' or 'Kaushalya Rasoi' or "Chhathi Pooja Sthal" on the north west side. All these three places existed since prior to 1885 inasmuch in Suit-1885 Commissioner's map denoted all these places and existence thereof in the map is not disputed, though the terminology used is sought to be disputed by some of witnesses of the Muslim parties. Further in the map prepared by Sri Shiv Shankar Lal, Pleader, submitted to the Court along with his report on 25.5.1980, these three places have been shown. In the objections filed by the defendants no. 1 to 5 (Suit-1) at that time, we find that there is no allegation regarding wrong preparation of the map but what was objected is that in respect to certain parts, nomenclature given by Sri Shiv Shankar Lal was not acceptable to them. In this context, it was observed by the Civil Judge, Faizabad in his order dated 20.11.1950 admitting Commissioner's report as evidence, that the nomenclature given by Sri Shiv Shankar Lal shall not be final and shall be considered in the light of the evidence adduced by the parties.

1972. Now in Suit-4 the pleadings of the plaintiffs are that the idols and object of worship were placed inside the "building" in the night intervening 22nd/ 23rd December, 1949 as alleged in para 11 of the plaint and the term "building" according to the averments made in the plaint means the area denoted by letters ABCD in the map appended to the plaint. This area covers the entire disputed area, i.e., outer courtyard and inner courtyard. It is not their case that the idols though existed inside the said building but were kept under the three dome structure for the first time on 22nd/23rd December 1949. In view of the fact that three non-Islamic structures were continuing in the outer courtyard for the last several decades and used to be visited by the Hindus for worship, onus lies upon them to prove that in this entire building which they claim to be the area covered by the letters ABCD in the map appended to the plaint (Suit-4) no idol at all ever existed before 23rd December 1949. They have miserably failed to prove it.

1973. The case of the plaintiffs (Suit-5) and other Hindu defendants (except Nirmohi Akhara) is very clear that the idols were already present on Ram Chabutara in the outer courtyard and in the night of the 22nd/23rd December 1949, the same were placed under the central dome of three dome structures in the inner courtyard. There is enough evidence to prove, as per the above discussion, that the idols kept at Ram Chabutara were being worshipped by Hindus since a long time. No doubt or dispute has ever been raised earlier about the consecration of those idols, nor in the present cases it is pleaded that those idols (at Ram Chabutara) were not consecrated in accordance with the Shastrik procedure.

1974. Sri Deoki Nandan Agarwal in his statement under Order X Rule 2 has also said that idol which was kept under the central dome in the three dome structure in the inner courtyard on 22nd/23rd December 1949 was a Chal Vigrah and this statement he has made again on the basis of the information received from OPW 1. We find from a perusal of the cross examination of OPW 1 that on this aspect and in respect to the idol so placed, no question has been asked whether the statement of Sri Deoki Nandan Agarwal on this aspect is correct or not and whether OPW 1 gave this information to him or not. This statement of plaintiff 3, Sri D.N. Agarwal, therefore, remained uncontroverted.

1975. The existence of Ram Chabutara and Sita Rasoi in the precinct of disputed site since long in our view cannot be doubted though a serious attempt has been made on this aspect also. We presume at this stage that the building in dispute was constructed in 1528 AD at the command of Babar by Mir Baqi. The dividing wall having windows etc. was not constructed at that time. This partition was made after 1855 AD as they claimed. The suggestion of pro mosque parties is that the alleged Chabutara came into existence sometime between 1855 to 1860 and despite some orders passed by the authorities of the then Government, for removal of the said Chabutara the same continued to exist and was not removed, but this also, we find, has not been proved.

1976. The fact remains that it is now a established fact which is not challenged by the Muslim parties that the Chabutara on the south eastern side of the disputed building has been continuing atleast from 1857 and onwards. Though an attempt has been made to dispute whether any idol was kept on the said Chabutara and whether worship was continuously going on thereat but this also has not been proved. On the contrary, we find that there is abundant evidence to show that Hindus were worshipping the said Chabutara believing that it symbolises and

depicts the birthplace of Lord Rama and that some idol(s) also existed thereat.

1977. There are documentary as well as oral evidence available on record some of which we discuss hereinafter.

1978. The application dated 25.09.1866, Exhibit A-13 (Suit-1) (Register 6, page 173-177) submitted by Mohd. Afzal, Mutawalli Masjid Babari situated at Oudh says:

> ''करीब महीना के अर्सा होता हैं कि तुलसीदास वगैरा बैरागियान जनम स्थान ने एक छोटी सी कोठरी ब–इरादा रखने मूरत वगैरा के चोरी से पहर भर के अर्सा में अन्दरून इहाता तय्यार करली ..... शबाशब हमा चबूतरा बैरागियान ने बनवालिया उसके बन जाने से किस कदर फसाद बढ़ गया अब छोटी कोठरी बनाई है ..... अर्ज हाल करके उम्मीदवार इंसाफ हूं कि वास्ते गिराने कोठरी मजकूर के हुक्म हुजूर सादिर हो कि फसाद बैरागियान से मस्जिद महफूज़ रहे वाजिब था अर्ज किया।''
>
> "About a months back the respondents Tulsidas etc. with the intention of planting idols etc in it have constructed a Kothri in an illegal way, within the compound of the Masjid.....Bairagiyan got the Chabootra constructed overnight. Because of this construction, there occurred so much rioting in the local populace. Now a small Kothri has been constructed. ..... it is requested that before the riot is created by Bairagis this Kothri may kindly be dismantled and the Masjid may be protected from the fury of Bairagis." (E.T.C.)

1979. Exhibit 30 (Suit-1) (Register 5 page 107-116-C) is a copy of an application of 1877 seeking execution of the order dated 7th November 1873 for removal of the idol, i.e., Charan Paduka said to have been created in the disputed building. A perusal of the said document shows that despite the order having been passed on 7th November 1873 the same continued to exist and was not removed. In para 6 it says:

یعنی ابھی تک وہ مورتی مطابق حکم حضور نہیں اٹھای گی۔
.....چنانچہ اندر احاطہ مذکور کے جو چولہ بنایا ہے اور رسوی کرتا ہے کہ یہ امر پہلے کبھی نہ ہوا وہاں فقط ایک چھوٹا چولہا واسطے پوجہ کے لاءق تھا۔ اسکو بھی اسنے واجبے کر لیا ہے۔

''यानी अभी तक वह मूरत मुताबिक़ हुकम हुज़ूर नहीं उठाई गई .....चुनांचे अन्दर अहाता मज़कूर के चूलहा बनाता है और रसोई करता है कि यह अम्र पहले कभी न हुआ वहां फ़क़त एक छोटा सा चूलहा वास्ते पूजा के साबिक़ में था उस को भी उस ने वसीअ कर लिया है।''

"That is to say that as per orders the idol has not yet been removed. ..... So he has made a Chulha within the said compound which has never been done before. There was a small Chulah for puja which he has got extended." (E.T.C.)

1980. Besides, it also shows that in 1877 there also existed a Chulha in the aforesaid premises, complaint whereof was also made.

1981. Exhibit 15 Suit 1 (Register 5 Page 41-43) : It is a copy of the report dated Nil of Deputy Commissioner Faizabad submitted pursuant to the Commissioner Faizabad's order dated 14th May, 1877 passed in Misc. Appeal No.56, Mohd. Asghar Vs. Khem Dass. This report appears to have been called by the Commissioner in respect to a complaint made against raising of a doorway in the northern wall of the disputed building. The justification thereof was to provide a separate room on fair day to visitors to the Janam Asthan. The document being old there appears to be certain mistakes may be on account of legibility. It reads as under:

"A doorway has recently been opened in the wall of the Janum-Ashtan not at all in Baber's mosque, but in the wall which infront is divided from the mosque by a railing. This opening was necessary to give a separate route on fair days to visitors to the Janum-Asthan. There was one

opening only, so the cruch (sic:rush) was very great and life was endangered. I marked out the spot for the opening myself so there is no need to depute any Europe officer. This petition is merely an attempt to annoy the Hindu by making it dependent on the pleasure of the mosque people to open or close the 2nd door in which the Mohammedans can have no interest.

2. No objection was made to the opening of this second door.

3. On the 10th November 1873 Baldeo Das was ordered in writing by the Deputy Commissioner to remove an image place on the janam-Asthan platform. A report was made by someone (probably a police officer) that he had gone to the house of Baldeo dass and found that the latter had gone to Gonda. The order was explained to Gyandas and other priests who said could not carry out the order. The order passed on this (15) was that if the other party (i.e. the complainant) would name person on whom an order of removal could be served-such should be served.

(c) There apparently the matter rested. There is no later on the file."

1982. Pursuant to this report, the Commissioner decided the appeal on 13th December, 1877, and rejected the same. The copy of the said order is Exhibit 16 (Suit-1) (Page 45 Register 5) and it reads as under:

"As the door in question was opened by the Deputy Commissioner in the interests of the public safety I decline to interfere. Appeal dismissed."

1983. Exhibit 34 (Suit-1) (Register 5 page 131) is a copy of the order dated 12.01.1884 passed by Assistant Commissioner,

www.vadaprativada.com

Faizabad. It says as under:

> *"..... The outer door will be left open. No lock will be allowed upon it. It is absolutely essential to observe the strictest neutrality and maintain the status quo."

1984. This shows that in order to prevent any obstruction to anyone from entering the disputed premises he directed for not keeping lock on the doors and left the same open.

1985. Exhibit 17 (Suit-1)(Page 47-53 Register 5) is a copy of a judgment dated 18th June, 1883 passed by Sri Hari Kishan, Sub-Judge, Faizabad in Suit No.1374/943 of 1883 dismissing the claim of Syed Mohd. Asghar filed against Raghubar Dass claiming rent for user of Chabutara and Takht which admits the possession of Raghubar Das but failed to sustain his claim for rent.

1986. The aforesaid documents disprove the claim of Muslims. It appears that Mohd. Asghar in Suit No. 1374/943 of 1883 produced a witness namely Ganga Prasad, Qanungo, who made some statement in favour of Mohd. Asghar but the same was disbelieved by the Sub Judge. He also severely castigated the conduct of the said Qanungo, an official of the Government, making statement in favour of a private party in a private dispute which was not supported by any documentary evidence though the nature of the dispute warranted some documentary evidence.

1987. Exhibit 18 (Suit-1)(Page 55-57 Register 5) is an application dated 2nd November, 1883 of Mohd. Asghar showing himself as Mutawalli and Khatib Masjid Babari situated at Oudh complaining that he is entitled to get the wall of the mosque white-washed but is being obstructed by Raghubar Das though

he has right only to the extent of Chabutara and Rasoi but the wall and the gate etc. is part of the mosque and the complainant is entitled to get it white-washed. The order passed on the said application is Exhibit 27 (Suit-1) (Page 95-97 Register 5). The Assistant Commissioner Faizabad passed the following order dated 22nd January, 1884:

آجمقدمہ می فرد فریقین پیش ہوا فریقین کو حکم

(Hindi Transliteration)

Today the case was put up in the presence of the parties, who have been informed of the orders of the Deputy Commissioner and Raghubar Das has been restricted not to repair the inner or outer portion of the Masjid and Mohammad Asghar has been admonished that the outer gate of the Masjid should not be locked. This was important that long tradition should be maintained and no intervention should be done in it. Ordered these papers

www.vadaprativada.com

should be consigned to office." (E.T.C.)

1988. Exhibit A-25 (Suit-1) (Register 7, page 277-281) is a copy of a map prepared and submitted on 06.12.1885 by Sri Gopal Sahai Amin, Court's Commissioner appointed by Sub-Judge, Faizabad in Suit-1885 of the disputed place. It mentions in the outer courtyard, existence of Sita Rasoi and Ram Chabutara and this has continued to exist in the outer courtyard even in 1950 as is evident from the map prepared by Sri Shiv Shankar Lal Pleader, Commissioner appointed by Civil Judge, Faizabad in Suit-1 submitted on 25.05.1950.

1989. So far as the existence of Sita Rasoi which was on the north west side in the outer courtyard is concerned, nothing has come on record to show as to when it was actually constructed. On the contrary, the record shows that it existed prior to 1885. Its actual time and period when it was constructed is unascertainable. It is beyond comprehension that Mir Baqi or anyone else, while constructing a mosque at the disputed place could have spared some Hindu structure(s) to continue, may be smaller in size, in the precinct of mosque so as to be worshipped by Hindus inside the premises of mosque. We put this question to Sri Jilani also and he frankly stated that no Muslim would allow idol worship in the precinct of a mosque.

1990. Considering the evidentiary admissions in Avadh Kishore Dass Vs. Ram Gopal (supra) the Court said:

> "It is true that evidentiary admissions are not conclusive proof of the facts admitted and may be explained or shown to be wrong, but they do raise an estoppel and shift the burden of proof on to the person making them or his representative-in-interest. Unless shown or explained to be wrong, they are an efficacious proof of the facts admitted."

www.vadaprativada.com

1991. In Sitaramacharya Vs. Gururajacharya, 1997(2) SCC 548 the Court said:

> "Under Section 18 of the Evidence Act the admission made by the party would be relevant evidence. Section 31 provides that "admissions are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted but they may operate as estoppel under the provisions hereinafter contained". In view of the admissions referred to earlier they appear to be unequivocal and the finding recorded by the appellate Court is cryptic. On the other hand, the trial Court has gone into the evidence on issues in extenso and considered the evidence and the appellate Court has not adverted to any of those valid and relevant consideration made by the trial Court. The High Court has dismissed the second appeal holding that they are findings of fact recorded by the appellate Court on appreciation of evidence. We think that the view taken by the High Court is not correct in law. The admissions in the written statement in the earlier proceedings, though not conclusive, in the absence of any reasonable and acceptable explanation, it is a telling evidence heavily loaded against the respondent." (para 6)

1992. In United India Insurance Co. Ltd. and another Vs. Samir Chandra Chaudhary, 2005(5) SCC 784 the Court said:

> "Admission is the best piece of evidence against the persons making admission. As was observed by this Court in Avadh Kishore Das v. Ram Gopal and Ors., AIR (1979) SC 861 in the backdrop of Section 31 of Indian Evidence Act, 1872 (in short the `Evidence Act') it is true that evidentiary admissions are not conclusive proof of the facts

www.vadaprativada.com

admitted and may be explained or shown to be wrong; but they do raise an estoppel and shift the burden of proof placing it on the person making the admission or his representative-in-interest. Unless shown or explained to be wrong, they are an efficacious proof of the facts admitted. As observed by Phipson in his Law of Evidence (1963 Edition, Para 678) as the weight of an admission depends on the circumstances under which it was made, these circumstances may always be proved to impeach or enhance its credibility. The effect of admission is that it shifts the onus on the person admitting the fact on the principle that what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so, and until the presumption is rebutted, the fact admitted must be taken to be established. An admission is the best evidence that an opposing party can rely upon, and though not conclusive is decisive of matter, unless successfully withdrawn or proved erroneous. (See Narayan Bhagwantrao Gosavi Balajiwale v. Gopal Vinayak Gosavi and Ors., AIR (1960) SC 100)." (para 11)

www.vadaprativada.com

1993. In Mahendra Manilal Nanavati Vs. Sushila Mahendra Nanavati, AIR 1965 SC 364 the Court said:

"The provisions of the Evidence Act and the Code of Civil Procedure provide for Courts accepting the admissions made by parties and requiring no further proof in support of the facts admitted." (para 22)

"23. Section 58 of the Evidence Act inter alia provides that no fact need be proved in any proceeding which the parties thereto or their agents agree to admit at the hearing or which by any rule of pleading in force at the time they are deemed to have admitted by their pleading. Rule 5 of O. VIII, C.P.C., provides that every allegation of fact in the plaint, if not denied specifically or by necessary implication or stated to be not admitted in the pleadings of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted except as against a person under disability."

"24. Both these provisions, however, vest discretion in the Court to require any fact so admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission. Rule 6 of O. XII of the Code allows a party to apply to the Court at any stage of a suit for such judgment or order as upon the admissions of fact made either on the pleadings or otherwise he may be entitled to, and empowers the Court to make such order or give such judgment on the application as it may think just. There is therefore no good reason for the view that the Court cannot act upon the admissions of the parties in proceedings under the Act."

"25. Section 23 of the Act requires the Court to be satisfied on certain matters before it is to pass a decree. The satisfaction of the Court is to be on the matter on record as it is on that matter that it has to conclude whether a certain fact has been proved or not. The satisfaction can be based on the admissions of the parties. It can be based on the evidence, oral or documentary, led in the case. The evidence may be direct or circumstantial."

"29. . . it is quite competent for the Court to arrive at the necessary satisfaction even on the basis of the admissions of the parties alone. Admissions are to be ignored on grounds of prudence only when the Court, in the circumstances of a case, is of opinion that the admissions of the parties may be collusive. If there be no ground for such a view, it would be proper for the Court to act on those admissions without forcing the parties to lead other evidence to establish the facts admitted, unless of course the admissions are contradicted by the facts proved or a doubt is created by the proved facts as regards the correctness of the facts admitted."

1994. In State of Bihar and others Vs. Sri Radha Krishna Singh and others, AIR 1983 SC 684 various aspects of the Evidence Act came to be considered. With respect to genealogy the Court said:

"18. . . . . the plaint genealogy is the very fabric and foundation of the edifice on which is built the plaintiff's case. This is the starting point of the case of the plaintiff which has been hotly contested by the appellant. In such cases, as there is a tendency on the part of an interested person or a party in order to grab, establish or prove an alleged claim, to concoct, fabricate or procure false genealogy to suit their ends, the courts in relying on the genealogy put forward must guard themselves against falling into the trap laid by a series of documents or a labyrinth of seemingly old genealogies to support their rival claims."

"19. The principles governing such cases may be summarized thus:

(1) Genealogies admitted or proved to be old and relied on in previous cases are doubtless relevant and in some cases may even be conclusive of the facts proved but there are several considerations which must be kept in mind by the courts before accepting or relying on the genealogies:

www.vadaprativada.com

(a) Source of the genealogy and its dependability.

(b) Admissibility of the genealogy under the Evidence Act

(c) A proper use of the said genealogies in decisions or judgments on which reliance is placed.

(d) Age of genealogies.

(e) Litigations where such genealogies have been accepted or rejected.

(2) On the question of admissibility the following tests must be adopted:

(a) The genealogies of the families concerned must fall within the four-corners of s.32 (5) or s. 13 of the Evidence Act.

(b) They must not be hit by the doctrine of post litem motam.

(c) The genealogies or the claim cannot be proved by recitals, depositions or facts narrated in the judgment which have been held by a long course of decisions to be inadmissible.

(d) Where genealogy is proved by oral evidence, the said evidence must clearly show special means of knowledge disclosing the exact source, time and the circumstances under which the knowledge is acquired, and this must be clearly and conclusively proved,."

"24. It is well settled that when a case of a party is based on a genealogy consisting of links, it is incumbent on the party to prove every link thereof and even if one link is found to be missing then in the eye of law the genealogy cannot be said to have been fully proved."

1995. With respect to Section 5 of the Evidence Act the

www.vadaprativada.com

Court said:

"32. . . . . Ex.J. being an entry in a Register made by a public officer in the discharge of his duties squarely falls within the four corners of s. 35 of the Evidence Act and is, therefore, doubtless admissible. In this connection, the learned Judge observed thus:

" . . . . There can thus be no doubt that it is admissible under section 35 of the Evidence Act."

33. . . . . We agree with the unanimous view of the High Court that Ex. J is admissible. . . . . all the conditions of s. 35 of the Evidence Act are fully complied with and fulfilled. . . . . It is a different matter that even though a document may be admissible in evidence its probative value may be almost zero and this is the main aspect of the case which we propose to highlight when we deal with the legal value of this document."

www.vadaprativada.com

"35. In our opinion, Ex. J. squarely falls within the four corners of s. 35 of the Evidence Act which requires the following conditions to be fulfilled before a document can be admissible under this section.

(1) the document must be in the nature of an entry in any public or other official book, register or record,

(2) it must state a fact in issue or a relevant fact,

(3) the entry must be made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties or in performance of his duties especially enjoined by the law of the country in which the relevant entry is kept."

"36. . . . . he was entrusted with the task of and enjoined the duty of ascertaining the possession of various landlords

www.vadaprativada.com

for the purpose of taking suitable steps in the matter. . . . . The question as to whether the relevant fact is proved or not is quite a different matter which has nothing to do with the admissibility of the document but which assumes importance only when we consider the probative value of a particular document. . . . . Thus, all the aforesaid conditions of s. 35 are fully complied with in this case."

"38. In P.C. Purushothama Reddiar v. S. Perumal, (1972) 2 SCR 646 this Court while considering the effect of s. 35 of the Evidence Act observed as follows:-

". . . . . The first part of s. 35 of the Evidence Act says that an entry in any public record stating a fact in issue or relevant fact and made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty is relevant evidence. Quite clearly the reports in question were made by public servants in discharge of their official duty."

www.vadaprativada.com

1996. With respect to admissibility of document and probative value the Court in State of Bihar and others Vs. Sri Radha Krishna Singh (supra) said:

"40. We may not be understood, while holding that Ex.J is admissible, to mean that all its recitals are correct or that it has very great probative value merely because It happens to be an ancient document. Admissibility of a document is one thing and its probative value quite another—these two aspects cannot be combined. A document may be admissible and yet may not carry any conviction and weight or its probative value may be nil."

"47. We would like to mention here that even if a document may be admissible or an ancient one, it cannot carry the same weight or probative value as a document

which is prepared either under a statute, ordinance or an Act which requires certain conditions to be fulfilled. This was the case in both Ghulam Rasul Khan's (AIR 1925 PC 170) and Shyam Pratap Singh's cases (AIR 1946 PC 103) (supra).”

1997. In various gazetteers also this has been noticed. The entry of Hindu public before December, 1949 inside the building premises has not been disputed even by the witnesses of plaintiffs (Suit-4).

1998. Considering as to how a fact can be said to have been proved in T. Shankar Prasad Vs. State of A.P., 2004(3) SCC 753 the Court said that direct evidence is one of the modes through which a fact can be proved but that is not the only mode envisaged in the Evidence Act. In para 11, 12, 13 and 14 the Court said:

“11. Proof of the fact depends upon the degree of probability of its having existed. The standard required for reaching the supposition is that of a prudent man acting in any important matter concerning him. Fletcher Moulton L.J. in Hawkins v. Powells Tillery Steam Coal Co. Ltd. (1911 (1) KB 988) observed as follows:

> "Proof does not mean proof to rigid mathematical demonstration, because that is impossible; it must mean such evidence as would induce a reasonable man to come to a particular conclusion".

12. The said observation has stood the test of time and can now be followed as the standard of proof. In reaching the conclusion the Court can use the process of inferences to be drawn from facts produced or proved. Such

inferences are akin to presumptions in law. Law gives absolute discretion to the Court to presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened. In that process the Court may have regard to common course of natural events, human conduct, public or private business vis-`-vis the facts of the particular case. The discretion is clearly envisaged in Section 114 of the Evidence Act.

13. Presumption is an inference of a certain fact drawn from other proved facts. While inferring the existence of a fact from another, the Court is only applying a process of intelligent reasoning which the mind of a prudent man would do under similar circumstances. Presumption is not the final conclusion to be drawn from other facts. But it could as well be final if it remains undisturbed later. Presumption in law of evidence is a rule indicating the stage of shifting the burden of proof. From a certain fact or facts the Court can draw an inference and that would remain until such inference is either disproved or dispelled.

14. For the purpose of reaching one conclusion the Court can rely on a factual presumption. Unless the presumption is disproved or dispelled or rebutted the Court can treat the presumption as tantamounting to proof. However, as a caution of prudence we have to observe that it may be unsafe to use that presumption to draw yet another discretionary presumption unless there is a statutory compulsion. This Court has indicated so in Suresh Budharmal Kalani v. State of Maharashtra (1998 (7) SCC 337):

> "A presumption can be drawn only from facts—and not from other presumptions—by a process of probable and logical reasoning".

1999. Though plaintiffs (Suit-3) have pleaded that the idols in question were already there under the central dome of the disputed building inside the inner courtyard for time immemorial and nothing happened in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949 but the plaintiffs (Suit-4 and 5) have categorically pleaded that the idol(s) were placed in the disputed building in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949. We propose to find out whether plaintiffs (Suit-3) have discharged burden of showing idols under the central dome prior to 22nd/23rd December, 1949.

2000. Sri Deoki Nandan Agarwal who earlier represented the plaintiffs 1 and 2 (Suit-5) as their next friend made a statement under Order X Rule 2 C.P.C. on 30.04.1992 and said:

> "In the early hours of December 23, 1949, the idol of Bhagwan Sri Ram Lala, which was already on Ram Chabutra was transferred to the place where He presently sits, that is, under the central dome of the disputed building. I was not personally present at that time at the place. This information was conveyed to me by Paramhans Ram Chandra Das of Digamber Akhara. This transfer of the idol was done by Paramhans Ram Chandra Das and Baba Abhi Ram Das and certain other persons whose names I do not remember at the moment...."

2001. DW 2/1-2 has also said on page 12, 42 and 128:

> "सन् 1949 में विवादित परिसर का बीच वाला भाग अर्थात् गर्भगृह कुर्क हुआ था। गर्भगृह से तात्पर्य तीन गुम्बद वाले भवन के नीचे का भाग तथा उसके सामने की सहन एवं सीखचे वाली दीवार तक का भाग था। कुर्कशुदा सम्पत्ति के पूरब तरफ़ रामजन्मभूमि का भण्डार तथा राम चबूतरा था। उत्तर तरफ़ चार चरण चिन्ह तथा चौका बेलन वाला स्थान था। " (पेज 12)

"In 1949 the central portion of the disputed premises, i.e, sanctum (Garbh Grih) was attached. Garbh Grih meant the portion below the three domed building and the appurtenant land in front thereof upto the grill wall. Towards east of the attached property, the store of Ram Janmbhumi and Ram Chabutara existed. Towards north, the places of four-footprints and Chauka-Belan (Utensils used in Indian kitchen) existed. " (ETC)

"मैंने यह लिखा है कि 1859 ई0 में वाजिद अली शाह के समय में रामचबूतरा व सीता रसोई के नष्ट होने के प्रयास होते रहे, यद्यपि कोई सफलता नहीं मिली। इस अंश को मैंने पढ़ने के आधार पर लिखा है। यह अंश मैंने किस किताब में पढ़ा था, यह मुझे याद नहीं है। मुझे यह याद नहीं है कि नवाब वाजिद अली शाह का कार्यकाल 1858 ई0 में समाप्त हो गया था या नहीं। मुझे न तो इस बात की जानकारी है और न इस संबंध में याद है कि 1859 ई0 में वाजिद अली शाह नवाब थे या नहीं। यह कहना गलत है कि 1859 ई0 में रामचबूतरा व सीता रसोई के नष्ट करने के प्रयास से संबंधित कोई घटना नहीं हुई।" (पेज 128)

"I have written that in 1859, during the time of Wajid Ali Shah, attempts had been made to vandalise Ram Chabutra and Sita Rasoi but to no avail. I have written this portion on the basis of my study. I do not remember in which book I had read this portion. I do not remember whether the reign of Wajid Ali Shah had come to an end or not in 1858. I neither know nor remember whether Wajid Ali Shah was Nawab or not in 1859. It is wrong to say that no incident occurred in 1859 which involved attempts to damage Ram Chabutra and Sita Rasoi." (E.T.C)

2002. The State authorities have filed their written statement in Suit-1 and 3 wherein they have also taken this stand that the idols were kept under the central dome of the disputed building in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949. Though this fact has been seriously disputed by plaintiffs (Suit-3) and a large number of witnesses have been produced by them to demolish this fact but we find a self contradiction in those statements and for reasons more than one as we shall discuss now, the statements of most of such witnesses produced on behalf of plaintiff (Suit-3) are uncreditworthy.

2003. Plaintiffs (Suit-3) have examined twenty witnesses i.e. D.W.-3/1 to 3/20. Almost all the witnesses have filed their affidavits under Order XVIII Rule 4 C.P.C., as permitted by this Court, to depose their statement in-chief and all these affidavits are virtually similar, containing prototype statements with minor corrections or variations here and there.

2004. The basic submission is that the building has all along been worshipped by Hindus, managed by the priest and agents of Nirmohi Akhara and idols were already there under the central dome of the disputed building much before 1949. Hindus were regularly worshipping by entering into the disputed building, i.e., inner courtyard prior to 1949. They have also denied any incident of 22/23rd December, 1949 with respect to placement of the idols inside the building under the central dome since it was already there.

2005. For the purpose of Suit-3, the disputed site means only "the inner courtyard". The aforesaid Suit-3 has not been filed with respect to any part of the premises constituting part of the outer courtyard. Therefore, qua Suit-3, the "disputed site" or "disputed area" or "disputed building" means only the "inner courtyard" and the building existed thereat. As per the plaint statement in Suit-3, the temple of Lord Rama existed at the disputed site since time immemorial. They denied any battle of Babar with the then ruler at Ayodhya, construction by Babar or his agent in 1528 AD, riot or dispute of 1934 as also the alleged incident of placement of idol in the night of 22/23 December, 1949 in the disputed building. It is in support of these averments, twenty witnesses have been produced on behalf of the plaintiff (Suit-3). In fact, in the plaint, nothing has been said about 1528 or 1934 except that no Muslim was ever allowed or admitted to enter atleast ever since the year 1934, as is evident from para 5 thereof but in replication, these incidents have been disputed.

www.vadaprativada.com

2006. The respondents no.6 to 8 in their written statement gave the date of construction of the disputed building as mosque in 1528 AD by Babar, its maintenance through the grant received from the then Emperor and thereafter by State authorities etc. and continued Namaz till 16th December, 1949. In reply thereto, the replication filed by the plaintiff states that no property was constructed by Babar as mosque but throughout it has been a temple of Lord Rama and that the plaintiffs are in possession of the said temple since time immemorial from the date of the construction of the temple.

2007. Clarifying their stand, Sri Sarab Jeet Lal Verma, Advocate appearing on behalf of the plaintiffs (Suit-3) before the Civil Judge made a statement on 17th May, 1963 under Order X Rule 2 C.P.C. that the property in suit is believed to be the birth place of Lord Ram Chandra and so there is a temple of Lord Ram Chandra on it. The management and control of this temple is that of plaintiffs and property is not dedicated to the idol though the temple is made on the land which is the birth place of lord Ram. It is owned by the plaintiffs and the temple was made by the plaintiffs. He further clarified that the suit is confined to the property shown by letters E F G H I J K L in the map appended to the plaint (Suit-3).

2008. All the witnesses of plaintiff (Suit-3) have been cross-examined at very great length to contradict them and to extract truth from it. In T. Shankar Prasad Vs. State of A.P. (supra) in respect to the testimony of a witness cross-examined and contradicted with the leave of the Court by the party calling him with reference to Section 154 of the Evidence Act the Court said:

> "It is for the judge of fact to consider in each case whether as a result of such cross-examination and contradiction, the witness stands thoroughly discredited or can still be believed in regard to a party of his testimony. If the judge finds that in the process the credit of the witness has not been completely shaken, he may after reading and considering the evidence of the said witness, accept in the light of the other evidence on record that part of his testimony which he found to be creditworthy and act upon it." (para 24)

2009. It is now in the context of the above stand of the plaintiffs (Suit-3) we would examine the statements made by their witnesses.

2010. DW 3/1 Mahant Bhaskar Das, Sarpanch Shri Manch Ramanandiya Nirmohi Akhara, Ramghat, Ayodhya

besides other, firstly said in para 9 of the affidavit that Ram Janam Bhumi and all the surrounding, small and big temples and religious place like Chathi Poojan Sthal, Ram Chabutara Mandir Sthan, Shashthamukhi Shankar Bhagwan, Ganesh Ji, Seeta Koop Mandir, Gufa Mandir, Sumitra Mandir, Lomash Samadhi etc. are all the property of Nirmohi Akhara. It is in their possession and management for last several hundred years prior to the attachment and they have continued to look after the same till acquisition.

2011. Then in para 10 of the affidavit he has specifically said that from 1946 to 1949, in the internal part of the main temple, Nirmohi Akhara through its Pujaries have continued worship including other religious places like Ram Chabutara, Shashtha Mukhi Shankar Bhagwan Sthal and Chathi Poojan Sthal and that no Namaz has been offered in the disputed site from 1946 to 1949. In para 81 he said that Bhagwan Ram Lala is inside the disputed building prior to 1934, and, since 1934, Nirmohi Akhara is continuously having its possession. It, however, admits in para 48 that there was police surveillance at the eastern gate of Mandir Ram Janam Bhoomi prior to 22/23 December, 1949 and Police Chauki was also established in the north-east corner of temple. In para 56, he has admitted that Raghubar Das was the Mahant of Nirmohi Akhara prior to 1885 and had filed a case in respect to Ram Chabutara in his own name and not on behalf of Nirmohi Akhara. In para 62, however, he has denied about shifting of idol from Ram Chabutara on 22/23 December, 1949.

2012. Having said so, he has made very interesting statements in cross examination. Firstly he has admitted that a mosque was constructed in 1528 AD after demolition of Sri

''प्र0–बाबरी मस्जिद का निर्माण कब हुआ था?

2013. This statement of the witness is directly contrary to the pleading and the basic case of the plaintiffs (Suit-3).

2014. Moreover having said so that is about construction of mosque nowhere he has said as to when the above mosque ceased to be a mosque and when worship by Hindus started in the disputed building. He however has confined the period of worship by Hindus prior to 1934. On page 47, 63, 98, 108 and 109, he has said:

''प्र0– उपरोक्त मस्जिद कब तक कायम रही थी?

"On 22nd September, 2003 I came to Lucknow High Court and read 'Ramjanmbhumi-Babri Masjid' written outside a room, when I came to understand that 'Ramjanmbhumi temple' has some relation with 'Babri mosque'." (E.T.C)

2037. When faced with certain problem due to long drawn cross examination, he immediately took recourse to age old defence of "weak memory" and says:

''मेरी आयु 87 वर्ष हो गयी है और मेरा विवेक ठीक कार्य नहीं करता है, इस कारण मुझे याद नहीं रहता है कि मैंने कब क्या कहा। मेरे उपरोक्त बयानों में से आज वाला उपरोक्त बयान सही है, कल दिनांक 30.9.2003 वाला बयान त्रुटिवश दे गया हूँ।'' (पेज 70)

2038. About the period as to when the idols were kept in the disputed building he says:

''मुझे यह ज्ञान नहीं है कि विवादित तीन गुंबदों वाले भवन में मूर्तियां कब और किसने रखवाई, परन्तु जब से मैं वहॉ जा रहा हूँ, तब से

उन्हें वहां देख रहा हूँ। उत्तर वाला फाटक केवल मेला में खुलता था।''

(पेज 76)

"I do not have knowledge of the fact as to who installed the idols in the three dome disputed structure and when, but ever since I have been going there, I have seen them over there. The northern gate used to open only during fairs." (E.T.C)

2039. Regarding the dividing wall between outer and inner courtyard as well as 1934 damage, he says:

''जिस दीवार में लकड़ी के जंगले लगे होना मैं बता रहा हूँ, यह वही दीवार है, जिसमें सन् 1949 के पहले से लोहे के सीखचे लगे हुए थे। इस दीवार में लोहे के सीखचे सन् 1949 से लगे हैं, उससे पहले सन् 1930 से लकड़ी के जंगले लगे हुए थे, फिर कहा कि लकड़ी के जंगले सन् 1930 के पहले से लगे हुए थे। इसी दीवार को सन् 1934 में मामूली क्षति पहुँची थी। इस दीवार के अलावा विवादित भवन के अन्य किसी भाग को सन् 1934 में मैंने क्षतिग्रस्त नहीं देखा। विवादित स्थल के करीब सन् 1934 के दंगे में कोई भी मुसलमान नहीं मारा गया था, अयोध्या में 8–10 मुसलमान मारे गए थे। मेरी जानकारी में नहीं है कि विवादित भवन की जिस दीवार को क्षति पहुँची थी, उसकी मरम्मत कराई गई थी, या नहीं। उस दीवार को क्षतिग्रस्त रूप में मैं सन् 1949 तक देखता रहा।''(पेज 88)

''यह कहना भी गलत है कि जिस दीवार में लकड़ी के जंगले होना मैंने बताया है, उनमें कभी लकड़ी के जंगले नहीं लगे थे। यह भी कहना गलत है कि उक्त दीवार में सन् 1930 के पहले से ही लोहे के सीखचे/जंगले लगे थे।'' (पेज 89)

"It is also wrong to say that the wall, in which the wooden windows are stated to have been fixed, never had wooden 'Jangla' . It is also wrong to say that iron grill/'Jangla' had been fixed in the said wall before the year 1930." (E.T.C)

2040. On the one hand he admits weak memory due to old age but on the other hand he is able to tell as to what actually happened when for the first time he went to visit the disputed site in 1930 and that too after almost 73 years:

''मेरे पिता जी प्रथम दिन जब मुझे लेकर विवादित भवन में दर्शन कराने गए तो फाटक पर ही उन्होंने बताया कि देखो इन खम्भों में हनुमान जी की मूर्ति लगी है और इसे हनुमत द्वार कहते हैं और उन्हीं के बताने के आधार पर मैंने यह बात कही है।'' (पेज 150)

"On the first day when my father took me to the disputed structure for 'darshan', he told me at the gate-

look, these pillars contain the idol of Hanuman Ji and it is called Hanumatdwar and it is on basis of facts told by him that I have stated these facts." (E.T.C)

2041. DW 3/3, Satya Narain Tripathi claims to have visited the disputed building since 1941 several times and has seen the idol of Lord Ramlala in the Garbhgrih, i.e., under the central dome of the disputed building. He is not resident of Ayodhya but resides at Village Mahawan, Tahsil Bikapur, District Faizabad and was born on 08.09.1931. His village is about 35 kms from Ayodhya. He did not deny, as such, any incident whether took place in the night of 23/12/1949 on page 22.

''मुझे पता नहीं कि दिनांक 23.12.1949 की रात को कुछ लोगों ने घुस कर मूर्तियां रखी या नहीं।''

"I do not know whether or not some persons had entered and placed idols on the night of 23.12.1949. "(E.T.C.)

www.vadaprativada.com

2042. On page 37 he claims that the disputed building was constructed by Vikramaditya. On page 80 he said about the size of the three domes as under:

*''विवादित भवन में तीन गुम्बद थे। तीनों गुम्बद एक ही आकर के थे।''

"There were three domes in the disputed building. All the three domes were of the same size." (E.T.C.)

2043. This statement is ex facie incorrect since the central dome was bigger than the rest two and it is virtually the admitted position by all the parties. We also find it from the bare perusal of the photographs of the disputed building available to us. Most of the statement of this witness is based on assumption and hearsay, i.e., the information he has received. On the one hand he gave statement about his visit to the disputed site very accurately but regarding placement of various items thereat he made contradictory statement. On page 24 he said that there were idols of Ramji, Lakshmanji and Hanumanji kept on Sinhasan which remained there from 1941 to 1992 (page 25) but then on page 26 he retracted from the said statement after looking to the photographs and said that it was not clear to him when he used to visit and in what manner the idols were kept.

2044. DW 3/4, Mahant Shiv Saran Das, a Bairagi of Ramanandi Sampraday, claims that he is visiting Ram Janambhumi since 1933 and has worshipped the idols of Lord Ramlala inside the disputed building under the central dome, i.e., Garbhgrih. On page 13 he, however, improved upon his statement by stating that he was born in 1920 and since 1930 to 1942 he remained at Ayodhya continuously.

''अयोध्या में मैं 10 वर्ष की आयु से सन् 1942 तक लगातार रहा हूँ। मेरा जन्म वर्ष 1920 में हुआ था। सन् 1930 में मैं दस वर्ष का था और सन् 1930 से सन् 1942 तक मैं लगातार अयोध्या में रहा और यह अवधि लगभग 12 वर्ष की होती है।''

"From the age of 10 years up to 1942, I have always been at Ayodhya. I was born in 1920. I was 10 years old in 1930, and I continued to reside at Ayodhya from 1930 to 1942, and this period is of nearly 12 years."(E.T.C.)

2045. This statement is contradicted by him repeatedly.

''मैं अयोध्या सैकड़ों बार गया हूँ और वहाँ पर मैं रहा भी हूँ। . . . . अलीगंज में हमारे घर के सामने ही एक मस्जिद है। . . . . . 11 वर्ष की अवस्था में मेरा यज्ञोपवीत हो गया था, उसके बाद मैंने घर छोड़ दिया था।'' (पेज 28)

"I must have gone to the lower part of the disputed building at least hundreds of times. (Himself stated) I was a priest there; I was a Bhandari and I also performed 'Bhog' (offering of meal to deity). I was a priest at Sri Ramjanmbhumi. By Sri Ramjanmbhumi I mean three domed disputed building. 2046. He contradicted his own statement of page 74 on page 106.

''प्रश्न– आप अपने उपरोक्त स्वयं के बयान के अनुसार अयोध्या में सन् 1931 से सन् 1957 के बीच केवल 5–6 महीने लगातार रहे हैं। क्या यह सही है?

उत्तर– जी हॉ, यही सही है।

प्रश्न– तो मेरा यह कहना है कि आपका 5 फरवरी 2004 के पृष्ठ–74 का यह बयान कि आप ''तीन गुम्बद वाले विवादित भवन में पुजारी के रूप में दो–चार साल'' रहे ग़लत हो जाता है। इस सम्बन्ध में आपको क्या कहना है?

''Question: As per the aforesaid statement of your own, you have been at Ayodhya continuously for only 5-6 months between 1931 and 1957. Is it true?

Answer: Yes, Sir. It is true.

Question: Then I have to say that your statement dated 5th February, 2004 – mentioned on page 74 and reading as 'You served as a priest at the three domed disputed building for 2-4 years' – goes wrong. What have you to say in this respect?

Answer: Going through the aforesaid the witness stated – this statement of mine has gone wrong.''(E.T.C.)

www.vadaprativada.com

2047. He also contradicted the very averment made in para 8 of his affidavit about his visit to Ramjanmbhumi since 1933 and said:

incorrect because he was not at all present in Ayodhya. Going through the aforesaid, the witness replied – The year 1933 has come to be wrongly written in it." (E.T.C.)

"I do not remember whether I had ever gone or not to the disputed building before February, 1986." (E.T.C.)

2049. He also contradicted his statement on page 13 about his continuous stay from 1930 to 1942 on page 102.

''विद्वान जिरहकर्ता अधिवक्ता द्वारा गवाह को उनके दिनांक–14.11.2003 के पृष्ठ–13 के बयान का अंश ''अयोध्या में मैं दस वर्ष की आयु से सन् 1942 तक लगातार रहा हूँ'' और इसी पृष्ठ के बयान का अंश ''और सन् 1930 से सन् 1942 तक मैं लगातार अयोध्या में रहा और यह अवधि लगभग 12 वर्ष की होती है'' दिखाया गया और यह पूछा गया कि इन उपरोक्त दोनों बयानों में आपने जो सन् 1942 तक अयोध्या में लगातार रहने और 12 वर्ष रहने की बात कही है, क्या वह आपके ऊपर दिये गये बयान के मुताबिक गलत है? उपरोक्त को देखकर गवाह ने उत्तर दिया कि इसमें जो सन् 1930 से 1942 तक लगातार अयोध्या में रहने वाली बात लिखी है, वह मैं गलती से बता गया हूँ।''

2050. DW 3/5, Raghunath Prasad Pandey is resident of village Sariyawan, a place about 16-17 kms from the disputed place. Later on page 34 he however rectified his statement of para 1 of the affidavit saying that the actual distance is about 14-15 kms. He was born in October, 1930 and his father died when he was six years of age, i.e., 1936. He claims to have visited Ayodhya alongwith his mother from 1937 to 1948 and that the idols of Lord Ramlala were inside the building under the central dome, i.e., Garbhgrih. Later on when he was confronted with various photographs of the disputed building he got confused and made contradictory statement. In order to justify his statement about location of Sumitra Bhawan, he even disputed the map prepared by Court Commissioner, Sri Shiv Shankar Lal, which map has not been disputed by most of the witnesses of Nirmohi Akhara as well Akhara itself, and ultimately he admitted on page 84 that his statement is wrong.

''उपरोक्त को देखकर गवाह ने कहा कि मेरा उपरोक्त बयान गलत हो गया है। . . . .उपरोक्त को देखकर गवाह ने उत्तर दिया कि मेरा उपरोक्त बयान ग़लत हो गया है, क्योंकि सन् 1991 में यह सुमित्रा भवन उ0प्र0 सरकार द्वारा गिरा दिया गया था।''

2051. Most of his statement travelled in the facts of antiquity

and, therefore, wholly irrelevant and inadmissible since admittedly he had no personal knowledge of those facts. So far as the statement of his personal belief that the disputed place is where Lord Rama was born, the same being matter of faith and belief, no comment is called for but rest of his statement about the history of the period of Lord Rama etc. is wholly inadmissible. When asked about the source of his knowledge he says on page 101 that he has heard the stories from his teachers. On page 102 he says that three domed structure was constructed by Raja Vikramaditya. Then he modified it on page 105 stating that the building constructed by Vikramaditya was demolished and thereafter the disputed building was constrcuted and for this information refers to Ayodhya Mahatam. Sri R.L. Verma, Advocate for Nirmohi Akhara, did not dispute that Ayodhya Mahatam nowhere mentions that the building constructed by Raja Vikramaditya was demolished and thereafter the disputed building was constructed. The witness is an educated man having worked in Indian Railway since 1948 till 1988. However, on page 170 he claims to have heard the name of 'Babari mosque' for the first time on 18.11.2003.

2052. Very interestingly he admits on page 172 that he has wrongly stated on page 45 that he read his affidavit after it was typed out but before its verification.

''प्रश्न– तो क्या आपके उपरोक्त पृष्ठ–45 के बयान में यह ग़लत लिख गया है कि आपने उपरोक्त शपथ–पत्र को टाईप होने के उपरांत और सत्यापित होने के पूर्व फैजाबाद में पढ़ा था?

Answer:- Yes, this mistake has occurred." (E.T.C)

2053. DW 3/6 Sitaram Yadav was born in 1943 and, therefore, virtually had no personal knowledge about the facts as they were, upto December 1949. Whatever he says is hearsay and inadmissible. We do not find that for the state of affairs as prevailed upto December, 1949 his statement can be treated to be relevant. Much of his averments are not relevant since he is basically a witness of fact produced to show firstly that the worship was going on inside the disputed building prior to December, 1949 and the idols of Lord Ramlala also existed thereat since before that and that all these things were in possession and management of Nirmohi Akhara which information also he has given based on information he has received, as he has no such personal knowledge.

He has confirmed existence of Ram Chabutara, Chhati Pujan Sthal, Charan Chinh, Chakla and Belan as well as Bhandara in the outer courtyard of the site in dispute. He says that various idols of Lord Rama, Lakshmanji etc. were present on Ram Chabutara as well as Garbhgrih when he used to visit Ram Janam Bhumi Temple for Darshan and worship of Lord Ramlala. The incident of 23rd December, 1949, he claims to be a fictitious one and says that the entire disputed building was in possession of Nirmohi Akhara who were managing and serving. It was a temple of Nirmohi Akhara and Math. He also denies that any Namaj was offered in the entire building in dispute. Three documents he has annexed alongwith his affidavit to show that he had to sign a bond alongwith Baba Abhiram Das, Baba Brindaban Das, Baba Ram Vilas Das, Naga Sudarshan Das and Ram Shatrudhan since proceedings were initiated against them under Section 295/448 after the incident of 23rd December, 1949. However, in cross-examination the witness gave contradictory statement to the stand of the plaintiffs (Suit-3), as is evident from the following:

> ''सन् 1934 के अप्रैल माह में अयोध्या में झगड़ा हुआ था। इस झगड़े के बाद अयोध्या में रहने वालों पर टैक्स लगा था। स्वयं कहा कि गोकुषी हो गयी थी जिसमें कुछ मुसलमान मारे गये थे, उसके बाद रामजन्मभूमि के ऊपर जो ढांचा था उसको हिन्दू लोग गिराने लगे, उस समय अंग्रेजों का राज्य था, फौज ने आकर भीड़ को तितर–बितर कर दिया, उसके बाद ही हिन्दुओं पर जुर्माना लगाया गया था। 85 हजार रूपये जुर्माने के रूप में लगाये गये।'' (पेज 15)

2071. The statement of DW 3/13 does not support Nirmohi Akhara, plaintiff (Suit-3). In fact, it is contrary to their pleadings. It is well settled that evidence which are totally contrary to the pleadings ought not be entertained by the Court. A Division Bench of Patna High Court in Parmeshwari Devi and others Vs. Khusali Mandal and others, AIR 1957 Patna 482 has observed:

".....evidence at variance with the pleadings is not permissible and, if adduced, cannot be looked into to sustain a claim which was never put forward in the pleadings."

2072. The entire case of Nirmohi Akhara is that there never existed any mosque and nothing was constructed by Babar or Mir Baqi at the disputed site which all through was a temple in the management, control and possession of Nirmohi Akhara and no riot or disturbance occurred either in 1934 and nothing happened in the night of 22/23 December, 1959 but the same stand totally belied by DW 3/13.

''महाराजा दशरथ के राजमहल का क्षेत्रफल जैसा कि वाल्मीकि रामायण में उल्लिखित है, अयोध्या के पांच कोस के अन्तर्गत स्थित है। यह पांच – कोस पंचकोसी परिक्रमा के अन्तर्गत है, दशरथ के राजमहल की ही परिक्रमा होती है। जहॉ से पंचकोसी शुरू होती है, वहॉ से महराजा दशरथ का राजमहल शुरू होता था तथा जहॉ पर पंचकोसी परिक्रमा समाप्त होती है वहॉ पर समाप्त होता था।'' (पेज 64)

''The area of King Dashrath's palace as mentioned in the Valmiki Ramayana, is located within 5 kosas (unit of distance) of Ayodhya. This distance of five kosas is within the panchkosi prikrama, which is only the circumambulation of Dashrath's palace. The panchkoshi starts from the place from where the palace of King Dashrath started and the panchkoshi circumambulation terminates at the place where it (the palace) ended.''

2074. Similarly on page 67 he explained 84 Koshi Parikrama observing that it encompasses the then entire Ayodhya. On page 118, 120, 127 and 128 however he said:

"जो विवादित भवन 6 दिसम्बर 1992 को तोड़कर गिरा दिया गया था, वह भवन मेरे ज्ञान के मुताबिक 500 वर्ष से ज्यादा पुराना था। वह भवन, राममंदिर था, जो बाबर के शासनकाल के पहले से था और जिसे बाबर ने परिवर्तित किया था, फिर कहा कि परिवर्तित करने की कोशिश की। उक्त भवन बाबर के शासनकाल से पहले से निर्मित था। बाबर के शासनकाल में उस भवन की तोड़फोड़ हुई थी तथा पुनर्निर्माण हुआ था। मेरे कहने का आशय है कि पूर्व निर्मित भवन को बाबर के शासनकाल में तोड़फोड़ करने के बाद पुनर्निर्माण की कोशिश की गई, जिसमें उसे सफलता नहीं मिली और वह संघर्ष के रुप में बदल गया और वह संघर्ष आज भी चल रहा है।" (पेज 98)

"The disputed building, demolished on 6th December, 1992, was, as per my knowledge, older than 500 years. That building was Rama Temple, which existed from before the reign of Babur and which Babur changed, (further stated) tried to change. The said building was built from before the tenure of Babur. During the reign of Babur that building had been damaged and reconstructed. *I mean to say that during the reign of Babur attempts were made for reconstruction after damaging the earlier built building. "The idols which are now seen on the disputed site, are among the idols which had been taken along by Baba Shyamanand Ji to Uttarakhand. Govind Das Ji took the idols along and reinstalled them on that very place."(E.T.C)

NOTE: This statement shows that during this period of 1943 to 1950 Mahant Bhaskar Das was not there as Pujari at the disputed site though it has been so claimed by other witnesses and that stand contradicted.

2095. Sri Jilani, learned counsel for plaintiffs (Suit-4) has taken great pains in placing before us the apparent contradiction and incorrectness in the statement of these witnesses at several places and in particular in recognising places, topography, various structures etc. in the photographs which are part of record, some of which were obtained by Sri Bashir Ahmad, Civil Court's Commissioner appointed in 1950 and most of them were prepared by the State Archaeological Survey through its Director, Dr. Rakesh Tiwari in 1990 pursuant to an order passed by this Court on 10.01.1990 which reads as under:

"Sunni Central Waqf Board has filed this application in Suit No. 4 of 1989 for:

www.vadaprativada.com

I- permitting and authorising the plaintiff or its representatives to enter upon the property in suit with a photographer and others to take the photographs of the building and the surrounding area;

II- taking measurements of the buildings and its boundaries;

III- permitting a video tape of the same for being placed as evidence in Court and

IV- such other direction as the Court deems fit and proper.

Another application has been moved by defendant no. 2 (Paramhans Ram Chandra Das) purporting to be under Order XXXIX Rule 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure through Sri Tilhari, Advocate, in Suit No. 4 of 1989, and the permission sought for is the same as in the application mentioned above.

A third application has also been filed in Suit No. 2 of 1989 by the defendant no. 3 of the said suit for appointing a survey commissioner for preparing a report in accordance with the map and Abadi Khasra (Annexures I and II) filed along with this application.

Sri Abdul Mannan, counsel appearing for the plaintiff in Suit No. 4 of 1989, referred to an application filed on its behalf in the Court below for appointment of a survey commissioner.

The last prayer made was contested on the ground that as the application filed in the trial court stood disposed of the prayer made by Sri Abdul Mannan could not be acceded to. This submission is not correct. The application was not rejected. It was kept in abeyance directing that an order for survey commissioner would be made after final hearing. Since we are of the opinion that a survey commissioner be appointed at this stage, therefore, we direct that the Registrar/Secretary of the Board of Revenue to appoint any officer, not below the rank of P.C.S. Officer, having knowledge of survey work, to survey the site and to report the location of the plots. The survey commissioner to be appointed would take assistance from the municipal records and such other records which he considers to be useful for the same purpose. The commissioner would give notices of the date, on which he would like to survey, to the Sunni Central Waqf Board and the defendants nos. 2 and 13, namely, Paramhans Ram Chandra Das and Mahant Dharam Das, in Suit No. 4 of 1989. Since we are of the opinion that the photographs of mosque and temple, including all the pillars, may also be helpful for deciding the controversy in this suit, as well as other connected ones, we direct that the photographs of the mosque, temple, including pillars be taken and prepared*.*

The question as to who would be fit for purposes of carrying out the directions of the Court was considered by us at length. In the circumstances, we consider that the Director, U.P. Archaeological Department, be asked to do the same. He would also prepare carbon dating of the pillars, mosque and temple*. For purposes that the directions given by us are effectively complied with and no unnecessary rush gets collected, we consider that out of the two sides, that is, Sunni Central Waqf Board and*

defendants 2 and 13 would be entitled to take not more than seven persons with themselves, one of them can be a photographer.

So far as defendant no. 3 is concerned, we consider, for purposes of settlement of controversy involved in the suit, its interest is not adverse to that of the defendants nos. 2 and 13, therefore, it can take with itself three persons.

The Director, Archaeological Department, would also get video cassettes prepared of the mosque, temple and pillars. The district administration will make arrangement for security.*

The Advocate General had made a statement in the Court that the expenses would be borne by the State of all the proceedings, such as the present. Consequently, we direct that for making the survey commission, taking photographs, video cassettes etc. the expenses would be borne by the State itself.

The applications are decided accordingly."

(emphasis added)

2096. Dr. Rakesh Tiwari, OPW 14 has proved the aforesaid photographs and also the video recording made of the disputed building. He (Sri Jilani) says, since the witnesses have failed to identify most of the photographs and in fact made apparently wrong statements, showing that they never visited the disputed place, their statements are basically wrong and should be rejected.

2097. It is no doubt true that almost all the witnesses have failed to identify correctly location, site or the objects shown in one or the other of the above photographs, but then we have to consider certain well settled principles in the matter of oral

evidence. Memory of a man may be very good or may not be, depending upon the individual. Some people's memory is so sharp that they can continue the things in their mind for several years, decades and may tell very accurately the things happened 20, 30 or 40 years back but this is not a normal phenomena. Normal period of memory of human being is not so long. All the witnesses who have appeared before us have deposed their statements after more than 50 years of the incident. To expect meticulous details, these witnesses can recollect, what transpired or what they observed more than 50 years ago and that too when they must not have any idea that at some point of time they will have to depose statement in a Court of Law and, therefore, could not watch everything very carefully and minutely, is too much. Such lacking is quite normal. No one has a flashing computerised memory. Such expectation and that too from those who are simple rural folks, is too much. We have to consider the overall credibility of the statement of the witnesses as that could be of an ordinary human being.

2098. In fact similar kind of error has occurred virtually with all the witnesses of facts who have deposed their statements whether on behalf of plaintiffs or defendants. It is for this reason, we have not delved into the statements of all the witnesses of facts with respect to the events of 1950 and earlier thereto by looking into contradiction of each line, each word and each page, i.e., on every aspect. We have tried to find out truth in the statements of witnesses by judging their credibility by narrowing down the facts which they intend to prove in their examination-in-chief and thereafter looking to the general conduct, attitude and some other circumstantial state of affairs as discerned from the statement of the witnesses in cross-

examinations. Wherever oral evidence is corroborated with the documentary evidence then obviously one has to take more reliable one than the one which is totally based on the statement of a person which is slippery and appears to be tutored. For a particular fact, if one gives statement of a fact which occurred 50 and more years back with minute details but not able to recollect or tell the Court about such event the dates of which are much more recent, normally very important for a man's life, for example the date or year of birth of children, marriage etc. which must be known by him, then his statement becomes suspicious and needs to be seen with care.

2099. So far as claim of Nirmohi Akhara is concerned that nothing had happened on 22/23 December, 1949 and idols existed under the central dome in the inner courtyard much prior thereto is not only unbelievable and incorrect but in fact many of their own witnesses have proved their case wrong. Many of the witnesses appeared on behalf of Nirmohi Akhara have made statement which is wholly inconsistent to the basic pleadings of Nirmohi Akhara, plaint and replication in Suit-3 and in written statement in Suit-4 and 5.

2100. Though twenty witnesses have been produced on behalf of Nirmohi Akhara and it is strange but unfortunate that we find almost all of them uncreditworthy so far as this aspect of the matter is concerned that the idols in dispute were placed inside the building under central dome long back and much before 22nd December, 1949 and nothing happened on that day. It is well settled that the quantity of evidence does not matter but it is the quality of evidence which matters.

2101. On the point where there is some variance between pleadings and proof, in Ananda Chnadra Chakrabarti vs.

www.vadaprativada.com

Broja Lal Singha (supra), the Court while taking the view that every variance is not fatal has held:

> " The rule that the pleading and proof must correspond is intended to serve a double purpose; first, to apprise the defendant distinctly and specifically of the case he is called upon to answer; and, secondly, to preserve an accurate record of the cause of action as a protection against a second proceeding upon the same allegations. The test thus is, whether the defendant will be taken by surprise if relief is granted on the facts established by the evidence, or, as has sometimes been said, a variance between a pleading and what is proved is immaterial unless it hampers a defence or unless it relates to an integral part of the cause of action."

2102. In Sewkissendas Bhatter & others Vs. Dominion of India AIR 1957 Cal. 617 and Basant Kumar Roy Vs. Secretary of State for India & others AIR 1917 PC 18, it was held that where a matter requires consideration of facts, a new fact ought not be allowed unless supported by pleadings since it is only the matters of law which can be allowed to be raised and not those where factual investigation is required.

2103. Extending the diluted approach as observed by the Culcutta High Court in Ananda Chandra Chakrabarti vs. Broja Lal Singha (supra) yet we find that it is really unfortunate that even this approach may not help the plaintiffs (Suit-3) for the reason that the variance in pleadings and proof is so inconsistent that virtually it amounts to a mutually destructive plea and when the variance is so wide, it cannot but fatal to the case of the plaintiffs (Suit-3). It demolishes their case virtually in its entirety for the purpose of their claim in respect to the

2104. We have no hesitation in holding and recording our finding that under the central dome of the disputed building, idols were kept in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949.

2105. Now the question about the consecration of the said idols and whether the idols were kept after observing the procedure meant for consecration, and, if the idols were same as were kept on Ram Chabutara up to 22nd December, 1949, whether on shifting, fresh exercise of consecration was required and its effect etc., if any.

2106. The crucial aspect would be whether the idols kept under the central dome in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949 were placed in such a manner that the people who visit to worship believe, that there exists a divine spirit, it is a deity conceived of as a living being, capable of providing spiritual salvation and it is a deity having supreme divine powers. As we have discussed, an idol itself is not worshipped but it is a particular image wherein on consecration it is believed by the Hindus that it has attained such divinity and supreme power so as to provide human salvation and fulfillment of wishes of the beneficiary. The idol is only a material symbol and embodiment of pious purpose though the real worship is that of a supreme power. In T.R.K. Ramaswami Servai (supra) as we have already observed the test was not whether the installation of an idol and the mode of its worship conform to any particular school of Agama Sastras but if the public or that section of the public who go for worship consider that there is a divine presence in a particular place and by offering worship at that place, they are likely to be the recipients of the bounty or blessings of God then it is a temple, a deity capable of worship

and no further ceremonial right is required to be shown. This has been approved and affirmed by the Apex Court in Ram Jankijee Deities (supra). None of the witnesses of plaintiffs (Suit-4) have said that he was present at the time of such placement. On the contrary, plaintiff no. 3 (Suit-5) , i.e., OPW 2 in his statement under Order X Rule 2 has clearly said that due ceremonies were performed when the idols were transferred. Paramhans Ramchandra Das also appeared in the witness box as OPW 1 and has proved the state of affairs. His presence on the site at the relevant time has not been doubted either by the plaintiffs (Suit-4) or their witnesses or before us during the course of arguments by learned counsels. Some other witnesses have also proved this fact.

2107. It thus cannot be said that the idol(s) placed therein were not properly consecrated. Atleast the status of deity cannot be assailed by those who do not believe in idol worship since it is to be seen from the angle of those who go and worship thereat. They conform the test of being a juridical person in the eyes of law.

2108. The plaintiffs (Suit-4) have failed to prove that idols and objects of worship were placed inside the building as described in plaint by letters ABCD read with the map appended to the plaint in the night intervening 22nd/ 23rd December, 1949. Consistent with the pleadings in plaint (Suit-4), the building denoted by the area ABCD of the map appended to the plaint (Suit-4), the idols and object of worship were existing even prior to 22nd December 1949 at Ram Chabutara, in the outer courtyard.

2109. We accordingly answer Issue No. 12 (Suit-4) in negative. The effect of this answer shall be considered at the relevant stage and need not be answered at this stage.

2110. Issue No. 3 (a) Suit-5 is answered in affirmance i.e. in favour of the plaintiffs (Suit-5). It is held that the idol(s) in question was/were installed under central dome of the disputed building (since demolished) in the early hours of 23rd December 1949 as alleged by the plaintiff in para 27 of the plaint and clarified by the plaintiffs in the statement under Order X Rule 2 C.P.C. The Issue No. 1 (suit-5) is, also, accordingly, answered in its entirety, in affirmance. It is held that the plaintiffs 1 and 2 both are juridical person. Issue No. 21 (Suit-5) is answered in negative, i.e., against the defendants no. 4 and 5.

2111. Having said so, immediately Issue No. 21 (Suit-4) need be considered as to whether the Suit is bad for non-joinder of the said deity.

2112. An idol being a legal/juristic person, is a necessary party in a suit where relief is sought against it. The idol represents a Deity or a spiritual being whose existence is recognized by Hindu Law. The Deity or spiritual being is supposed to exist for ever. It cannot suppose to act like an ordinary human being but has to be represented by someone. Where a suit is filed seeking a relief against an idol without its impleadment, the suit cannot be decreed against the idol and has to be dismissed for the reason that decree, if any, is passed, would not be binding upon the idol.

2113. In Mukundji Mahraj (supra), para 31 of the judgment, the Court said :

> "As the idol was not properly represented in the aforesaid suits, the decrees were nullities as against the idol. In such cases the principle laid down by the Privy Council in Rashidunnisa Vs. Muhammad Ismail, ILR 31All 572 (PC)

www.vadaprativada.com

(I) and by this Court in Dwarika Halwai v. Sitla Prasad, 1940 All LJ 166: (AIR 1940 All 256) (J) applies. The decree is not merely voidable, but null and void. The decrees being nullities can be ignored and the plaintiff is not under the necessity of having them set aside before suing for possession."

2114. In B. Jangi Lal Vs. B. Panna Lal and another AIR 1957 Allahabad 743 a Division Bench of this Court said that an idol can bring a suit to defend its interest and also has right to defend itself in a suit instituted claiming a relief which impairs the idols rights. Whether it is a necessary party or not depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Where the interest of the idol are directly affected or its own existence seriously impaired appearance of idol before the Court is necessary. However, while observing so in para 5, the Court proceeded further to observe where it is found that idol must be impleaded being a necessary party, it should do so.

2115. In our view this later observation in B. Jangi Lal (supra) would require a little clarification. It is suffice if the plaintiff is made known of the fact that idol being a juristic personality, a necessary party. Wherever its interest is sought to be impaired, no relief can be granted without impleading it. Despite this aspect having been pointed out by the defendants in suit, if no attempt is made by the plaintiff to implead the idol and on the contrary this is defended by objecting to the issue, the matter would have to be considered in a different manner and if at the time of final adjudication the Court finds that the suit was filed without impleading a necessary party and continuing as such it would have to face the logical consequences.

2116. In K. Manathunainatha Desikar Vs. Sundaralingam (supra) a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in para 20 of the judgment observed:

> ".....The Deity, a juristic entity, is the proprietor who never dies but labours under physical disability which renders it necessary that its interests should be looked after in perpetuity*."*

2117. In Jodhi Rai Vs. Basdeo Prasad and Ors. (supra) a Full Bench of this Court held:

> ".....An idol has been held to be a juristic person who can hold property. Therefore, when a suit is brought in respect of property held by an idol, it is the idol who is the person bringing the suit or against whom the suit is brought, the idol being the person beneficially interested in the suit."

www.vadaprativada.com

2118. The Court in Jodhi Rai (supra) however on merits found that though the idol was impleaded through Manager but it was not properly described. In these circumstances, the Court held that the correction in the description could have been permitted to the plaintiff and this by itself does not warrant dismissal of suit since correction would not have the effect of introducing third party, on record after expiry of period of limitation. However where the necessary party has not been impleaded within the period of limitation, the position may be different.

2119. In Bimal Krishna Ghose and Ors. Vs. Shebaits of Sree Sree Iswar Radha Ballav Jiu and Ors. AIR 1937 Cal 338 the Court referring to its earlier decision in Rabindra Nath Vs. Chandi Charan AIR 1932 Cal 117 observed that in India, the Crown is the constitutional protector of all infants and as the

Deity occupies in law the position of an infant, the Shebaits who represent the Deity are entitled to seek the assistance of the Court in case of mismanagement or maladministration of the deity's estate and to have a proper scheme for management framed which would end the disputes amongst the guardians and prevent the debutter estate from being wasted or ruined.

2120. In para 7 of the judgment the Court relied and referred to the Privy Council decision in Kanhaya Lal Vs. Hamid Ali, AIR 1933 PC 198 and observed :

> "The Privy Council held that they could not deal with the appeal in the absence of the idol whose interest arose under the Wakf ....."

2121. In Kasturi Vs. Iyyamperumal and Ors. 2005 (6) SCC 733 referring to Order I Rule 10 as to who would be the necessary party in para 7 and 13 it said :

> 7. In our view, a bare reading of this provision, namely, second part of Order 1 Rule 10 sub-rule (2) CPC would clearly show that the necessary parties in a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale are the parties to the contract or if they are dead, their legal representatives as also a person who had purchased the contracted property from the vendor. In equity as well as in law, the contract constitutes rights and also regulates the liabilities of the parties. A purchaser is a necessary party as he would be affected if he had purchased with or without notice of the contract, but a person who claims adversely to the claim of a vendor is, however, not a necessary party. From the above, it is now clear that two tests are to be satisfied for determining the question who is a necessary party. Tests are – (1) there must be a right to some relief against such

party in respect of the controversies involved in the proceedings; (2) no effective decree can be passed in the absence of such party.

13. From the aforesaid discussion, it is pellucid that necessary parties are those persons in whose absence no decree can be passed by the court or that there must be a right to some relief against some party in respect of the controversy involved in the proceedings and proper parties are those whose presence before the court would be necessary in order to enable the court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit although no relief in the suit was claimed against such person.

2122. In J. Jaya Lalitha Vs. Union of India & another AIR 1999 SC 1912, the Court observed that "necessary" means that is indispensable, needful and essential in respect of which, nothing is vague or nebulous.

2123. In Udit Narain Singh Malpaharia Vs. Additional Member, Board of Revenue AIR 1963 SC 786, the Court said that a necessary party is one without whom no effective order can be made; a proper party in whose absence an effective order can be made but whose presence is necessary for a complete and final decision on the question involved in the proceedings.

2124. In Prabodh Verma & others Vs. State of U.P. and others AIR 1985 SC 167 it was considered as to who are necessary and proper parties. The Court observed that a person who may be adversely affected directly by a decision of the Court is a necessary party, for the reason any order passed behind his back may not be binding upon him having been passed in violation of the principles of natural justice.

2125. In Ramesh Hirachand Kundanmal Vs. Municipal Corporation of Greater Bombay & others (1992) 2 SCC 524, the Court said that parties whose presence before the Court is necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, are necessary parties. What makes a person a necessary party is not merely that he has relevant evidence to come on some of the questions involved nor it is merely that he has interest in the correct solution of some questions involved, and has relevant arguments to advance. The only reason which makes it necessary to make a person a party to an action is so that he should be bound by the result of the action, and the question to be settled, therefore, must be a question in the action which cannot be effectually and completely settled unless he is a party.

2126. It has also been held in a catena of decisions that non impleadment of a necessary party is fatal as provided in the principles enshrined in proviso to Order 1, Rule 9 C.P.C. Recently, a Division Bench of this Court also taken the above view in Satya Narain Kapoor Vs. State of U.P. & others 2007 (2) ARC 308.

2127. In Narayan Bhagwantrao Gosavi Balajiwale (supra) the Apex Court in para 41 of the judgment observed:

> ".....The difficulty in the way of the appellant is real. He refrained from joining the Deity, if not as a necessary, at least as a proper party to the suit. If he had joined the deity and the deity was represented by a disinterested guardian, necessary pleas against his contention could have been raised by the guardian, and it is likely that some evidence would also have been given.

www.vadaprativada.com

The appellant seeks to cover up his default by saying that the suit was one under O. 1, R. 8 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that the Hindu public was joined and the Deity was adequately represented. In a suit of this character, it is incumbent to have all necessary parties, so that the declaration may be effective and binding. It is obvious enough that a declaration given against the interests of the deity will not bind the Deity, even though the Hindu Community as such may be bound. The appellant would have avoided circuity of action, if he had acceded to the very proper request of the respondents to bring on record the Deity as a party. He stoutly opposed such a move, but at a very late stage in this court he has made an application that the Deity be joined. It is too late now to follow the course adopted by the Privy Council in 52 Ind App 245: (AIR 1925 PC 139) and Kanhaiya Lal Vs. Hamid Ali, 60 Ind App 263: (AIR 1933 PC 198 (1),....."

www.vadaprativada.com

2128. The plaintiffs (Suit-4) have sought a relief of eviction of idol from the building in dispute. The idol in question is a Deity and a juridical person in law. That being so, if a relief is sought against the idol, a juridical person, its impleadment was necessary as it is a necessary party. The consequences of non impleadment of a necessary party is that the suit cannot proceed and deserves to be dismissed on this ground. The principle in this regard is that relief cannot be granted in a suit against a person who has no opportunity to place his case before the Court as one cannot be condemned unheard.

2129. In ordinary circumstances, we ought to have dismissed Suit-4 for non impleadment of necessary party. However, there are certain peculiar facts and circumstance in the present sets of

cases. There was a serious dispute regarding the status of the idol in question. Besides, four suits have been clubbed. The legal person i.e. Deity is fully represented in this Court and has placed its case in the best possible manner through a battery of learned counsels and we find nothing more could have been said if technically the impleadment of idol would have been there in Suit-4. The basic principle that no one should be condemned unheard therefore does not exist in the case in hand. If a relief is to be given to a plaintiff, an order may not be passed against a person who is not a party to that suit. This would make at the best, in case Suit-4 is to be allowed, not to grant relief in respect of the eviction of the idol from the premises in question but would have no impact on the matter of declaration.

2130. After due and careful consideration of the matter and having placed this question before the learned counsels, who argued the matter as to what else could have been their defence if the idol would have been a party in Suit-4, they could not place before us on behalf of the idol, who is plaintiff no.1 in Suit-5 and is placing his case before us to which they could not reply or add anything.

2131. We, accordingly, in the facts and circumstances and discussion made above, decide issue 21 (Suit-4) in negative i.e. in favour of the plaintiff (Suit-4) and hold that the suit is not bad for non-joinder of the Deities.

2132. Issues no.2 and 6 (Suit-5) relate to the capacity of plaintiff no.3 to file suit on behalf of plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 as their next friend and relate to the maintainability of the suit in the manner it has been filed or even if plaintiffs no.1 and 2 are held to be juridical person, are entitled to sue or be sued in their own name.

2133. Now, so far as the issue No.2 and 6 (Suit-5) are concerned, we really find it surprising that there is no averment at all in the entire plaint that plaintiff no. 3 is a worshipper of lord Ram and that of plaintiffs 1 and 2. Besides it is also not the case that there is no Shebait at all or the Shebait, if any, is not managing the affairs properly.

2134. An idol or deity in Hindu law, as we have already discussed,is a juridical person and can file a suit for protection of its rights etc. and similarly can also be sued. Not being a natural person, it cannot litigate on its own as but its interest has to be watched through a natural person. Here we come up to the concept of Shebait or Mahant. He look after the interest of the idol or deity, can sue or be sued. Where the suit is in respect of the rights of the idol, it is to be filed in the name of the idol through the concerned Shebait or Mahant who is held to be the manager of such deity, under an obligation to look after its interest. No specific procedure in this regard has been mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure. However, by process of interpretation and by judicial precedence the Courts have taken recourse to the principles of Order 32 Rule 1 CPC. In B.K. Mukherjea's Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trusts (supra) at page 265 the learned author clearly opined that a deity being a juristic person has undoubtedly, right to institute a suit for protection of its interest. So long as there is a Shebait in the office functioning properly, the rights of the deity, as stated above, practically lie dormant and it is the Shebait alone who can file suits in the interest of the deity. When, however, the Shebait is negligent or is himself the guilty party against whom the deity needs relief, it is open to worshippers or other persons interested in the endowment to file suit for the protection of the

Debutter. It is open to the deity also to file a suit through some person as next friend for recovery of possession of property improperly alienated or for other relief. Such a next friend may not unoften be a person who as a prospective Shebait or a worshipper is personally interested in the endowment.

2135. The learned author has further considered as to how we can distinguish the two classes of cases and ascertain whether it is a suit by the deity or by the worshipper personally. He has answered this question observing that it would certainly depend upon the nature of the suit and the nature of the relief claimed. If the suit is not in the name of the deity, it cannot be regarded as a deity's suit, even though the deity is to be benefited by the result of the litigation. It would be the personal suit of the worshipper, the family members or the prospective Shebait, as the case may be. These persons are not entitled to claim any relief for themselves personally, e.g., by way of recovery of possession of the property improperly alienated or adversely possessed by a stranger.

2136. It appears that there was some variation in the opinion of different courts on this aspect as to how and in what manner a suit be filed on behalf of a deity or idol. Sri Jilani and other learned counsels appearing for Sunni Board as well as other Muslim parties have not gone to the extent of denying any right of filing a suit by a deity and it is not, in fact, disputed that a deity consecrated in accordance with Shashtrik law is a juridical person entitled to sue or be sued and such a suit can be filed through its Shebait or Mahant, as the case may be. Their objection is that plaintiffs no.1 and 2 are not deity in accordance with recognised tenets of Hindu law and, therefore, Suit-5 itself is not maintainable. This issue we have already considered and

2137. In continuation, the next objection is that plaintiffs no.1 and 2 cannot be represented through the next friend i.e., the plaintiff no.3, and Suit-5 by plaintiffs no.1 and 2 through plaintiff no.3 as next friend is not in accordance with law, hence not maintainable.

2138. The defendant no. 4 though has pleaded in para 1 of his written statement (Suit-5) that there is no installation of deity within the premises of the disputed place of worship and that the idol in question was stealthily and surreptitiously kept inside the mosque in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949 and, therefore, are not a juridical person being not a deity but nothing has been brought on record to prove it. Similar assertions have also been made in paras 6, 11, 12, 14, 18 and 21 of the written statement of defendant no. 4, Suit-5. Regarding plaintiff no. 1 (Suit-5) the assertion that it is a Chal Vigrah and was kept in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949 after due ceremonies and the fact that since 23rd December, 1949 it is continuously being worshiped by Hindus leaves no option for us but to disagree with the stand of the defendant no. 4 (Suit-5) that it is not a deity in terms of Hindu Shastras and, therefore, not a juridical person. So far as the plaintiff no. 2 is concerned, the discussion made above make it clear that a place by itself can also be a deity for worship of Hindus and in such a case being a Swyambhu and permanent deity, no particular kind of consecration is required to be observed in such a case. Subject to our findings in respect to the issues whether the disputed site is the place of birth of Lord Rama or that it is believed to be the place of birth of Lord Rama by Hindus from time immemorial, the issues which are separately under consideration, if answered in affirmance, i.e.,

in favour of Hindu parties, we have no hesitation in holding that the plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 cannot be denied the status of deity and, therefore, are juridical persons as known in Hindu laws. It is not the case of any of the parties that there is or there was any shebait appointed or working to look after or managing the plaintiffs no. 1 and 2. The idol while existing on Ram Chabutara, its worship etc. was being managed by the priest of Nirmohi Akhara as claimed by them and also not seriously disputed by other Hindu parties but after its shifting in the disputed building under the central dome, there is nothing on record to show that any person as shebait of plaintiff no. 1 continued to look after.

2139. So far as plaintiff no. 2 is concerned, we find that there is no pleading by the defendants no. 4 and 5 or any other muslim party that there was any shebait to manage the affairs of plaintiff no. 2. The plaintiff no. 3 has stated in para 1 that he is a Vaishnav Hindu. The Vaishnavas are those who worship Lord Rama. He was allowed to represent the plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 as their next friend by Civil Judge while entertaining the suit in question vide order dated 01.07.1989. After death of Sri D.N. Agrawal he was replaced by Sri T.P.Verma vide order of the Court who was made next friend of plaintiffs no. 1 and 2. Recently Sri Triloki Nath Pandey has been allowed as next friend to represent plaintiffs no. 1 and 2. In view of the law laid down by the Apex Court in Bishwanath Vs. Sri Thakur Radha Ballabhi (supra) in the absence of Shebait, a suit on behalf of a Hindu idol can be filed and pursued by a worshipper as an idol's next friend.

2140. A suit on behalf of a minor or a Deity can be filed through next friend only if the above conditions are satisfied.

This could have been a serious deficiency in respect to maintainability of Suit-5 through next friend but we have noticed that here is not a case where Suit-5 was entertained on behalf of plaintiffs 1 and 2 through next friend without the intervention of the Court. The record shows that before entertaining the suit, the Court considered the prayer of the plaintiff 3 to permit him to represent the plaintiffs no.1 and 2 as next friend. The Civil Judge passed order on 01.07.1989 permitting the plaintiff no.3 to present the said suit as next friend of the plaintiffs no.1 and 2. The said order of the Civil Judge has never been challenged by any of the parties and the same has attained finality. In fact after the death of Sri Deoki Nandan Agarwal the then next friend of plaintiffs no.1 and 2, an application was filed for another next friend by Sri T.P.Verma which was allowed by this Court. Thereafter when a further change was requested, another application was filed on behalf of Kamleshwar Nath to represent as next friend of plaintiffs 1 and 2 but it was dismissed by this Court against which an appeal was taken to the Apex Court and vide judgment dated 08.02.2010, the Apex Court permitted him to be impleaded and pursue the present suit as next friend of plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 subject to certain conditions, which he complied with and accordingly he was substituted as next friend by this Court's order dated 18.03.2010.

2141. In view of the above discussion, we are of the view that Suit-5 cannot be held not maintainable merely on account of some defects in pleading with respect to the status of the next friend or Shebait. We decide Issues no. 2 and 6 (Suit-5) in negative i.e. in favour of the plaintiffs (Suit-5). We hold that the suit is maintainable and plaintiff no. 3 can validly represent

plaintiffs no. 1 and 2 as their next friend and is competent on this account.

(H) Limitation

2142. In this category fall four issues namely Issue No. 3 (Suit-4); 10 (Suit-1); 9 (Suit-3); and 13 (Suit-5).

2143. The above issues though pertain to a common statute of "limitation" but since the situation, relevant facts and arguments cover different angles in all the cases, we propose to deal the said four issues separately and suitwise.

2144. First we proceed with the leading case, i.e., Issue No. 3 (Suit-4) which reads as under:

> "Is the suit within time?"*

2145. The plaintiffs in para 23 of the plaint have alleged that the cause of action arose on 23rd December, 1949 when the Hindus unlawfully and illegally entered the mosque, desecrated the same by placing idols therein, caused obstruction and interference with the rights of Muslims in general in offering prayers and other religious ceremonies in the mosque, caused obstructions to Muslims going to the grave-yard and reciting Fatiha to the dead persons buried therein; the said injury is continuing and renewed de-die-indiem; the cause of action against defendants 5 to 9 arose on 29th December, 1949 on which date the defendant No. 7 attached the mosque in suit and handed over possession to Receiver (defendant No. 9) who assumed charge of the same on 5th January, 1950 and the State Government and its officials, defendants No.6 to 8, failed in their duty to prosecute offenders and safeguard interest of Muslims. Para 23 of the plaint reads as under:

> "23. That cause of action for the suit against the Hindu public arose on 23.12.1949 at Ajodhiya District Faizabad

within the jurisdiction of this Hon'ble Court when the Hindus unlawfully and illegally entered the mosque and desecrated the mosque by placing idols in the mosque thus causing obstruction and interference with the rights of the Muslims in general, of saying prayers and performing other religious ceremonies in the mosque. The Hindus are also causing obstructions to the Muslims going in the grave-yard (Ganj-Shahidan) and reciting Fatiha to the dead persons buried therein. The injuries so caused are continuing injuries and the cause of action arising therefrom is renewed de-die-indiem and as against defendants 5 to 9 the cause of action arose to the plaintiffs on 29.12.1949 the date on which the defendant No. 7 the City Magistrate Faizabad-cum-Ajodhiaya attached the mosque in suit and handed over possession of the same to Sri Priya Dutt Ram defendant no. 9 as the receiver, who assumed charge of the same on January 5, 1950.

The State Government and its officials defendants 6 to 8 failed in their duty to prosecute the offenders and safeguard the interests of the Muslims"

2146. The defendants No.1 and 2 in para 23 of written statement dated 12th March, 1962 have denied it. In additional pleas, para 28 they have pleaded that the suit is time barred. The plaintiff's were not in possession of the disputed property since 1934. The relevant pleading is as under :

"23. That para 23 of the plaint is wrong. The suit is hopelessly time barred. The Muslims have not been in possession of the property in dispute since 1934, and earlier*."*

"28. That the suit is time barred as the plaintiffs were

never in possession over the temple in dispute since 1934, and the Hindus were holding it adversely to them, overtly and to their knowledge."

2147. Another written statement filed on behalf of defendants No. 1 and 2 dated 25th January, 1963 is similarly worded in para 23 and 28 thereof.

2148. The defendants No. 3 and 4 in their written statement dated 22nd August, 1962, while denying para 23 of the plaint in para 23 of the written statement, have stated in para 34 (part of additional pleas) that the suit is barred by time.

2149. The defendant No.10 in his written statement dated 15th February, 1990 has denied para 23 of the plaint and in additional pleas has alleged in para 29 and 79 that the suit is barred by time. Para 79 of the written statement says:

"79. That the suit as framed is a suit for declaration only and the relief for delivery of possession is in the words that "In case in the opinion of the court . . . . . " which means that the plaintiffs are not seeking relief of possession and leave it to the court to grant possession suo motu. The reason is obvious that the suit was barred by limitation and so specific prayer has not been made."

www.vadaprativada.com

2150. Though a replication has been filed to this written statement of defendant No.10 but para 79 was inserted in the written statement pursuant to the amendment allowed by Court's order dated 23rd November, 1992 and there is no reply to para 79 of the written statement. The part of relief sought in the plaint i.e. para 24 (bb) is also pleaded barred by time in para 12, additional written statement dated 12th September, 1995 of defendant No.10 (Baba Abhiram Dass, substituted by defendant No.13/1 vide Court's order dated 27th January, 1992). In written statement dated 20.7.1968, paras 23, 27 and 28 he pleads that the suit is hopelessly time barred. The defendant No.13/1 in his separate written statement dated 4th December, 1989 in para 23 and 39, while asserting that the suit is barred by time, has averred:

> "23. That paragraph 23 of the plaint is denied. The cause of action pleaded therein is fictitious. It could in no case be said to be renewed de-die-indiem, inasmuch as the imaginary injury complained of does not constitute a continuing injury or a continuing wrong in the eye of law. The suit is hopelessly time-barred by the limitation of 6 years prescribed by Article 120 of the Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, which squarely applies to the allegations and the cause of action pleaded in the plaint, though the answering defendant submits that there was in fact no cause of action for the suit, and the suit is only a malicious exercise in futility which is fit to be dismissed as such."
> "39. That the relief for possession by the removal of the idols and other articles of Hindu worship, is in fact and in law a relief for mandatory injunction, and is barred the 6 years' limitation prescribed by Article 120 of the Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1908. Otherwise too a person other than the Mutwalli of a Mosque cannot sue for its possession, and can only sue for a declaration that it is a mosque and, if out of possession or dispossessed, that its possession be made over to the Mutwalli, and to such suit also Article 120 applied, and neither of the Article 142 or 144 of the Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 had any application*. the plaintiffs having claimed to have been effectively and completely dispossessed by the Preliminary order of attachment and appointment of a Receiver to maintain the worship of the Deity inside the three-domed building, passed on 29.12.1949 under Section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, the suit is barred by Article 14 of the Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1908. It could not be said to arise thereafter die-in-diem, as it was not the case of a continuing wrong, within the meaning of Section 23 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908. In any view of the matter the suit is hopelessly barred by limitation, even on the allegations of the Plaint which is liable to be rejected under Order 7, Rule 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and Section 3 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, casts a duty on the Court to dismiss the suit and not to proceed with its trial any further."

2151. Defendant No.17 in para 18 of additional written statement dated 14th September, 1995 has pleaded that the suit is barred by time in the following words :

"18. That the suit as framed is a suit for declaration and the relief for delivery of possession has not been made in specific terms as the said relief was time-barred on the date of institution of the suit. Now by way of amendment, relief of possession from statutory receiver is being sought

and as such the plaintiffs are stopped from claiming possession of the property at this stage and the said claim has also become time-barred."

2152. Similarly, defendant No.18 in para 23 of the written statement has denied and in para 28 has said that the suit is barred by limitation; Defendant No.20 has denied para 23 and in para 48 has pleaded that the suit is barred by limitation.

2153. Sri P.N.Mishra, Advocate, assisted by Miss Ranjana Agnihotri appearing on behalf of defendant No.20 submitted that Sri Zahoor Ahmad-plaintiff No.10 (since deceased) was impleaded as defendant No.1 in Suit-1. Mohammad Faiq-plaintiff No.4 (since deceased) was defendant No.3 in Suit-1 and defendant No.7 in Suit-3. Similarly, plaintiff No.10/1 Farooq Ahmad substituted after the death of the plaintiff No.10 Zahoor Ahmad is defendant No.11 in Suit-3. In the plaint (Suit-4), the plaintiffs have taken a stand in para 11 that the disputed building was in peaceful possession of Muslims and they used to recite prayer therein till 23rd December, 1949 when a large crowd of Hindus with mischievous intention of destroying, damaging or defiling the said mosque and thereby insulting Muslim religion and religious feelings, entered and desecrated the mosque by placing idols therein. Shri Mishra pointed out that plaintiff No.4-Mohd. Faiq and plaintiff No.10-Zahoor Ahmad had filed written statement dated 21st February, 1950 in Suit-1 and in para 22 therein have pleaded that Namaz was offered in the building in dispute till 16th December, 1949 and till then there was no idol in the said building; if it has been placed subsequently in the disputed building, the same was wholly illegal. Similarly, the plaintiff No.4 along with two others had filed written statement dated 28.03.1960 in Suit-3 and in para 26 thereof he has pleaded that Namaz was offered in the disputed building till 16th December, 1949 and upto that time there was no idol inside the building. The above stand has been changed by the said two plaintiffs in Suit-4 though it is a futile and illegal attempt; will not bring the suit in dispute within the limitation prescribed therefor.

2154. Sri Mishra contended that Suit-4 was presented and filed in the court on 18th December, 1961. Plaintiff No.1 (Suit-4), who was impleaded as defendant No.9 (Suit-3) pursuant to the Court's order dated 23rd August, 1989 on application for impleadment, made a statement through his counsel that he is adopting written statement already filed on behalf of the defendants No.1 to 5 in Suit-1 and the defendants No.6 to 8 in Suit-3. Sunni Central Waqfs Board was also impleaded as defendant No.10 in Suit-1 pursuant to the Court's order dated 7th January, 1987. Thus the stand taken by plaintiffs No. 4 and 10 is binding on plaintiff No.1. The change in stand in Suit-4 with respect to the date on which last Namaz was offered in the disputed building cannot be pleaded otherwise than what they have already pleaded. They are estopped from changing the stand and cannot be permitted to cover up the deficiency in regard to limitation by such altered stand.

2155. It is contended by Sri P.N. Misra that in the earlier pleadings of Muslim parties their specific case was that last Namaz was offered on 16.12.1949 hence the subsequent improvement in the later pleadings shall not improve upon their case. They are bound by the stand they have taken in earlier pleadings. He argued that post litem motum is inadmissible on the ground that the same thing must be in controversy before and after the statement is made. The statement in Suit-4,

therefore, is inadmissible where improving upon their earlier stand it has been pleaded that Namaz was offered lastly on 22.12.1949. Sri Misra placed reliance on a decision of the Apex Court in State of Bihar & Ors. Vs. Sri Radha Krishna Singh (Supra) and in particular para 132 and 138 which read as under:

"132. Same view was taken by a full Bench of the Madras High Court in Seethapti Rao Dora v. Venkanna Dora & Ors, (1922) ILR 45 Mad 332: (AIR 1922 Mad 71). Where Kumaraswami Sastri, J. Observed thus:

> "I am of opinion that Section 35 has no application to judgments, and a judgment which would not be admissible under Sections 40 to 43 of the Evidence Act would not become relevant merely because it contains a a statement as to a fact which is in issue or relevant in a suit between persons who are not parties or privies. Sections 40 to 44 of the Evidence Act deal with the relevancy of judgments in Courts of justice."

"138. In Hari Baksh v. Babu Lal & Anr., AIR 1924 PC 126, their Lordships observed as follows.

> "It appears to their Lordships that these statements of Bishan Dayal who was then an interested party in the disputes and was then taking a position adverse to Hari Baksh cannot be regarded as evidence in this suit and are inadmissible."

2156. Referring to the reliefs sought in Suit-4, it is contended by Sri Mishra that for the purpose of limitation, Suit-4 would be governed by Article 120 of Limitation Act, 1908, (hereinafter referred to as "L.A. 1908"). The period prescribed therein is only six years. Admittedly the suit has been filed by the plaintiffs after more than 12 year. Therefore, it is liable to be dismissed on the ground of limitation itself. He argued that though presently the L.A. 1908 has been repealed by Limitation Act, 1963, (hereinafter referred to as "L.A.1963"), but for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether the suit in question was filed within the period prescribed in law, the statute as it was enforced on the date of filing of the suit would have to be considered. Applying Article 120 of L.A. 1908, Suit-4 is hopelessly barred by limitation.

2157. The submission is that in a suit for declaration, only Article 120 of L.A. 1908 is applicable since no other Article applies. Even if the date of cause of action, as mentioned in para 23 of the plaint, is taken to be correct, the suit in question having been filed after expiry of six years, is hopelessly barred by limitation.

2158. He also submitted that there is no question of continuing wrong. It is not a case where the cause of action accrued de die indiem i.e. every day. The suit in question cannot be treated to be within limitation. Alternatively he contended that even if Article 120 is found inapplicable, due to Article 142 or 144 of L.A. 1908, the cause of action having arisen on 16th December, 1949, and, not being a continuous cause of action running de die indiem, the suit in question is barred by limitation having been filed after expiry of 12 years i.e. 2 days later after expiry of 12 years. Sri Mishra submits that once the suit stands barred by limitation, there is no question to consider or apply any sympathy or equity in the matter. A suit, which is barred by limitation, cannot be held within time for trial on any such ground like equity, conscience, justice, sympathy, leniency etc.

2160. To attract Article 142 of L.A. 1908, possession of the defendants was necessary on the date of suit filed by it. There are two words used in Article 142 namely "discontinuation from possession" and "dispossession". Both have different meaning and context. Since the defendants were not in possession on the date the suit was filed, Article 144 of L.A. 1908 would not come into picture.

2162. The above arguments have been buttressed by the learned counsel Sri Mishra from various angles relying on a catena of decisions i.e.: Shyam Sunder Prasad & Others Vs.

2163. Sri M.M.Pandey, Advocate on behalf of defendant no.2/1 Mahant Suresh Das submitted that the property is under attachment. There is no cause of action for claiming the relief of possession and hence a suit for declaration lies which attracts limitation under Article 120. He placed reliance on Deo Kuer & Anr. Vs. Sheo Prasad Singh & Anr. AIR 1966 SC 359 and submitted that since the suit has been filed after more than 11 years, it is highly barred by limitation. He also submitted that limitation once start running, shall not stop and placed reliance on Bank of Upper India Vs. Mt. Hira Kuer & Ors. AIR 1937 Oudh 291. Explaining "right to sue", he placed reliance on Annamalai Chettiar and others Vs. A.M.K.C.T. Muthukaruppan Chettiar & anr (Supra) and Mt. Bolo Vs. Mt. Koklan and others (Supra).

2164. Besides above, he also placed reliance on Partab Bahadur Singh, Taluqdar Vs. Jagatjit Singh (Supra), C. Natrajan Vs. Ashim Bai & Anr. AIR 2008 SC 363; Shyam Sunder Prasad (supra); Panna Lal Biswas Vs. Panchu Raidas AIR 1922 Cal 419; Bhinka and others Vs. Charan Singh 1959 (Supp.) 2 SCR 798, Abdul Halim Khan Vs. Raja Saadat Ali Khan & Ors. AIR 1928 Oudh 155 and Brojendra Kishore Roy Chowdhury & others Vs. Bharat Chandra Roy and others AIR 1916 Cal. 751.

2165. Sri G.Rajagopalan, Senior Advocate, appearing on behalf of defendant No.12 also towing the same line contended that the suit is only for declaration and there is no prayer for possession. It is covered by Article 120 of the L.A.1908 hence barred by limitation. Referring to Order VII Rule 6 C.P.C., he submits that the plaintiffs when filed the suit beyond the period of limitation must state the grounds upon which exemption from such law is claimed. No such ground or exemption has been stated in the plaint therefore, it is ex facie barred by limitation. He also contended that the plaintiffs have also not sought any exemption under Public Waqf (Extension) of Limitation Act,

1959 and even otherwise the said Act would not be applicable to the plaintiffs.

2166. Sri Ravi Shankar Prasad, Senior Advocate, contended that the suit of plaintiffs-Muslims is actually a suit for immoveable property governed by Article 120 of L.A. 1908 and neither Article 142 nor 144 is applicable. Any attempt to construe the suits filed by the plaintiffs as anything but a suit for possession of immovable property is incorrect. They are not in possession of the property in dispute since 22/23rd December, 1949 and therefore, the limitation was only for six years which having elapsed the suit is barred by limitation. He placed reliance on Raja Ramaswamy Vs. Govinda Ammal, AIR 1929 Madras 313 (Para 19 to 25); Pierce Leslie & Co. Ltd. Vs. Miss Violet Ouchterlony Wapshare AIR 1969 SC 843 (Para 7); Janki Kunwar Vs. Ajit Singh (1888) ILR 15 Cal 58 (Para 8); Jafar Ali Khan & Ors. Vs. Nasimannessa Bibi AIR 1937 Cal 500 (Para 7).

2167. On the contrary, Sri Siddiqui refuting all the submission vehemently contended that here is a continuous cause of action since the proceedings of 145 Cr.P.C. have not been finalized so far. The deprivation for the Muslims is on day-to-day basis and that it was a suit for possession wherein the limitation would commence from 22/23 December, 1949 and the suit having been filed on 18th December, 1961 is well within time. He also cited certain authorities namely Kali Prasad Misir and others Vs. Harbans Misir 1919 All 383; Mata Palat Vs. Beni Madho AIR 1914 All 184; Prajapati and others Vs. Madras 568.

2169. The nature of the statute on limitation has been considered in C. Beepathuma (supra) and it say:

> "There is no doubt that the Law of Limitation is a procedural law and the provisions existing on the date of the suit apply to it*."*

2170. Before the British, during the period when Muslims ruled the Country (in particular Oudh), it appears that personal laws governed all matters. The Muslim law does not recognize limitation; while in Hindu personal laws, on certain aspects, in different schools, some provisions for limitation are prescribed which are not common to all the Hindus. Hindu Law recognizes both prescription and limitation while Muslim jurisprudence recognises neither of them. In some of the Smritis a period of 20 years was prescribed for acquisition of title by prescription. It appears that since agriculture was the main occupation of the people, Smritis concentrated more on land and on the rights therein.

2171. Thus prior to 05.05.1859 there was no common law of limitation applicable to whole of India. The Provincial Courts in each Presidency established by East India Company were governed by certain Regulations, like; Regulation III of 1793 (Bengal); Regulation II of 1802 (Madras); Regulation I of 1800

(Bombay) and the Acts particularly applicable to them like Act I of 1845; Act XIII of 1848; Act XI of 1859. The Non-Regulation Provinces i.e. Punjab and Oudh etc. were governed by Codes of their own and sometimes by Circular Orders of Judicial Commissioner. The three Supreme Courts established by Royal Charter adopted the English law of limitation.

2172. Cause of action with respect to the statutes of Limitation as applicable in England in one of the earliest cases came to be considered in 1849 as to when it would run. Privy Council in The East India Company Vs. Oditchurn Paul 1849 (Cases in the Privy Council on Appeal from the East Indies) 43 held that the Statute runs from the time of breach, for that constitutes the cause of action. With reference to the East India Company, it observed that the statute of limitation was extended to India by Indian Act No.XIV of 1840. The appeal against the Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal (Calcutta) was allowed by Privy Council. It also observed therein if the matter would have been tried by Hindu law, the limitation of suits, under the Hindu law, would have been twelve years.

2173. The first codified statute was Act No. XIV of 1859, enacted to amend and consolidate laws relating to limitation of suits. This Act received the assent of Governor General on 5th May, 1859. It was repealed by Act No. IX of 1871, Act XV of 1877 and thereafter by Act IX of 1908 (i.e. L.A. 1908). Presently, even L.A. 1908 has been repealed and the Courts in India are now governed by Limitation Act, 1963 (i.e. L.A. 1963).

2174. Act XIV of 1859 provided limitation of suits only. Section I, Clauses12 and 16, said :

www.vadaprativada.com

"12. To suits for the recovery of immovable property or of any interest in immovable property to which no other provision of this Act applies- the period of twelve years from the time the cause of action arose."

"16. To all suits for which no other limitation is hereby expressly provided- the period of six years from the time the case of action arose." (emphasis added)

2175. Sections XI, XII, XV and XVI of the Act XIV of 1859 read as under:

"XI. If, at the time when the right to bring an action first accrues, the person to whom the right accrues is under a legal disability, the action may be brought by such person or his representative within the same time after the disability shall have ceased as would otherwise have been allowed from the time when the cause of action accrued, unless such time shall exceed the period of three years, in which case the suit shall be commenced within three years from the time when the disability ceased; but, if, at the time when the cause of action accrues to any person, he is not under a legal disability, no time shall be allowed on account of any subsequent disability of such person or of the legal disability of any person claiming through him."

"XII. The following persons shall be deemed to be under legal disability within the meaning of the last preceding Section-married women in cases to be decided by English law, minors, idiots, and lunatics."

"XV. If any person shall, without his consent, have been dispossessed of any immovable property otherwise than by due course of law, such person, or any person claiming through him, shall, in a suit brought to recover possession of such property, be entitled to recover possession thereof notwithstanding any other title that may be set up in such a suit, provided that the suit be commenced within six months from the time of such dispossession. But nothing in this Section shall bar the person from whom such possession shall have been so recovered, or any other person, instituting a suit to establish his title to such property and to recover possession thereof within the period limited by this Act*."*

"XVIII. All suits that may be now pending, or that shall be instituted within the period of two years from the date of the passing of this Act, shall be tried and determined as if this act had not been passed; but all suits to which the provisions of this Act are applicable that shall be instituted after the expiration of the said period shall be governed by this Act and no other law of limitation, any Statute, Act, or Regulation now in force notwithstanding."

2176. Section I of Act XIV of 1859 says that no suit shall be maintained in any Court of Judicature within any part of the British territories in India in which this Act shall be in force, unless the same is instituted within the period of limitation hereinafter made applicable to a suit of that nature, any Law or Regulation to the contrary notwithstanding. The territory upon which the said Act was made operative, is provided in Section XXIV as under:

"XXIV. This Act shall take effect throughout the Presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, including the Presidency Towns and the Straits Settlements; but shall not take effect in any Non-Regulation Province or place until the same shall be extended thereto by public notification by the Governor-General in Council or by the Local Government to which such Province or place is subordinate. Whenever this Act shall be extended to any Non-Regulation Province or place by the Governor-General in Council or by the Local Government to which such Province or place is subordinate, all suits which, within such Province or place, shall be pending at the date of such notification, or shall be instituted within the period of two years from the date thereof, shall be tried and determined as if this Act had not been passed; but all suits to which the provisions of this Act are applicable that shall be instituted within such Province or place after the expiration of the said period, shall be governed by this Act and by no other law of limitation, any Statute, Act, or Regulation now in force notwithstanding."

2177. Though Act No. XIV of 1859 was drafted in a language much more precise than the loose phraseology of earlier Regulations, but the Privy Council in The Delhi and London Bank Vs. Orchard, I.L.R. 3 (1876) Calcutta 47 (PC) observed it as an "inartistically drawn statute".

2178. Act IX of 1871 extended the scope and made provisions relating to limitation to suits, appeals and certain applications to Courts. It received the assent of Governor General on 24th March, 1871. Second Schedule, First Division, Articles 118, 143 and 145 provided limitation for possession of immovable property and read as under :

	Description of suit	Period of limitation	Time when period begins to run
118	Suit for which no period of	Six years	When the right to

	limitation is provided elsewhere in this schedule.		sue accrues.
143	For possession of immovable property when the plaintiff, while in possession of the property, has been dispossessed or has discontinued the possession.	Twelve years	The date of the dispossession or discontinuance.
145	For possession of immovable property or any interest therein not hereby otherwise specially provided for	Twelve years	When the possession of the defendant, or of some person through whom he claims, became adverse to the plaintiff.

2179. Some of the feature of Act IX of 1871 are:

(a) Section-3 defines term 'minor means a person who has not completed his age of eighteen years;

(b) Section-7 deals with legal disability, Section 9 provides continuous running of time, Sections 23 and 24 deals with continued cause of action or renewal of cause of action and 29 for the first time provides for extinction of rights of a person in respect to any land or hereditary office and read as under:

"7. If a person entitled to sue be, at the time the right to sue accrued, a minor, or insane, or an idiot, he may institute the suit within the same period after the disability has ceased, or (when he is at the time of the accrual affected by two disabilities) after both disabilities have ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time prescribed therefor in the third column of the second schedule hereto annexed. When this disability continues upto his death, his

representative in interest may institute the suit within the same period after the death as would otherwise have been allowed from the time prescribed therefor in the third column of the same schedule.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to extend, for more than three years from the cessation of the disabilities or the death of the person affected thereby, the period within which the suit must be brought"

" 9. When once time has begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability to sue stops it : Provided that where letters of administration to the stage of a creditor have been granted to his debtor, the running of the time prescribed for a suit to recover the debt shall be suspended while the administration continues."

"23. In the case of a suit for the breach of a contract*, where there are successive breaches, a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run, upon every fresh breach; and where the breach is a continuing breach, a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run, at every moment of the time during which the breach continues.*

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to suits for the breach of contracts for the payment of money by instalments, where, on default made in payment of one instalment, the whole becomes due."

"24. In the case of a continuing nuisance a fresh right to sue arises, and a fresh period of limitation begins to run at every moment of the time during which the nuisance continues."

"29. At the determination of the period hereby limited to any person for instituting a suit for possession of any land or hereditary office, his right to such land or office shall be extinguished*."*

2180. Drafting of this statute received better observation from Privy Council in Maharana Futtehsangji Vs. Dessai Kullianraiji, (1873) LR 1 IA 34 and it commented as a "more carefully drawn statute".

2181. The Act gave for the first time some recognition to the doctrine of prescription by the Legislative Council of India, viz. the doctrine of extinctive prescription as to land and hereditary offices, and of positive prescription as to easements. It lived short and was replaced by Act 15 of 1877 which extended the principle of extinctive prescription to movable property and the principle of positive or acquisitive prescription to profits a prendre.

2182. The Law of Prescription prescribes the period at the expiry of which not only the judicial remedy is barred but a substantive right is acquired or extinguished. A prescription by which a right is acquired, is called an "acquisitive prescription". A prescription by which a right is extinguished is called "extinctive prescription". The distinction between the two is not of much practical importance or substance. The extinction of right of one party is often the mode of acquiring it by another. The right extinguished is virtually transferred to the person who claims it by prescription. Prescription implies with the thing prescribed for is the property of another and that it is enjoyed adversely to that other. In this respect it must be distinguished from acquisition by mere occupation as in the case of res nullius. The acquisition in such cases does not depend upon occupation for any particular length of time.

2183. Doctrine of limitation and prescription is based upon the broad considerations. The first, there is a presumption that a right not exercised for a long time is non-existent. Where a person has not been in possession of a particular property for a long time, the presumption is that he is not the owner thereof. The reason is that owners are usually possessors and possessors are usually owners. Possession being normally evidence of ownership. The longer the possession has continued the greater is its evidentiary value. The legislature it appears, therefore, thought it proper to confer upon such evidence of possession for a particular time a conclusive force. Lapse of time is recognised as creative and destructive of right instead of merely an evidence for and against their existence. The other consideration on which the doctrine of limitation and prescription may be said to be based is that title to property and matters of right in general should not be in a state of constant uncertainty, doubt and suspense. It would not be in the interest of public at large. The object of the statute of limitation is preventive and not creative but in a matter covered by the principle of adverse possession it also creates. It interposes a statutory bar after a certain period and gives a quietus to suits to enforce an existing right.

2184. Act XV of 1877 received the assent of Governor General on 19th July, 1877 and came into force on 1st October, 1877. Articles 120, 142 and 144 , Second Schedule-First Division of the said Act reads as under :

	Description of suit	Period of limitation	Time when period begins to run
120	Suit for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in this schedule.	Six years	When the right to sue accrues.

142	For possession of immovable property, when the plaintiff, while in possession of the property, has been dispossessed or has discontinued the possession.	Twelve years	The date of the dispossession or discontinuance.
144	For possession of immovable property or any interest therein not hereby otherwise specially provided for.	Twelve years	When the possession of the defendant becomes adverse to the plaintiff.

2185. Section 2 of Act XV of 1877 makes it very clear that the right to sue if already barred shall not revive by said enactment. It reads as follows:

> "2. All reference to the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, shall be read as if made to this Act; and nothing herein or in that Act contained shall be deemed to affect any title acquired, or to revive any right to sue barred, under that Act, or under any enactment, thereby repealed; and nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the Indian Contract Act, section 25."

2186. Section 4 makes it obligatory for the Court to dismiss a suit if presented after the expiry of the period of limitation. Section 7 deals with the legal disability which is virtually pari materia with the earlier provision of 1871 Act though slightly worded differently and says:

> "7. If a person entitled to institute a suit or make an application be, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned. A minor, or insane, or an idiot, he may institute the suit or make the application within the same period, after the disability has ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time prescribed

therefor in the third column of the second schedule hereto annexed.

When he is, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, affected by two such disabilities, or when, before his disability has ceased, he is affected by another disability, he may institute the suit or make the application within the same period after both disabilities have ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

When his disability continues up to his death, his legal representative may institute the suit or make the application within the same period after the death as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

When such representative is at the date of the death affected by any such disability, the rules contained in the first two paragraphs of this section shall apply.

Nothing in this section applies to suits to enforce rights of pre-emption, or shall be deemed to extend, for more than three years from the cessation of the disability or the death of the person affected thereby, the period within which any suit must be instituted or application made."

2187. Section 9 talks of continuous running of time, Section 23 deals with the continuing breach of contract and Section 28 talks of extension of right to property and say:

"9. When once time has begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability to sue stops it:

Provided that, where letters of administration to the estate of a creditor have been granted to his debtor, the running of the time prescribed for a suit to recover the debt

www.vadaprativada.com

shall be suspended while the administration continues."

"23. In the case of a continuing breach of contract and in the case of a continuing wrong independent of contract, a fresh period of limitation begins to run at every moment of the time during which the breach or the wrong, as the case may be, continues."

"28. At the determination of the period hereby limited to any person for instituting a suit for possession of any property, his right to such property shall be extinguished."

2188. There were several amendments in the above statute and ultimately it was repealed and replaced by Act 9 of 1908.

2189. L.A. 1908 came into force on 1st January, 1909. It continued with the provision imposing obligation upon the Court to dismiss a suit if, while it is instituted, is already barred by limitation vide Section 23.

www.vadaprativada.com

2190. The arrangement of above Articles 120, 142 and 144 in L.A. 1908 remained the same, i.e., Articles 120, 142 and 144 and is verbatim:

	Description of suit	Period of limitation	Time when period begins to run
120	Suit for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in this schedule	Six years	When the right to sue occurs.
142	For possession of immovable property when the plaintiff, while in possession of the property, has been dispossessed or has discontinued the possession.	Twelve years	The date of the dispossession or discontinuance.
144	For possession of immovable property or any interest therein not hereby otherwise specially	Twelve years	When the possession of the defendant becomes

	provided for.		adverse to the plaintiff.

2191. The doctrine of limitation is founded on considerations of public policy and expediency. It does not give a right where there exist none, but to impose a bar after a certain period to the remedy for enforcing an existing right. The object is to compel litigants to be diligent for seeking remedies in Courts of law if there is any infringement of their right and to prevent and prohibit stale claims. It fixes a life span for remedy for redressal of the legal injury, if suffered, but not to continue such remedy for an immemorial length of time. Rules of limitation do not destroy the right of the parties and do not create substantive rights if none exist already. However, there is one exception i.e. Section 28 of L.A. 1908, which provides that at the determination of the period prescribed for instituting suit for possession of any property, his right to such property shall stand extinguished and the person in possession, after expiry of the such period, will stand conferred title. The law of limitation is enshrined in the maxim "interest reipublicae ut sit finis litium" (it is for the general welfare that a period be part to litigation).

2191A. This statute is based upon two broad principles. First, there is a presumption that a right not exercised for a long time is non existent. Where a person has not been in possession of a particular property for a long time, the presumption is that he is not the owner thereof. The owners are usually possessors and possessors are usually owners. Possession thus being normally evidence of ownership. Longer the possession has continued the greater is its evidentiary value. The law therefore has deemed it expedient to confer upon such

2192. In Motichand Vs. Munshi, AIR 1970 SC 898, the Court noticed the maxim vigilantibus non dormientibus jura subventiunt (the law assists the vigilant not those who sleep over their rights). Though there is a general principle ubi jus ibi remedium i.e. where there is a legal right there is also a remedy, but there are certain exceptions to this general rule.

2193. Mere expiry of limitation could have extinguished remedy but the principle embodied in Section 28 extinguishes the right also and thereby makes the said general principle inapplicable. Once the right of getting possession extinguished it cannot be revived by entering into possession again [See Salamat Raj Vs. Nur Mohamed Khan (1934) ILR 9 Lucknow 475; Ram Murti Vs. Puran Singh AIR 1963 Punjab 393; Nanhekhan Vs. Sanpat AIR 1954 Hyd 45 (FB) and Bailochan Karan Vs. Bansat Kumari Naik 1999 (2) SCC 310].

2194. In this matter the plaintiffs (Suit-4) have attempted to bring their case within the precinct of Article 142 and in the alternative Article 144 while the defendants intend to bulldoze the plaintiffs by stressing upon to apply Article 120. An attempt to out class the bar of limitation has also been made by pleading that the wrong is de-die indium, hence being a continuing wrong, no obstruction of limitation is there.

2195. Article 120 is completely a residuary provision and where limitation cannot be found in any other provision, only then it would be attracted. We can say safely that Article 120 L.A. 1908 would be attracted only when Articles 142 and 144 are inapplicable. We, therefore, at this stage defer to consider scope and extent of Article 120 so as to be discussed a bit later.

2196. Between the Articles 142 and 144 the later one is a kind of residuary provision while Article 142 applies in a specific type of case [See Sidram Lachmaya Vs. Mallaya Lingaya AIR (36) 1949 Bom. 137 (Para 9); Ranchordas Vandravandas Vs. Parvatibai 29 I.A. 71 (P.C.)].

2197. A Full Bench of this Court in Bindyachal Chand Vs. Ram Gharib, AIR 1934 Alld. 993 (FB) held where Article 142 is applicable, Article 144 cannot be applied. First it has to be seen whether Article 142 applies in the case or not and when it clearly becomes inapplicable only then resort can be taken to Article 144.

2198. Article 142 applies where the plaintiff while in possession has been dispossessed or has discontinued his possession. Where a person has been dispossessed or discontinued of his possession of the property, he can bring an action seeking restoration of possession of the immoveable property within 12 years. It pre-supposes the possession of such person over the immoveable property before he is dispossessed or discontinued. Article 144, however, applies where any other provision specifically providing for restoration of immoveable property or interest therein is not available and there also though the period of limitation is 12 years but the limitation runs from the date when the possession of the defendants becomes adverse to the plaintiff and commonly it is said that this provision is in respect to the cases where the defendant's possession is said to be adverse. Though the distinction is quite evident but in the complex nature of the society and the disputes which arise, at times the courts find difficulty in maintaining distinction between the two and there appears to be some conflicting views also as to the scope of Article 142 L.A. 1908 and its applicability. What has been ultimately realised is that the question would basically that of pleading.

2199. In reference to Articles 143 of Act 9 of 1871 the Privy Council in Bibi Sahodra Vs. Rai Jang Bahadur, (1881) 8 Cl. 224:8 I.A. 210 said:

> "refers to a suit for possession of immovable property, where the plaintiff, while in possession of the property, has been dispossessed or has discontinued the possession, and it allows twelve years from the date of the dispossession or discontinuance. But in order to bring the case under that head of the schedule, he must show that there has been a dispossession or discontinuance."

2200. The view, therefore, was that Article 143 of Act 9 of 1871 which is corresponding to Article 142 of Act 15 of 1877 and L.A. 1908 would not be attracted where pleadings distinctly show that there was no dispossession or discontinuance of possession of the plaintiff.

2201. In Karan Singh Vs. Bakar Ali Khan, (1882) 5 All 1 the question of application of Article 145 of Act 9 of 1871 (this corresponds to Article 144 of the statute with which we are concerned) arose. Sir Peacock observed that a suit can be brought within 12 years from the time when the possession of the defendant or of some persons through whom he claims, became adverse to the plaintiff.

2202. In both the type of cases what we find is that possession by itself is of much relevance and importance. The courts took the view that by reason of his possession a person may have an interest which can be sold or devised. One has to prove first his possession before making complaint of dispossession or discontinuance of possession. He need not prove the title or the capacity in which he had the possession for the purpose of Article 142. However, after title is proved, the presumption of possession goes with it unless proved otherwise.

2204. In Mohima Chundar Mazoomdar (supra) considering Article 142 of Act 15 of 1877, the Judicial Commissioner held that onus lies upon the plaintiffs to prove their possession prior to the time when they were dispossessed, and at sometime within twelve years before the commencement of the suit so as to save suit from limitation prescribed under Article 142.

2205. Articles 142 and 144 of Act XV of 1877 came up for consideration before the Judicial Commissioner in Nawab Muhammad Amanulla Khan (supra). It held that Article 142 applies where the plaintiff while in possession of the immovable property earlier had been dispossessed or has discontinued the possession and in such a case to bring a suit for possession, limitation would be 12 years. However, Article 144 applies only as to adverse possession where there is no other Article which specifically provides for the same. In the aforesaid case there was a refusal on the part of the plaintiffs and their ancestors to make the engagement for payment of revenue. The Government made engagement with the villagers (defendants). It was held that this amounted to dispossession or discontinuance of possession of the plaintiff within the meaning of Article 142 of Act 15 of 1877 and this case would not be governed by residuary Article 144 as to adverse possession.

2206. Explaining inter relationship of the two Articles Punjab Chief Court in Bazkhan Vs. Sultan Malik, 43 P.R. 1901 held that suit for possession of immoveable property upon discontinuance of possession or dispossession is barred after 12 years under Article 142 of the Limitation Act although no adverse possession is proved. Articles 144 and 142 cannot both apply. Article 144 in terms is applicable only when no other Article is found applicable.

2207. Privy Council in Dharani Kanta Lahiri Vs. Gabar Ali Khan, (1913) 18 I.C. 17 said:

> "it lay upon the plaintiffs to prove not only a title as against the defendants to the possession, but to prove that the plaintiffs had been dispossessed or had discontinued to be in possession of the lands within the 12 years immediately preceding the commencement of the suit."

www.vadaprativada.com

2208. In the above case a suit was filed for ejectment of persons who were admittedly in possession of land from which they were sought to be evicted.

2209. In Secretary of State Vs. Chelikani Rama Rao, (1916) 39 Mad. 617 Lord Shaw on page 631 of the report observed:

> "nothing is better settled than that the onus of establishing title to property by reason of possession for a certain requisite period lies upon the person asserting such possession. It is too late in the day to suggest the contrary of this proposition. If it were not correct it would be open to the possessor for a year or a day to say, 'I am here; be your title to the property ever so good, you cannot turn me out until you have demonstrated that the possession of myself and my predecessors was not long enough to fulfil

www.vadaprativada.com

all the legal conditions.' .....It would be contrary to all legal principles to permit the squatter to put the owner of the fundamental right to a negative proof upon the point of possession." (emphasis added)

2210. In Kanhaiya Lal Vs. Girwar, 1929 ALJ 1106 this Court said:

*"this article applies to suit in which the plaintiff claims possession of the property on the ground that while in possession he was dispossessed or his possession was discontinued by the defendant. In other words that article is restricted to cases in which the relief for possession sought by the plaintiff is based on what may be styled as possessory title."

"possession is in itself title and good against every body except the true owner. In short, there may be cases in which a person, though not the true owner, has been in peaceful possession of property and his possession is disturbed. In such cases the person dispossessed has a right to be restored back to possession on proving the fact of his possession and his dispossession or discontinuance of his possession by the defendant within a period of 12 years prior to the institution of the suit. To such cases Art. 142 applies."

2211. It thus appears that the Court followed the principles that the correct article to apply in cases based upon the allegation of title and possession is Article 144 because if plaintiff's title is proved he is entitled to succeed unless the defendants prove that the title has been lost on account of adverse possession on the part of defendants. But the plaintiff though not able to substantiate his title, is in a position to prove his possession and dispossession by defendants within 12 years, if that be the case, Article 142 will apply and the burden will lie on the plaintiff. This was in fact misunderstood in the sense that a suit of owner who also had actual possession, if dispossessed or discontinued possession was not treated to be covered by Article 142. This is evident in Kallan Vs. Mohammad Nabikhan, 1933 ALJ 105. Fortunately this mistake was soon realised and the view otherwise was overruled by a Full Bench in Bindyachal Chand Vs. Ram Gharib (supra) where it was held that Article 142 is not restricted to suits based on possessory title only as distinguished from suits in which plaintiff proved his proprietary title as well. This view of the Full Bench was followed by a Full Bench of Lahore High Court in Behari Lal Vs. Narain Das, 1935 Lah. 475.

2212. In Shyam Sunder Prasad (supra) in reference to Article 142 and 144 of L.A. 1908 the Apex Court said:

www.vadaprativada.com

> "Under the old Limitation Act, all suits for possession whether based on title or on the ground of previous possessions were governed by Article 142 wherein the plaintiff while in possession was dispossessed or discontinued in possession. Where the case was not one of dispossession of the plaintiff or discontinuance of possession by him, Article 142 did not apply. Suits based on title alone and not on possession or discontinuance of possession were governed by Article 144 unless they were specifically provided for by some other articles. Therefore, for application of Article 142, the suit is not only on the basis of title but also for possession."

2213. Thus, the judicial consensus now binding on this Court is to the effect that Article 142 is one of the specific provisions governing suits for possession of immoveable property and contemplates a suit for possession when the plaintiff, while in possession has been dispossessed or has discontinued possession [See also Abbas Dhali Masabdi Karikar, (1914) 24 I.C. 216 (Cal.)].

2214. Article 144 in the matter of an occasion for possession of immoveable property or an interest therein is a residuary Article hence the allegations made in the plaint if brings the suit within Article 142, there is no justification or occasion to take the matter out of that Article and then to apply Article 144. It is only when Article 142 is not applicable and no other article applies, based on the pleadings, then if attracted, Article 144 may be applied. Article 142 is neither subordinate nor subject to Article 144 but will have application on its own and independent. Article 144 thus is a kind of residuary article and will have application when no other article has application to the matter. In Bindyachal Chand (supra) Justice Mukharjee observed that if on the allegations made in the plaint suit falls within Article 142 there is no justification to take it out of Article 142 and attempt to bring Article 144 into picture.

2215. We may notice at this stage that the view taken by the Courts that Article 142 would apply to a suit by the owner of the property as well as a person suing on the basis of possessery titles and thereby seems to favour even a trespasser, as observed in Bindyachal Chand (supra) and some other Courts that its applicability to a suit is based on possessary title constitute one of the relevant aspect resulted in possibility of helping miscreants. This view, besides other, caused in a specific and clear provision in the new statute i.e. L.A. 1963 where words "or has discontinued the possession" were omitted in column 3 and the words “based on previous possession and not on title” were inserted in column 1 in Article 64 thereof.

2216. In C. Natarajan Vs. Ashim Bai (supra), the Apex Court noticed the distinction between Article 142 and 144 of LA 1908 and Article 64 and 65 of LA 1963 in para 15 of the judgment as under:

> “15. The law of limitation relating to the suit for possession has undergone a drastic change. In terms of Articles 142 and 144 of the Limitation Act, 1908, it was obligatory on the part of the plaintiff to aver and plead that he not only has title over the property but also has been in possession of the same for a period of more than 12 years. However, if the plaintiff has filed the suit claiming title over the suit property in terms of Articles 64 and 65 of the Limitation Act, 1963, burden would be on the defendant to prove that he has acquired title by adverse possession.”

What is Dispossession

2217. Article 142 contemplates earlier possession before dispossession or discontinuance thereof. This bring us to understand the term 'Possession'. It has a variety of meanings. It is a juristic concept distinct from title and can be independent of it. It is both physical and legal concept. The concept of possession implies “corpus possession” coupled with “animus possidendi”. Actual user without animus possidendi is not a possession in law. In fact, possession is a polymorphous term having different meanings in different context. It has different shades of meaning and very elastic in its connotation. We intend to discuss with the term “possession” in much detail while dealing with the issues “pertaining to possession/adverse possession” and hence do not intend to elaborate hereat. For the purpose of the plea of limitation, we shall confine ourselves to the pleadings and the evidences available to find out its consequence on the case whether the suit in question is saved from limitation or not.

2218. The pivotal point to attract Article 142 and to run limitation is the date of "dispossession" or "discontinuation of possession". The period of limitation thus would commence, in a case governed by Article 142, from the date the plaintiff is "dispossessed" or "discontinued". The two terms ex facie do not and cannot have the same meaning.

2219. The dictionary meaning of the term "dispossession" is:

(A) In "Mitra's Legal & Commercial Dictionary" 5th Edition (1990) by A.N. Saha, published by Eastern Law House Prv. Ltd., at pages 232-233:

> "Dispossession. The term 'dispossession' applies when a person comes in and drives out others from possession. It imports ouster; a driving out of possession against the will of the person in actual possession. This driving out cannot be said to have occurred when according to the case of the plaintiff the transfer of possession was voluntary, that is to say, not against the will of the person in possession but in accordance with his wishes and active consent. The term 'discontinuance' implies a voluntary act and abandonment of possession followed by the actual possession of another. Qadir Bux v. Ramchand AIR 1970 All 289.

The term has been held not to imply necessarily a wrongful act; and, although it has been defined as a wrong that carries with it the amotion of possession, an act whereby the wrongdoer gets the actual possession of the land or hereditament, including abatement, intrusion, disseisin, discontinuance, deforcement, it has been said that it may be by right or by wrong, that it is necessary to look at the intention in order to determine the character of the act, and that, in this respect, the word is to be distinguished from "disseisin."

Dispossession obviously presupposes previous possession of the person dispossessed. If a person was never in possession, he will be said to be out of possession, but he cannot be said to have ever been dispossessed."

2220. Similarly the meaning of term "discontinuance" in various dictionaries is as under:

voluntary or involuntary, and is similar to a dismissal, nonsuit, or nolle prosequi, but differs from a retraxit.

In a particular connection, it has been held that the term connotes a voluntary, affirmative, completed act, and that it cannot mean a temporary nonoccupancy of a building or a temporary cessation of a business.

The term may be employed as synonymous with "abandonment."

(F). In "Words and Phrases" Permanent Edition, Vol. 12A (1954), published by St. Paul, Minn. West Publishing Co., at pages 276-277:

"DISCONTINUANCE-A "discontinuance" of case is a gap or chasm in proceeding after suit is pending.

The term "discontinuance" means voluntary withdrawal of a suit by a plaintiff.

There exists no essential difference between a "discontinuance" and a "voluntary nonsuit."

A criminal suit may be discontinued, "discontinuance" being a gap or chasm in prosecution after suit is pending.

The word "discontinuance" is synonymous with "abandonment," and connotes a voluntary, affirmative, completed act.

The word "discontinuance" as it is used in the ordinance is synonymous with "abandonment". It connotes a voluntary, affirmative, completed act.

Word "discontinuance" as employed in deed of land from city to county providing in effect that property was deeded to county to be used for park purposes and that city reserved all right of reversion in event of discontinuance of property for park purposes was equivalent to abandonment.

Narrowing of street held not "discontinuance" within statute requiring written petition as basis for action by village board.

"Discontinuance," generally speaking, is failure to continue case regularly from day to day and from term to term from commencement of suit until final judgement.

The word "discontinue" as used in ordinance, providing that, if nonconforming use of premises was discontinued future use should be in conformity with ordinance, means something more than mere suspension, and did not mean temporary nonoccupancy of building or temporary cessation of business, but word "discontinuance" as used was synonymous with abandonment, and connoted voluntary affirmative completed act. Zoning ordinance did not destroy owner's right to continue nonconforming use of premises merely because tenant became insolvent."

Discontinuance is either voluntary, as where plaintiff withdraws his suit or involuntary, as where in consequence of some technical omission, mispleading, or the like, the suit is regarded as out of courts, A discontinuance means no more than a declaration of plaintiff's willingness to stop the pending action; it is neither as adjudication of his cause by the proper tribunal nor an acknowledgement by him that his claim is not will founded."

(H) In "Jowitt's Dictionary of English Law" Vol. 1 Second Edition-1977, Second Impression-1990, published by London Sweet & Maxwell Limited, at pages 621-622:

"Discontinuance, an interruption or breaking off. This happened when he who had an estate tail granted a larger estate of the land than by law he was entitled to do; in which case the estate was good so far as his power extended to make it, but no further (Finch L. 190;1 Co. Rep. 44).

Formerly, in the law of real property, discontinuance was where a man wrongfully alienated certain lands or tenements and dies, whereby the person entitled to them was deprived of his right of entry and was compelled to bring an action to recover them,. The term was specially applied to alienations by husbands seised jure uxoris, by exxlesiastics seised jure ecclesiae, and by tenants in tail: thus, if a tenant in tail alienated the land and died leaving issue, the issue could not enter on the land but was compelled to bring and action (Litt. 470, 592, 614; Co. Litt. 325A; Termes de la Ley; 3 Bl. Comm. 171).

The principal action appropriate to discontinuance were formedon, cui in vita, and cui ante divortium. The effect of discontinuance was taken away by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833, s. 39. See Miscontinuaunce; Recontinuance; Withdrawal.

In the procedure of the High Court discontinuance is where the plaintiff in an action voluntarily puts an end to it, either by giving notice in writing to the defendant not later than fourteen days after service of the defence (R.S.C. Ord. 21, r. 2(1)) or later with leave of the court (r.3). The effect of discontinuance is that the plaintiff has to pay the defendant's costs (R.S.C. Ord. 62, r. 10(1)) and any subsequent action may be stayed until these costs are paid (R.S.C. Ord. 21, r. 5). A defendant may withdraw his defence at any time and may discontinue a counterclaim by notice not later than fourteen days after service of a defence to the counterclaim (r. 2(2)). A counterclaim may be discontinued later by leave of the court (r.3). He must pay the costs of the plaintiff (R.S.C. Ord. 62, r. 5). If all the parties consent the action may be withdrawn without leave of the court (r.2(4)).

2221. The term "dispossession" and "discontinuance of possession" in Article 142, Act IX of 1908 came to be considered before the Calcutta High Court in Brojendra Kishore Roy Chowdhury (supra) and the Court held:

"Dispossession implies the coming in of a person and the driving out of another from possession. Discontinuance implies the going out of the person in possession and his being followed into possession by another."

2222. In Basant Kumar Roy (supra), the Court explained the term 'dispossession' in Article 142 of Limitation act of 1877:

"The Limitation Act, of 1877, does not define the term "dispossession", but its meaning is well settled. A man may cease to use his land because he cannot use it, since it is under water. He does not thereby discontinue his possession : constructively it continues until he is dispossessed; and, upon the cessation of the dispossession before the lapse of the statutory period, constructively it revives. "There can be no discontinuance by absence of use and enjoyment, when the land, is not capable of use and enjoyment", ... It seems to follow that there can be no continuance of adverse possession, when the land is not capable of use and enjoyment, so long as such adverse possession must rest on de facto use and occupation."

2223. The distinction between "dispossession" and "discontinuance" has been noticed in Gangu Bai Vs. Soni 1942 Nagpur Law Journal 99 observing that "dispossession" is not voluntary, "discontinuance" is. In dispossession, there is an element of force and adverseness while in the case of discontinuance, the person occupying may be an innocent person. For discontinuance of possession, the person in possession goes out and followed into possession by other person.

2224. In Agency Company Vs. Short, 1888 (13) AC 793 the Privy Council observed that there is discontinuance of adverse possession when possession has been abandoned. The reason for the said observation finds mention on page 798 that there is no one against whom rightful owner can bring his action. The adverse possession cannot commence without actual possession and this would furnish cause of action.

2225. Dispossession is a question of fact. The term refers to averments in the plaint exclusively and cannot be construed as referring to averments in the plaint in the first instance and at a later stage to the finding on the evidence. The indicias of discontinuance are also similar to some extent. It implies going out of the person in possession and is being followed into possession by another. In Abdul Latif Vs. Nawab Khwaja Habibullah 1969 Calcutta Law Journal 28, the Court observed that discontinuance connotes three elements i.e. actual withdrawal, with an intention to abandon, and another stepping in after the withdrawal. Same is the view taken by this Court and Kerala High Court in Qadir Bux Vs. Ram Chandra AIR 1970 Alld. 289 (FB) and Pappy Amma Vs. Prabhakaran Nair AIR 1972 Kerala 1 (FB).

2226. In order to wriggle out of the limitation prescribed under Article 142 of the Limitation Act, it has to be shown by the plaintiff that he was in possession of the disputed land, within 12 years of the suit and has been dispossessed, as observed by the Apex Court in Sukhdev Singh Vs. Maharaja Bahadur of Gidhaur (supra).

2227. In Wahid Ali & another Vs. Mahboob Ali Khan AIR 1935 Oudh 425, referring to Article 142 of Limitation Act, 1908 the Court held where the plaintiff or the Muslim community whom they represent were dispossessed from the land in question belonging to the graveyard by the erection of a house thereon and the suit is filed after 12 years therefrom, it would be barred by Article 142 of the Limitation Act.

2228. In R.H.Bhutani Vs. Miss Mani J. Desai AIR 1968 SC 1444, the Court said that dispossession means to be out of possession, removed from the premises, ousted, ejected or excluded. It applies when a person comes in and drives out others in possession.

2229. In Shivagonda Subraigonda Patil Vs. Rudragonda

www.vadaprativada.com

Bhimagonda Patil 1969 (3) SCC 211, the Court held that dispossession for the purpose of this Article must be by the defendant and that must be the basis of the suit. If there is no dispossession by the defendant, this Article would have no application. The dispossession, therefore, implies taking possession without consent of the person in possession and is a wrong to the person in possession. It must result in termination of possession of the person in possession earlier.

2230. Application of Article 142 and 144 of L.A. 1908 was considered in Jamal Uddin and (supra) and in para 29 the Court said:

> "29. The next point that was urged by the counsel for the appellants was that the courts below committed a legal error in applying Art. 144 of the Limitation Act, 1908, to the suit and placing the burden on the defendants to prove their adverse possession for more than twelve years, while the suit on the allegations contained in the plaint clearly fell within the ambit of Art. 142 and the burden was on the plaintiffs to prove their possession within twelve years. This contention also is quite correct. It was clearly alleged by the plaintiffs that they had been dispossessed by the contesting defendants before the filing of the suit. As such, the suit would be governed by Article 142 and the residuary Article 144 will have no application. The courts below have unnecessarily imported into their discussion the requirements of adverse possession and wrongly placed the burden on the defendant to prove those requirements. Now the trial Court has approached the evidence produced by the parties would be evident from the following observation contained in its judgment.

"The onus of proving adverse possession over the disputed land lies heavily upon the defendants and their possession has to be proved beyond doubt to be notorious, exclusive, openly hostile and to the knowledge of the true owner as laid down in AIR 1938 Mad 454."

After a consideration of the documentary and oral evidence produced by the defendants to prove their possession the trial Court has opined that the document on record do not prove the title and possession of the defendants to the hilt in respect of the disputed land. So far as the plaintiffs' evidence is concerned it was disposed of by the trial Court with the following observations:

". . . . .No doubt, the oral evidence of the plaintiffs about the use of the land for saying the prayers of 'Janaze Ki namaz' and about the letting out of the land in suit for purposes of 'D or Sootana' is equally shaky and inconsistent. But as already pointed out above the plaintiffs have succeeded in proving their title over the disputed land and as such possession would go with the ownership of the land. The defendants cannot be allowed to take advantage of the plaintiffs foulty evidence and it was for them to prove beyond any shadow of doubt that they were actually in possession over the disputed land as owners and that they exercised this right openly hostile to the plaintiffs with the latter's knowledge. Judged in this context, the evidence of the defendant falls short of this requirement."

2231. The learned counsel for the Pro-Mosque parties as well as Nirmohi Akhara sought to argue that since the property in dispute was attached by the Magistrate under Section 145 Cr.P.C. and this attachment continued, the question of

dispossession by an individual private party as such may not arise or is of no consequence. The Magistrate was not handing over possession to the rightful owner, it gave a (fresh) cause of action, which was continuing and hence Articles 142 or 144 or even 120 need not be gone into in these cases.

2232. This requires us to have a bird eye view not only of Section 145 Cr.P.C., its connotation, implication, scope and consequences in the matter. What is evident from record is that the property in dispute, as specified in Suit-4, was not in its entirety placed under attachment.

2233. The case of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) is that in the night of 22nd/23rd December, 1949 some Hindu people surreptitiously placed the idols inside the disputed building under the central dome and thereby interferred and obstructed the right of worship of the Muslim parties. It is admitted by almost all the witnesses of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) that on and after 23rd December 1949, no Muslim has entered the disputed premises and no Namaz has been offered therein. In fact, this is what has been the case set out by the plaintiffs, as is evident from para 11 of the plaint, which reads as under:

2234. The possession of the parties of the inner courtyard thereafter was disturbed inasmuch on 29th December, 1949, the City Magistrate passed an order under section 145 Cr.P.C. attaching the property due to apprehension of breach of peace and appointed Receiver giving in his possession a part of the disputed property, i.e., the inner courtyard which, in fact, was taken in charge by Receiver, Priya Dutt, on 5th January, 1950.

2235. Nirmohi Akhara has claimed that the possession of the outer courtyard remained with them, as it was earlier, till 1982, when in some other suit between the people of Nirmohi Akhara, the same was also attached and placed in the hands of a Receiver. It has also been said that infact the same Receiver was given charge, who was already having the charge of the premises in the inner courtyard. These facts we find have not been disputed by any of the parties and in fact there is nothing on record to contradict it.

2237. Section 145 Cr.P.C., 1898, as it stood then, i.e., prior to its amendment by Amendment Act, 1955, was as under:

> "145. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, Sub-Divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from a police report or other information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning any land or water or the boundaries thereof, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he shall make an order in writing, stating the grounds of his being so satisfied, and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court in person or by pleader, within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate, and to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute.
> (2) For the purposes of this section the expression "land or water" includes building, markets, fisheries, crops or other produce of land, and the rents or profits of any such property.

www.vadaprativada.com

(3) A copy of the order shall be served in manner provided by this Code for the service of a summons upon such person or persons as the Magistrate may direct, and at least one copy shall be published by being affixed to some conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute.

(4) The Magistrate shall then, without reference to the merits or the claims of any of such parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute, peruse the statements so put in, hear the parties, receive all such evidence as may be produced by them respectively, consider the effect of such evidence, take such further evidence (if any) as he thinks necessary, and, if possible, decide whether any and which of the parties was at the date of the order before mentioned in such possession of the said subject:

Provided that, if it appears to the Magistrate that any party has within two months next before the date of such order been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed, he may treat the party so dispossessed as if he had been in possession at such date:

Provided also, that if the Magistrate considers the case one of emergency, he may at any time attach the subject of dispute, pending his decision under this section.

(5) Nothing in this section shall preclude any party so required to attend, or any other person interested, from showing that no such dispute as aforesaid exists or has existed; and in such case the Magistrate shall cancel his said order, and all further proceedings thereon shall be stayed, but subject to such cancellation, the order of the Magistrate under sub-section (1) shall be final.

(6) If the Magistrate decides that one of the parties

was or should under the second proviso to sub-section (4) be treated as being in such possession of the said subject, he shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law, and forbidding all disturbance of such possession until such eviction and when he proceeds under the second proviso to sub-section (4), may restore to possession the party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed.

(7) When any party to any such proceeding dies, the Magistrate may cause the legal representative of the deceased party to be made a party to the proceeding and shall thereupon continue the inquiry, and if any question arises as to who the legal representative of a deceased party for the purpose of such proceeding is, all persons claiming to be representatives of the deceased party shall be made parties thereto.

(8) If the Magistrate is of opinion that any crop or other produce of the property, the subject of dispute in a proceeding under this section pending before him, is subject to speedy and natural decay, he may make an order for the proper custody or sale of such property, and, upon the completion of the inquiry, shall make such order for the disposal of such property, or the sale-proceeds thereof, as he thinks fit.

(9) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, at any stage of the proceedings under this section, on the application of either party, issue a summons to any witness directing him to attend or to produce any document or thing.

(10) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to be in derogation of the powers of the Magistrate to proceed

2238. The nature of the proceedings under Section 145 Cr.P.C. are not judicial. The Magistrate is not supposed to deal with the matter as if it is a Civil Suit. A party to a proceeding under Section 145 is not in a position of a plaintiff in a Civil Suit who has set the Court in motion and has a right to require a decision upon the questions raised by him.

2239. Privy Council in Dinomoni Chowdhrani & Brojo Mohini Chowdhrani 29 IA 24 (PC) observed that the proceedings under Section 145 do not constitute a trial and are not in the nature of a trial. They are in the nature police proceedings in order to prevent the commission of offence. The nature of the proceedings under Section 145 Cr.P.C. has been described in different terms like quasi-civil (Bande Ali Vs. Rejaullah 25 Cr.L.J. 303), quasi-executive (Madho Kunbi Vs. Tilak Singh AIR 1934 Nagpur 194), quasi-judicial (Muhammad Araf Vs. Satramdas Sakhimal & others AIR 1936 Sind 143), quasi-criminal (K.S. Prahladsinhji Vs. Chunilal B. Desai AIR 1950 Saurashtra 7).

2240. The object of section is merely to prevent breach of peace by maintaining one or the other of the parties in possession and where it is not possible to place any of the parties in possession, to appoint Receiver and to take the property in the custody of the Court, i.e., custodia legis. These proceedings are not to protect or maintain any body in possession (Musammat Phutania Vs. Emperor 25 Cr.L.J. 1109).

2241. In Doulat Koer Vs. Rameshwari Koeri alias Dulin Saheba (1899) ILR 26 Cal. 635, the Court said that this Section is to enable a Magistrate to intervene and pass a temporary order

in respect to the possession of the property in dispute having effect until the actual right of one of the parties is determined by any competent Court in more lengthy proceedings. In order to attract proceedings under Section 145, Lahore High Court in Agha Turab Ali Khan Vs. Shromani Gurdwara Parbandhak Committee AIR 1933 Lahore 145 has said that the power or competency of the Magistrate to interfere depends on the very fact that the possession of the land is in dispute. The dispute means actual disagreement, struggle, scramble or quarrel for possession of the land existent between the disputants at the time of proceedings with reference to the merits of their respective claim to possess the land. It is nobody's case that such proceedings were not initiated or that the same were initiated wrongly or that the procedure prescribed thereof under the statute was not followed.

www.vadaprativada.com

2242. The order dated 29.12.1949 is a preliminary order referable to Section 145 Sub-section (1) read with Sub-section (4) second proviso. It is an admitted position by all the parties that the Receiver appointed by Magistrate took the possession of the property and such possession continued till it was replaced by the statutory Receiver under the Act of 1993. It is pointed out that when a Receiver is appointed by the Court, his possession is the possession of the Court. He is Officer through whom the Court exercises its power of management. Such an officer cannot be correctly described as party interested in the dispute likely to cause a breach of peace. No final order in the case in hand could be passed by the Magistrate. It appears that on 16.1.1950 an injunction order was passed by the Civil Judge in Suit-1. The aforesaid order was modified on 19.1.1950 and the modified order was confirmed by the Civil Judge as well as this

www.vadaprativada.com

2243. Despite filing of the civil suit and injunction order passed therein, the City Magistrate could not drop the proceedings and passed an order for deferring the said proceedings. Sri Jilani & Siddiqui, learned counsels for the plaintiffs have castigated the said approach of the Magistrate stating that he ought to have passed final order in one or the other manner or should have dropped the proceedings but by keeping the matter pending, parties were left in lurch, and therefore, for such a situation created by City Magistrate, the plaintiffs' suit cannot be held barred by limitation and it should be deemed that every order passed by the City Magistrate resulted in a fresh cause of action for filing civil suit by the plaintiffs.

2244. We however, find it difficult to agree. From perusal of injunction order passed by the Civil Court, we find that on 16th January, 1950 a simple order, in terms of the prayer made in the interim injunction application, was passed directing the parties to maintain status quo. Thereafter on 19th January, 1950, the order was modified but the Civil Court did not appoint a Receiver of its own and also did not direct the City Magistrate to get the possession transferred to any other person or another Receiver of the Court instead of the Receiver appointed by the Magistrate. On the contrary, in Suit-1, the City Magistrate was also impleaded as one of the defendant and the Civil Court passed an order directing the defendants to maintain status quo. It also clarified that the Sewa, Puja as was going on, shall continue. Quite visible, the Magistrate could not have ignored this order by dropping the proceedings as that would have resulted in discharge of Receiver and release of the property

attached and placed in his charge. In other words, it could have construed by the Civil Judge as an order disobeying the order of statue quo. Had the Civil Judge passed an order appointing a Court's Receiver and directing the Magistrate to hand over possession of the property to him, the position might have been different. In these circumstances, if the Magistrate did not drop the proceedings but deferred it, we find no fault on his part. Moreover, when the earlier order of the Magistrate, attaching the property and placing it in the charge of Receiver, could not have resulted in giving a cause of action to the plaintiffs to file suit, we fail to understand as to how the subsequent order, which merely deferred the pending proceedings, would lend any help. The order of attachment passed by the Magistrate itself does not give a cause of action and on the contrary it only makes the things known to the party that there appears to be some dispute about the title and/or possession of the property concerned and also there is apprehension of disturbance of public peace and order. The cause of action virtually is known to the party that there exists some dispute and not the order of the Magistrate whereby he attached the property in question and placed it in the charge of the Receiver.

2245. We find that in the context of Section 145 Cr.P.C., 1973, a three-Judge Bench of the Apex Court in Amresh Tiwari Vs. Lalta Prasad Dubey & another 2000 (4) SCC 440 following an earlier decision in Ram Sumer Puri Mahant Vs. State of U.P. and others 1985 (1) SCC 427 said:

> "12. The question then is whether there is any infirmity in the order of the S.D.M. dicontinuing the proceedings under Section 145 Criminal Procedure Code. The law on this subject-matter has been settled by the decision of this Court in the case of Ram Sumer Puri Mahant v. State of U.P., reported in, (1985) 1 SCC 427 : (AIR 1985 SC 472 : 1985 Cri LJ 752). In this case it has been held as follows:

> "When a civil litigation is pending for the property wherein the question of possession is involved and has been adjudicated, we see hardly any justification for initiating a parallel criminal proceeding under Section 145 of the Code. There is no scope to doubt or dispute the position that the decree of the civil court is binding on the criminal Court in a matter like the one before us. Counsel for respondents 2-5 was not in a position to challenge the proposition that parallel proceedings should not be permitted to continue and in the event of a decree of the civil Court, the Criminal Court should not be allowed to invoke its jurisdiction particularly when possession is being examined by the civil court and parties are in a position to approach the Civil Court for interim orders such as injunction or appointment of receiver for adequate protection of the property during pendency of the dispute. Multiplicity of litigation is not in the interest of the parties nor should public time be allowed to be wasted over meaningless litigation. We are, therefore, satisfied that parallel proceedings should not continue."

13. We are unable to accept the submission that the principles laid down in Ram Sumers case (AIR 1985 SC 472 : 1985 Cri LJ 752) would only apply if the civil Court has already adjudicated on the dispute regarding the property and given a finding. In our view Ram

Sumers case is laying down that multiplicity of litigation should be avoided as it is not in the interest of the parties and public time would be wasted over meaningless litigation. On this principle it has been held that when possession is being examined by the civil Court and parties are in a position to approach the civil Court for adequate protection of the property during the pendency of the dispute, the parallel proceedings i.e. Section 145 proceedings should not continue.

14. Reliance has been placed on the case of Jhummamal alias Devandas v. State of Madhya Pradesh reported in, (1988) 4 SCC 452 : (AIR 1988 SC 1973 : 1989 Cri LJ 82). It is submitted that this authority lays down that merely because a civil suit is pending does not mean that proceedings under Section 145, Criminal Procedure Code should be set at naught. In our view this authority does not lay down any such broad proposition. In this case the proceedings under Section 145, Criminal Procedure Code had resulted in a concluded order. Thereafter the party, who had lost, filed civil proceedings. After filing the civil proceedings he prayed that the final order passed in the Section 145 proceedings be quashed. It is in that context that this Court held that merely because a civil suit had been filed did not mean that the concluded order under Section 145 Criminal Procedure Code should be quashed. This is entirely a different situation. In this case the civil suit had been filed first. An Order of status quo had already been passed by the competent civil Court. Thereafter Section 145 proceedings were commenced. No final order had been passed in the proceedings under Section 145. In our view on the facts of the present case the ratio laid down in Ram Sumers case (AIR 1985 SC 472 : 1985 Cri LJ 752) (supra) fully applies. We clarify that we are not stating that in every case where a civil suit is filed. Section 145 proceedings woud never lie. It is only in cases where civil suit is for possession or for declaration of title in respect of the same property and where reliefs regarding protection of the property concerned can be applied for and granted by the civil Court that proceedings under Section 145 should not be allowed to continue. This is because the civil court is competent to decide the question of title as well as possession between the parties and the orders of the civil Court would be binding on the Magistrate*."*

2246. In Sadhuram Bansal Vs. Pulin Behari Sarkar and others 1984 (3) SCC 410, a three-Judge Bench of theApex Court observed in para 62, that the pendency of the proceeding under Section 145 Cr.P.C. and order, if any, passed thereon does not in any way affect the title of the parties to the disputed premises though it reflects the factum of possession. It followed an earlier decision in Bhinka and others Vs. Charan Singh (supra).

2247. The provision as existed in Cr.P.C. in 1989 before its amendment in 1955 though went under some change in 1955, but it appears that under the new Cr.P.C., 1973 Section 145 is virtually same as was before 1955 amendment. This has been noticed by the Apex Court in Mathura Lal Vs. Bhanwar Lal and another 1979 (4) SCC 665 as under:

"The provisions of Sections 145 and 146 of the 1973 Code are substantially the same as the corresponding provisions before the 1955 amendment. The only noticeable change is that the second proviso to Section 145 (4) (as it stood before the 1955 amendment) has now been transposed to Section 146 but without the words "pending his decision under this Section" and with the words "at any time after making the order under Section 145(1)" super-added. The change, clearly, is in the interests of convenient draftsmanship. ..."

2248. The above discussion, in our view, would show that the proceedings under Section 145 Cr.P.C. and the orders passed therein would not help the plaintiffs in the matter of limitation particularly when it is virtually admitted in the plaint that they discontinued with possession at least from 23rd December, 1949. It is their own version and this disturbance is on account of a title dispute of the property in question. Moreover, all the plaintiffs do not claim themselves to be the owner of the property in question or the legal custodian thereof. None of the plaintiffs is claimed to be Mutwalli of the alleged waqf. It is only a Mutwalli of a waqf who can claim possession of the property in question according to Islamic Law. However, no such person is before us seeking the relief of possession or to seek a declaration in his capacity as Mutwalli. Plaintiffs No.1 Sunni Central Waqf Board is a supervisory controlling body of the Sunni Waqfs in the State of U.P. but on its own has no power to claim possession or custody of any waqf. At least no such provision has been shown. The other individual plaintiffs claimed themselves to be the worshippers i.e. the beneficiaries of the alleged waqf. If there is any obstruction in the right of worship of an individual, he can come to the Court for protection of such right of worship but cannot claim possession of such property since he is neither owner nor legal custodian of the property. Similarly, right of worshipper is confined for the period the subject matter is in existence and vanishes as soon as the right of the owner or that of legal custodian goes or the subject matter disappears, as observed in the case of Masjid Shahid Ganj (Supra).

2249. Had it been a suit for a mere injunction for protection of right of worship, something might have been said, but no such relief has been sought by the plaintiffs in the case in hand and we cannot read a prayer which is neither incidental nor otherwise connected but totally different to the real prayer made in the suit. The effect of the property being attached by the Magistrate shall neither result in extension of limitation for the plaintiffs nor in exclusion of certain period for the purpose of limitation to some extent or to the extent of the period the property remained under attachment or in any other manner.

2250. We may consider whether the effect of the property being attached by the Magistrate will give any benefit to the plaintiffs either for extension of limitation or for excluding some period for the purpose of limitation to some extent or to the extent the property remained under attachment or in any other manner can help.

2251. Where one person claims to be in possession to the exclusion of others and alleges that some other person seeks unlawfully or by force to interfere with his possession and if it is likely to lead to a breach of peace, it will be justifiable and necessary for a Magistrate to take action under Section 145(1) Cr.P.C., (in the present case Cr.P.C. of 1898). Such an order passed is only a police order and in no sense is a final one. The possession contemplated under Section 145 is actual physical

possession on the subject matter. The possession, so taken over by Receiver, appointed by a criminal Court after attachment, merely passes the property into custodia legis and is not dispossession within the meaning of Article 142 of L.A. 1908, as observed in Pappy Amma (supra). The legal possession of the land attached, for the purpose of limitation, will be constructively with the person who was entitled to the property on the date of attachment. Magistrate cannot be regarded as having dispossessed either party and he cannot legally be made a party to the suit of either of the claimants.

2252. It is submitted that since no final order has been passed by the Magistrate so far, there is no question of limitation applying in this case and, therefore, it cannot be pleaded that the suit is barred by limitation under any of the provisions of L.A. 1908. Article 142 and 144 would not apply. Let us examine the legal position when the property is attached.

2253. The possession of the part of the property (the inner courtyard of the disputed premises) was placed with a Receiver by an order of City Magistrate passed under section 145 Cr.P.C.. At the time when the suit was filed the possession was not with any adversary but in the hands of a statutory authority who has been held to possess the property on behalf of real owner.

2254. In Everest Coal Company Pvt. Ltd. Vs. State of Bihar and others, 1978 (1) SCC 12 though in a different context, expressing its opinion on the status/capacity of receiver appointed by the Court, the Apex Court said, "when a court puts receiver in possession of a property, the property comes under court's custody, the receiver being merely an officer/agent of the Court." It further says that "receiver represents neither party being an officer of the Court."

www.vadaprativada.com

2255. In Rajah of Venkatagiri Vs. Isakapalli Subbiah & others (supra), the Madras High Court held, if a suit is filed for declaration of title to immovable property, Article 142 of the Second Schedule to Act XV of 1877 would not be attracted. But where a suit for possession is filed by a person who was earlier in possession and was dispossessed or discontinued of possession, it would be governed by Article 142. However, it was further clarified where the property has been attached by a Magistrate under Section 145, Article 142 will not be attracted since the Magistrate cannot be regarded as having dispossessed either parties or that has discontinued possession thereof. The Nature of attachment by Magistrate vis-a-vis possession of the property is explained as under :

> "Under section 146, Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate is bound to continue the attachment and have statutory possession of the lands for purposes of continuing the attachment until a competent Civil Court determines the rights of the parties to the dispute before him or the person entitled to the possession of the lands and he cannot deliver the property to any of the parties or other person without an adjudication by a Civil Court. During the continuance of the attachment, the legal possession for purposes of limitation will constructively be in the person who had the title at the date of the attachment and such title cannot be extinguished by the operation of section 28 of the Limitation Act, however, long such attachment may continue."

2256. The Court also held that to commence limitation or whether a cause of action is a continuing one, the criteria would be "whether the wrong is a continuing one" and not "whether

www.vadaprativada.com

the right is a continuing one". It reiterated the view that attachment of property does not amount to either dispossession

www.vadaprativada.com

of owner or discontinuance of his possession.

2257. In Yeknath Vs. Bahia (supra) the Nagpur High Court said where the property in dispute has been attached by Magistrate under Section 146 Cr.P.C., the right to sue accrued when the attachment was made and the limitation would begin to run under Section 23 after the date of attachment by the Magistrate. The Court said:

> ". . . . . what led the Magistrate to take possession is that it was either his inability to decide who was in actual possession or his decision that neither party was in possession. Neither of these can be said to be a wrong by the defendant. . . . . In the circumstances of these cases it is the attachment by the Magistrate and not any wrongful act of the defendants that gave rise to the right to sue and the right accrued when the attachment was made. In this view no fresh period of limitation began to run under S. 23 of the Limitation Act after the date of the attachment by the Magistrate in 1908." (page 236)

2258. In Abinash Ch. Chowdhury Vs. Tarini Charan Chowdhury and others (supra) the Calcutta High Court said:

> "In the case of Ismail Ghani Ammal Vs. Katima Rowther, (1912) 22 MLJ 154 the Madras High Court, in dealing with a case in which a Receiver had been appointed prior to the institution of proceedings under S. 145, Criminal P.C., held that the possession of the Receiver may, for the purpose of S. 145, Criminal P.C., be properly regarded as possession on behalf of the party who should be ultimately found by the Magistrate to be in possession immediately before the date of his appointment, as, for the purpose of limitation, the possession of the Receiver is held to be the possession of the party entitled to possession. . . . . In the case of Rajah of Venkatagiri Vs. Isakapalli Subbiah, (1903) 26 Mad 410 it was held that an attachment under S. 146, Criminal P.C., operated in law for purposes of limitation, simply as a detention of custody, pending the decision by a civil Court, on behalf of the party entitled, and for such purposes the seisin or legal possession was, during the attachment, in the true owner. It was observed that:

such attachment operates in law for the purposes of limitation simply as detention or custody of the property by the Magistrate, who, pending the decision by a civil Court of competent jurisdiction, holds it merely on behalf of the party entitled, whether he be one of the actual parties to the dispute before him or any other person. For the purposes of limitation the seisin or legal possession will, during the attachment, be in the true owner and the attachment by the Magistrate will not amount to dispossession of the owner or to his discontinuing possession." (page 784)

In Brojendra Vs. Bharat Chandra, AIR 1916 Cal 751, it was held that during an attachment under S. 146, Criminal P.C., the seisin or legal possession is in the true owner and that the attachment does not amount to either dispossession of the owner or the discontinuance of his possession. The learned Judges in that case relied for their conclusion upon the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Khagendra Narain Chowdhury Vs. Matangini Debi, (1890) 17 Cal 814 in which the attachment under the 530th and 531st section of the Code of 1872 was considered as placing the Government really in the position of stakeholders, the decision in the case of Ramaswami Vs. Muthusamy, (1907) 30 Mad 12, to which reference has already been made, the decision in the case of Beni Prasad Vs. Shahjada, (1905) 32 Cal 856, in which the possession of the Magistrate after attachment under S. 146 was held to be one on behalf of such of the rival parties as might establish a right to possession on their own account and the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Karan Singh Vs. Bakar Ali Khan, (1882) 5 All 1 in which the possession of the Government in the Revenue Department of land which had been attached by the Collector to secure payment of revenue which has been endangered in consequence of disputes relating thereto was considered to be possession not adverse to the owner though the Collector had subsequently paid over the surplus proceeds of the estate to a stranger. Reliance also was placed in that decision upon the principles deducible from the decisions of the Judicial Committee in the case of Trustees and Agency Company Vs. Short, (1888) 13 AC 798 and Secretary of State Vs. Krishna Mani Gupta, (1902) 29 Cal 518 and the observations of Baron Parke in Smith Vs. Lloyd, (1854) 9 Ex 562. The same view was taken of the effect of an attachment under S. 146, Criminal P.C. In a later decision of this Court in the case of Sarat Chandra Maiti Vs. Bibhabati Debi, AIR 1921 Cal 584, in which it was observed that the authority of the decision in the case of Deonarain Vs. Webb, (1900) 28 Cal 86 in which the plaintiff had been dispossessed from his raiyati lands and subsequent to such dispossession there was an attachment under S. 146, Criminal P.C., and it was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to have a fresh start of limitation from the date of the attachment, as he had already been dispossessed before that date, must be considered as shaken by the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Secretary of State Vs. Krishna Mani, (1902) 29 Cal 518. The intervention of public authorities for the preservation of peace was considered as operating in the same way as the vis major of floods and by analogy it was held that the constructive possession of the land after such intervention remains, if anywhere, in the true owner." (Page 784-785)

"The purposes of the two attachments, one under the proviso to Cl. (4) of S. 145 and the other under S. 146, Criminal P.C., are different, and the stakes are not the same. In the case of the former, the attachment subsists till the decision under S. 145, Cl. (4), that is to say, till it is decided which party was in possession at the date of the proceedings; in the latter case it lasts until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties or the person entitled to possession. It may be that an attachment under S. 145, Cl. (1) may terminate on the proceedings being dropped or attachment under S. 146, Criminal P.C., may be withdrawn when the Magistrate is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace; but that does not affect the character of the attachments. The objects of the two attachments are obviously different. The possession in the case of the one enures to the benefit of the party who was in possession at the date of the proceedings and in the case of the other to the party or to any person, either a party to the proceedings or not, who may be adjudged, on the basis of his rights to be entitled to possession. Proceedings under Ch. 12, Criminal P.C. are of a quasi civil character and the Magistrate intervenes and attaches the property much on the same lines and with a similar purpose as when a Receiver is appointed by the Court in a civil action, in order to prevent a scramble and to preserve the property until the rights of the parties are ascertained. The possession of a Receiver appointed under such circumstances is exclusively the possession of the Court, the property being regarded as in the custody of the law in gremio legis for the benefit of whoever may be ultimately determined to be entitled thereto. The object of proceedings under S.145, Criminal P.C., being to determine which party was in possession at the date of the proceedings and to declare such party to be entitled to retain possession, the possession of the Court during attachment in the course of those proceedings should enure for the benefit of such party in whose favour such a declaration is made. The object of an attachment under S. 146, Criminal P.C., is to hold the property in anticipation of an action in which the right or title to possession is to be declared by a competent Court and the possession of the Court during such attachment should enure for the benefit of the party or person in whose favour a competent Court would make such a declaration." (Page 785-786)

"The rightful owner may not be a party to the action, in which case time will run against him, but not in his favour."

"For the foregoing reasons, in our judgment, the

common manager and not the plaintiffs must be treated as having been in possession during the attachment under S. 145, Cl. (4), Criminal P.C., and consequently the plaintiffs' suit is barred by limitation." (Page 786)

2259. With reference to Receiver's possession and application of Article 144 L.A. 1908, in P. Lakshmi Reddy Vs. L. Lakshmi Reddy, AIR 1957 SC 314 the Apex Court considered the nature of Receiver's possession. It referred to Woodroffe on the Law relating to Receivers (4th Edition) at page 63 stating, "The Receiver being the officer of the Court from which he derives his appointment, his possession is exclusively the possession of the Court, the property being regarded as in the custody of the law, in gremio legis, for the benefit of whoever may be ultimately determined to be entitled thereto."

2260. The Apex Court said further in para 6 of the judgement:

www.vadaprativada.com

"A Receiver is an officer of Court and is not a particular agent of any party to the suit, notwithstanding that in law his possession is ultimately treated as possession of the successful party on the termination of the suit. To treat such Receiver as plaintiffs agent for the purpose of initiating adverse possession by the plaintiff would be to impute wrong-doing to the Court and its officers. The doctrine of the Receiver's possession being that of the successful party cannot, in our opinion, be pushed to the extent of enabling a person who was initially out of possession to claim the tacking on of Receiver's possession to his subsequent adverse possession. The position may conceivably be different where the defendant in the suit was previously in adverse possession against the

www.vadaprativada.com

real owner and the Receiver has taken possession from him and restores it back to him on the successful termination of the suit in his favour."

2261. In Deo Kuer Vs. Sheo Prasad (supra) AIR 1966 SC 359 the Court observed that the property in attachment under Section 145 Cr.P.C. would mean that it is "custodia legis". Where the property is custodia legis it would mean that it is not in possession of any private individual and, therefore, there is no need to seek a relief of restoration of possession in a suit filed by the affected party but a simple suit for declaration of title would be sufficient. In Deo Kuer (supra) the Apex Court has further held that when the property is under attachment under Section 145 Cr.P.C. no relief for delivery of possession need be sought but the suit ought to be filed only for declaration of title for the reason that the property being in custodia legis no defendant would be in a position to deliver the same to the plaintiff but when a declaration of title is made, the natural consequences would follow. In para 4 of the judgement the Apex Court held:

"In our view, in a suit for declaration of title to property filed when it stands attached under S. 145 of the Code, it is not necessary to ask for the further relief of delivery of possession."

2262. Further the Court held that the Magistrate holds possession during the period of attachment on behalf of the party who ultimately is found entitled for possession. The Apex Court in Deo Kuer (Supra) followed and approved Madras High Court's decision in K. Sundaresa Iyer Vs. Sarvajana Sowkiabi Virdhi Nidhi Ltd., AIR 1939 Madras 853 and Privy Council decision in Humayun Begam Vs. Shah Mohammad

Khan, AIR 1943 PC 94 and Sunder Singh Mallah Singh Sanatan Dharm High School Trust Vs. Managing Committee, AIR 1938 PC 73 but overruled the Patna High Court's decision in Dukham Ram Vs. Ram Nanda Singh, AIR 1961 Pat. 425.

2263. Ases Kumar Misra & others Vs. Kissori Mohan Sarkar & others AIR 1924 Cal. 812 has been relied on to claim that a decision of the Civil Court, if not inter parties, can be relied on by the Magistrate to pass an order for delivery of possession under Section 145/146 Cr.P.C. Therein, a suit was filed for recovery of some money wherein the ownership rights with respect to some part of the immovable property was also considered. The Civil Court passed an order on the same issue. Later on, the immovable property itself became subject matter of a dispute between one of the parties in the suit and another. The Magistrate initiated proceedings under Section 145 Cr.P.C. And placed the property under attachment. Thereafter, relying on the decision of the Civil Court, it passed an order under Section 146 Cr.P.C. for delivery of possession to the party in whose favour the Civil Court decided the issue with respect to the ownership. It was contended that since others were not party in earlier proceedings, the earlier judgment of the Civil Court is not binding on them and, therefore, it would not have been relied by the Magistrate. Rejecting this argument, the Division Bench held that even though a Civil Court's judgment may not be binding on the parties who were not party before the Civil Court, but that would not prevent a Magistrate to look into that judgment for the purpose of passing an order for delivery of possession under Section 146 (1) Cr.P.C. This Judgment would not apply to the case in hand inasmuch it is not a case where the Magistrate has passed order under Section 146 (1) Cr.P.C.

taking into consideration the judgment in Suit-1885 nor it can be said that in the said judgment, the Court has determined the issues of ownership in favour of one or the other party at all. This aspect as to what was the issue and what has been decided in Suit-1885, we have already dealt with in detail while considering the issues relating to res judicata, estoppel etc. and need not be repeated. This judgment, in our view, has no application to any of the issues in these cases.

2264. Ellappa Naicken Vs. K.Lakshmana Naicken & others AIR (36) 1949 Madras 71 is not an authority for what it has been referred. With respect to the proceedings under Section 146 Cr.P.C., the judgment only says that a suit for declaration ought to be filed within six years from the date of the order passed under Section 146 Cr.P.C., failing which, however, the parties are not left remedy-less for the reason that even then a suit for recovery of profits can be filed within the period of limitation from the date the profits are received by receiver and while adjudicating the rights to receive profits, the Civil Court has to decide the title also and that decision of Civil Court would be a determination according to which the Magistrate would have to deliver possession of the property attached by him under Section 146 Cr.P.C. It is in respect to this kind of decision, the learned Single Judge says that a decision on the title by the Civil Court in a suit pertaining to recovery of profit will be binding and will have the force of res judicata for the purpose of Section 146 Cr.P.C. and would practically operate as a determination of right of the successful plaintiff to the land under attachment as well as the amount in deposit. In our view, this judgment does not help the parties in any manner in respect to the issues in question.

2265. In Jurawan Singh & Ors. Vs. Ramsarekh Singh & Others AIR 1933 Patna 224, the concept of possession and dispossession with reference to the proceedings under Section 145 Cr.P.C. came to be considered for the purpose of attracting limitation. There was two sets of cases. In the first one, about 400 bighas of land remained submerged under water for about 13-14 years and on reappearance, the dispute arose with regard to possession. Consequently, proceedings under Section 145 Cr.P.C. commenced resulting in an order dated 15th December, 1916 attaching the property under Section 146 Cr.P.C. being unable to find which party was in actual possession of the land, and the Collector was appointed as receiver.

2266. In the second set of case about 1000 bighas of land was involved which was also submerged and on reappearance in 1918, Section 145 Cr.P.C. proceedings were initiated which ultimately resulted in a final order dated 08th July, 1931 declaring 200 bighas of land in possession of defendants-appellants while remaining 800 bighas was attached under Section 146 Cr.P.C.

2267. In respect to the second case, the argument raised is that the suit having been filed after more than two years from the date of order dated 8th July, 1931, is barred by limitation specially provided under Article 3 Schedule 3 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. It was contended that the land stood 'abandoned' when it was submerged under water and on its reappearance, possession was not taken by the tenants as their holding. Since there was no dispossession by the landlord hence special limitation would not apply.

2268. The High Court said that an attachment made under Section 146 is for the purpose of preventing a breach of peace, and the attachment is to last until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties to the land in dispute or the person entitled to possession thereof. When a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties or the person entitled to possession of the land in dispute, it is the duty of the Magistrate to withdraw the attachment and make over possession to such party. Any act done by the Receiver appointed under Section 146 during the period of attachment cannot and ought not prejudicially affect the rights of the party found by the Court to be entitled to possession of the land in dispute. It however agreed with a Division Bench decision of the Calcutta High Court in Brojendra Kishore (supra) that it is a continuing wrong under Section 23 of the Act.

2269. If limitation begins to run before the date of the order of attachment under Section 146 Cr.P.C., it is clear that the plaintiffs in a declaratory suit cannot have a fresh start of limitation from the date of the subsequent attachment.

2270. In the case before the Patna High Court as a matter of fact the Court found that there was no dispossession by the landlord before any order of attachment under Section 145 was passed and in these circumstances the matter was decided holding:

> "....The attached lands being jungle, sandy and waste lands were not capable of actual possession by either party and therefore there was no actual possession by the plaintiffs and dispossession by the defendants after the re-appearance of the lands. The entire 1,400 bighas admittedly went under water between 1901 and 1903 and the raiyats lost possession on account of the submersion, and it is therefore contended that as there was no actual

possession by the plaintiffs and dispossession by the defendants, Article 3, Schedule 3, Bengal Tenancy Act, did not apply."

"....I am therefore of opinion that having regard to the fact that there was no actual possession of the raiyati holding by the plaintiffs after re-appearance, and no actual dispossession by the landlords in the present case, the special limitation of two years under Article 3, Schedule 3, Bengal Tenancy Act, did not apply in respect of the lands claimed in Schedule 2 of the plaint, and that the period of limitation applicable is that provided in Article 47, Limitation Act, and as such the suit is within time."

2271. The Apex Court in Shanti Kuamr Panda Vs. Shakuntala Devi JT 2005 (11) SC 122 has said:

"10. Possession is nine points in law. One purpose of the enforcement of the laws is to maintain peace and order in society. The disputes relating to property should be settled in a civilized manner by having recourse to law and not by taking the law in own hands by members of society. A dispute relating to any land etc. as defined in sub-section (2) of S. 145 having arisen, causing a likelihood of a breach of the peace, S. 145 of the Code authorises the Executive Magistrate to take cognizance of the dispute and settle the same by holding an enquiry into possession as distinguished from right to possession or title. The proceedings under Ss. 145/146 of the Code have been held to be quasi-civil, quasi-criminal in nature or an executive on police action. The purpose of the provisions is to provide a speedy and summary remedy so as to prevent a breach of the peace by submitting the dispute to the Executive Magistrate for resolution as between the parties disputing the question of possession over the property. The Magistrate having taken cognizance of the dispute would confine himself to ascertaining which of the disputing parties was in possession by reference to the date of the preliminary order or within two months next before the said date, as referred to in proviso to sub-section (4) of S. 145, and maintain the status quo as to possession until the entitlement to possession was determined by a Court, having competence to enter into adjudication of civil rights, which an Executive Magistrate cannot. The Executive Magistrate would not take cognizance of the dispute if it is referable only to ownership or right to possession and is not over possession simpliciter; so also the Executive Magistrate would refuse to interfere if there is no likelihood of breach of the peace or if the likelihood of breach of peace though existed at a previous point of time, had ceased to exist by the time he was called upon to pronounce the final order so far as he was concerned."

www.vadaprativada.com

"12. What is an eviction "in due course of law" within the meaning of sub-section (6) of S. 145 of the Code? Does it mean a suit or proceedings directing restoration of possession between the parties respectively unsuccessful and successful in proceedings under S. 145 or any order of competent Court which though not expressly directing eviction of successful party, has the effect of upholding the possession or entitlement to possession of the unsuccessful party as against the said successful party. In our opinion, which we would buttress by reasons stated shortly hereinafter, ordinarily a party unsuccessful in*

proceedings under S. 145 ought to sue for recovery of possession seeking a decree or order for restoration of possession. However, a party though unsuccessful in proceedings under S. 145 may still be able to successfully establish before the competent Court that it was actually in possession of the property and is entitled to retain the same by making out a strong case demonstrating the finding of the Magistrate to be apparently incorrect."

"15. It is well settled that a decision by a Criminal Court does not bind the Civil Court while a decision by the Civil Court binds the Criminal Court (See Sarkar on Evidence, Fifteenth Edition, page 845). A decision given under S. 145 of the Code has relevance and is admissible in evidence to show:- (1) that there was a dispute relating to a particular property; (ii) that the dispute was between the particular parties; (iii) that such dispute led to the passing of a preliminary order under S. 145(1) or an attachment under S. 146(1), on the given date, and (iv) that the Magistrate found one of the parties to be in possession or fictional possession of the disputed property on the date of the preliminary order. The reasoning recorded by the Magistrate or other findings arrived at by him have no relevance and are not admissible in evidence before the competent Court and the competent Court is not bound by the findings arrived at by the Magistrate even on the question of possession through, as between the parties, the order of the Magistrate would be evidence of possession. The finding recorded by the Magistrate does not bind the Court. The competent Court has jurisdiction and would be justified in arriving at a finding inconsistent with the one*

arrived at by the Executive Magistrate even on the question of possession. Sections 145 and 146 only provide for the order of the Executive Magistrate made under any of the two provisions being superseded by and giving way to the order or decree of a competent Court. The effect of the Magistrate's order is that burden is thrown on the unsuccessful party to prove its possession or entitlement to possession before the competent Court."

2272. In M.P. Peter Vs. State of Kerala & others JT 2009 (13) SC 1, the Apex Court after referring the above observations in Shanti Kuamr Panda (supra) in para 29 of the judgment observed:

"29. The correctness of some of the observations made therein although may be open to the question, we need not enter into said controversy at present."

2273. However, in para 30 in M.P. Peter Peter (supra), the Court referred following extract from Shanti Kumar Panda (supra):

(3) A decision by a Criminal Court does not bind the Civil Court while a decision by the Civil Court binds the Criminal Court. An order passed by the Executive Magistrate in proceedings under Sections 145/146 of the Code is an order by a Criminal Court and that too based on a summary enquiry. The order is entitled to respect and wait before the competent Court at the interlocutory stage. At the stage of final adjudication of rights, which would be on the evidence adduced before the Court, the order of the Magistrate is only one out of several pieces of evidence.

(4) The Court will be loath to issue an order of interim injunction or to order an interim arrangement inconsistent with the one made by the Executive Magistrate. However, to say so is merely stating a rule of caution or restraint, on exercise of discretion by Court, dictated by prudence and regard for the urgent/emergent executive orders made within jurisdiction by their makers; and certainly not a tab on power of Court. The Court does have jurisdiction to make an interim order including an order of ad interim injunction inconsistent with the order of the Executive Magistrate. The jurisdiction is there but the same shall be exercised not as a rule but as an exception. Even at the stage of passing an ad interim order the party unsuccessful before the Executive Magistrate may on material placed before the Court succeed in making out a strong prima facie case demonstrating the findings of the Executive Magistrate to be without jurisdiction, palpably wrong or self-inconsistent in which or the like cases the Court may, after recording its reasons and satisfaction, make an order inconsistent with, or in departure from, the one made by the Executive Magistrate. The order of the Court final or interlocutory, would have the effect of declaring one of the parties entitled to possession and evicting therefrom the party successful before the Executive Magistrate within the meaning of sub-section (6) of S. 145."

2274. Dilemma on the part of the plaintiffs is further writ large from the fact that they have also claimed title to the property in dispute based on adverse possession. Somebody, if has taken the plea of adverse possession, presupposes that on the date of filing the suit he continued to be in possession of the property in dispute otherwise an adverse possession if has discontinued for one or the other reason before maturing in title,

would dispel the claim based on adverse possession. Here we are not discussing the ingredients of "adverse possession" etc. in detail since dealing with the issues pertaining to "adverse possession", we shall discuss the meaning, scope and ingredients etc. of "adverse possession" thereunder but suffice it to say that for the purpose of issues pertaining to limitation we can say that if a plaintiff has sought to set up a case that he has matured his right by virtue of adverse possession, it presupposes that he continued to be in possession on the date of filing the suit or matured his title after completion of prescribed period and this completely mitigate the condition for attracting Article 142 that the cause of action has arisen due to dispossession or discontinuance of possession of plaintiff.

2275. It is contended that no party can simultaneously plead that either the matter is governed by Article 142 or 144 for the reason that the ingredients of both the provisions are different. The pleadings in one or the other manner are virtually self destructive and that is why both the provisions cannot be pleaded simultaneously. It is contended that the plaintiff has to exercise his option, i.e, right to elect one or the other case and he cannot plead both simultaneously. Article 142 is applicable for recovery of possession of immovable property when the plaintiff's possession of the property has been taken away i.e. he is dispossessed or had discontinued possession. Under Article 142 the burden of proof lies upon the plaintiffs to prove their possession within 12 years before the suit. While Article 144 is a residuary and is applicable for recovery of possession of immovable property or an interest therein not specifically provided for by the Act and in that case burden of proof lies upon the defendants to prove their possession and expiry of 12

2276. Reliance is placed on Chairman and M.D., N.T.P.C. Ltd. (supra) where the Apex Court has held that none can be allowed to approbate and reprobate at the same time. Relevant paras 36 and 37 of the judgment read as follows:

> "36. In Halsbury's Laws of England, 4th Edition, Vol.16 (Reissue) para 957 at page 844 it is stated:
>
> "On the principle that a person may not approbate and reprobate a special species of estoppel has arisen. The principle that a person may not approbate and reprobate express two propositions:
>
> (1) That the person in question, having a choice between two courses of conduct is to be treated as having made an election from which he cannot resile.
>
> (2) That he will be regarded, in general at any rate, as having so elected unless he has taken a benefit under or arising out of the course of conduct, which he has first pursued and with which his subsequent conduct is inconsistent."
>
> "37. In American Jurisprudence, 2nd Edition, Volume 28, 1966, Page 677-680 it is stated:
>
> "Estoppel by the acceptance of benefits:
>
> Estoppel is frequently based upon the acceptance and retention, by one having knowledge or notice of the facts, of benefits from a transaction, contract, instrument, regulation which he might have rejected or contested. This doctrine is obviously a branch of the rule against assuming inconsistent positions.
>
> As a general principle, one who knowingly accepts the benefits of a contract or conveyance is estopped to deny the

www.vadaprativada.com

validity or binding effect on him of such contract or conveyance.

This rule has to be applied to do equity and must not be applied in such a manner as to violate the principles of right and good conscience."

2277. In order to attract Article 142, the plaintiff has to show that either he is owner based on a valid title or that he was in possession over the property in question but has been dispossessed in the past in a period less than twelve years. In case, he pleads that he is the owner but the possession was admittedly with the defendants and such possession has not completed twelve years therefore the ownership or the title of the plaintiff is not extinguished, in such case it is Article 144 which will apply. The ingredients of the two are apparently different and the pleadings have to be made differently. Tentatively it can be said that in a given case simultaneously it may not be possible for a plaintiff to plead a case either of Article 142 or that of Article 144.

2278. Moreover, to attract Article 142 the person who ascertain dispossession has to prove it since the presumption in law is in favour of continuity of possession.

2279. In Nathoo Lal Vs. Durga Prasad AIR 1954 SC 355 it was held that in order to attract Article 142 of the Limitation Act, it is incumbent to show that dispossession took place and more than 12 years since then had expired. The presumption in law being in favour of continuity of possession, the person who assert dispossession, has to be proved.

2280. To some extent, what has been argued does not appear to be wholly without substance. It cannot be disputed that the question of limitation is a mixed question of law and

facts. The submission of Sri P.N.Mishra and other learned counsels is that the plaint ought to have been rejected at the threshold being ex facie barred by time. Suffice it to mention that it is not always correct that a plaint can be rejected on the ground of limitation since many a times, question of limitation is not a pure question of law but a mixed question of law and facts. In such cases, rejection of plaint ex facie is not justified. It is always open to the parties to raise plea of limitation and the Court shall consider the same and decide the issue even at the time of final hearing along with other issues.

2281. In Ramesh B. Desai and others Vs. Bipin Vadilal Mehta and others 2006 (5) SCC 638, the Court said, "A plea of limitation cannot be decided as an abstract principle of law divorced from facts as in every case the starting point of limitation has to be ascertained which is entirely a question of fact."

www.vadaprativada.com

2282. Considering the question as to whether a plaint can be rejected under order 7 Rule 11 (d) C.P.C. in the absence of proper pleadings relating to limitation, in Balasaria Construction (P) Ltd. Vs. Hanuman Seva Trust and Ors. 2006 (5) SCC 658, it was held that it cannot not be done since the limitation is a mixed question of law and facts. Similar is the view expressed in Narne Rama Murthy Vs. Ravula Somasundaram and others 2005 (6) SCC 614. The above proposition has been followed recently in Kamlesh Babu and others Vs. Lajpat Rai Sharma and others JT 2008 (4) SC 652 with a further rider that there are cases where the question of limitation can be decided or determined only on a mere perusal of the plaint and in such case even without adverting to recording of evidence etc. the issue can be decided at the very threshold or at the later stage since Section 3(1) of the Limitation Act bars the jurisdiction of a Court to entertain a suit which is beyond the period of limitation. The Court relied and referred to Lachhmi Sewak Sahu vs. Ram Rup Sahu & Ors. AIR 1944 PC 24. On this aspect, we find a consistent view of the Apex Court in some other cases also, i.e, Kamala and others Vs. K.T. Eshwara Sa and others AIR 2008 SC 3174; P.T. Munichikkanna Reddy and others Vs. Revamma and others 2007 (6) SCC 59; C. Natrajan (supra); Panchanan Dhara and others Monmatha Nath Maity and another 2006 (5) SCC 340.

2283. The reading of the entire plaint (Suit-4) nowhere shows an averment that the plaintiffs were dispossessed of a property which they already possess. The case on the contrary is that while placing idol in the building in dispute, which was a mosque, the same has been desecrated which has the effect of obstructing and interfering in the right of the plaintiffs of worship thereat.

2284. However, the relief sought by the plaintiffs (Suit-4) is not to continue to exercise their right of worship but instead a declaration has been sought with respect to the status of the property in dispute that it is a "mosque". Meaning thereby the defendants have been called upon to defend an issue about the very status of the property in dispute. A dispute of status and nature of the building as such has been raised and a declaration about its status that it is a mosque has been prayed for. The plaintiff's cause of action and relief, therefore, are quite divergent. At several stages some statements here and there in the plaint and replication were made endeavouring to bring the suit in question within the period of limitation. The counsel for the plaintiffs have contended that this is an assumption on the part of the defendants that the plaintiffs are dispossessed of the property in question and, therefore, it is this assumption which will attract Article 142 of L.A. 1908 in this case.

2285. We, however, find no substance in the submission. Pleadings have to be clear, specific and unambiguous. Probably to clear the ambiguity in the pleadings, statement was made under Order X, Rule 2 on behalf of plaintiffs (Suit-4) through their counsel explaining that the entire premises, marked as ABCD in the map appended to the plaint, is the disputed premises and it is a mosque which is an Islamic structure and it has no other structures except "Chabutara" called as "Ram Chabutara" on the south-east side in the outer courtyard and therefore, it should be declared as a mosque.

2286. The evidentiary value of the statement under Order X, Rule 2 C.P.C. has been considered in a catena of decisions. This Court in Miss Talat Fatima Hasan Vs. His Highness Nawab Syed Murtaza Ali Khan Sahib Bahadur and others AIR 1997 All. 122 in para 42 has said:

> "A statement of a party, its counsel or agent under Order X, Rule 2 C.P.C. is for all practical purposes a part of pleading and is binding on the party, who makes it or on whose behalf it is made....."

2287. To the same effect is the decision in Balmiki Singh Vs. Mathura Prasad & Ors. AIR 1968 All. 259.

2288. It is contended by the learned counsel for plaintiffs (Suit-4) that though the objection regarding limitation has been raised, but no fact has been pleaded to show as to how the case is barred by limitation. It is, therefore, contended that the declaration by the plaintiffs in the plaint that the cause of action

is continuing one must be deemed to be admitted and the Court is not required to look into the matter further.

2289. This submission is evidently misconceived. Section 3 of the Limitation Act imposes an obligation upon the Court to dismiss a suit which has been filed beyond the period prescribed in the statute. The Court cannot admit a case in the absence of the plea of limitation raised by the defendants though the suit was filed beyond the period prescribed in the statute. We have already referred in this regard Maqbul Ahmad Vs. Onkar Pratap Narain Singh, AIR 1935 PC 85. The Apex Court has also taken the same view in Jetmull Bhojraj Vs. The Darjeeling Himalayan Railway Co. Ltd. And others AIR 1962 SC 1879; Rama Shankar Singh & another Vs. Shyamlata Devi & another others AIR 1970 SC 716 and Rajendra Singh & others Vs. 2290. In Manindra Land And Building Corporation Ltd. Vs. Bhutnath Banerjee and others AIR 1964 SC 1336, it was held that the Court has no choice in the matter and the Court is bound to dismiss the suit which is barred by limitation. The burden of proof in the matter of limitation lies upon the plaintiff. It is only when the prima facie plaintiff shows that his case is within limitation, the onus may shift upon the defendants to prove otherwise.

2291. In District Basic Education Officer and another Vs. Dhananjai Kumar Shukla and another (2008) 3 SCC 481, it was held that even if no counter affidavit is filed, on the legal issues, the Court has to apply its mind and consider the matter. If a fact is not disputed or expressly admitted, the same in terms of Section 56 of the Evidence Act need not be proved but that does not mean that what constitutes ultimately an issue

formulating a legal question would also not be considered by the Court and it shall proceed as if there was an admission on that aspect also. It held that the principle underlying order VIII Rule 5 C.P.C. does not mean that despite non filing of written statement, Court may not call upon the plaintiff to prove his case.

2292. In order to construe as to whether it would be a case governed by Article 142, we find that the pleadings are extremely vague. In fact the learned counsel for the plaintiffs (Suit-4) also finds it difficult to bring out the requisite pleadings so as to attract Article 142 in the present case. What has been said in para 23 of the plaint is that the cause of action for suit arose on 23.12.1949 when Hindus unlawfully and illegally entered the mosque, desecrated it by placing idols and thus caused obstruction and interference with the rights of Muslims in general of saying prayers and performing their religious ceremonies in the mosque. The above assertions are insufficient to constitute a case of "dispossession" or "discontinuance of possession" of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) of the property in dispute. Placement of idols or desecration of mosque is one thing but dispossession of Muslims from the disputed property is another thing. Dispossession or discontinuance contemplates a total deprivation on the part of the person concerned who was earlier in possession but obstruction or interference means that though possession continues but is not smooth, peaceful and continuous but being disturbed by others.

2295. We are not trying to read the pleadings in plaint of

www.vadaprativada.com

Suit-4 by construing the words and sentences like that of a statute. But in the absence of anything otherwise to suggest from the entire pleadings, we cannot help the plaintiffs by filling in the gaps and cover up the lacuna. What actually has happened is a matter of fact and better known to the plaintiffs. If the plaintiffs themselves have not been able to say in clear and categorical terms that they are dispossessed or their possession is discontinued, we are clearly of the view that at least this Court cannot provide such pleadings for the plaintiffs and read the requisite averments in pleadings i.e. the plaint.

2396. The time runs from the date of dispossession or discontinuance in the case of Article 142 and from the date the defendant's possession becomes adverse vide Article 144. This in fact provides the cause of action to the plaintiff to file a suit and that is how the limitation comes into picture and begins.

2297. A bit lack of clarity on the part of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) in this regard we find is apparent even in the written argument submitted by them. Instead of putting the same in our words, we find it useful to reproduce the same. Sri M.A. Siddiqui, while dealing with Issue No. 3 (Suit-4), has made the following submissions in his written arguments:

> 3.1. Almost pleas of bar of limitation have been taken by each of defendants in their respective written statements. However, except a bare assertion that the suit is barred by limitation, nothing has been said that on what account and when it became barred. Undisputedly issue of limitation is not a pure question of law but a mixed question of law and fact. The facts are necessarily to be seen in the light of the pleadings and evidence of parties.
> 3.2. In the plaint necessary averment regarding limitation

finds place in para 21 where issuance of notice to the State and its official and the service on 19.6.1961 - 23.6.1961 is mentioned and in para 23 the accrual of cause of action has been stated to be as 23.12.1949 when the idols were stealthily and surreptitiously kept in the building and Muslims stood prevented from offering their prayer freely and the relief (a) as sought in the plaint is for a declaration that the property indicated by the letters …. is mosque and public Muslim graveyard and the relief (b) is that in case in the opinion of the court delivery of possession is deemed to be proper remedy a decree for delivery of possession of the mosque and the graveyard in suit by the removal of the idols and other articles which the Hindus may have placed in the mosque as objects of their worship, be passed in plaintiffs' favour against the defendants. Vide an order of the court dated 25.5.1995 after the matter being remitted by the Hon'ble Supreme Court vide its judgment and order dated 24.10.1994 clause (bb) in the relief clause has also been added, wherein the relief has been claimed that the statutory receiver be commanded to handover the property in dispute described in schedule "A" of the plaint by removing the unauthorised structure erected thereon. The pleadings have been read over again and again and a perusal of the plaint reveals that plaintiffs felt some cloud to be casting on their title and as such with a view to remove such an anticipated cloud the relief for declaration as a main relief was sought.

3.3. That Para 20 of the plaint deserves to be seen wherein it is stated that the building in suit claimed by the

www.vadaprativada.com

Muslims as Muslim Waqf is in the possession of the receiver holding for the real owner and would be released in favour of the plaintiff in case the plaintiff's claim succeeds. But if for any reason in the opinion of the court a relief for possession is proper relief to be claimed, the plaintiffs in the alternative pray for recovery of possession. It has been contended on behalf of the other side property being attached and under custody of court receiver the possession of the receiver is of none but party succeeding in the case and as such relief of possession which has been half heartedly claimed is not at all required. The great reliance has been placed on a decision of Calcutta High Court which lays down that in the case where property is attached in a proceedings under Section 145 Cr.P.C. there is no requirement at all for seeking the relief of recovery of possession and the plaintiffs in the circumstances could only seek the relief of declaration. In this case as order of attachment has been passed on 29.12.1949 and the idols were kept on 23.12.1949 and removal of the idols is must and as such it is submitted that relief of possession is necessary and the plaintiffs basing their claim on title the suit is governed by Article 142 of the Limitation Act 1908 and the period of limitation being 12 years and the date of alleged interference in the possession being 23.12.1949 and the suit having been filed on 19.12.1961 the suit is very much in time.

3.4. As regards applicability of Article 120 providing the limitation of six years, it is submitted that Article 120 comes into play where no other article is applicable and

once Article 142-144 is applicable this Article 120 could not apply and the suit is very much within the time.

3.5. The contention of other side is that the plaintiff stood ousted not on 23.12.1949 but on 16.12.1949 and as such the suit is barred by time even for the purpose of Article 142. This contention is based upon certain averments in the written statement of two earlier suits which read that last Juma prayer was offered on 16.12.1949 and there being no further averment of prayer from 16.12.1949 to 22.12.1949. In 1960 the averment in the plaint of offering prayer up to 22.12.1949 is incorrect and deserves to be rejected.

3.6. An affidavit of one Anisurrahman, copy of which was filed in the Ho'ble High Court at Allahabad in support of transfer application is relied which also avers that last Friday Prayer was offered on 16.12.1949 and the above contention is buttressed on such averment. It is stated that 16.12.1949 was Friday and on 23.12.1949 it was again Friday and Friday prayer comprising a larger gathering as evident as it has come in evidence that even from Faizabad and the adjoining area of Ayodhya city viz Shahjahanpur etc. people came to offer Friday prayer and as regards 5 time daily prayer that being confined to local people, this has been a reason for such assertion. However, assuming for a moment that even if on account of fear no prayer was offered after 16.12.1949 that is absolutely immaterial as regards the suit for possession and even if a mosque is not used for 50 years, it remains a mosque and limitation in case the suit is for possession of such a mosque has to be reckoned from the day from which the plaintiff discontinued to be in possession. There is lot of difference in non-user and discontinuation and as such such an averment has got no bearing. Moreover, as provided in sub-section (2) of Section 15 of the Limitation Act in a suit where the notice is required under law to be served, the period of notice has to be excluded and as such two months being the period of notice has to be excluded and the suit is in all corners within the period of limitation as a notice was must as provided in Section 80 of the CPC for defendants No. 5 to 8 and as per requirement of the law such a notice was issued and served as such this period of two months further has to be counted and the suit is absolutely within time as regards Article 142/144 of the Limitation Act 1908.

3.7. In the peculiar situation the country passed due to partition special law was enacted extending the period of limitation for suits for recovery of possession relating to waqf property and this matter is expressly covered under the provisions of the said Act and as such as regards suit for recovery of possession seen with either angle it is absolutely within time even assuming non offering of prayer from 16.12.1949.

3.8. The other submission that relief of recovery of possession being not required the suit is only and only for a declaration and limitation for declaration Article 120 of the Limitation Act being only 6 years, this suit for declaration is barred by time. Now in this case it has to be seen what is the effect of such barring. It is still insisted that despite the Hon'ble Calcutta High Court’s pronouncement or other such verdicts the relief of

possession in this regard is necessary. However, as regards effect of not filing a suit within a period of limitation, Section 28 of 1908 Act and Section 27 of 1963 Act does provide "At the determination of the period hereby limited to any person for instituting a suit for possession of any property his right to such property shall be extinguished."

3.9. Now as regards the extinguishment of the right by non-filing a suit for recovery of possession, only the right is extinguished. From the side of the defendant itself it has been strenuously contended that in the given circumstances the property being custodia-legis relief of possession was not at all required and as such even if the suit has not been filed or even the plaint is rejected as being barred by time for the purposes of declaration the right and title of the plaintiffs continues and as such there is no consequence of the same. In the plaint as regards relief for declaration, in para 23 it has been specifically stated the injuries so caused or continuing injuries and the cause of action arising there from is renewed de die in diem. As a matter of fact such averments have not been disputed and such plea is based on Section 23 of 1908 Act and Section 22 of 1963 Act. Now in this case it has to be seen that if by not filing the suit for declaration in time or even by rejection of plaint for such plea if the same enures to the benefit of anybody then it can be said that it has got some value. In case not filing the suit in time produces any result it may have some effect but if not filing the suit for declaration is of no consequence at all the same produces no result. Section 23 of the Limitation Act strictly applies and as regards the fear in the mind of the plaintiffs as regards cloud being cast upon their title the cause of action for the same is renewed day by day.

3.10. The pronouncement of Hon'ble Calcutta High Court as relied by the other side itself provides that the property in custodia-legis and being so held for the benefit of the true owner, cause of action for such a suit is renewed day by day. In this case on 29.12.1949 an order of attachment is passed, on 5.1.1950 the said order is effected. In January and April 1950 two suits viz suit No. 2 of 1950 and subsequently suit no. 25 of 1950 = OOS No. 1/89 and 2/89 are filed. On 16.1.1950 an order of temporary injunction is passed, 'issue notice and the defendants are refrained from removing the idols and creating any obstruction in Puja being carried on by the plaintiffs. On 19.1.1950 on behalf of the State District Government Counsel moved an application that such an order amounts to allowing one party and prohibiting the other party and is bad, and the learned Civil Judge appreciated and modified its order maintaining the order as regards refraining from removal of the idols but restricting the Puja as being carried on. No order prohibiting the Muslims to offer prayer and go in the mosque has been passed till this date but the entry being restricted being subject to permission of City Magistrate, or Receiver. Now as regards the "Puja as being carried on" directed by the City Magistrate an scheme was prepared, it was approved by the City Magistrate and as per this scheme only the Pujari appointed by receiver could go inside and nobody else can go. The expenses of Puja are to be borne by both the parties and said Puja as per courts order

continued up to 1.2.1986. It is abundantly clear that this order restricted right of entry of Hindus and Muslims both and this cannot be said at all to confer any benefit to anybody and such order being passed by the Civil Court and being affirmed by this Hon'ble Court with the observation that the suit be decided within a period of 6 months, the City Magistrate passed the order on 30.7.1953 that in such a situation there appears no necessity to continue 145 Cr.P.C. proceeding and it may be kept in abeyance till the decision of the suit and file to be consigned to record. This situation continued up to 6.12.1992 and as such the act of ordering attachment and attachment on the spot producing no result affecting the title of the plaintiffs, non-filing of the suit within 6 years is absolutely of no consequence and Section 23 of the Limitation Act is absolutely for such a situation. Even if a plaint is rejected for the reason of being barred by Limitation a fresh suit is not barred and if a fresh suit is not barred then there can be no objection to the continuation of the suit already pending.

www.vadaprativada.com

3.11. Order VII Rule 11 CPC provides:

"A plaint shall be rejected in the following cases:

(a) where it does not disclose the cause of action;

(d) where the suit appears from the statement in the plaint to be barred by time any law."

Now Limitation Act being a law, the plea of bar is based on Section 3 of the Limitation Act and it is this clause (d) of Order VII Rule 11 which is invoked for

www.vadaprativada.com

dismissing the suit. Rule 12 provides for procedure which reads: "Where a plaint is rejected the Judge shall record an order to that effect with the reasons for such order." Rule 13 is little material which reads: "The rejection of the plaint on any of the grounds here-in-before mentioned shall not on its own force preclude the plaintiff from presenting a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action."

3.12. Assuming the worst that the plaint is rejected as being barred by time – limitation, then for the fresh cause of action fresh suit being permissible, in no circumstance the continuation of this dispute could be disputed.

3.13. As regards the embargo in Rule 13 ‘of its own force’ there is nothing to indicate that anything otherwise has been done which may be said to preclude the plaintiffs from filing the suit. As a matter of fact till 7.2.1993 there was no encroachment on the right of the plaintiffs. The Ordinance providing for acquisition and the subsequent Act No. 33 of 1993 take away the right of the plaintiffs even their title is snatched away. Such action was immediately challenged by moving applications on behalf of the plaintiffs in this suit, thereafter the Hon'ble Supreme Court requisitioned all the files and on 24.10.1994 order was passed, and thereafter, the pleadings have been amended and the relief (bb) has been added which is of substantive relief and cause of action for the said relief have accrued on 7.2.1993 even in May 1995 when the relief was allowed to be added by this Hon'ble Court it was absolutely within time, whereas the law of pleading is that the amendment relates back to the

Original pleading even ignoring for a moment even if it is taken to be from the day on which the amendment is allowed, the same being 25.5.1995 which is absolutely within time.

3.14. Filing a suit involves the volition of the plaintiff. It is why the plaintiff is said to be master of the suit and the principle of dominus litus applies. As regards seeking a relief for declaration now if one hears that a particular person disputes his residence, caste, he may just file a suit for declaration, although nothing is going to affect him materially and for such a situation as regards the effect of a suit being barred by time, the principle of compulsory accrual of cause of action is to be seen as laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in its judgment as reported in AIR 1960 SC page 335 and in case a person sleeps to file the suit for such compulsory accrual cause of action only then he has to face the consequences.

3.15. The pronouncements are that if an incorrect entry is made in the khewat the right of the proprietor is not to be as such affected by such incorrect entry in the khewat and he may altogether ignore the same for decades. In the like manner there are large number of pronouncement that a person is not at all required to rush to court for each invasion of his right unless the invasion is so effective bringing his right to an end and in the case of sporadic invasion each invasion gives a fresh right to sue.

3.16. As regards continuation of proceedings in the revenue court, civil court or 145 Cr.P.C., if such proceedings are not in the denial of anybody's right altogether but are to determine as to who is entitled by initiation of such proceedings and by continuation of such proceedings, as a matter of right no compulsory cause of action accrues. Hon'ble Supreme Court as reported in AIR 1975 SC page 813 as extracted in AIR 1983 Gujarat page 47, has observed that both parties litigate with an expectation to get the case decided in its favour and as such unless the proceedings are finally decided no cause of action arises against the same. This principle has been followed by Gujarat High Court as reported in AIR 1983 Gujarat page 47. In such situation even the right to file suit has been held to have occurred after the decision of the second appeal, the second appeal also being continuation of the suit.

3.17. In the instant matter the 1993 Ordinance and the Act has given a fresh cause of action and a fresh suit could be filed. However, the relief having been sought by amending the plaint, now the question of bar of limitation stands excluded keeping in view the principle that amendment of pleadings relates back to the original date of filing the suit. AIR 1969 SC page 1267 at page 1270 and AIR 1921 PC page 50. The courts have taken a view that by bar of limitation even the cause of action is not destroyed and the title of a person subsisting despite the earlier suit being barred by time or the earlier suit having also been dismissed as barred by time, the second suit is very much permissible as nothing having decided as regards the right and tile and if the title subsists there would be no resjudicata. In many situations a suit for accounting, declaration of rights in mortgage matters at one stage may be held to be barred by time as for such fractional cause

and as such rejecting the plaint following the mandate of Section 3 Limitation Act and Order 7 Rule 11, but right of the plaintiff being intact at a subsequent stage, he is very much entitled even to bring the fresh suit. It has been held that keeping in view the provisions of Section 3 Limitation Act and order 7 Rules 11 clause (d) a court is bound to reject the plaint. See AIR 1932 Calcutta page 146 and AIR 1928 Oudh page 495. The Hon'ble Supreme Court as reported in 1997 Volume 10 Supreme Court Cases at page 1992 in Delhi Waqf Board Versus Jagdish Kumar Narang and others has upheld the filing of second suit in such a situation.

3.18. The two suits of 1950 only for individual rights and the third suit of 1959 only for the right of management and the controversy going on and the plaintiff of 1950 suit despite being required to convert their suit in a representative suit, the Muslims impliedly being prohibited to offer the prayers inside the mosque, entry inside the mosque being subject to permission of City Magistrate or Receiver it was thought proper to file a declaratory suit to bring to an end the controversy once for all. Suit No. 12 of 1961 was filed and the title of Muslim Parties being intact there can be no bar of Limitation by such a suit and even if such a pre-mature suit is dismissed without adjudication on merits the title subsisting it has got no effect.

3.19. As regards the principle of continuing cause of action in large number of cases it has been held that if the right has not been extinguished then on each day a fresh cause of action arises. See AIR 1927 Madras page 568,

www.vadaprativada.com

Head Note 'C' column I page 570 and the above proposition is based on large number of decisions as referred in the judgment itself. In AIR 1927 All page 296 a Division Bench has taken a view that revenue court proceedings furnish a new cause of action and by deleting the name from revenue record the title is not extinguished and unless the title is extinguished every fresh invasion gives a fresh right. In the like manner the Division Bench as reported in AIR 1934 All 539, has gone to hold that a fresh cause of action may arise to a plaintiff and he may bring the suit even though the prior cause of action has arisen to him beyond the period of 6 years and this proposition is based upon the decision of the Privy Council. AIR 1931 PC 302, AIR 1914 All 184, AIR 1919 All page 383, Column I page 541. A Division Bench of Patna High Court as reported in AIR 1935 Patna page 33 has laid down that as long as plaintiff's title is not lost by adverse possession of defendant each invasion gives fresh cause of action. AIR 1935 All 174 is also to the same effect.

3.20. That the Orissa High Court as reported in AIR 1968 Orissa page 36 has considered the scope at length viz a viz the proceedings under Section 145 Cr.P.C. and has even gone to the extent that even after final decision of the 145 Cr.P.C. proceeding and thereafter not filing the suit even then the right is not extinguished. AIR 1961 Bombay Division Bench page 266, head note B para 32 also says so . A Lahore High Court, AIR 1940 page 154 lays down that if plaintiff is in possession then a suit for declaration of plaintiffs occupancy right is maintainable and denial of his title furnishes a fresh cause of action.

3.21.In the above circumstances in no circumstance it could be said that the instant suit is barred by time. Now after 1994 judgment particularly the acquisition of the land itself by a Central Act everything has to be seen in that light.

2298. Sri Jilani has adopted the arguments of Sri Siddiqui stating that the question of limitation would be covered by Sri Siddiqui. The different aspects which Sri Siddiqui has raised in his written arguments much of which is not very clear, yet we shall try to deal with the same as best as possible for the reason that much of the submissions in the written arguments having been taken for the first time therein, we had no occasion to seek any clarification from him but still we will try to find out the real spirit and sense in which they have been advanced and shall deal with the same.

2299. Now, we proceed to consider applicability of Article 142 in the light of the pleadings and relief sought by the plaintiffs and evidence placed on record. The suit has been filed for the property identified as "ABCD" in the sketch map appended to the plaint of the suit, which we reproduce as under:

2300. The outer line in this map does not include the complete four walled structure, as it was, but some part on the extreme southern side is left out which on south west is marked, 'Chabutara' and on south east, just behind 'Ram Chabutara'.

2301. The correctness of this map has seriously been doubted by all the defendants (Suit-4) and in fact, the defendants no. 3 and 4 along with their written statement dated 22/24.8.1962 have filed another sketch map (Annexure-8) a copy whereof is appended herewith. For the convenience purpose, the relevant part of the said sketch map which is now the area of dispute with which we are concerned in view of the Apex Court decision in Dr. M. Ismail Faruqi (supra) as a result of the Acquisition Act of 1993 is reproduced as under:

www.vadapprativada.com

2302. A copy of the complete map is appended as Appendix No. 2 (2A,B,C) to this judgment. It may also be mentioned that part of the property shown in this map on the southern side as "CDKL" and the entire part just opposite on the south eastern side parallel to "CDKL" has not been shown in the map appended to the plaint (Suit-4) and therefore, this part has been left for claiming any relief and cannot be treated to be a part of property in dispute for the purpose of Suit-4.

2303. The sketch map filed by defendants no.3 and 4 extract whereof is quoted above, is from the map prepared by Sri Shiv Shanker Lal, Advocate Commissioner on 25th May 1950, pursuant to an order passed by Civil Judge, Faizabad in Suit-1, appointing him as Commissioner for preparing the site plan and submit his report after spot inspection thereof. Besides above, there is another map which is part of record prepared in Suit 1885, filed by Sri Gopal Sahai, Amin, Commission appointed by the Sub-Judge, Faizabad, copy whereof is appended herewith, and according to the said map the disputed property was as under:

A copy of the complete map is appended as Appendix No. 3 and 3A to this judgment.

2304. There is one more record which may be taken note of at this stage. The plaintiffs (Suit 4) in order to prove two documents i.e. letter issued by the District Magistrate, Faizabad in December, 1949 moved an application no. 20(O) of 2002 for summoning the original record from the State Government. Pursuant thereto the District Magistrate, Faizabad produced a file containing official correspondence and other documents which was placed under a sealed cover by this Court's order dated 29.05.2009.

www.vadaprativada.com

2305. The aforesaid file contains a letter dated 16th December, 1949 of the District Magistrate, Faizabad accompanied by a blue print of the map of the disputed site duly scaled. The position of various structures shown therein is not in any manner different than what is contained in the two maps, one prepared by Gopal Sahai Amin in Suit 1885 and another by Sri Shiv Shankar, Court's Commissioner in Suit-1 on 25.05.1950.

2306. Since it is a scaled map, having been prepared by Government authorities duly signed by the City Magistrate Faizabad, we find no reason not to place reliance thereon particularly in view of the power possessed by this Court under Section 165 read with 35 of the Evidence Act, 1872. The position shown in this map is as under:

A complete map is being appended as Appendix No. 4 to this judgment. Map of Ayodhya showing distances from disputed site is also filed as Appendix No. 4A and 4B.

2307. We have referred to and relied on the above map prepared by the District Authorities as long back as on 16th December, 1949 which has become available to us pursuant to the order issued to the authorities for production of certain record. Along with the said record, the above map is made available to the Court. Whether such a document can be utilized or not, which is not an evidence produced by any of the parties, we find the power vested in the Court by virtue of Section 165 of Evidence Act.

2308. The chief function of a judge is to see that justice is done between parties. For inaction or flaw of the parties, the Court should not be guilty of defeating the ends of justice due to lack of information. The position of a judge is not that of a moderator between contestants in a game with no inclination to interfere till the violation of rules. He has a much superior duty to perform which is commonly believed by the people in India the 'divine function'. The proceedings are not only to be conducted strictly in accordance with law but it is the duty of a judge to administer justice and to find out the truth. We are not supposing even for a moment that the judge is being given a carte blanche by which the rules of evidence may be relaxed or set at naught. The aid of the section is invoked only with the object of discovering relevant facts or obtaining proper proof of such facts. A judge must always keep in mind that every trial is a voyage of discovery in which truth is the quest.

2309. In Govind Raghunath Sawant Vs. B.A. Kakade & Anr. 1975 ILR Bombay 829 at page 835 observed that Section 165 confer powers on every court to compel any party to produce any document to meet the ends of justice subject to the restrictions mention in that section.

2310. Similarly in Shankar Lal & Anr. Vs. Mahbub Shah & Anr. AIR 1923 Oudh 59, the Court said :

"...it may also be pointed out that under section 165 of the

www.vadaprativada.com

Evidence Act, the Judge may himself, in order to discover or obtain proof of relevant facts, order the production of any document where Order 13, rule 1 and 2, or section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code do not serve his purpose."

2311. The record in fact has been summoned pursuant to the application no.20(O) of 2002 filed on behalf of the plaintiffs (Suit-4) praying for production of certain documents constituting correspondence between the State Government and District Magistrate, Faizabad pertaining to entry of 1949. The Government filed copies of two letters dated 26th December, 1949 and other documents could not be produced. Thereafter pursuant to our order dated 15th May, 2009 and 26th May, 2009 the District Magistrate, Faizabad produced the above file and we kept it in the custody of the Court in sealed cover after having prepared copies of the documents contained in the file and providing the same to the State Government. The correspondence between the State and the District Magistrate, Faizabad in December, 1949 has also been referred in the judgment of this Court in Mohd. Hashim Vs. State of U.P. & Ors. UPLBEC Vol.1 576 at page 593 and 656 to find out the spot situation in December 1949. The map sent by the District Magistrate, Faizabad to the State Government along with his letter dated 16th December, 1949, which is official document, comes within the definition of "public document" can be looked into particularly when it corroborates the already available maps prepared by the Court's Commissions in the two suits i.e. Suit 1885 and Suit-1.

2312. It is not in dispute that the entire disputed area ABCD consists of two parts, (1) inner court, which included the disputed building and, (2) outer courtyard. This division of the disputed premises in the inner courtyard and outer courtyard came to exist in 1856-1857 when it is said that an iron-grilled wall was erected separating the disputed building along from the other constructed parts including the Chabutara called Ram Chabutara. The exact date or period is not on record nor the parties could throw any light thereon except that its existence has been noticed in P. Karnegi's Historical Sketch (supra) published in 1870 and that shows that it was constructed sometime after 1855 and also admitted by Mohd. Asghar, defendant no.2 in Suit 1885 in his written statement.

2313. Whether the building in dispute was constructed in 1528 AD or not are the issues we have dealt with separately. We have found that there is no reliable evidence to prove that the building in dispute was constructed in 1528 A.D. by Babar or at his command or instance by Mir Baqi or anyone else. The entire belief in this regard is based on certain Gazetteers and documents available from the commencement of 19th century and they, in turn, are founded on the inscriptions, the text and the time of fixation whereof has not been found reliable.

2314. Be that as it may, even if for the purpose of the issues in question we assume that the building in dispute was so constructed in 1528 A.D., there is no evidence whatsoever that after its construction, it was ever used as a mosque by Muslims at least till 1856-57. Sri Jilani fairly admitted during the course of arguments that historical or other evidence is not available to show the position of possession or offering of Namaz in the disputed building at least till 1855. He has also disputed seriously the alleged riots of 1855. For the time being we do not intend to concentrate on this aspect whether this denial of Sri Jilani and Siddiqui and other Muslim counsels about 1855 riot is correct or not and proceed to consider further material and other aspects.

2315. The first document which Sri Jilani could place before us to show that the building in dispute was in possession of Muslims in its entirety is Exhibit 19 (Suit 1) (Register 5 Page 61-63). It is a report of Sheetal Dubey, Thanedar dated 28th November, 1858 complaining about the worship offered by a Nihang Singh Fakir Khalsa in the middle of the Masjid Janam Asthan and also erecting a religious symbol (flag) thereat. He says that 25 Sikhs were also present for erection of the religious flag at the Masjid Janam Asthan. The complaint reads as under:

2316. This document only shows worship by a non-Muslim inside the building in dispute. We find no help from the above document in support of the plaintiffs' case that the Muslims were offering Namaz in the building. The report does not say that erection of symbol and Havan and Puja by the said non-Muslim person was complained of by Muslims as 2318. The above letter referred to something which happened in the disputed building i.e. inner courtyard. In fact, the learned counsels for the defendants Hindu parties have submitted that the complaint of Syed Mohd. Khateeb was in respect to the disputed building and the premises in the inner courtyard wherein worship by Hindus said to have continued from hundred of years. The genuinity of this document has not been disputed by the plaintiffs (Suit-4) and on the contrary they also rely upon it. Being one of the earliest document, in our view, it is a very important Exhibit. It is contended by the various learned counsels appearing for defendants Hindu parties, that the same being a document of one of the earliest period available having been written by a person whose identity and authority is not disputed by the Muslim parties. Being an admission must be treated as a sole conclusive evidence to prove that the disputed building and premises throughout has been in possession of Hindus and not of Muslims. Hindus have continuously offered prayer inside the disputed building as well as the premises in the inner courtyard as also at the Ram Chabutara and Seeta Rasoi which was in the outer courtyard. It is not stated anywhere in the said application that Muslims ever offered Namaz in the disputed building or were obstructed. The only averment is that, being a mosque, it is a muslim religious place which is being defiled and defaced by Hindus by offering their worship and keeping their religious marks etc. for the past hundreds of years ("Sadaha Baras").

2319. We find substance. It thus appears that in 1858 a

Chabutara was constructed in the inner courtyard also and the complaint was made in respect thereto. Had the building in dispute and the inner courtyard been in possession of Muslims, such an act on the part of the Hindus could not have been possible at all.

2320. It appears that some order was passed on 30th November, 1858 pursuant whereto Sheetal Dubey, Thanedar visited the disputed premises and informed Nihang Faqir about the order but he replied that the entire place is of Nirankar and the government of the country should impart justice.

2321. Sri Sheetal Dubey Thanedar submitted his report dated 1st December, 1858; Exhibit 21 (Suit 1) (Register 5 Page 69-72A). The report says:

Garib Parwar Salamat,

Respected Sir,

It is requested that under the orders of your honour Mauja Ram Kot has been declared Nuzul and statement of all the witnesses were recorded and they proved documents of rights, two documents regarding purchase of Arazi from the department of Nuzul, three Bigha Pokhta and two Bigha Kham and the file has been placed in the case and date 14 has been fixed for inquiry in the land of society and Bairagies, Mahants of Awadh. Now Mutsim Saheb calls us

Whatsoever orders would be of your honour after the inquiry regarding Nuzul, we shall abide by the same. Therefore, it is prayed that orders may be issued to Mutsim Saheb that grant of lease may kindly be postponed till the decision of the case. Being proper, so requested.

2328. This document shows an admission that the entire Mauja Rampur was entered as Nazul. This fact is admitted before us by the learned counsel for the parties. Sri Jilani though sought to argue that the entry of disputed land as Nazul in the records of the British Government at that time was wrongly made but the fact remains that in the first settlement of 1861 also, the land was shown Nazul and this was never disputed by anyone or challenged before the appropriate Forum in appropriate proceedings and has continued as such.

The application is to the effect that as per the text of the plaint the Chabutra which had been constructed within Babri Masjid Oudh may kindly be removed after due enquiry. Moreover the respondent may be ordered to furnish proper undertaking/personal bond (Muchalka) for not interfering in the matter."

Garib Parwar Salamat,

The story of mucelemanship of the Nihang respondent is being told in this Hon'ble Court. About 30 days back the respondent made a small Chabootra in violation of law, in the graveyard, adjacent to Babri Masjid*, between the graves of late Qazi Hadood which he*

But the applicant owing to fear of law avoids occurrence of any untoward incident or situation which may arise in future. About half year back, Hari Das Mahant of Hanuman Garhi tried to build his house forcibly. Against this act, a case was registered in the court wherefrom a decree was issued in favour of the applicant which was affirmed and continued as such from the district level upto the commissionary. Even the said Mahant Hari Das was made to execute personal bond/undertaking for non-interference, which is available in Sarishta (file). The commissioner found that a flag within the lawn of the Masjid was pitched to create tension and terror. The commissioner after seeing himself on the spot, got the flag unpitched. *He also noted the measurement of the place. (sic). 2330. This is the first document which we have with us going to the extent that in the inner courtyard, the muezzin used to recite Adhan (ajjan) which obviously call the Muslim people for offering Namaz otherwise there do not arise any reason for calling Adhan (ajjan). The document of 5th November, 1860 thus is evident that a Muezzin used to recite Adhan (ajjan) in the building in dispute i.e. inner courtyard.

(father and son). It bears the seal of Chief Commissioner. It reads:

> "It having been established after due inquiry that Rajjab Ali and Mohd. Asghar received a Cash Nankar of (Rs. 302-3-6) Rupee Three Hundred and two three annas six pie from Mauza Shahanwa District Fyzabad, in rent free tenure under the former Government. The Chief Commissioner, under the authority of the Governor General in Council is pleased to maintain the grant for so long as the object for which the grant has been made is kept up on the following conditions. That they shall have surrendered all sunnds title deeds and other documents relating to the grant in question. That they and their successors shall strictly perform all the duties of land holders in matters of Police, and any Military or Political service that may be required of them by the Authorities and that they shall never fall under the just suspicion of favouring in any way the designs of enemies of the British Government*. If any one of these conditions is broken by Rajjab Ali and Mohammad Asghar or their successor the grant will be immediately resumed."*

2336. The above documents though show that some grant was allowed to Mir Rajjab Ali and Mohd. Asgar but it does not appear that any kind of inquiry was made by the authorities concerned and if so, what was the basis therefor. According to the claim of Muslims, the Commander of Babar, who was responsible for construction of the building in dispute was Mir Baqi while Mir Rajjab Ali claimed himself to be the son-in-law of the daughter of grand son of Syed Baqi. Mohd. Asgar was son of Mir Rajjab Ali, therefore, the son and father claimed

relation with the 4th generation of the alleged original Mutwalli and staked their claim for grant. No material exists to show that earlier such grant was awarded by any one though stated by the aforesaid two persons. If we go by the averments of the plaint that the alleged waqf was created in 1528, it is wholly untrustworthy to find out that in the last more than 325 years, it could only be the fourth generation or at the best 5th generation. The authorities in 1860-61 were not under a duty to act judicially in this matter and therefore, might not have given any details of their enquiry as to on what basis the alleged enquiry was conducted. Ex facie, to us, the genealogy of Mir Rajjab Ali commencing from Syed Baki who must have existed in 1528 is unbelievable. It is not out of context that the story of grant might have been set up by the two persons i.e. father and son for the purpose of obtaining valuable grant from Britishers in their favour. In any case, these documents only show that a financial assistance was provided by the British Government for the purpose of the mosque in question but this by itself may not be a proof that the building in dispute was used by Muslims for offering Namaz or for Islamic religious purposes to the extent of ouster of Hindu people or otherwise.

Ordered.

Roobkar be put up before Munshi Nand Kishore, Extra Assitt. Commissioner and the land may be allotted.

Sd/-Munsi Nand Kishore.

Ordered:

Possession over the land for compensation as proposed be given and receipt/certificate of possession be obtained..

Sd/- Munshi Nand Kishore.
Dated September 16, 1865. Sd/-.

Respected Sir,

The land yielding revenue of Rs. 302, 3 and half Annas has been selected. The lease of village Bahooranpur (whole) and Aarazi Sholapuri (Part) as per 1273 Fasli was given on deposit of Rs. 7/- , i.e., instead of Rs. 193/ lease was granted for Rs. 200/- the details whereof have been given in the report dated September 6, 1865. Therefore, before handing over the possession, I would pray once again that the possession over the demarcated land be given or as your honour may deem proper.

Dated September 16, 1865.

Ijlas Munshi Nand Kishore, Extra Asstt. Commissioner.

www.vadaprativada.com

It seems that at the time of proposing the land as compansation, for Bahooranpur revenue was Rs. 193/-. The same figure continued during 1271 and 1272 Fasli.. But at the time of Bandobast in 1273 F, Rs. 7/- was increased, making the total amount to Rs. 200/- at which the lease was accepted/approved.. In these circumstances, there was an increase of Rs. 7/- whereas, when the map was prepared and submitted, the said amount was Rs. 193/- only. Now after the orders of approval Rs. 7/- which is 2.5%.. Though it does not deserve attention/consideration but furnishing of the information regarding it is necessary. Therefore it was ordered that necessary papers be put up before the Deputy Commissioner—sic—that possession may be given without considering the increase and its adjustment be made from the land in village Sholapur.

—sic—306, 302–was marked/proposed. The proceedings are available in the file. In 1273 F. lease of Mauza Bahooranpur Jama Rs. 200/- and for Aaraziat Sholapuri, previous deposit .....1272 F. (sic) was allotted..

Dated September 6, 1865 commissioner Bhola Nath.

Ijlasi Munshi Nand Kishore Extra Asstt.Commissioner

Since in this matter orders for handing over possession was given through robekar separately, it was ordered that report may be placed in the related file.

Dated September 14, 1865.

Order

In the Court of Mr. Babrak Carnegi.

After perusal of the order of Munshi Nand Kishore it was ordered that without taking into account the increase, the allottee should immediately be given Dakhal (Possession) sic—Ijlas Munshi Nand Kishore Saheb. Possession may kindly be given without waiting for the report of Inspector because he may not give one. The allottee may be given possession. Another question/matter regarding the fixation of the year from which the cash amount would be payable, is enclosed in the file. The Deputy Commissioner after enquiry from the Treasury, may pass suitable orders so that the case is disposed of immediately.

Dated October 10, 1865 Sd/- Officer.

Order.

Possession may immediately be given and Dakhal Nama/acknowledgement thereof be taken. For payment of cash, file may be sent for necessary action. For the second time, detailed orders have been given to the Accountant.

2342. The above documents refer to the cash grant and thereafter the grants of land in lieu of cash grant to Mir Rajab Ali and Mohd. Asgar. Here also there is nothing to support or even to suggest that the Muslims actually attended the disputed building or site for offering Namaz at all.

2343. The factum of grant, as is evident from the above record, has been heavily relied by Sri Jilani contending that this is an impeccable evidence that the premises in dispute was in possession, control and management of Muslims since 1860 and onwards. It is contended that this grant was allowed after due enquiry by the authorities at that time, as is mentioned in the order passed by the Commissioner. Official acts are presumed to have been done in accordance with law unless shown otherwise. He, therefore, submits that no other evidence need be required to show that the property in dispute remained throughout in possession of Muslims as is fortified from the factum of the grant being allowed for maintaining the mosque in question. It is submitted on behalf of the other side that this grant was allowed on account of personal service and on certain conditions mentioned in the certificate unattached with the mosque in question and therefore, it does not prove anything.

2344. We take the documents as it is and having gone through the same very carefully, find that Mir Rajab Ali and Mohd. Asgar claim to be 4th and 5th in generation in genealogy and that too as the daughter's son of the 4th generation claimed for grant which was allowed by the British authority. There is no occasion for us to look into its correctness or validity since it is a fact accomplished. However, ex facie it is absolutely unbelievable that commencing from 1528, Mir Rajjab Ali and Mohd. Asgar had rightly shown the genealogy running only in five generations within a period of more than 325 years.

2345. Besides, the grant, no doubt was allowed to them in their names, though for maintaining the mosque in question but the fact remains that there is not even a whisper in any of the above documents that the Muslims visited the place in dispute and offered namaz thereat. On the contrary, continuous visit of Hindus and worship by them at the disputed site is mentioned in a number of documents as well as in the historical records.

2346. It is really a peculiar case of its own kind where despite the fact that the building commonly known as mosque existed yet it continued to be visited by Hindus and they performed Darshan, Puja etc. therein ignoring the apparent nature and shape of the construction as also the fact as to who made it.

2347. Exhibit A-13 (Suit-1) (Register 6, page 173-177) is a copy of an application dated 25.9.1866 said to have been given by Mohd. Afzal Mutwalli Masjid Babari making a complaint of construction of a Kothari Chabutara and placement of idols within the compound of the disputed building which reads as under:
